It is a fact that there are some very wet places in th United States. It is true that rum-runners and boot leggers are doing a big business, that "home brew" an "hooch" and "moonshine" are made and distributed an drunk. Many flasks are carried in the hip-pockets o silly people who are looking for "kick" and excitemen

But what was going on in pre-war days? The ope saloons and other places where liquor was sold with th sanction of law were making drunkards and criminal and poverty in an ever-flowing stream. The open an constant temptations, the far-reaching corruption—per sonal and political—were features of a social evil whic spread ruin and suffering far and near. After man years of campaigning by consecrated reform leaders, a outraged and aroused public voted to outlaw the liquo traffic. Cities and towns went dry, state after stat adopted prohibition, and finally, with an overwhelmin majority of the nation as a whole back of the measur national prohibition was made a part of the constitu tional law of the United States. A strict enforcement la was passed by Congress and similar state laws by th Legislatures. These laws are violated. So are all law and the prohibition laws are not violated any more tha the laws against larceny, sex sins, or fraud. Do w forget that in pre-prohibition days liquor laws wer widely and flagrantly broken?

We are told that national prohibition has failed There is abundant evidence that conditions are bette than they were formerly. Slums due to saloons have di appeared from most of our cities; "bums" and "sots, who were the finished products of the saloons, are rarel seen; social workers agree that poverty and home trouble due to drink have decreased; inebriate hospitals, inst tutions for the cure of the liquor habit, and many jail have been closed; buildings have been converted fro saloons, breweries and distilleries into stores, factorie and canneries; savings bank deposits have increased b yond all records, and a new generation is coming up whic knows not liquor nor its open temptations. In most o the country prohibition has succeeded in a wonderfu way. In other places the problem of prohibition la enforcement is a serious one, but it is a part of th problem of law enforcement which includes the variou forms of lawlessness rampant in the aftermath of wa and incident to the spirit of reckless adventure stimu lated by the automobile, the movies, the sensational new papers, and the extremes of personal freedom to whic we have swung in these unsettled days.

What do men of affairs and those who have a wid outlook on social and industrial life think about nation prohibition today?

We have before us some impressive testimony fro just such sources. The Manufacturers Record made a extensive canvass three years ago, and the replies wer overwhelmingly in approval of prohibition and in proof of its good effects. Has sentiment changed? The Manufacturers Record has asked the question of the same people, and the reply is an emphatic "No." Only a very few have weakened in their attitude, and those merely raise questions regarding methods of enforcement and the results.

The witnesses include the most outstanding "captains of industry," railroad presidents, bankers, public officials, judges, lawyers, doctors, educators—and hundreds of them.

W. B. Storey, president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railway System, says:

From the standpoint of railroad operation the Eighteenth Amendment has been very helpful to us, as it has greatly reduced drinking among our rank and file in spite of the bootlegging which is going on.

Dr. Haven Emerson of the Department of Public Health Administration, Columbia University, says:

While our annual admitted bill for liquors used to be $2,500,000,000, even the most optimistic promoters of violation of the law do not claim that 20 per cent. of the liquor which was thus bought and used is now consumed by our people. The economic and health returns, in terms of lives and self-support, appear to me to justify fully the great social experiment to which the country by unmistakable majorities has committed itself.

William T. Thompson, former attorney-general of Nebraska, says:

I am more strongly in favor of prohibition now than ever. There is less of poverty, crime, and lawlessness, and more of thrift, domestic happiness and right living among our people than under high license and the resultant saloon.

In commenting upon this remarkable symposium, which is published in full in a large pamphlet and sold at 50 cents a copy by the Manufacturers Record Publishing Co., Baltimore, Md., the Record says editorially:

After years of study of the subject from every angle, and despite the tremendous influence of the propaganda that is going on against prohibition, these men are more enthusiastically in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment than they were when it was first adopted. Their letters are in reality a cross-section of the mind of the American people.

This evidence should have the widest possible publicity through our churches. And national prohibition is bound to be a success if our churches and ministers heartily support it in their personal daily lives and in their public influence.

The Golden Rule in Industry

OUT in Michigan at the conference on economic, political, racial, and international problems, held at Olivet College, under the auspices of the Fellowship for a Christian Social Order, there has been considerable discussion regarding the practice of the Golden Rule in industry. The discussion has centered largely upon the methods of "Golden Rule" Nash, whose policies and practices in his clothing factory at Cincinnati have been widely exploited at church conferences and in the religious press. In the discussion it was claimed that Mr. Nash and his "Golden Rule" methods had been over-exploited, and considerable criticism was expressed following mainly the lines of what was virtually a rather decided attack upon Mr. Nash made early in June at the National Conference of the Social Service Department of the Episcopal Church, at Manitou, Col., by Rev. W. B. Spofford, Secretary of the Church League for Social Democracy. The brunt of this attack was that in Mr. Nash's factory, under supposedly Christian policy and the operation of the Golden Rule, the actual conditions as they affected the worker were not as satisfactory and progressive as in other establishments, and especially in certain factories under strictly union policy, where no profession of religious motive was made, but where scientific principles of organization and good business constituted the incentive. Mr. Spofford claimed that these other experiments were actually more Christian than that in the widely exploited "Golden Rule" factory, and he made the Nash matter the occasion, or illustration, of a general indictment of the churches for "sentimentality and hypocrisy . . . when they attempt to mix up in industrial matters."

Relativity and Golden Rule

This editorial is not primarily concerned with either Mr. Nash or with Mr. Spofford's criticism of the churches. We have never been among those who were ready to hail the millennium because some "Golden Rule" Jones, or "Golden Rule" Nash, in Ohio or elsewhere, had introduced some individualistic and isolated experiment in the professed application of Christian principles to industry. We have welcomed every such experiment as a possible contribution to progress, and we have believed that every such effort ought to be judged sympathetically in relation to its inner purpose and to its practical merits. We have believed, also, that such experiments ought to be considered with reference to the generally backward and unsatisfactory conditions prevalent under a competitive system, and not wholly in relation to ideal conceptions, or to other experiments, themselves somewhat exceptional, which mark progress toward betterment in factory organization and management. In approving of such experiments we have recognized that carried on in the midst of a competitive world, upon which they are in large measure dependent, and even when judged sympathetically and by relatively fair standards they must necessarily fall far short of that idealism by which all of life must ultimately be tested.

We are not prepared to condemn Mr. Nash out of hand because Mr. Spofford, on the strength of having "put in a couple of days in his shop," pronounces all that he saw of the experiment "bunk." We do not despise the experience of Mr. Spofford's two days. It is possible in that time for a man with his eyes open to see a great deal. But it is also possible, and perhaps inevitable, that an outsider during such a short period may see things out of their right relationships. A fair inquiry concerning Mr. Nash's experiment would take into account the conditions under which it was started, and under which it has been carried on, the type of labor employed, the problems of personnel and all the general factors involved. It is quite possible that an honestly conducted and high-minded experiment carried on under heterogeneous conditions as regards types of workers and other matters might seem to fall short of some more scientifically conducted enterprise utilizing only highly skilled, if not hand-picked, labor, and tending in general to dominate personal considerations by those of sheer efficiency. We are under the impression that from a scientific standpoint Mr. Nash's methods have been rather individualistic if not possibly somewhat rough and crude. But has he done really well under the circumstances? Has he sought earnestly to live up to his lights, and to practise the Golden Rule as he has conceived it? These questions might well precede the larger question as to what constitutes the proper interpretation and practice of the Golden Rule. If Mr. Nash in a free competitive field has voluntarily made large sacrifices and concessions, which a purely profit-seeking employer would not have made, that stands to his credit, and it does not seem less to his credit if other firms out of bitter struggle and long historical development—working probably with more highly selected labor—have attained more scientific status and results. Both types of experiment may be significant for progress.

Our purpose here is not the vindication of Mr. Nash. We have no personal knowledge concerning the factors that we insist must be taken into account in forming an estimate of the man and his work. We have never even put in two days in his factory, nor have we ever met any of his employees or discussed with them the conditions of their labor. Our contacts with Mr. Nash have been confined to listening to him at the National Council meeting in Springfield. We then formed the impression of him as a man of child-like and simple honesty, whose social philosophy might possibly not be as clear and highly developed as his Christian profession and vision, but who had none the less grasped a few simple truths concerning life in its personal, business, and social relations, and who was striving as a man of great native ability rather than as a highly trained expert, to put these truths into his daily life. It is our sincere hope that such investigation of the Cincinnati shop and its methods as may be made in the interests of the Golden Rule may at least confirm this impression. We like to have faith in the integrity of our fellowmen, and we have a reasonable confidence that, however short of the Golden Rule Mr. Nash may have come, he has been actuated by higher motives than the utilizing of religion for effective advertising and the degradation of the Golden Rule to a mere business slogan.

The Golden Rule vs. the Individual

It is unfortunate, but inevitable, that ideals become unduly associated with individual experiments and the men responsible for them. But is not this true throughout the whole field of life? And does it not express a hopeful aspect of humanity as well as a weakness? Mankind has constantly expressed something of its persistent faith in, and its aspiration after, the heroic by seeing it personified in heroes, none of whom, proverbially, has been a hero to his own valet and comparatively few of whom have been wholly heroic to the eye of thorough investigation. In politics no less than in industry ther is a disposition to clutch at any figure who shows sign of integrity beyond the average of his political associate A Roosevelt, a Coolidge, a La Follette, a Borah, muc according to the standpoint from which one views, b comes the embodiment of an ideal, sometimes as muc to the embarrassment and obscuring of the ideal as to th glorification of the man. The relentless pursuit of a ideal is frequently endangered by too great readiness i seeing its incarnations where it is inadequately expresse But we doubt whether this popular danger and weakne is fairly described as either "sentimentalism" or "hypo risy"—the terms which Mr. Spofford has used. Mo frequently it is a matter of well-mentioned, but not full competent, judgment. Man's discernment is not alway equal to his good intention.

May not this protection of the ideal from associatio with its imperfect expression have been what Jesus ha in mind when he admonished the disciples, having don all, to consider themselves unprofitable servants, havin done only that which it was their duty to do? Howeve this may be, in the instance under discussion, and i all such instances, it is the individual Nash that mus be measured by the Golden Rule, and not the Golde Rule by the individual. It frequently happens—to co sider the matter in its broad aspects and not with re erence to Mr. Nash—that some man develops, under paternalism that in reality is sometimes more autocrati than paternal, some philanthropic and benevolent progra in an industrial undertaking. No doubt he is sincer and he ought to be given credit for his sincerity, but fo those to whom paternalism and autocracy, no matte how benevolent, represent in themselves evils from whic mankind has to be saved there can be manifestly n sharing of the enthusiasm for such experiments that i likely to be expressed by others of less discriminatin judgment. This, incidentally, partially explains why i dustries where the owner or manager has expresse unusual benevolence of purpose towards his employee have not infrequently been characterized by the mos intense labor troubles. The worker of independent min and spirit resents being owned or patronized quite a much as he resents working under unsatisfactory co ditions in other respects.

The present discussion may be of value if it lead us beyond individuals and particular experiments to th high and clear insistence upon ideals, and their attai ment in principles, organization, and processes in suc a way that they may become everywhere capable o operation, and operative, in bringing men not only t betterment but to freedom. It is worth while to remem ber, what Mr. Holman has emphasized in the leadin article in this issue, viz., that the spiritual idealism o Jesus does not take the place of scientific and soun practice in industrial and social life. Good will in i dustry is but a foundation for the careful, persisten intelligent establishment of such methods, processes, sy tems and contacts as shall at once express, and encourag the expression of, all that is best in man. Spiritual idea may constitute alike the initial incentive toward, an the ultimate test of, true progress, but between the b ginning and the goal lies a large field of necessar patient, intelligent upbuilding.

ecretary Hoover declares this project will iminate the production of 50,000,000 tons f coal a year. Babson adds the elimina-ion of the useless cost annually of a quarter f a billion in duplicated industrial plants.

Add to this the introduction of rustless eel, of which the superintendent of the anadanium Corporation of America says: "I onfidently believe that the full utilization f rustless steel will bring in a new era," nd the new alloy, duralumin, which will re-uce the weight of locomotives and cars by wo-thirds.

As a practical accomplishment showing he trend in industry, notice the announce-ient published in the press in June, 1925, hat the Northern Pacific Railway has en-ered into contract with a St. Paul firm for he daily mining of two thousand tons of oal on its properties which lie in that vast ection of coal deposits in the West, espe-ially in Montana and North Dakota. One reat Northern station in North Dakota is hipping fifty cars of lignite coal a day. The oal miners in the organized districts in the ast must reckon not only with the non-nion fields, but with these newly develop-ng western districts as well.

Visualize, in addition to all these innova-ions either already adopted or about to be dopted in industry, the rapid changes in griculture effected by farm machinery, un-il the finest farms in the richest parts of his land are today "mere hog, corn, and ood factories," to quote Herbert Quick, which lack flowers, fruits, and shrubs," op-rated under a scientific system of tenantry. The general manager of the Hart-Phar ractor Company says, "We are sending 700 arm tractors out onto the farms each day. Each tractor displaces one hired man." This displaced hired man comes to the city look-ng for work in its factories, and thus swells he ranks of the unemployed.

World-Wide Standardization

Industry is being standardized throughout he entire world. This is the most important act in the whole problem. Until now these ountries which first accomplished their in-dustrial revolution, such as England, have been able to find a market for the surplus products, in the other countries which were till without power-driven machinery and a actory system, especially in the Orient. Today owners of industry in the advanced ountries are investing porfits which flow o them by reason of that ownership in capital in foreign fields, especially in India and China. Utilizing the cheap labor of these foreign countries, it is possible to produce the goods to supply the foreign market at less cost than they could be produced for in the older countries in which labor has its organizations and the standard of living is supported by the traditions of trade unionism.

The Orient is seething with industrial strife, the foundation of which lies in this very fact that the introduction of modern machine methods of production is forcing social readjustment. The present Government in England is facing this same crisis, viz., how to continue to operate the factories in England in spite of the industrial development of her colonies since the World War. A million and a half of unemployed in England alone is a problem which cannot be ignored either by the English politician or by the believer in the idealism of Jesus as a social philosophy for international relations. The social changes which accompanied the industrial revolution in England are occurring in every other land on earth and the same results must inevitably follow.

The answer to this question, "Is industry logically selfish?," is thus seen to be an answer to the entire social and industrial question. Isolated instances of industrial good will as seen in a few examples of co-operation between owners and workers are not an answer to this question. With exactly the same logic could one justify monarchy by pointing out a single good despot.

Can the Profit Motive Be Superseded?

On the whole, industry is dominated by the profit motive. In the near future industry will completely break down unless some way can be found to furnish employment for those displaced by industrial evolution. The profit motive cannot solve this part of the industrial problem and organize society to protect the individuals thrown out of work. The control of industry in the end always goes, under the profit system, to the shrewdest and least sentimental among the owning group. Competition among the individual owners of industry relentlessly compels them to reduce all factors in industry to the balance sheet which must show a profit. The human element under competition becomes a mere abstraction, bought, sold, used, hired, and fired, with as little sentiment as is displayed in handling the materials which enter into production.

The National Council of Congregational Churches, at the last meeting, at which President Coolidge was made Honorary Moderator, declares, "The co-operative commonwealth is an essential part of the Kingdom of God." This is only a modern paraphrase of the statement of Jesus, "One is your Master—all ye are brethren."

Can Brotherhood Be Made Effective?

Our problem, then, is to take the existing equipment, now used co-operatively in the production of goods which are essential to the life of society but whose economic control is with those who own and manage industry for profit, and transfer this equipment to an industry which will be operated to promote the better qualities of human nature. In other words, industry must be reformed from a profit-making machine into an industry which shall increase human happiness, diffuse culture, remove the fear of poverty, and contribute to friendship in all the complex relations of modern society. When this shall have been done, and not before, can we have reason to expect a warless world and an industry free from those never ceasing clashes betwen contending classes whose economic interests are, today, those of master and man. In other words, we must make the Brotherhood of Man a fact in our industrial life.

The New Earth

The golden sun has sunk behind the shaded hills
And darkness mantles all the earth.
The rolling contour of the smiling land
Has faded and the hour gives birth
To shining moon and evening star.

A few short hours and then each shaded glen Shall feel the touch of light
And tired men shall wake refreshed once more
And flowers hold dewdrops bright
As gates of day stand wide ajar.

This age is drawing to its close. The torch burns low
Which served in olden times. Philosophies
Which met the simpler needs and stirrred the hearts of men
To set crude sails in near-by Argosies
Are fading in the deepening gloom.

Yet this is but the passing shadow of new things
Which cast strange darkness o'er the mind.
The sun of new-born day will rise once more,
The torch of science lead mankind
And earth with happiness shall bloom.

The Unwritten Song

By F. O. Small

Oh, could I write a song so sweet
'Twould lighten the load of the sweating throng
And straighten the way for their stumbling feet,
I'd never rest till I wrote that song.

And could I use my span of years
To make man's life a happy song,
So faith and joy would banish tears,
I'd have my life indite that song.

But could a poem show man's worth
To all with whom he goes along,
And save in him youth's sense of mirth,
I'd use my blood to write that song.

Or, could I touch the hearts of men
So they would choose to do no wrong,
Abhor the false and love the truth,
I'd write my soul into that song.

The Christian Spirit in Industry

Fundamental Teaching on the Conditions of Employee Good Will

By Horace G. Hoadley

Hoadley Associates, Boston, Mass.

To the Socially-Minded Minister and Layman:

WHAT member of your congregation who is the responsible head of an industrial organization would not like to have his employees better disposed toward him and the business? But how many understand and have taken to heart the bases upon which good will must rest, human nature being what it is? It seems to me that here is a somewhat uncultivated field for the well-equipped minister without his going into practical details where he is liable to go astray for lack of intimate knowledge of industry.

The Right Kind of Foremen

Assuming that the management's policy is fair and square, open-minded treatment of every employee, there is still great danger that this policy will be spoiled in the execution of it, unless the management undertakes definite plans for teaching all foremen and other supervisors that the carrying out of this policy means meeting the worker halfway in correcting any injustice and also paying thoughtful attention to any other supposed grievance. This is a harder lesson for the average subordinate boss to learn than any technical facts in the business; it is out of his line, for it relates to intangibles; it requires him to put himself in the place mentally of other persons whose thoughts and feelings, in most cases, are different from his own; it requires sympathy and patience. Nevertheless, great numbers of them have been lead by practical instruction to see that these are the only right and effective ways of handling men. The management must not only teach and illustrate its policy, but also insist upon it as cases arise. Continued failure of supervisors to adjust their practices to the policy must be followed gradually by the displacement of the offenders.

I knew a moulder whose boss believed in browbeating a new man till he got him into a proper condition of submission. He thought he had succeeded in this case. He was mistaken. The moulder was a remarkably well-intentioned man; but such treatment made him determine to get back at the boss, as it commonly does. He made eighteen moulds a day of a certain piece—all that was required of him. He told me he could have made twice as many perfectly well. This was an extreme case, it is true, but any degree of arbitrary, ill-natured treatment has the same tendency. Next to a steady job and adequate wages what men want is a good foreman.

A Voice in Working Conditions

There is another condition of employee good will which is less generally appreciated by chief executives than the need of considerate foremen. This is the fact that the only way to secure a contented, co-operative spirit in most employees is to give them some voice, at least, in their working conditions. Conditions autocratically imposed by the management, no matter how benevolent its intentions are, simply do not produce good will. This truth will bear elaboration in explaining the reasons for it. Appeal may be made to other relations of life—domestic, political. But the business man must somehow become thoroughly convinced of it or he will not adopt and carry out the necessary plans.

Conservative, well-informed bodies of employers like the National Industrial Conference Board and the American Management Association are telling us how this has been done in many plants by employees' representation in joint councils with management's representatives. Some concerns have had a history of five years and more of increasing mutual confidence and united effort for the success of the business. But this is a detailed phase of the subject into which ministers cannot be expected to enter. They are, nevertheless, in a position to show that really effective influence by the employees in determining working conditions is necessary in some form. Joint councils open a new channel for education which promises lead to the general elimination of the Christian conflict still so widespread intense in industrial relations.

The Christian Spirit in Industry

We naturally look among the laymen the churches for leaders in industry have the enlightenment, sincerity, and nestness of purpose which should come f teachings with their source and inspira in Christianity. Such men are needed; there is much opposition to be overcome boards of directors having a very diffe point of view. There is opposition on part of autocratic superintendents and f men, and inertia on the part of the emp ployees themselves. There is plenty of for all the sound reasoning and all moral and spiritual force which the Ch tian minister can help supply. These the same principles, though the methods different, which were advocated by Wa ington Gladden, for example, many ye ago. I know a man who found life-long rection and motive for his business ca in a few words from Washington Gladd

The Tsudas

By Albert W. Palmer

ABOUT three months ago a little old house was moved into one of the back fields. It was painted, a shed was built, and it appeared that some one was to live there. And what was my joy to hear that a family not of our own race, our own speech, color, or dress (a Japanese family) was to live in the house, and garden the surrounding land? And, as I am fond of little children, still greater was my joy to hear this yellow family had two children. Yet they aren't yellow, their skin is more the color of mine, and my skin is the color of the Japanese skin.

I was very anxious to get acquainted with these new Nipponese and so started out by making visits. At the first visit I hardly succeeded in coaxing the two dear little children out of the house. At the second visit they knew me better. I met Mr. and Mrs. Tsuda; they are very nice, generous people. We were given candy, doughnuts, etc., and did not succeed in refusing two dozen eggs which they wanted me to take home to my mother as they told me by motion and very broken English. They asked me to teach the children to speak English. I was glad of some way in which I might repay them for their gifts.

I have tried to go over to teach and play with them about once or twice a week. I never came away without some big garden gift. Sometimes it is quite embarrassing to receive so many gifts and I feel I am giving so little. On one of my first visits Mrs. Tsuda invited me into what she called "douty house," and as far as I could see it was as clean and neat as could be. She showed me some pictures of herself in Japanese kimonos. She also showed me very pretty silk kimono, scarf, etc., she h worn in Japan. In dress they are pur American, not yet in speech. It is hard talk with them. They talk Japanese amo themselves and it is very queer to he Chasta—I guess that's the way to spell i is the little boy, about five, and is to st school in the fall. Oris, the little girl, about four, I guess. They are both ve smiley and dear!

And always such gifts as I could refuse.

One day in my thoughts, and in wond ing how I might try to repay their gene sity, the idea came to me,—I would take t children to Sunday school, that they mig become acquainted with other children. I asked their kindly little mother if plan would be all right with her. She ha pily agreed, and she had them all ready go in very cute American clothes she h made, when I went for them. As all go American mothers, she said, "Good childr don't cry," and we went happily to Sund school. I thought I could leave them in t little class, but found they wanted some o they knew with them, as it was all ve new to them. The rest of the Sunday scho went off very well with them.

We were just about ready to sit down dinner when here came Oris and Chasta wi another fine gift, a package of very fi sticks of rhubarb.

The next Sunday after giving both t children a nickel for Sunday school, M Tsuda gave me half a dollar. To all r refusing and words Mr. Tsuda smiling

d, "You take our children to Sunny ool. Thank you." While we were wait- after Sunday school Chasta and Oris d me all about their father's truck, by nting to parts of the car and motioning. ey were most interesting and happy. ain they brought over a bag of turnips, y nice fresh ones just from their rden.

When they don't understand they nod ir heads and say "yes." I do, too, when lon't understand them.

They're so dear, queer, unusual, and cun- ng they attract a great deal of attention. ove them and they act as if they love me. . and Mrs. Tsuda work most of the time the hot sun in their fine looking garden.

About every week or so I take over a picture book and they learn the names of the objects. They learn very quickly. Mr. and Mrs. Tsuda are very anxious for them to learn to talk English and would like to learn themselves.

I don't understand how any one could dislike the Japanese when they show any love toward them. They are very polite and have learned to say, "Thank you," "Welcome," "Hello," "Good-bye," "Come again." When I am reading or talking to the children they always repeat after me.

I will always remember the Tsudas and their generosity, as the first people of different speech, color, race, and dress that I knew personally.

Little People

An Allegory

By Charlotte E. Wilder

T first I thought them ants, for they were tiny creatures, crawling up the m of a vine. She wore a peasant's red ll frock, and had a red kerchief on her ir. He was dressed in a bright blue suit, flat, round hat, and wooden shoes. I lay the hammock and watched them.

The end of the porch made a frame for a uare patch of sky. At the bottom lay the ange light of the sunset. Above, the air is a soft, faded blue, and in it, light as wn, lay horizontal threads of cloud. Flat this colored background climbed the deli- te filament of the vine, and on the stem awled those little people.

They clambered up in an eager, stumbling ay; and I guess that they had never before en off the ground. As I watched, he moved it to the edge of a leaf, where it met a rip of cloud. He put his foot out, care- lly, and took the difficult step across. She llowed and stood beside him, the cloud aming about their feet. They threw back eir heads and laughed, flinging their tiny rms out toward the sun. They rolled in e white froth, and buried their faces in it. ut suddenly they saw that the cloud had rifted, and that its end no longer touched ie vine. Their hands flew to their breasts terror.

A cloud a little above and beyond them ad shifted, too, so that one end dipped to- ard them. He ran and jumped to it, and ie, afraid at being left, ran after. It was s though they found there a rare, exhila- ting air. They clasped hands and danced, nd as they danced they kept looking at the oor of the cloud above them. Exhausted, ey sank down, with their faces still up- rned, but the cloud remained even and ick, with no break in its mesh.

Finally, with a gesture of impatience, he se, and found that by stretching up he ould curl his hands around the rim of it. or a moment he hung there, his feet swing- g and his wooden shoes—first one and then ie other—falling through space. Then he ent his tiny elbows, like a cricket, and ulled himself up.

In that moment, while they were sepa- ated, his cloud swung out a little, and a ray mist blew between them. It was a miniature storm, a shadow across the sun, but she flung her hands up, wildly, and he, too, caught fright. He leaned over the edge, and put out his hands, but only his finger tips touched hers. He leaned further, and his weight caused the cloud to sag, so that the four tiny hands gripped. Gray mist was all about them, but he pulled her through it, to him.

They clung together, cowering, until, raising their eyes, they saw one round cloud, lit by a straight gold shaft of sunlight. It shone like something drenched in light. He helped her to a shred of cloud a bit nearer. With infinite care he helped her place her foot. They could go no farther, for the space between was too wide, by a hairbreadth. They could only look, and looking, they began, regardless of their peril, to bend their knees.

I noticed then that the clouds were melting into the blue behind them. The bottom strips were already gone; the rest were fading as though erased from the sky. I tried to shout to the colored midgets, for the cloud under their very feet was going. He saw it at the same moment, and laid about for something to cling to. Carrying her with him, he took two steps toward the stem of a vine that crossed the strip of cloud. He floundered as one does in snow, and made the footing just in time. That brightest cloud hung last in the sky, like a tiny jewel, like a spark before it was quenched. Then looking about they saw that they were—higher up—on the vine from which they had started.

Vacations—Do You Take 'em?

By Edward Vassar Ambler

"I have made a success out of life because I have plugged ahead twelve months in the year," said a stern faced man of business.

"Success!" If an inborn grouch, premature old age, indigestion, a lack of appreciation for the beauties of nature, and money in the bank which he never used, was success, that man was a model of success until he died ahead of schedule.

This little sermon is aimed only at a few; for many men have failed because they vacated too much rather than too little.

When you find yourself marking time; when you are disposed to knock your community, criticize your minister, and find something wrong with everything; when your meals are a duty rather than a pleasure and your nights sleepless; when you don't recognize the singing of the birds or the humming of a bee; when you can't get down on your knees at night and say, "Dear Lord, I thank thee for the opportunity to live in this wonderful world and enjoy the pleasures—" Then you need a vacation.

It is then that the man who lives by the sea should travel to the places where he can lift up his eyes "to the hills from whence cometh my help."

It is then that he should travel away to the spot where he can look at some other community, if for no other reason than to find out that home is the best place on earth, anyhow.

It is then that he should go so far away that he can commune with himself and not his money bags.

It is then that he should find out what a night's sleep is like and that food tastes just as good now as it did in the days when he was a boy.

What is more pitiful than the man who has devoted his whole life to business and then, when he reaches the point that he can enjoy life, he doesn't know how. He has neglected his education to the point that if he goes to Europe, every old castle is nothing but a heap of stones, for he hasn't the imagination to see the history back of it. He has neglected his muscles to the extent that he can't climb a mountain, paddle a canoe on an inland stream, or participate in sane pleasures.

The really successful man is the man who has made a success of living harmoniously with his family and his fellow men; the one who has not neglected business or his duty to his God and his community, but who realizes that a sane vacation period is a necessary part of a well ordered life.

No man who has a lopsided outlook on life can be that.

The Light of Faith

By Florence Hascall Butler

I heard the voice of Jesus say
"I am this dark world's Light,
Look unto me, thy morn shall rise,
And all thy day be bright."

It was summer, and a song was in my heart as I traveled homeward. The path which led to my home was edged with flowers, and the trees were so thickly laden with leaves they formed a canopy over my head as I walked over the soft turf.

And then came winter; and I was sad because the flowers had faded, and the leaves were stripped from the trees. The song in my heart changed to repining as I walked on the cold, hard ground.

I lifted my eyes heavenward, and between the bare branches of the trees I saw great patches of blue sky and sunlight which had been hidden from view when the trees were decked in summer's beauty, and bright flowers were all about me.

And so it is in life as we journey Homeward. Even as the winter comes and takes the flowers, so sorrow comes when our loved ones are taken from us; and the song in our hearts is changed to weeping.

And then, we lift our eyes heavenward and see God's great Love shining through our sorrow; revealed to us as it never had been when naught but joy and gladness filled our hearts.

O grant us light, in grief and pain
To lift our burdened hearts above,
And count the very cross a gain
And bless our Father's hidden love.

The Co-operative Spirit in Industry

Labor Sunday Message—1925

From the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of Churches

THE most important need of industry in America today is the co-operative spirit. As a nation we have everything else essential for industrial peace and prosperity. We have men, ability, resources, organization, and opportunity. The present situation, however, makes it clear that these things in themselves are not sufficient to insure abiding peace and prosperity in industry. As has been said recently, "National resources, available labor, and capital are important, but these things are of little value until they are released by people filled with the spirit of God." Of all the criticisms leveled against modern industrialism," writes the president of an important industry, "none is so basic as the allegation that the underlying spirit is ethically wrong. The fundamental trouble with the capitalistic-labor controversy has been its militancy." The will to co-operate is our first and fundamental need. Granted the co-operative spirit and the will to get together, the parties to industry may be counted upon to work out forms and methods for the practical solution of the great problems which face the industrial world.

Indications of Progress

One of the gratifying features of the hour is that a new spirit of co-operation seems to be coming to birth. Representatives of capital and labor and the public are recognizing the possibilities of better human relations in industry and in various ways are feeling their way towards effective methods of co-operation. In several of our more important industries, employing above four millions of workers, employers and regular labor unions are now working with reasonable harmony and efficiency. The movement known as employee representation has also grown rapidly until now approximately one thousand concerns employing possibly a million workers are using democratic methods in solving the problems of industrial relations as they arise in the course of the daily operation of mills and mines. The best plans of employee representation take care that labor's solidarity is not sacrificed by any of their regulations, and concede the principle of recognition to organized labor. The millions of workers not as yet included in the ranks of organized labor, nor affected by various forms of employee representation, can no longer be expected to be silent about their wishes. The day of the docile organization of human units is gone. Free and intelligent co-operation affords the only sure foundation for American industry.

Constructive Note by Organized Labor

A significantly constructive note is being struck by organized labor. President Green of the American Federation of Labor recently said in an address before the Harvard Union: "As evidence of our faith, we refuse to accept the oft expounded theory that the differences between capital and labor, between employer and employees are irreconcilable. . . . Inasmuch as collective bargaining is based and founded upon group action, the union of the workers must be unreservedly recognized. In similar fashion the right of employers to control, direct, and manage industry and to receive a fair return upon invested capital must be willingly conceded. A spirit and purpose to follow the right and to do the right, to take no unfair advantage, to practice no trickery or deceit, to neither threaten nor coerce, should govern the representatives of employers and employees in all wage negotiations and conferences. Through such reciprocal relationship the common problems of industry can be solved, efficiency in service promoted, and economics in production introduced. The practical operation of such a plan of understanding must necessarily be based upon the presumption that employers and employees are no longer inspired by hate, malice, and enmity toward each other. Instead, the antagonistic and hostile attitude, so characteristic of the old order in industry, must be supplanted by a friendly relationship and a sense of obligation and responsibility. This is the newer concept of modern trade unionism."

The significance of this statement is that labor has deliberately approached a new departure, is definitely seeking to participate in a new era of co-operation, and is making sincere overtures to organizations of employers.

Progressive Employers

While labor is pursuing this policy, an increasing number of responsible business men hold to the same conviction and are giving it outspoken expression. Manifestations of this point of view are appearing in the railroad service, in the notable agreement of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway with the International Machinists Union, and in the more recent agreements of the unions with the Chicago and Northwestern and with the Canadian National Railroads; in the willingness of so many large industries to take the initiative in setting up works' councils within their establishments; and in the efforts of the Department of Commerce in Washington to bring about constructive co-operation within industry to correct its own evils, and especially to reduce forms of economic waste. In a recent address before the National Civic Federation, Secretary Hoover said:

Co-operative Reduction of Waste

"It has become far more possible to deal with the problem of waste elimination than ever before in our history, for co-operative action is easier to summon today than ever before, and more certain. . . . To deal with waste by such action is to strengthen these very foundations of a better relationship between employer and employee. . . . Labor has played a large part in these questions. Nor is labor's part that of distasteful speeding up to the ultimate production of nervous wrecks. It lies in the study of where the major wastes of industry lie in relation to labor, where labor can play its part in the field of identity of interest, not in the field of reduced wage or longer hours but in the multiple directions of constructive action; decreased unemployment, decreased intermittent and seasonable employment; final extinction of restraint of effort; actual helpfulness in better method and broad policies, and thereby increased productivity. And labor has a right to insist upon its part of these savings." In a previous address before the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Hoover said: "We have devoted ourselves for many years to the intense improvement of the machinery and processes of production. We have neglected the broader human development and satisfactions of life of the employee that lead to greater ability, creative interest, and co-operation in production. It is in stimulation of these values that we can lift our industry to its highest state of productivity, that we can place human factor upon the plane of perfec reached by our mechanical processes. To these things requires the co-operation of la itself, and to obtain co-operation we must h an intimate, organized relationship between ployer and employee. They are not to be tained by benevolence, they can be obtai only by calling the employee to a recipr service."

This co-operation is not only needed in daily conduct of an industry, but it is a lutely essential to the effective solution of g problems to which the national thought turning; such as unemployment, greater ciency in production, greater equity in the tribution of wealth and income, elimination forms of economic waste, and greater satis tion for labor in work, due to a fairer sh in the responsibilities and rewards of indus

Difficulties to Be Met

It will be freely recognized that there great difficulties in the way of such a pol They arise partly out of long years of su cion and conflict, and partly from the f that while there are great areas within wh there is community of interest, there others where interests are divergent. It n be expected that the first of these difficul will yield gradually, and that confidence grow as each side learns that the other be trusted. Meanwhile there is need of Christian technique of conflict in the ar within which there is frank divergence of terest, where clashes of opinion occur, or wh more drastic differences may unfortunately f expression in open strike or lockout. Fair n will still deal with one another in a spirit conciliation, each endeavoring, in justice sincerity, to understand the other's point view and to take into account the very r problems which each faces. Christian men both sides must guard their spirit and meth in such trying situations.

The Hope of the Future

The great hope of the future lies in c structive co-operation along practical lines industrial progress, rather than in the m mitigation of the evils of conflict. Society entering, slowly and painfully, upon an in which highly developed methods of co-ope tion will displace the less scientific method conflict. The technique of co-operation sho be developed and applied increasingly to immediate problems of industry and to f reaching reconstructions of the social ord Toward these great objectives it is the fu tion of the church to urge forward all men a women of good will.

While the churches are not prepared to vocate any particular system of industry, th ought to affirm, and do affirm, that the ti has come for the reign of human equity a brotherhood in industry. They should endeav to see what justice demands, what honor quires and what the Christian spirit dictat That industry has a right to look to t churches for the creation and the encoura ment of the co-operative spirit cannot doubted by any one who accepts the missi and function of the Christian church, as defin by Jesus Christ and taught in the New Test ment. The churches must make it clear n that they stand for an industrial order whi is democratic in its ideal, humane in its met ods, and co-operative in its spirit.

Prospects for New Church Locations

Congregational Sunday School Extension Society makes biennial report

By Frederick L. Fagley

HAT the thrill of the pioneer days is still an element in church life in America is the tement of Rev. W. K. Bloom, Extension cretary of the Congregational Sunday hool Extension Society, in his biennial re- rt of the work of that society which will be de at the 21st meeting of the National uncil of Congregational Churches to be d in Washington in October.

"The days of the pioneers are not gone," rs Dr. Bloom. "In many isolated communities fifty or a hundred miles away from railroads in mountains, the big woods, and the vast prairies, there are pioneer settlements which today face all the privations, the isolation, tragedy, and turmoil of the old pioneer days. Many of these communities are clustered round a little group of houses, one of which may be used as the hool and the scattered children may be ought in over miles of surrounding country. doctor is within fifty miles, nor are there stors or social workers or hospitals within ach. To such isolated communities the Sun- y School Extension worker goes with his essage of hope and encouragement and his actical ways of building the community ound a church at its center."

Dr. W. K. Bloom

A Pioneer Sunday School in Montana

Dr. Bloom gives the experience of one of e representatives of the society in a frontier wn in Montana to illustrate the way in hich the society works in pioneer communi- es. The worker reached the town unan- unced. He found a little village of about e hundred folks, ten miles from the railroad d about twenty miles from the nearest urch. The people were mostly of good nerican stock from Illinois, Missouri, and entucky. The stores and pool rooms were en all day Sunday, weekly dances were held the village hall which required two offi- rs to keep the law. Bootlegging, gambling, d vice were rampant. There was no at- ntion given to religion or social work. Dur- g the year four people had died and they d been buried without the least ceremony. he village had a public school with forty ys and girls, but so unruly were the children at in the year previous five teachers in suc- ssion tried to "keep school" and had failed. This community, located in the great North- est, is in many ways similar to the frontier wns of Ohio and Illinois and Kansas a ndred years ago. The workers who go into ontier places find conditions about the same the workers of a century or so ago found the frontier towns of that day. The churches hich now stand on Main Street, large, self- pporting, and influential, were for the most rt started as was the church the worker roceeded to establish in this present-day ontier town.

As soon as the worker had found a place r the night he began going about the town see what kind of people they were and if was not possible to find some men and omen who "back home" had been active in church work. These he found, for in every such community there are men and women who long for some sort of uplifting influences to come into the lives of their children. Men who as boys and women who as girls had been in church and Sunday school, but who in the rough life of the pioneer had put all this away and had gradually slipped into a careless and ofttimes a wicked way of life.

The people received the Sunday School Extension field worker kindly. He endeavored to win the children and young people by visiting the homes and public school, leaving wholesome reading material. The missionary had announced a meeting for the evening and as he was leaving the hotel for the service, he reached into his suit case for his flashlight and brought forth a bottle of "homebrew." A practical joke had been played on him, one which might have proved to be serious if the law enforcement officer had been present.

The following Sunday a Sunday school was organized with a membership of forty and before the session closed the people had formed a little church society and had made arrangements for a weekly meeting in one of the homes. This is the way churches are started not only in pioneer communities, but in unchurched sections of cities and towns. From this little group will come in time a regular church organization. Its meeting place may be a temporary building or a simple frame shack, and as time goes on, the people of the community together with grants and loans from the parent denomination a suitable church building will be erected, a pastor installed and the church will take its place in community life as the center out of which all sorts of good influences both for individual and for community life will flow.

The report of the society which will be presented at the meeting of the National Council will show that 220 new mission Sunday schools have been organized in the two years covered by the report; 2536 churches, Sunday schools and preaching points visited; 1,561 conventions, institutes, and group conferences shared in; nearly 7,000 sermons, Sunday school addresses, and other messages delivered, with mileage figures reaching over 900,000.

Where the Workers Go

The Extension workers go into the far reaches of the Rocky Mountain regions; the prairies of the Middle West; the growing Southwest, the Far West, all still land of the pioneer. They go into the frontiers everywhere, city, rural, American, and foreign speaking centers. They pass amid cotton-spindles, looms, smokestacks, and mines. Here people from many lands are drawn together by the urge of earning a living, but who need leadership in the better ways of life.

In the smoke and grime of one industrial center in the Mid-West, where people of seventeen nations toil together, a community church was established. The pastor was aided through the strenuous summer months by a student extension worker for special friendly service among the children and young people. This is representative of the service done with people of twenty nationalities in nearly 300 groups throughout the country under Congregational leadership. Eleven college students served in such centers, and twelve others are making special efforts in the field for interracial brotherhood.

The total received during the two years amounted to $164,428.08. Gifts have varied from fifty cents from one who gave out of her poverty, to the larger sums from churches and individuals who also shared in that which giving for others means. The income of the Society increased from $36,202.56 in 1918 to $82,491.52 in 1924. The net gain in Sunday school enrollment for the biennium in 7,811. Independent mission schools showed a net increase of 5,526 with 920 organizations and a total membership of 37,905. These are under the general supervision of our Extension workers. The net gain in the missionary territory and constituent states was 11,795.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Exhibitions

I was in London, and I climbed to the top of a Bus and rode for an hour to Wembley, where is a great Exhibition. And I paid my money and entered and walked until my feet were sore. And I beheld acres of Machinery and of Agricultural Products, and of Methods of Transportation. Even so have I beheld it in mine own country every few years since 1893, save that we call them Expositions.

And when I was weary, I climbed to the top of another Bus and rode back to the City. And the Bus went by the grounds of the old Exhibition as it was before the War.

Now I attended the old Exhibition and so did Queen Alexandria. And she fed Fish to the Seals, taking up the Fish in pieces of newspaper that she might not soil her Gloves. And I was there that night, yea, and a year later I was there again, and saw all the sights and the Fresh Paint, and heard the music and the cries of the Barkers and the Ballyhos of such as ran the Amusement Park.

And as I passed by, the old Buildings were there in all their dilapidation, and none so poor to do them reverence.

And I listened, and I heard the Old Exhibition shouting across to Wembley, Behold and see, ye who pass by, for as ye are so once was I: and as I am so shall ye be: prepare for Death and follow me.

Now it shocked me to see the ghost of the old Exhibition thus stalking on the threshold of the new one.

And I spake unto Keturah, saying, Behold, such is life.

And Keturah said, It is well that it should be so. The old Exhibition found its uses, and it is no credit to any one's good sense to try to patch up the old buildings. If the old was well in its day, let the new come on and serve its uses, and give place to better.

And I said, Keturah, thou art a most wise woman.

Our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually. It can be saved only by becoming permeated with the spirit of Christ and by being made free and happy by practices which spring out of that spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out and all the shadows lifted from the road ahead.—Woodrow Wilson.

Young People's Conferences

Yankton Young People's Assembly

One hundred and seventy-five delegates, besides 13 faculty folk, constituted the Fourth Annual Young People's Assembly which met at Yankton, S. D., July 18 to 25. Yankton College was our headquarters, where the girls were housed in the dormitory and the boys in the gymnasium.

In order to magnify our function of training for leadership, we arranged beforehand to secure a more mature and homogeneous group, there being a very few below the sophomore year in school, and they seemed to be the very finest young people in the world. Co-operation with the management was practically perfect, and participation in the whole program as outlined was almost 100 per cent.

Secretary Charles G. Murphy of the Education society was general director here as for the three other assemblies in his area. Among pastors and youth alike his shadow grows no less with recurring sessions. He has unusual genius for this work. Brotherly and unassuming, tireless in counsel and team work, painstaking master of detail, quick and sure in emergencies, all believe in him implicitly. Among young people of Nebraska and South Dakota he has come to naturally and inevitably "Father" Murphy.

Our specialized leadership this year was unexcelled. Miss Miriam L. Woodberry gave captivating word pictures of our Congregational homeland work from Ellis Island to remote Arizona and the submerged slums. Edward L. Nolting, American Board Missionary from Madura, India, and with us for the second consecutive year, likewise presented the foreign work, and in himself made the missionary privilege seem heavenly. Miss Bessie M. Stratton, director of religious education and young people's work in Eliot Church, Newton, Mass., handled the dramatics. She is a Yankton and Yankton College product, and her methods and productions are ideal for this purpose. Rev. W. B. Kline of Emmetsburg, Iowa, was with us the fourth year as recreational director. Well equipped, resourceful, and versatile, he grows upon us, keeps everybody alive and coming.

The Assembly sermon was preached by Rev. Harold L. Stratton, Yankton College graduate, now pastor at Arlington Heights, Mass.

On Monday evening Miss Stratton, with a cast of 75 Yankton people, presented Percy Mackaye's great pageant, "The Pilgrim and the Book." Set against the background of beautiful Garden Terrace Theater, this was a masterpiece of art and religion which set the assembly going in the right key and the true pitch and demonstrated to us over Puritanical folks the power of symbolism in education and worship.

The Bible study was approached through Life Problem Discussion Groups, 10 to 20 pupils in each, with a non-participating adult leader. The topic the first day was "Personal Integrity" playing square with life. The second day it was "Loyalty," our obligations to the various orders of social life. The third day localized this integrity and loyalty in the home; the fourth day, in the school. On the fifth day all groups assembled in mass meeting and representatives from each reported the findings of the groups on the specific problems of the four days. It was generally felt that this method made Bible study practical, vital, rational, and personal. Dr. P. A. Sharpe of University Church, Vermillion, was the able director of this study, and coached the leaders each day.

The vesper services, also, were particularly gripping this year. More student participation was effected than heretofore. On the first evening the Yankton Christian Endeavor led. The theme, "Finding God in Nature," brought out some unforeseen expressions of experience, but for the most part the contributions were great nature poems and nature hymns. Harold Anderson, Omaha University '25, spoke twice on "The Real Jesus." The four student summer workers in attendance spoke one evening and revealed extraordinary qualities of religious understanding, of thought and address. These sunset meetings culminated in a Communion service in the chapel on the last evening. Father Murphy and Rev. A. C. Warner ministered at the table and six young men served as deacons. The impression of that solemn hour went deeply home.

South Dakota Congregationalism, with three strong assemblies each summer calling out nearly 500 young people and their leaders, and with Yankton College as a nine-months' assembly for several hundred more, is doing much to meet the challenge of youth, and faces tomorrow with high expectancy.

The Waubay Conference

The seventh annual meeting of the Waubay (South Dakota) Young People's Conference came to a close on Sunday evening, Aug. 2, with a testimony meeting by the faculty and the students. The main emphasis was upon the fine fellowship of the conference as well as the splendid faculty furnished us this year. Young people attending this conference for the first time, coming from other young people's conferences, spoke highly of the fine fellowship found at this one.

Miss Miriam Woodberry's presentation of the home work has never been excelled at this conference. Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Nolting were strong representatives of the foreign work carried on by our American Board. Rev. A. L. Curtis, for the second year, presented the Bible to the young people in a forceful and winning way. This year he spent the time on the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Grace E. Mayer-Oakes put on one of the most effective evenings in dramatics we have had when Esther and two other minor productions were presented. Rev. W. B. Kline was, if possible, more successful than in the past in his directing of the athletics and games; and Howard Anderson, of Omaha, was a master in leading in the singing. Then in his tactful and genial way "Father" Murphy presided over the Conference.

The attendance was not quite up to that of last year's Conference. The registration numbered 80 delegates, with a total attendance of 163, and 21 churches represented. The lateness of the conference doubtless affected the attendance, since it brought the meeting into the beginning of harvest.

Those who had attended the Waubay Conference in the past missed the presence of Rev. Carl P. Bast, who for years has been the supervisor of these gatherings. Mr. Bast having left the state was unable to attend this meeting. But Rev. S. W. Keck, who took his place, proved to be a successful leader, and the meeting went on as smoothly as before under his leadership. Mention should also be made of the splendid helpfulness of Rev. H. M. Bissell, local pastor, who not only had general oversight of the grounds, but also published The Blue Pup, a daily paper published by the Conference.

H. C. J.

Louisiana-Texas Conference

New Iberia, where the third annual Lou ana-Texas Congregational Young People's C ference was held, July 7-13, 1925, is situa in Southwestern Louisiana, on the beaut Bayou Teche. It is one of the most beaut and interesting cities in the state. The pe are hospitable and courteous. The relation tween the races is cordial. It is the he of the Evangeline country, made famous Longfellow. The "Cajin" (Arcadian) l about which George W. Cable wrote. Ba Teche, Lake Simmonet, and Vermillion Bay among the beautiful bodies of water in country. It is a land of magnolias and mines, oleanders and roses, sunshine and s

Into this interesting city, at Howe Instit Prof. Jonas Henderson, Principal, gathe nearly 80 young people for six days of edu tion, inspiration, and recreation. The purp of the conference was to help young people their choice of life work and to prepare them future leadership and greater usefulness in home, the church, and the community. H Institute is conveniently located and furnis excellent quarters and dormitories. It is o ated by the Sixth District Baptist Associati The spacious campus is dotted with magn cent oak trees under which open air servi were conducted.

Every morning physical culture, recreati and drills were conducted by Messrs. E. Phillips and J. A. Herod, Jr. These exerci sharpened the appetites for breakfast.

Classes began each morning at 8.15. Th were thirty-five minute periods. Each started with a zest and enthusiasm, through the entire conference.

Instructions were given each day by the lowing instructors who had their work well hand: Bible Study by Rev. W. L. Cash Home Missions by Rev. Milton Williams New Orleans; Foreign Missions by Rev. C. Graham of Beaumont, Tex.; Health Talks Miss Viola Dominick, R.N., Story Tell by Miss Naomi Sanders of New Orleans P lic Schools; Sunday School Organizations Rev. E. H. Phillips, Field Worker, Congre tional Sunday School Extension Society director of the conference, New Orleans, Personal Work by Rev. W. A. Bender of Ab ville. Rev. J. A. Herod, Sr., of Gueydan, chaplain and Mr. Osceola Blanchet of New leans, was musical director. Rev. H. L. L of Lake Charles was assistant director of conference and Miss Ethel R. Carter of N Orleans, registrar, had charge of poster m ing. Owing to the unavoidable absence Rev. H. H. Dunn, District Superintendent the A. M. A., instruction in Congregational H tory was given by Rev. E. H. Phillips. M E. H. Phillips of New Orleans, Mrs. Parr Lake Charles, and Mrs. A. R. Spotswood Straight College, were matron and chaperon Mrs. Spotswood also had charge of Playgrou Methods.

Rev. H. W. May, pastor of the M. E. Chur South, and Rev. R. R. Diggs, pastor of Episcopal Church, two of the leading wh ministers of the city, gave two evening lectu on live topics, while the other evenings we given over to illustrated stereopticon lectu on Angola Mission by Mr. Edwin L. Phill Student Summer Worker.

Saturday night, better known as "Stu Night," was an evening of entertainment, a demonstrated the fact that there was mu original talent among the young men and w men. There was plenty of merriment for eve body.

There were three outstanding features of t conference. Interest and enthusiasm ran hi ıen it was announced at the opening of the nference that all note-books would be exıined and graded and if the work proved tisfactory, credits would be given looking forard to the presentation of Certificates of ıristian Leadership issued by the Congregaonal Education Society. It proved to be a al incentive both as regards attendance and the excellent work done by every student. t the close of the conference, Director E. H. illips called the names of twenty-one stuents who came forward and received certifites upon the completion of the required urse. It was a happy moment in the life the conference.

The second was the observance of the first ınior Communion Service Sunday morning at o'clock. Rev. Messrs. Herod and Graham ficiated. Two young men, J. A. Herod, Jr., ıd E. L. Phillips, acted as deacons, and two oung women, Anita Jackson and Ethel Melon, served as deaconesses in preparation of ıe table. The attendance was large at that arly hour and the services were impressive ıd reverential. The third was the consecraon of the two young men, James A. Herod, r., and Edwin L. Phillips, both sons of Conregational ministers, to Student Summer Vork, at the 11 o'clock services, at St. Paul ongregational Church. The sermon was reached by Rev. H. L. Lang of Lake Charles, n the subject, "Vision and Service," the charge was given by Rev. E. H. Phillips, and prayer was offered by Rev. Milton Williams. It was one of the most impressive and significant services of the conference, the result of which, no doubt, will be the means of leading other young people to consecrate themselves to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ.

A resolution was adopted by the conference pledging itself to the task of raising a fund of $2,500 needed to secure a suitable home for the McDowells and Coles, in Galangue, Angola, West Africa, and calling upon the young people of our group in the Congregational churches of the United States to join them in this youth movement for the advancement of the Kingdom in this particular field. A contribution of one dollar annually is to be made by each student of the conference until the amount needed is collected.

The conference sermon was preached by Rev. R. V. Sims, for nearly thirty years pastor of St. Paul Church, New Iberia. After final words by Director Phillips, the students joined hands and formed a circle of Christian fellowship in the church. Farewell greetings were then given by representatives of all groups and the hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," was sung. Thus was brought to a fitting close with the C. E. Mizpah benediction the best Congregational Young People's Conference ever held in the states of Louisiana and Texas.

W. L. C.

Master Builders of Today

An address delivered at the laying of the corner stone of the Holbrook Library, Pacific School of Religion

By Loyal Lincoln Wirt, Sc.D., D.D.

A CORNER stone is a compelling thought, both in fact and symbol. St. Paul conceived the household of God as built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. The storms of the ages have beaten upon that house, but its fabric has stood undimmed, growing more beautiful and more precious through all time because its foundation was laid in the heart of man's necessity, and its corner stone in the heart of God's eternal love.

In the unfolding of God's plan for the extension of his Kingdom here on earth, many foundations have been laid; some fashioned in hewn stone, some in the deepening of human knowledge, and some in the progressive revelation of spiritual truth—but none of these had signalized a new beginning, they have but marked growth and extension and an increase in the faith once committed to the fathers.

Goodly Foundations

I once watched workmen swing a great hewn stone high in air, and fit it perfectly in place in the facade of a noble cathedral which had been in process of construction for more than a thousand years. It was a corner stone—yet not in the foundation, but at an important angle of the superstructure high above and centuries later than those lower stones laid by devout pioneer builders in the dust and dim light of medieval days. The original architectural plans had long since perished, but the noble foundation preserved in its massive strength and outline the challenge of future greatness. The vision of the founders, once caught by faith and held by love, was the sacred inheritance which ever continued to inspire succeeding generations of master builders.

So I conceive this stone, poised before its larger destiny, to be the earnest and promise of a noble and spacious library; that it will, when fitted into place, also rest down upon these goodly foundations laid in sacrifice and love while California was as yet in her inchoate and primitive days.

And these master builders of today, who by their gifts, devotion, and self-sacrificing labors have held loyally to the vision of the pioneers, are seeking by this building (and those which, please God, will soon rise about it on this "hill Mizar") to bequeath that vision to the future in yet more radiant colors. These are the custodians of the sacred fire—the worthy sons of those Pilgrim sires who laid spiritual foundations broad enough and deep enough to uphold the future's noblest design.

No school ever had greater founders. Benton, Mooar, and Dwinall were the most scholarly, stimulating, and lovable teachers that ever gathered the great West into their catholic souls and lifted it up to God as their claim and offering by right of redemptive love.

It was the sad privilege of my class (the class of 1890) to be the last to receive their united guidance in things intellectual and spiritual. But there were other "giants in those days," one of whom—Dr. William C. Pond—adds his presence to this occasion in abiding strength and benediction. When Dr. J. K. McLean gave his rich life to the Seminary, a fourth corner stone was added, giving symmetry and strength to its foundation. Goodly walls have been lifted since that day by worthy successors, and these stand undimmed, four-square to the world, with windows open heavenward.

The Present Opportunity

Today we are laying another corner stone, not in a foundation, but far up the scaffolding of a noble structure, where it may be seen and read of all men. We do not forget the day of struggle and sacrifice, in this day of larger fruition; nay, we rejoice with those seers who beheld this day afar, and we dedicate ourselves afresh to the task to which they gave the last full measure of their devotion.

As we watch these walls rise we shall also thank God that the days of generous giving to the cause of sacred learning and Christian leadership are not past; that still the cause of Christ, and faith in his redemption of the world, are first in the hearts of many noble men who serve and pray in life's inconspicuous places that they may give the more bountifully of the fruits of their stewardship, out where the world's needs crowd.

Never was challenge so great; never was harvest field so alluring; never to School of the Prophets a call so clear or a task so mighty!

Moses stood on the mount with the law—you stand on this sacred hill with the Gospel. Moses could only send—you can go. Moses' vision was limited by the sea—yours passes through yon Golden Gate and encompasses the world. North, South, East, and West the flame of your sacred fire shall enkindle hearts and transform lives.

What the Library Will Provide

As we lay this stone in the name of the Prince of Peace, as we build this library to enshrine the Law of Love, a mighty Armada is scouring the ocean called "Pacific," trusting in "iron shard and reeking tube" to change the hearts of men and bring in the Kingdom of Heaven by violence. A more excellent way is yours. Here in this library you will learn the higher ways of God with man. You will think with the philosophers, dream with the poets, shout with the visitors, suffer with the martyrs, overcome with the saints.

Here, coming world leaders will orient their own thinking, establish their own faith, strengthen their own courage, find windows open into undiscovered Jerusalems, grow in grace and knowledge, and in favor with God and man.

Paul spent his three years in the wilderness alone with God. Future apostles will spend their three years in this modern school in company with other valiant spirits surrounded by the books that this library will hold open to their minds; drinking deep from the lives of those who have left stepping stones out of darkness into light. God will be here, also,—here in this richly endowed school, no less than in the wilderness.

From here, down through countless years, men—aye, and women, too—will go out, after crowded days of preparation. Some will pass through yonder portal to the adventure of missionary enterprise; some to the city where "the rabble with its thumbworn creeds, large professions, and little deeds mingles in selfish strife"; some to the multitudes that everywhere await, and are like sheep having no shepherd. And to all those they will carry the "life abundant" that this Library will have poured into their souls.

They, too, shall lay foundations—foundations of character, faith, and life eternal; foundations of civic righteousness and national honor; foundations of world brotherhood and international good will.

Through you and through them the Holbrook Library and the Pacific School of Religion, with all that they stand for here on this Areopagus, will be multiplied ten thousand fold out yonder in God's great world of men. For other foundation can no man lay than is laid, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner Stone.

Fill thou our hearts with faith like theirs,
Who served the days they could not see;
And give us grace through ampler years
To build the Kingdom yet to be.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Abused by Life

A devoted friend of the Invalid Parish sent me, a while ago, a book with this intriguing title: The Privilege of Pain. That is not the way pain is commonly thought of. To the general pain is the evil-worker, the enslaver, the destroyer of opportunity and of happiness. The notion that pain can be a liberator, a path to richer and more joyous life, has never found its way to their imagination.

In the little book with this remarkable title Mrs. Leo Everett brings together a long list of men who, though the victims of bodily frailty, have, in a world that idolizes activity and accomplishment, found their way to great accomplishment.

Among the world's most famous warriors were Alexander the Great, Julius Cæsar, and Napoleon; all three were epileptics. King John of Bohemia became blind, but had himself strapped to his horse and led his armies still. Field Marshal Torstensson could not even mount a horse, but had to be carried to his battles in a litter. Alfred the Great, Turenne, Condé, the "hunch-backed dwarf" Luxembourg, General Wolfe, and Admiral Lord Nelson, all had to combat sickness in order to do their deeds of daring. King William III was called "the athsmatic skeleton." Lord Clive, the great minister William Pitt, and Tallyrand, are samples of statesmen who had to wrestle against infirmity. Henry Fawcett, England's distinguished Postmaster-General, was blind. Horace, of the unforgotten Odes, Milton, Pope, George Herbert, John Donne, Coleridge, Cowper, Keats, Tom Hood, Henley, Sidney Lanier, Francis Thompson, Ronsard, Molière, Scarron, Boileau, Schiller, Heine, Petrarch, Camoens, Mrs. Browning, Christina Rossetti, Emily Dickinson, Frances Ridley Havergal—here is a great list of those who turned pain into song. Cervantes, Sir Walter Scott, the two Goncourts, Dostoievsky, Charlotte and Emily Brontë, George Eliot, Stevenson, Henry James, Lafcadio Hearn—they suffered, but they enriched the world with their imagination. Florence Nightingale was bed-ridden while carrying on much of her most important work. Francis Bacon, Robert Boyle, Herbert Spencer, Descartes, Pascal, Voltaire, Comte, Amiel, Kant, Kepler, Saunderson the blind professor of mathematics at Cambridge—here are philosophers, astronomers, and teachers.

Watteau, Beethoven, Mozart, Handel, Schubert, Chopin, Mendelssohn, Paganini the violinist—artist souls these, whose ills were not able to keep them from enriching the world with beauty. Pasteur, Darwin, Dr. Trudeau to whom consumptives owe so much, Erasmus the scholar of the Reformation period, Montaigne the essayist, Fénelon, Rousseau, Lord Chesterfield, Dr. Johnson, Winckelmann the archaeologist, Thierry the historian, Prescott, Parkman, Charles Lamb, Carlyle, Luther, Calvin, John Knox—there had to be first the conquest of infirmity before they could conquer the world. And then how often the great leaders of the world's spiritual life found their light through the experience of suffering—such men as St. Paul, St. Augustine, St. Jerome, St. Bernard of Clairvaux, St. Francis of Assisi, St. Catherine of Siena, St. Ignatius Loyola.

You cannot afford to go around feeling continually sorry for yourself. The popular cult is the cult of the body. A better cult is the cult of the mind and soul.

Closet and Altar

FORERUNNING GRACE

For God is my high tower. My God with his lovingkindness will meet me.—Psalm 59: 9-10. Am. Rev.

What is Christianity? It is belief in the inexhaustible love of God for man. He came to seek that which was lost, until he find it.—Erskine of Linlathen.

As the surgeon seeks for the sick, and as the alms-giver looks after the poor, even so the Savior seeks out such as need him, and upon them he exercises his divine office. Let every needy sinner drink comfort from this well.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Our gracious Father is not always looking for the faults and failings. The love that is quick to be grieved by our neglect is the love that is quick to be gladdened when we set ourselves to please him; and ever it is a thousand times more ready to see the good than the bad. . . . Why do we think so readily of his condemning and never of his praising us? His love is more quick with praise than with reproof.—Mark Guy Pearse.

Draw near as early as we may,
Grace, like an angel, goes before.
The stone is rolled away,
We find an open door.

O, wondrous chain! where aye entwine
Our human wills, a tender thread,
With the strong will divine:
We run as we are led.

We, did I say? 'tis all thine own;
Thou in the dark dost Mary guide:
Thine angel moves the stone;
Love feels thee at her side.

John Keble.

These are removed; this abides. And the thing in God which abides is all-gentle tenderness, that strange love mightier than all the powers of Deity beside, permanent with the permanence of his changeless heart. The mountains shall depart, the emblems of eternity shall change and pass, and the hills be removed, but this immortal, impalpable and, in some men's minds, fantastic and unreal something, "My loving kindness and the covenant of my peace," shall outlast them all.—Alexander Maclaren.

"Keep yourselves in the love of God" does not mean keep yourselves loving God, but keep believing and rejoicing that God loves you.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

The whole secret of loving God is to believe that God loves us.—Francis James Chavasse.

O God, we have known and believed the love that thou hast for us. May we, by dwelling in love, dwell in thee, and thou in us. May we learn to love thee whom we have not seen by loving our brethren whom we have seen. Teach us, O heavenly Father, the love wherewith thou hast loved us; fashion us, O blessed Lord, after thine own example of love; shed abroad, O thou Holy Spirit of love, the love of God and man in our hearts. Amen.

Henry Alford.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVO

In the School of Prayer

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topi for September 6-12

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: Learning How to Pray.—Matthew 5-15. (Consecration Meeting.)

Light from the Bible Passage

A real Christian is a praying one, but must pray the right way. He does not p in order that others may see him, or that may have the reputation of being a Christ He must not be an actor, who simply pl a part. The secret of prayer is learned secret, with no one but the Father near. Pra is not the repetition, no matter how solem of set phrases. Prayer is not telling things God. He knows them before we tell him. is a recognition of the presence of God; i praise of his name; it is a yearning for coming of his Kingdom and a submission his will; a craving for forgiveness. It has be learned at the feet of him who was Master of Prayer.

Leads for the Leader

At its best Christian Endeavor is a sch of prayer. With that in mind: Who is Teacher? What is the text-book? What k of pupils are best? What are the hours study? What is the purpose of the study?

To learn to pray we must avoid indoler Do we put enough time into our prayer? we have regular hours for it? Do we put whole selves into it—complete mind and hea

To learn to pray we must get away fr formalism. What danger is there in the of the Lord's Prayer? Is it a pattern or completed form? Do we always use the sa phrases?

To learn to pray we must make every eff to keep sin out of our lives? This "cuts nerve of all prayer." "The supplication of righteous man availeth much."

Thoughts for Members

I ought to spend the best hours of the d in communion with God. It is my noblest a most fruitful employment, and is not, the fore, to be thrust into any corner.—Robe Murray McCheyne.

The one regret of the holiest man I ev knew was that he had spent too much ti with men and not enough with God.—A. Gordon, D.D.

We cannot too keenly feel, each one for hi self, that a still and secret life with God mu energize all holy duty, as vigor in every fib of the body must come from the strong, cal faithful beat of the heart.—Austin Phelps.

Prayer is a privilege; like friendship a family love and laughter, great books, gre music, and great art, it is one of life's oppo tunities to be grasped thankfully and us gladly.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

A Moment of Prayer

O Lord, our God, grant us grace to desi thee with our whole heart; that so desiring w may seek thee and find thee; and so findi thee may love thee; and loving thee may ha those sins from which thou hast redeemed u Amen.

—St. Anselm.

Every church should support two pastors— one for the thousands at home, the other fo the millions abroad.—Jacob Chamberlain.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Prize Gingerbread

By Susanne Alice Ranlett

"Isn't it exciting?" asked Madge Lane, her es shining. "A real prize for us girls! Think getting two dollars! Why—"

"Yes," Barbara Ellis interrupted, "and hav- g a blue ribbon pinned to you and being lled out as prize winner and—who will t it?"

The two little girls were leaning on the low all which separated the gardens of their vo homes. They had just come from school id were talking over the news of the after- oon.

They were near the end of their first term cooking lessons, and Miss Leland, the acher, had planned for the little sixth grade rls an exhibition of the simple cooking they ad learned. After she had explained this lan, she added, "And there will be a prize for ie girl who offers the best sheet of ginger- read, two dollars and a blue ribbon badge of onor. You may consult any cook-book and ou may use the rule in your class notebooks any other rule; but I put you on your onor not to have help from your mothers or ny friends. I will not forbid you talking er your baking with each other. That," she dded, smiling, "might be too hard a rule for ou to keep."

"Who do you s'pose will get it?" Barbara epeated.

"Why, Barbara," Madge answered slowly, I—s'pose—you will. You had 91—the high- st mark for cooking."

"But," Barbara returned, "you had 90, and hat's almost the same. You're as likely to et it as I am."

"It sounds selfish, maybe," said Madge, "but do want it."

"So do I!" laughed Barbara. "Well, we'll oth try. And we won't really care which of s gets it, will we?"

"No," Madge answered, "and somebody else ight get it, after all."

It was certainly wise in Miss Leland not to orbid the little girls talking together over the rize, for never could they have kept their ongues from the main subject of their thoughts, rize gingerbread!

Madge and Barbara, walking together from chool or leaning on the garden wall or study- ng cook-books in each other's kitchen, talked f rules and flavors and kinds of molasses.

"Barbara," cried Madge, bursting into Bar- ara's kitchen one Saturday morning, "what ind of spice shall you use, besides ginger?"

"Maybe a little cinnamon," Barbara replied. 'What shape pan do you think is best? Square r oblong? I almost think I like square. Don't you think it would be nice if we had different shapes? You might have oblong."

"Ye-es, perhaps," Madge hesitated.

As Madge climbed the garden wall, on her way home, she was thinking, "I do so dread- fully want that prize. Barbara had the high- est mark of the class; that's a good deal of honor. Seem's 'sif I might have the prize. If I could only be called out and have the blue ribbon pinned on me, I'd be willing Barbara should have the money. If, just for once, she wouldn't do quite as well as I!"

Every other day Madge baked gingerbread, using a different rule. Brother Tom, enjoy- ing frequent squares of the delicious cake, beamed his approval: "Great to have a cook in the family! Bet nobody can beat you, Sis, at gingerbread!"

The day before the exhibition, Madge and Barbara were still anxiously consulting each other. "I wonder," said Madge, "which really is best for shortening, butter or lard or crisco or some of two of these, or what?"

"Some of what, I guess!" laughed Barbara. "But what I should like to know is whether to bake tonight or tomorrow morning. It might be a little stale if we bake tonight. I believe I'll bake the very last thing and take the gin- gerbread smoking to school."

Madge meantime was thinking, "It might be soggy if you take it hot to school. I'm going to bake my gingerbread very early in the morn- ing and cool it on the wire sieve; then it will be fresh and sure not to be soggy."

Hardly had the sun risen the next morning when Madge was in the kitchen dressed in her all-over white cooking-apron and tidy cap and with hands well scrubbed. She set out in the blue cookery bowls brown eggs so fresh that the biddies had hardly stopped cackling over them, fresh yellow butter, and flour sifted four times to fluffiness; she measured creamy milk and golden molasses and spoonfuls of sparkling salt, baking powder, ginger, and cinnamon.

"I'll use cinnamon," she thought, "because Barbara does have good luck and that's her choice. And I'll bake in a square pan, too. I didn't promise not to."

She tested the oven by browning a bit of white paper; and then she beat and mixed and poured the precious mixture into the well-greased pan, which was carefully tucked away in the oven.

Soon delightful spicy smells crept through the kitchen; and Tom stood at the door sniff- ing and singing—Tom was in Grade 8 and was beginning Latin. He was singing, "Gigno, gignere, gingerbread! Give us some! Smells good enough to eat, anyhow! Good luck at the party, Sis!"

The baking was over and the gingerbread, light, tender, brown, and rich, was set away on the wire to cool.

Madge looked at the sheet with a sigh: "If it only would be a tiny bit better than any other, just for once!"

While the family was eating breakfast, a shower fell, leaving the air cool and damp and making the grass twinkle with a million tiny rainbows over which Madge tripped to see how Barbara's baking was coming on. She found her friend standing before the table spread with her bowls of milk, molasses, and all the other needfuls of gingerbread. The egg yolks and whites were beaten to golden sponge and snowy foam, and Barbara, spoon in hand, was about to mix.

Madge's sharp eyes roved over the table—eggs, milk, flour. Oh! it might be—after the shower—a wee bit damp, and then Barbara's cake might be a wee bit heavy and then her own gingerbread would be a wee bit better and then—Madge's breath came quick and she thought fast.

Barbara lifted the bowl of flour—in an in- stant the mixture would be finished. But Madge caught her friend's arm, crying, "Oh, Barbara! After the shower—might the flour be damp? Oughtn't you to sift it again?"

"Why, yes, it would be a good plan," Bar- bara answered. "Thank you for reminding me, Madge."

While the flour fell, a fine, snowy shower through the sieve and while Barbara mixed flour and eggs and the rest and poured the whole into a square pan which she shut up in the oven, Madge looked on, then she went home to pack her gingerbread in its tissue-paper-lined box.

A few hours later, the work of the young cooks was set out on white-draped tables in the hall of the Adams School; and excited, flushed-faced little girls, hungry-eyed boys, and admiring parents were gazing at the simple but inviting-looking food: puffy baking-powder biscuits and bran muffins, creamed fish and dried beef set off by curly parsley, fluffy mounds of mashed potato, shavings of crispy bacon, amber apple-sauce, and crimson cran- berry.

The little girls "demonstrating" at side tables attracted much attention. One was mak- ing cocoa, and another was preparing toast and tea, as for an invalid.

But with greatest interest the people thronged about the table of prize gingerbread. In the center of the table stood a green bowl of garden roses around which were placed the gingerbread sheets: oblong and square and round, dark brown, middling brown, and golden; and smelly! So deliciously spicy-smelly! The boys had to put their hands into their pockets to keep them from the cakes.

There was a stir; the crowd was shooed away to make room for the judges. These were Mr. Grey, headmaster of the Adams School; Mrs. Benton, a school-committee lady, and Lawyer Eaton. They looked sharply at all the cakes; they cut slices and nibbled slowly and tasted and smacked their lips. Finally they picked out two sheets—two square sheets—of gingerbread and carried them to the anteroom. One sheet was Madge's and the other was Barbara's! One of these would win the prize! Which one?

The judges returned from the anteroom. Law- yer Eaton waved his hand and all were silent as he spoke: "One of your judges," he said, "thought one sheet of gingerbread was better and one thought the other a shade better. I tried very hard to decide and finally I de- cided that the best gingerbread was made by Miss Barbara Ellis—and—Miss Madge Lane! Their cakes are equally light and rich and have the same delicious flavor. In fact, both are the best gingerbread I have ever tasted. And the first prize for gingerbread is awarded to Barbara and Madge. Will the young ladies step forward?"

Side by side the two blushing little girls walked to the platform and stood while Lawyer Eaton pinned a gold-lettered blue ribbon on each white frock.

Suddenly a thought came into Barbara's mind, and with clear eyes she looked into Law- yer Eaton's face and said, "I think—I think the prize is all Madge's. My gingerbread would not have been as light as hers, if she hadn't reminded me to—to sift the flour!"

How the people laughed and then clapped and cheered! They cheered Barbara and they cheered Madge.

But then, with faltering voice, Madge spoke: "I think the prize isn't really mine, because—

(Continued on page 278)

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

The Industrial Revolution

INDUSTRIAL SOCIETY IN ENGLAND TOWARDS THE END OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY, by WITT BOWDEN (Macmillan. $3.50). Arnold Toynbee's Industrial Revolution in England has been, and is likely to continue to be, the classical interpretation of that epoch in which through the rapid development of mechanical invention the domestic system of industry gave way to the factory system and the modern industrial era. Those who have had their most illuminating view of that epoch through Toynbee will find exceedingly valuable this more detailed survey by Professor Bowden. Toynbee was concerned chiefly, and in a general way, with the changes in social structure and ideals. Professor Bowden is more directly concerned with the economic and political aspects of the revolution, and with the effects of these upon industrial organization in our own day. He studies with considerable care such matters as the General Chamber of Manufacturers of Great Britain, organized in 1785, the forerunner of present-day chambers of commerce, and he traces more closely than has been usual the connection between present-day trades unions and the earlier box clubs or friendly societies. Professor Bowden's volume is especially valuable for its facts and observations concerning the relations between the growth of industry and commerce and the resulting changes in political policy and legislation. The study is under four main divisions: The Age of Invention, the Triumph of the Machine, the Great Industrialists, and the Industrial Workers.

INDUSTRIAL OWNERSHIP: ITS ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL SIGNIFICANCE, by ROBERT S. BROOKINGS (Macmillan. $1.25). Is an industrial revolution, almost as significant as that which produced the factory system, going on today in the ordinary evolution of commerce and industry? Mr. Brookings is disposed to think so, and he finds the evidences of this in the transformed conditions confronting the use of capital in industry. His book, out of wide experience and observation, and with an important array of facts, supports the conclusion "that the Capital-Labor problem, the many phases of which have been so long under discussion, is in process of solution through the wide distribution of industrial ownership among relatively small stockholders." This diffusion of ownership, the author contends, is making former types of individual capitalistic control in industry increasingly difficult, if not practically impossible. Hence the tendency is towards democracy, or labor representation in industry, and toward the placing of capital in industry upon an investment basis similar to that which it has in banking and other activities. Out of this process it is the author's hope "that co-operation will take the place of blind competition in industry" and that "co-operation between the industries and labor will take the place of the present wasteful system of bargaining." In this way Mr. Brookings thinks we may "attain an economic democracy which will scale with our political democracy."

The natural response to this is to express the hope that economic democracy, if it is to come in this way, may avoid the well-recognized pitfalls and weaknesses of political democracy. We believe that a much larger place will have to be accorded to sheer idealism and spiritual vision before economic processes and developments can work out a larger social deliverance. Also, though Mr. Brookings recognizes the place and importance of the problem of unemployment, its solution would seem to us to call for far more drastic reorganization and spiritual (as distinct from economic) development than is implied in his program of progress. Will anything short of adequate recognition of the inherent worth of man and of spiritual values ever produce the incentive sufficient to bring about the economic solution of the problem of unemployment?

A Japanese Novel

BEFORE THE DAWN, by TOYOHIKO KAGAWA (Doran. $2.50). The Congregationalist has already published considerable concerning the life, vision, and labor of Kagawa, the St. Francis of Japan, who recently visited America, and was one of the chief speakers at the Missionary Convention in Washington, last February. The volume now made available to English readers is his best known book, the book that made his literary fame, and that attained an enormous sale in his own country. An English version brought out under the title, Across the Death-Line approximated a sale of half a million copies in Japan and the East. The present edition represents a careful revision by the same translators.

No description can convey an adequate impression of Kagawa's novel, which is said to be in some measure autobiographic. It is on so vast and varied a scale as to defy characterization or summary. It has been compared with the work of Tolstoi and of Dostoievsky. This seems to us a just comparison, though there is a suggestion here and there of the more formal and exaggerated student-consciousness that characterized Cheruychevsky's novel, What's to Be Done? Apart from its story value and its revelation of the soul of an author who is undoubtedly one of the world's real prophets, Mr. Kagawa's book is exceedingly interesting for its intimate portrayal of the intellectual and spiritual experiences and processes of an eastern student in contact with the religion, science, and philosophy of the western world who is likewise alive to the problems in his own land. This is the sort of book that would have become notable no matter in what land or age it had been written—a human document at once awful and sublime in the realism, love, and hope with which it sees and discusses the drama of life. It will undoubtedly attain a large circulation in America.

A Variety of Good Books

ON EARTH PEACE: A STUDY FOR TODAY. Edited by RHODA MCCULLOCH and MARGARET BURTON. A valuable study of Christian Missions in relation to World Peace, discussing the problem of inter-racial co-operation, the causes of war, and its cure, and programs and suggestions for effective study of these questions. Four appendices present the Covenant of the League of Nations, the Protocol of the World Court, Excerpts from the Geneva Protocol, and Findings of the Washington Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, held in January, 1925.

AN ADVENTURE IN EVANGELISM, by DANIEL A. POLING (Revell. $1.50). There is no doubt that Dan Poling is doing a great work with men and for God down at Collegiate Church, New York. Here he tells us what it is and how he does it. There are stories of tw born men, an account of the evangelistic m ods in use down in the heart of the great c and some of the sermons whereby he is rea ing the hearts of these men. There is a gospel at the heart of them and there is ple of heart, and no little art in them.

BIBLE SNAP-SHOTS, by AMOS R. WE (Revell. $1.50). A collection of ninety sk sketches of Bible characters and incidents. T are vivid, dramatic word pictures. Each a clear and definite spiritual or moral less They are fresh and interesting, and they sti late clear thinking, right living, and Christ faith.

FACES THROUGH THE MIST, by JOHN PATTEN (Doran. $2.00 net). These Sun evening addresses were given to a congregat composed largely of young people. They all Biblical studies. The first series is cal "Bible Pictures of Home Life." "The g father" is from the Prodigal Son, "the id mother" is Hannah, the loyal brother is drew and the unselfish sister is Miriam. Un the general title of Men in the Shadow preacher treats Lot, Ishmael, Esau, Aaron, Saul. "The Cross Before Calvary" shows cross in the life of Jacob, Joseph, Gide Ezekiel, and John the Baptist. The fou series is on "The Beauty of Christ." These all fine illustrations of Biblical preaching studies of Bible characters. Also they are g examples of the best kind of Sunday eveni preaching.

THE GREAT GUEST, by EDWARD BURR MOODY (Revell. $1.00). "Studies in natu literature, and life" is the author's own su mary of the book. He carries us to Summ brook Farm and shares with us the discover and discussions there of bees, birds, brooks, a books. Nature and art in relation to religi how beauty reveals truth, and other kindr themes are discussed sympathetically delightfully.

THE MASTER AS PAYMASTER, by GEOR ESDRAS BERANS (Revell. $1.25). "Does it p to be religious?" is the general theme of the sermons. Some of the "rewards of the gospe which Mr. Berans indicates are "New a Abundant Life," "Heart's Desires Fulfilled "Divine Likeness," "Freedom from Worry "Winning Life's Choicest Friend," "Perfe Joy," and "Retain Possessions Forever More Not only do these themes receive fresh a original treatment, but they are spiritually i spiring as well. Roger W. Babson writes word of introduction and commendation.

HEALING IN THE CHURCHES, by FRANCIS WETHERILL (Revell. $1.25). "No miraculo cures are on record where the subject was li ing in sin (darkness, lawlessness, unhappiness at the time of healing. The chief purpose this study is to explain the ministry of t church in combating sin." The author, Episcopal clergyman, brings these experience statistics, and conclusions as the outcome participation in healing missions, bedsi prayers, and health classes.

PLEASANT PIONEERS, by KENNETH D. MI LER (Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents). An i terpretation of the Slavic peoples in the Unite States, with an account of their Europea backgrounds, and a discussion of their religiou condition and needs.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul Writes to the Philippians

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 6
Phil. 3: 7-16; 4: 8

An interval of some years, probably about twelve, divides the last lesson from this, but those who have arranged the lessons have done wisely in placing the study of Paul's Epistles in conjunction with the story of his first visit to the place and people to whom the epistle was later addressed. The only satisfactory way of reading the Epistles is by constant reference to the Book of the Acts, and to Paul's experiences and contacts with those to whom he wrote.

Much had happened to Paul during these twelve years since he had obeyed the Macedonian call. That missionary adventure must have been ever constantly in his mind, but if he had needed stimulation to recall it his being a prisoner again might well have brought before him the experiences at Philippi. Paul was now a prisoner at Rome and it is out of this period that we have the richest and ripest of his writings. One can trace in them marked development in Paul's life and thought. He is not quite so optimistic concerning the world and its rulers and powers as he was when he wrote Romans 13. His outlook is now more purely spiritual and he sees the empire of Christ growing and developing in a world actuated, even in its great and powerful leaders, by a spirit of selfishness and evil. He is held a prisoner and denied justice by that very Rome in whose citizenship he had taken unconcealed pride.

Paul's circumstances and their effect upon him appear at once in the Epistle. There is a note of tenderness and yearning for these who have been, and are, "partakers of his grace" (1: 7). He refers to his bonds and to his satisfaction that, as at Philippi, his imprisonment is turning out to the furtherance of the gospel. He refers beautifully to his faith in Christ and the personal experience that sustains him (1: 18-23), and here in the lesson passage he strikes an autobiographical note and reveals his deepest longing and purpose.

This purpose centers wholly in Christ, who is for Paul the complete ideal of righteousness and truth. By this Christ he has been "apprehended," or arrested, and his sole passion in life is to lay hold of that for which Christ has laid hold of him. Life is a pressing toward the mark of a high calling. It is a forgetting of past failures and discouragements (3: 13) and a reaching out in hope and vision. The law of progress is in following that which has already been proven in experience (3: 16). And above all, the Christian life moves wholly and completely upon the plane of practical goodness and high morality. Christian experience finds its highest expression not in mere emotion but in thinking and acting. Paul prays that the Philippians' love "may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment." His yearning for them is that they "may approve things that are excellent" (1: 9-10) and the best commentary upon these words is found in the closing verse of our lesson:

> Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

The bigger the work the greater the joy in doing it.—Henry M. Stanley.

Veronica

Mary E. Simpson

(Tradition gives the name Veronica to the woman whose miraculous healing is recorded in Mark 5: 25-34. To tradition we are indebted, also, for the incidents of the statue and the handkerchief.)

Within a cheerless home
A lonely, sad, and suffering woman sat.
Twelve weary years had slowly dragged away
Since joy or health or vigor she had known;
Not e'en sweet human sympathy was hers,
To cheer her hours of pain, and breathe of hope,
And give her courage as the days crept on;
For she was deemed as one smitten of God
By reason of her wayward, sinful life.
Physicians' help, though vainly, she had sought,
Had suffered many things, had spent her all,
And nothing bettered was, but rather, worse.
What wonder if she shrank from human eye,
And in her bitter sorrow prayed for death?

But whence this eager, thronging multitude?
And who that gracious Man within that crowd?
To the sick woman's anxious, listening ears
Come the faint echoes of His wondrous deeds;
She learns that outcast lepers He has touched
And given health and soundness by His word;
She hears how great things He has done for one
Whom raging demons long time had possessed;
That even now, on mercy's errand bent,
He goes with Jairus to a stricken home.

Hope wakes within her at these wondrous words.
Though she had nought wherewith to buy a cure,
And though her piteous story she withheld
E'en from the marvelous Healer's ready ear,
Yet could she only touch His garment's hem,
'Twere life and health and gladness for the touch.

The hope grows into strong, undoubting faith;
She joins the throng; bravely she struggles through;
With strength unwonted, fiercely resolute,
She reaches forward in the pressing crowd,
And grasps the white fringe of the Master's robe.
Instant she felt the plague within her stayed;
The feeble pulse gave way to health's firm beat,
And fresh, new life came back to her again.

Timid, although rejoicing, back she shrank,
As if her precious secret she would guard,
As she so long had borne her load of woe.
But Jesus, kind Physician, knowing all,
Had still another blessing for His child.
Who touched my robe?, he asked, and turned about
To look upon her that had done this thing.
Fearing and trembling, then the woman came,
Fell down before Him and told all the truth.
His gracious lips spoke no rebuking word,
But sealed her pardon and assured her cure,
Adding to all the heavenly gift of peace.

They tell us that her heart felt gratitude
Wrought in enduring bronze her story sweet,
That men might know His pitying love and power
To whom she owed her life, her hope, her peace.
And when the Man of Sorrows bore His cross,
Sadly she walked beside Him, wiping oft,
With her own kerchief that dear Sufferer's face,
And bore upon that kerchief evermore
The impress of her Savior's countenance.

Chillingworth on Toleration

(A Broad Church View)

(Source: Chillingworth, Religion of the Protestants. Ed. 1719, page 130.)

Lastly: Though you are apt to think yourselves such necessary instruments for all good purposes, and that nothing can be well done unless you do it; that no unity or constancy in religion can be maintained, but inevitably Christendom must fall to ruin and confusion, unless you support it; yet we that are indifferent and impartial, and well content that God should give us his own favors, by means of his own appointment, not of our choosing, can easily collect out of these very words, that not the infallibility of your or of any church, but the apostles and prophets, and evangelists, etc., where Christ gave upon his ascension, were designed by him, for the compassing all these excellent purposes, by their preaching while they lived, and by their writings for ever. And if they fail hereof, the reason is not any insufficiency or invalidity in the means, but the voluntary perverseness of the subjects they have to deal with; who, if they would be themselves, and be content that others should be, in the choice of their religion, the servants of God and not of men; if they would allow, that the way to heaven is no narrower now than Christ left it, his yoke no heavier than he made it; that the belief of no more difficulties is required now to salvation, than was in the primitive church; that no error is in itself destructive, and exclusive from salvation now, which was not then; if, instead of being zealous Papists, earnest Calvinists, rigid Lutherans, they would become themselves, and be content that others should be plain and honest Christians; if all men would believe the Scripture, and, freeing themselves from prejudice and passion, would sincerely endeavor to find the true sense of it, and live according to it, and require no more of others but to do so nor denying their communion to any that do so, would so order their public service of God, that all which do so may, without scruple or hypocrisy, or protestation against any part of it, join with them in it; who doth not see that seeing (as we suppose here, and shall prove hereafter) all necessary truths are plainly and evidently set down in Scripture, there would of necessity be among all men, in all things necessary, unity of opinion? And, notwithstanding any other differences that are or could be, unity of communion and charity and mutual toleration? By which means, all schism and heresy would be banished the world; and those wretched contentions which now rend and tear in pieces, not the coat, but the members and bowels, of Christ, which mutual pride, and tyranny, and cursing, and killing, and damning, would fain make immortal, should speedily receive a most blessed catastrophe.

The Cost

Everything of value costs. Spiritual values such as patriotism, personal virtues, moral reform, and religious leadership cost more than things. The advancing history of mankind is bloody with battle and worn with sacrificial toil. American history is the record of a great advance in human freedom and human brotherhood, but it has stained our flag with blood-red stripes when men made that advance. Next to being a downright traitor the deepest sin against patriotism is to accept all that America now offers us and, with no sense of gratitude to those who made her what she is, to proceed to use our national benefits for selfish ends alone.—Louis C. Wright in "Zion's Herald."

Provisional Program of the National Council

Washington, D. C., October 20-28

Theme: A Free Church in a Free State for a Friendly World

The afternoon and evening sessions will be held in the Washington Auditorium, New York Ave. and 19th St., and the morning sessions in the Earle Theatre, 13th and E. Sts., except as otherwise announced. Each morning there will be a half hour of business at 9. At 9.30 Dr. Ashley Day Leavitt of Brookline, Mass., will conduct the devotions.

Music and other incidental features will be introduced from time to time, including a preliminary evening program at 7.30. The Fisk Singers will sing from time to time.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON, OCT. 20

2:00 Organization
4:00 "Our Task"—Rev. Charles F. Carter, D.D.
4:30 "Our Evangelical Protestant Heritage"—Rev. C. A. Voss, D.D.
5:00 Report of the Executive Committee
Report of the Committee on Credentials
8:00 The Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge, is being invited to speak
Address by the retiring Moderator, Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter, D.D.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 21

10:00 A.M. Report of the Commission on Missions
11:30 Roll Call of States for the introduction of business
2:00 P.M. "The State Conference—A Fellowship Service"—W. H. Rollins, D.D.
2:20 "Have We an International Gospel"—Professor Laura H. Wild
"What a Congregational Church Means to a Southern City"—Mr. C. W. Lusk Annual Meeting of The American Missionary Association
3:00 Business
3:45 "The Highlander in the South"—Prin. Edgar H. Elam
4:05 "Dividends upon a Half Century of Missionary Investments"—Prof. W. H. Holloway
4:30 "Christianity and the Races"—Dr. Robert E. Speer
8:00 "The Bridge Builders"—Rev. Gaius Glenn Atkins, D.D.
"Christian Race Relationships"—Prof. Plato Durham

THURSDAY, OCT. 22

10:00 A.M. Reports of Commissions and Business
2:00 P.M. Half Holiday—Excursions to be announced
8:00 "Law Enforcement"—Assistant Attorney General, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt
Address—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise

FRIDAY, OCT. 23

Simultaneous Meetings for Young People
(See program below)
Annual Meeting of the American Board of Foreign Missions

9:00 A.M. Business and Reports
10:00 Presentation of Special Report from the Prudential Committee on the Policy of the Board as affected by the Financial Situation—Rev. Shepherd Knapp, D.D.
"The Tragedy of Refusing New Work, as Illustrated by Portuguese East Africa"—Secretary Ernest W. Riggs
11:15 The Proposed Consolidation of the Woman's Boards with the American Board
2:00 P.M. Election of Officers and Miscellaneous Business
2:30 Addresses by Missionaries
White of Greece
Banninga of India
Modak of India
Fairfield of China
Channon of Philippines
(15 minutes each)
4:15 Address—Speaker to be announced
8:00 "Conditions in the Near East"—Dr. James L. Barton
Address—Dr. W. W. Peet of Constantinople
"The American Board and the Evangelization of Africa"—Dr. F. B. Bridgman
Closing words by President of Board (with introduction of new President)
After adjournment presentation of Dr. Bridgman's African Film

SATURDAY, OCT. 24

10:00 A.M. Business and Reports
10:30 Annual Meetings of The Congregational Education Society and The Congregational Publishing Society (Program to be announced)
The Foundation for Education
2:00 P.M. "Achievements"—President George W. Nash
2:15 "Principles"—Dr. Ernest B. Allen
2:40 "Vision"—Dr. T. W. Nadal
3:00 Address—Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D.D.
Address—Secretary Curtis D. Wilbur
Address—Commissioner John T. Esch
Address—Bishop Francis J. McConnell
8:00 Address—Rev. R. W. Barstow
Address—Speaker to be announced

SUNDAY, OCT. 25

9:00 A.M. Young People's Meeting—Metropolitan Theatre
10:45 Church Services followed by Communion in each Congregational Church
3:30 P.M. Council Sermon—Rev. Carl S. Patton, D.D.
6:00 Young People's Rally
8:00 Address—Dr. James Gordon Gilkey
Address—Dr. Thomas C. Edwards

MONDAY, OCT. 26

9:00 A.M. Sectional Meetings—See Programs
2:00 P.M. Half Holiday—Excursions to be announced
8:00 Address—Chief Justice William Howard Taft
The British and French Ambassadors are being invited to address this session

TUESDAY, OCT. 27

9:00 A.M. Report of the Corporation for the National Council
The Ministerial Boards—Mr. Lucius R. Eastman, President presiding
Business and Reports
10:00 The Ministerial Boards—Mr. Lucius R. Eastman, President presiding
Address—Rev. Charles S. Mills, D.D., General Secretary
Brief Addresses—Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Mr. George A. Huggins, Actuary
"Safeguarding the Ministry"—Mr. Clarence S. Pellet
"The Maintenance of the Standards of the Ministry as a Profession—Rev. Clarence Hall Wilson, D.D.
Annual Meetings—The Congregational Home Missionary Society, The Congregational Church Building Society, The Congregational Sunday School Extension Society—President J. Percival Huget, Chairman
11:30 Reports and Business
2:00 P.M. Music—Welsh Singers
Glimpses of the Departments
1. Negro Work in the North—Rev. William N. DeBerry, D.D.
2. City Work—Dr. D. Witherspoon Dodge
3. Rural Work—Dr. Malcolm Boyd Dana
4. Foreign-Speaking Work—Mrs. Jennie F. Pratt
"The Service of the Church Building Society"—Rev. Arthur J. Folsom Reports by Student Summer Workers for The Congregational Sunday School Extension Society
"A Summer in the Cheyenne Valley"—Mr. Austin S. Phillips of Harvard University
"Pioneering with Mugala"—Miss Helen Wilcox
For The Congregational Home Missionary Society—Mr. N. C. Wallin
From the Great West
"Gila Monsters and Other Monsters"—Rev. R. R. Shoemaker
"The Mormon Situation"—Rev. Claton S. Rice
"The Flaming Frontier"—Rev. Frank E. Henry
Address—Secretary William M. Jardine (Conditional announcement)
7:30 "Women in Home Missions"—Mrs. John J. Pearsall
"Triumphs of an Imperial Vision"—Dr. J. Percival Huget, President of the Church Extension Boards

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 28

9:00 A.M. Council Business
10:00 Reports and Business
The American Bible Society
"The Boy Scout Program as Applied to Protestant Churches"—Ray O. Wyland
United Program Missionary Boards
Rev. Chester B. Emerson, D.D., Presiding
General Theme—"Partnership in a World Enterprise"
2:00 P.M. Fisk Jubilee Singers
Devotions
2:15 "The United Program"—Rev. Chester B. Emerson, D.D.
2:35 "The Larger Evangelism"—Rev. Russell H. Stafford, D.D.
3:10 "Christian Education"—Rev. Herbert K. Booth, D.D.
3:40 "Creating Brotherhood"—Rev. Albert W. Palmer, D.D.
4:20 Pageant Drama (Illustrating the Partnership in the World Enterprise)
8:00 Popular Musical

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEK-END

FRIDAY, SATURDAY AND SUNDAY, OCT. 24, 25 AND 26
OCT. 24 AND 25, MORNING AND AFTERNOON SESSIONS

Friday and Saturday will be devoted to sightseeing trips about Washington, with addresses at the several places visited. Among the places to be visited are: The Capitol, Congressional Library, National Cathedral, Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument, Bureau of Printing and Engraving, National Research Council Building, Arlington, Mount Vernon, Hall of Science and the White House.

Among the distinguished men who have consented to address the young people are: Professor Edwin Emery Slosson, General John A. LeJeune, Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Bishop William G. McDowell, D.D., Attorney General John G. Sargent, Dr. Oscar Maurer, Bishop James E. Freeman, D.D., or Dean Anson Stokes of the National Cathedral, and it is expected that Secretary Curtis D. Wilbur of the Navy and Secretary William M. Jardine of the Department of Agriculture will speak.

The delegates will call upon President and Mrs. Coolidge, and it is expected that a photograph will be made of the party on the White House grounds.

Evening Sessions

Since the young people's delegation will be associate members of the National Council they will be admitted to the sessions on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Sunday Services for Young People

On Sunday, Oct. 26, the young people's delegations from many parts of the nation will attend a special service in the Metropolitan Theatre, and on Sunday evening will be the guests of the young people of Washington at a great interdenominational meeting.

Important sectional meetings will be held, including those on Central Functions of the Church, Educational Institutions, Religious Education, Work Among Colored People, Social Service and Church Work in Cities, the programs of which will be announced later.

The annual meeting of the Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation will be held at the Mayflower Hotel, Monday evening and Tuesday morning, Oct. 19 and 20.

Announcement is made that there are no adequate facilities for a general banquet of the whole Council. Doubtless groups will arrange for various dinners.

The list of Council delegates will be ready soon, and will be published in The Congregationalist.

Vital Ques

To Come B

he Equities of the Moderatorship

The suggestion of Dr. Bradley of Cleveland, o would put in nomination for Moderator the National Council President Kenyon L. tterfield, commends itself on many grounds. is a layman's turn, and any pretext that it impossible to find suitable timber of this t would militate badly against the theory of Congregational democracy.

At best, Washington is a poor place to focus constituency of a convention on routine ks. The social, holiday, junket atmosphere oo contagious. Particularly here we should e a layman who has strong business sense. are to be in the Capitol City as servants Christ, as representatives of the Congrega- al Churches, attending to the practical ad- istration of our fellowship. We ought not make conspicuous any political or official re- ons to the government. For this reason the mbers of our denomination who are in high ces in the cabinet or thereabouts would bet- be passed by at this time. The Moderator uld be a layman, especially in preference to se who are the secretaries of our societies, on the roster of officials. These brethren have ir constant opportunities before our people distinction and the setting up of their quali- of leadership. The representatives of the s have less frequently these occasions of or. It is useless to discuss how the energies our laymen can be more fully utilized if we them to take back seats when there are lic and preferred functions which they are ly qualified to perform. President Butter- d is well equipped in his own right for this e. He has had experience East and West educational work. He has been especially ed to deal with problems affecting the homes people and their youth in his position as d of an agricultural college and as an editor promoter of the interests of our farming munities. If the Moderator is to continue practice of visiting the churches and con- ences of our order throughout the country, uld not the training and experience of such man prove a valuable asset for our com- nion and the cause of our Master?

Boston, Mass. WILLIAM R. CAMPBELL.

A Layman's Opinions

. Who shall be the Next Moderator of the tional Council?

Wisconsin would like to place in nomination Moderator of the National Council Mr. nk J. Harwood of Appleton, Wis., a Chris- n business man, a member of the Executive nmittee of the National Council, for forty rs an outstanding Congregationalist of this te, and always an enthusiastic, gracious, and ued participant in our national as well as state life.

. What about the representation of women the Council and in our Missionary Associa- n?

Wisconsin favors the representation of wo- n in the Council and in our Missionary As- iation. The Board of Directors of the Wis- sin Congregational Conference has for sev- l years had women members. The Madison trict Association was presided over by Mrs. n R. Faville as Moderator. She and other sconsin women have served on the Board of rectors.

. Should the Presbyterians and Congrega- alists unite?

Denominationalism has distinct advantages. ere are likewise advantages for denomina-latter being also congregational. Theologically we are closer to the Methodists. In both respects we are closest of all to the Unitarians. Socially we are more at home with the Presbyterians and we could easily live with the liberal wing of this body. It would be out of the question for Congregationalists to unite with the conservative Presbyterian wing.

[redacted]

4. What should Congregationalists say on public questions? For example, social reform, interracial, international questions.

Any question which has to do with finer living and better relations among men is a religious question. Christians should always be ready to discuss such questions and wherever it can be done to express the consensus of Christian opinion on them, not from the political or economic, but from the Christian point of view of purity, love, brotherhood, and service.

5. How can the energies of our laymen be more largely utilized?

Laymen need education. Their energies will be best expressed when they are convinced of the worthwhileness of the job and the meaning of their part in it.

6. What should be the relation of the women's organizations to the general organizations of the church, locally, state-wide, and nationally?

The women's organizations should be an integral part of all Congregational work, local, state-wide, and national.

7. Should there be but one board of foreign missions?

There should be but one board of foreign missions. In Wisconsin this question was put to seven of our nine associations last month and the seven voted for it without a dissenting opinion.

8. Should there be but one home board?

There should be but one board of home missions, paralleling the present organization in such states as ours where one conference, one board of directors, one administrative unit, one treasurer, one budget, and one unified promotional appeal directs and carries on activities which are now divided nationally among six or seven societies and commissions. There is no separation between paying money to the pastor in a home missionary church, to a pastor at a state university, and to a pastor who is retired. The extension of the Kingdom is one problem. There should be experts on its various phases, working under one unified direction, one board, and one budget.

9. Should the Foundation for Education be merged with the Education Society?

Wisconsin associations this spring unanimously favored the merging of the Foundation for Education with the Education Society.

10. Is there any reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not be administered by the same organization?

There is no reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not be administered by the same organization.

11. Shall we lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects in the apportionment by merging some of the societies?

We shall gain rather than lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects by merging some of the societies. We shall gain interest by doing away with vagueness and confusion. It will be easier to present

[redacted]

14. Should each society approach the local church and the individual Congregationalist in the interest of its own receipts, or should all commit the major portion of their cultivation of income to a common agency working in co-operation with the state conference?

A common promotional agency has been successful in many leading states. Paralleling this development there should be a common national agency of promotion.

Madison, Wis. ERNEST N. WARNER.

One Denominational Organ

Every one who gets the viewpoint of the writer of the article in the current Missionary Herald on "What Is the Missionary Herald Worth?" can sympathize with him in his feelings and convictions. We feel that the Missionary Herald is better than it has ever been and is producing the best results, and is worth to the American Board more than it costs. That article will appeal mightily to many readers whose devotion to the American Board is great. But is there not danger of letting sentiment have undue influence with us when an opportunity opens for a change that will mean still more to us? Are the reasons given convincing to all who have the broader interests of the Kingdom deeply at heart?

Has not the time come when we must make clear to all our constituency that our work is one? It will be a great gain when we can think always of all our denominational work at home and abroad as one work. Everything that we can do to eliminate the wrong and unnecessary distinctions that divide our interests is important. The greatest help in this will be to have one denominational organ to cover our field of service continually. The best of the Missionary Herald, the American Missionary, and The Congregationalist, distributed through the 52 issues of the year would make a great paper more widely read than all three are now, and of greater value. Supplements and special editions called by the old names would greatly diminish this value.

Those not interested in missions habitually neglect our missionary publications of every kind. The very labeling of them defeats their first—I thought I wouldn't tell Barbara about the flour and—and that would have been—mean and—"

With the Children

(Continued from page 273)

"But you did tell me!" cried Barbara.

And Lawyer Eaton, while everybody clapped again, smiled at the girls and said, "Well, well, it seems we have to be proud not only of two fine little cooks, but of two splendid, honest girls and faithful friends."

When the people stopped cheering to catch their breath, Tom's voice was heard piping, 'Gigno! Gignere! Gingerbread! Give us some!" There was a great laugh, and the gingerbread was cut and a slice was given to everybody. Tom, munching his, boasted, "At our house, we have the best every day. My sister makes it."

Barbara and Madge, their arms locked together, were looking happily each at the other's blue ribbon.

(All rights reserved)

Our Readers' Forum

Teaching Evolution

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Ever since I read, some weeks ago, the editorials of Dr. Jefferson and President Maurer on the Fundamentalist controversy, there has been something in my mind asking for utterance. I have the highest esteem for both these men and one I have for many years counted among my warm personal friends.

I have nothing but good will toward them and so I will not say that I wish they could spend a few years in the religious environment in which I have found myself for the last five years; but I will say that, if they could have that experience it would be vastly enlightening.

They did not definitely say, but from what they did say, the casual reader—and that is what most readers are—would infer that they believed that the responsibility for the present controversy rests largely, if not wholly, on the teachers of science in our schools and colleges, who in their bumptiousness and arrogance take delight in shocking people and in ridiculing the religious convictions of their pupils.

Now it is doubtless true that to start a Fundamentalist movement among the members of Broadway Tabernacle or of the First Church of Columbus would take some such thing as has been implied. I wonder if Dr. Jefferson and President Maurer have had any other concrete evidence than that fact upon which to base their theory of the origin of Fundamentalism.

I want to give a testimony and an opinion. The testimony is that in 36 years in the ministry and a rather wide acquaintance among teachers, although there are doubtless teachers of that sort, I have never met one nor have I ever heard of a definite person who could be accused of such an attitude. How many could Drs. Jefferson and Maurer name of their own actual acquaintance? The opinion is this, and I hold it in all confidence, that, while there may be among the thousands of teachers of science some of that sort, they are not representative, rather are ones among thousands; and that they are so few and so unrepresentative that their influence in stirring up the present controversy is so small that it is a practically negligible factor in the case.

I want to give a couple of incidents connected with the Scopes trial at Dayton. Two high school boys were witnesses as to the teaching of evolution. In the cross examination one of the lawyers for the defense smilingly asked one of the boys if what he had learned about evolution had hurt him any; and he smilingly answered that it had not. Mr. Bryan, with his genius for bringing in the emotional element, cried out dramatically, "Ask their mothers." A reporter took the trouble to do that very thing and found out that the boys were Christian boys, and, as boys go, were faithful attendants at church, Sunday school, and young people's societies; and that so far as their mothers could see nothing they had learned at school had in any way affected their faith or lowered their interest in their religious activities. It was found, too, that one of them at least, when he learned that he was to be called as a witness, had to get out his text-book on biology to see if he had been taught anything about evolution.

That text-book has been in use all over the state and I venture to say that most of the pupils who have used it would have had to do as this boy did, if called as witnesses six weeks after the school closed for the summer.

Of those who would not have to, it would be found that most had been stirred up by some zealous fundamentalist to be on the lookout for trouble.

Another incident is this: The author of Tennessee's evolution law was at Dayton. In an interview he said that he knew nothing about evolution, but he saw in a paper that children were coming home from school and saying that the Bible was all nonsense. Then his pastor said in a sermon that evolution was destroying the Christian religion. So as a candidate for the State Legislature he promised, if elected, to introduce a bill to forbid its teaching. Upon just such vague, indefinite, and hearsay evidence as that a spirit of the most fanatical intolerance has grown up. Over and over in the last few months it has been asserted in pulpit and press that there is a conspiracy to overthrow the Christian relig In that conspiracy are involved all scient who teach evolution. They teach it not cause they believe it true, but because want to use it to destroy Christianity. T scientists who call themselves Christians add hypocrisy to their other crime.

Ministers like Dr. Jefferson, Presi Maurer, and myself, who venture to hold man may be a Christian and believe evolution may have been God's method, either classed with the hypocrites or else t attitude is more generally ascribed to fee ness of mind that has led them to become dupes of the conspirators.

To lay even a comparatively small shar e responsibility for all this upon the teac of science in our schools and colleges has warrant in fact and is unfair to the thousa of fine men and women, most of whom are l Christians, who are trying to help our yo people to a little better knowledge of the w of God.

This is the problem with which I am fronted, and it is typical of that which a titude of my brethren are having to face: I in my city are some thousands of boys girls in school. For the most part they bright, eager, ambitious. Most of them wil through high school and many on to college university. They are having it drilled into t that the truth of Christianity hangs upon truth of teachings that in a few years will discover are not true. The spirit of Ch tianity is being continually manifested as of such narrow intolerance as is a world a from the spirit of Jesus and which ere their maturing moral judgment will utt condemn. What are they going to do w that time of inevitable enlightenment com You know. They, and thank God for it, going to keep faith with their intelligence their conscience, even though it cost them t faith in Christianity. That is just what h dreds of them are going to do in the next dec unless some of us in some measure succeed getting to their attention the idea that Christian religion and faith is a bigger finer and nobler thing than they have been to think.

That is the problem I am facing every What would you do if you were in my pla

(Rev.) M. S. Freeman

Chattanooga, Tenn.

Our Definition of "Cathedral"

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

A hot debate at a minister's associat with the odds against the proposed Congr tional "cathedral" at Washington, followed the protest by William Colton Clark in Congregationalist of June 11, leads me to what, after all, we mean by a nation-wide c paign for such a building.

Several ideas are involved. First, the n tive one, that our First Church at Washing is unable with its present building to maint its place and usefulness in the life of the c tal city. A score of years ago its auditor was in demand for every beneficent cause would have a hearing, and for meetings of s bodies as the Anthropological Society and National Geographic Society, the latter which could not, it was remarked, have ducted its lecture work, perhaps have survi otherwise. All this was capitalized into pervasive spiritual influence of the chu throughout the city.

Today much notice is given to this hist church on account of the President, and f all reports there is at present a large ac sion of influence accruing to its services. when another President shall worship elsewh will be desirable to register and maintain at has been gained for the denominational and the effectiveness of the denominational rit at the capital, and thus throughout the tion and indeed the world.

A building that will make this possible can so readily be accomplished by the local nstituency as were they, for example, a nufacturing people. No one, surely, could ect to a reasonable help afforded from the nomination-at-large. Everyone must feel that other church could make this unique appeal. On the other hand, wouldn't it be fair that s church should express the denominational e as no other? In the debate alluded to it s asked why should we put up a "cathedral" rival the Episcopal cathedral and the Presterian cathedral and so on—since various nominations have some such thing in mind. ouldn't the money better be put into misns or education? Are cathedrals Christian? Certainly we stand for the denial of cathels as the seat of bishops. But have we no cellence to which we look? Do we not claim nething better than a locked-up ecclesiastim—a freedom, a fellowship, a service that ke our representatives the peer of any man, e to eye? Is not that instantly felt in any sembly or casual intercourse?

What, then, will express the excellency of ngregationalism? This, I take it, is the l question at issue, not the aping or the valry of other denominations. A cathedral ll be for us the seat of power, as it has ways been, but of a transformed power, the wer of truth put to spiritual uses. In fact thing would so reduce to nullity the cathel idea as a Congregational cathedral.

Our Cathedral at Washington would be chitecturally the expression of the Puritan irit. Time and again on The Congregationalist ver page within the year has this spirit apared in the noble revivals of the Colonial urch building in ampler form and more durle materials than of old. The Romanesque s had its day among us, and the spiritual ualor of the crowd-housing type has had its y. We are waking up to the fact that the e simple and sublime temple that the genius the new world has made most fit for God d the human spirit is a product of Congregonal history and is diffused with its spirit. nique among all the buildings of the capital ould stand this supreme expression of the uritan witness and the Puritan worship, a thedral, indeed, but a cathedral or seat of e spirit, making the lesser tawdry.

This architecture—for I have been assumg the inevitable—would be adaptable, as so ten locally, to the national note. It would oup to itself and overshadow and unify in eir utterance such auxiliary parts as would necessary to embody our whole denominonal life in essence. There would be a liary, ultimately a repository of Congregonal history worthy to stand in the nation's pital forever. There would be a hall of memies and one of design. Gathered here would the faces of great leaders in the past. Architcture not only, but every device for the ultiple phases of church work would be disayed by photo or blueprint or printer's ink r the study of method. There would be acmmodation for gatherings of groups, for lecres, for national committees, for great music, r pageantry, of course for all the educational nd social as well as devotional work of the cal church, or churches, on occasion, whose fe and fellowship would be enriched by mpler pilgrimages to this shrine and whose pirit would send back with the returning lgrims ever some authentic note to the home urches all over the land. Nothing in brief could so symbolize our denominational life and history, or give us that "ever not quite" which we have felt after and not yet found. So make evident and potent our gift to the world, as a cathedral according to our spiritual genius in Washington. To deny its propriety in fact and cost would be to take down every steeple in New England.

And yet—in view of the growing menace of bureaucracy, only God can guard that cathedral!

Rindge, N. H. B. Alfred Dumm.

Religious Education at Northfield

School Advances Under New Leadership

BEAUTIFUL Sage Chapel at East Northfield, Mass., was filled with an appreciative audience of faculty and students at the closing service of worship and consecration with which the 22d annual session of the Conference of Religious Education closed. Forty-one persons received their diplomas for three year of credit work, the diplomas being awarded by Hon. Robert C. Parker of Westfield, chairman of the board of managers.

This year's session, from July 23 to Aug. 1, opened under difficulties. Dr. Norman E. Richardson, for six years dean of the school, resigned at the close of the last session on account of other duties. Dr. Frank M. Sheldon, for many seasons a popular and stimulating teacher, had removed to Oklahoma. Miss Nannie Lee Frayser, of Louisville, Ky., who for 20 years had been the center of an admiring group, had died during the winter. Other leaders such as Dr. Arthur E. Holt, Rev. Erwin L. Shaver, and Mrs. Millacent P. Yarrow, were not available this year.

It was necessary, therefore, for a new dean and a faculty with many new members to meet the question which many were asking: "Can the school be as good as before?"

The unanimous verdict at the close of this year's session was: "Yes." The new Dean was Dr. Herbert W. Gates, Acting Secretary of the Congregational Education Society, with Rev. Ivan S. Nowlan, General Secretary of the Massachusetts Council of Religious Education, as Assistant Dean. A strong Educational Committee was chosen, including Prof. James P. Berkeley, of Newton Theological Institute, Rev. John W. Suter, Jr., Executive Secretary of the General Board of Education of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Rev. Warren T. Powell, Minister of Education at Trinity M. E. Church, Springfield, Miss Helen C. Stearns, Secretary of the Board of Education of the Christian Church, and Mr. Bryant Nichols, a Congregational layman of Auburndale, Mass., who for years has been the efficient registar and treasurer of the Conference.

Thirty-four courses covering various aspects of religious educational work were offered. The Conference had four 50-minute class periods each forenoon for eight days. The diploma of the school is awarded for six credits of work, of which one must be selected from each of four groups: Principles and Methods, Bible Study, Departmental Methods, and Missionary or Social Service Education. Credit work involves assignments calling for at least one hour of outside work for each class session.

It was evident from the opening session, with its keynote address on Having the Mind of Jesus Christ, that this conference was to be dominated by a spirit of serious purpose, which continued throughout the eight days. Evidences thereof were found in the larger proportion of students taking credit work, the increased sales of textbooks, and a marked spirit of unity on the part of the faculty.

One of the high points of the conference was the daily assembly for worship in Sage Chapel. This was in charge of a committee with Mr. Suter as chairman, and Miss Anne W. Merritt, Miss Hazel F. Tuttle, and Mrs. Agnes R. Allen as the additional members. The services, carefully planned by this committee, were conducted by Mr. Suter. No announcements were allowed to intrude. The delegates entered and left the chapel in silence and showed their appreciation of the simple, though dignified and inspiring service by almost perfect attendance.

Another important development was the work of the Young People's Division. About 225 young women and 75 young men between the ages of 16 and 22 presented a real challenge and a great opportunity. Their work was organized as a Young People's Department directed by a student council and adult counselors.

Rev. Warren T. Powell was Dean of Young People, with Miss Olive P. Kirschner, of Worcester, Mass., and Rev. Sidney Lovett, pastor of Mt. Vernon Congregational Church, Boston, as directors respectively of boys' and of girls' work. Miss Helen E. Welch, of Salem, was assistant director of girls' work. It was generally agreed that from the standpoint of the young people's share, no conference had been as successful as this.

Seven hundred and forty-five delegates were registered at the Conference, all but 34 for full time. Of this number 460 were Congregationalists, the others being divided among twelve denominations. Massachusetts sent 586, 14 other states being represented.

Other Congregational members of the faculty and management were Rev. R. W. Coe of South Church, Campello, Mass., Dr. E. P. Drew of Auburndale, Mass., and Prof. L. A. Olney of Lowell, Mass. At the annual meeting of the board of managers held toward the close of the Conference the following officers were elected: Hon. R. C. Parker, Chairman of the Board, Rev. H. W. Gates, Dean, Rev. I. S. Nowlan, Assistant Dean, and Bryant Nichols, registrar and treasurer.

The other members of the Board of Management are as follows:

Representing State Councils of Religious Education: Rev. Fred French, Maine; Mrs. Nellie T. Hendricks, New Hampshire; Rev. G. E. Robbins and Dr. A. H. Gage, Vermont; Mr. W. I. Woodin, Connecticut; Mr. Vernon Rice and Rev. M. E. Bratcher, Rhode Island.

Denominational Representatives: Dr. Gates, Congregational; Rev. M. W. Smith, Baptist; Rev. W. T. Powell, Methodist Episcopal; Dr. G. E. Huntley, Universalist; Miss Daphne Condon, Presbyterian.

Members-at-Large: Prof. L. A. Olney, Prof. J. P. Berkeley, Rev. A. S. Lovett, Miss Olive P. Kirschner, Rev. J. W. Suter, Jr., Miss Luliona M. Barker.

Some additional state and denominational representatives are to be appointed later.

Educational Committee: The Deans and Registrar, ex officio; Miss Luliona Barker, Mr. Suter, Mr. Powell, Prof. Berkeley, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Lovett.

Business Committee: Judge Parker, Mr. Nichols, Mr. Nowlan, and Dr. Huntley.

After the experience of this summer the officers look forward to the session of 1926 with confident anticipation. Congregational pastors and leaders are invited to consider the advantages of this school and to write for any information desired to Mr. Bryant Nichols, Registrar, Room 609, 1 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

From West to East

HAWAII

Hawaiian News Notes

The Makawao Union Church is welcoming to its pastorate Rev. Mr. Rowan, who will take the place of Rev. Augustine Jones. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will sail in August for a two years' trip of study and travel in the Eastern countries and in England.

The Wailuku and Kahului Union Churches have agreed to extend a call to Rev. E. W. Perry. He will take up his work in October. Mr. Perry comes to the Islands after several years of missionary work in China. He is a graduate of Auburn Theological Seminary and his wife is a sister of Mrs. Royal G. Hall, who spent three years in Koloa, Kauai.

Rev. Stephen T. K. Mark, has accepted a call to the Second Chinese Church in Honolulu. Mr. Mark is at present a professor of theology in the Canton Union Theological College, Canton, China, and is a g duate of the University of California and the resbyterian Theological Seminary. Mr. Mark will take up the work laid down by Rev. Tse Kei Yuen, who leaves in September to assume the pastorate of the Chinese Presbyterian Church in San Francisco, Cal.

Rev. T. C. Williams, pastor of the Kohala Union Church, has returned to his work after several months of furlough on the American mainland.

The Board of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association has appointed Rev. Henry P. Judd as delegate to the meeting of the National Council to be held in Washington in October. Mr. Judd is leaving for the Coast with his family in August for a few months' furlough. During his absence he will spend one semester in the Yale Divinity School. N. C. S.

OREGON

Silverton Vacation Bible School

During the two weeks from June 8 to 20, a daily vacation Bible school was conducted by Silverton's pastor, Rev. Clayton Judy, and the student assistant, Mr. Duane Waln. The school hours were from 9 to 11.30 every morning except Saturday and Sunday. There were talks on the Bible, using Muriel Streibert's Youth and the Bible, and there was memory training on the 1st, 23d, and 100th Psalms, the books of the Bible, the Beatitudes, etc. The children themselves told Bible stories taken from the Old and New Testaments, the teachers endeavoring to show them the spiritual meaning of the parables and miracles. There was a little treat of candy or popcorn at the recess period each morning, and one day a picnic dinner was held in Silverton Park. Mr. Waln has given special attention to a group of prospective Boy Scouts, taking them hiking in the woods and giving them lessons in properly building fires and in cooking over the flames, with stories afterward around the camp fire.

Churches Hold Joint Service

A strong and very happy spirit of fraternal fellowship is mutually enjoyed by our college town churches in Corvallis and Eugene. The brotherhoods visit each other and once a year the congregations unite in a joint service at Belle Fountain Park, midway between the two collegiate centers. Supt. C. H. Harrison was the preacher on June 21, when there was a large attendance from each town.

Ground Broken for Beaverton Church

The breaking of ground for the New Bethel Church, Beaverton, took place on Sunday, June 28. Supt. C. H. Harrison and Rev. E. S. Bollinger, assisted the pastor, Rev. C. A. Blanchette.

In and Around Portland

Beavertown, a few miles southwest of Portland, will soon have a new $12,000 plant. A ground-breaking ceremony was held June 28, when the oldest resident member, Mrs. Mary Stitt, turned the first shovel of earth. Addresses were given by Supt. C. H. Harrison, General Secretary E. S. Bollinger, and the pastor, Rev. C. A. Blanchette.

The International Christian Endeavor Convention in Portland, July 4-10, attracted Congregationalists from nearly every state in the union. An enthusiastic denominational rally and a delightful Congregational luncheon were held under the genial and efficient direction of Secretary Fred Grey.

Congregational men were prominent in the program of the Northwest Community Church Workers' Conference held July 2-3 in the St. John's Community Congregational Church, Portland, Rev. D. E. Nourse, pastor. Rev. F. C. Butler, of Gaston, Ore., had charge of the devotional periods. Addresses on various phases of community church work were given by Rev. G. B. Baird of Clear Lake, Wash., Rev. Clayton Judy of Gervais, Ore., Rev. C. H. Nellor, of Jennings Lodge, Ore., Rev. J. N. Pendleton, Rev. H. C. Johnson, and Rev. F. W. Westwood, of Portland. One of the outstanding figures at the conference was Dr. O. F. Jordan, the community church enthusiast, of Park Ridge, Ill.

Waverly Heights, Portland, where Rev. F. E. Carlson has just begun work, is redecorating and making other building improvements. University Park has purchased a parsonage for its new minister, Rev. F. W. Westwood.

J. F. D.

IDAHO

Busy Pastor in McCall

The pastor of McCall, Rev. A. S. Ford, has been giving a series of Missionary Hero Stories at the evening services, thus enlisting the interest of some of the boys who are not in Sunday school. Mr. Ford has painted the roof of the church and parsonage and the front of the church.

ARIZONA

Fruitful Church School in Tombstone

The School of Religion and Social Service conducted last winter in Tombstone by the pastor, Rev. O. J. Scheibe, has resulted in a deepening of the spiritual life of the members of the church and a considerable accession to its membership. The place, being a county seat, is made up of people of all creeds and denominations, few of whom are familiar with the Congregational Church. After attending the school they came, one by one, asking to unite with the church. The pastor writes that it was a great inspiration to the little church to receive 41 new members. A daily vacat Bible school was conducted during July, pastor's son acting as student assistant. school began with an enrollment of 81, incl ing American, Chinese, Mexican, and Ital children. Quite a number who are attend are Catholics. Twenty citizens have taken day each to provide treats for the children, t linking the community sympathetically w the school.

UTAH

Gains in Provo Church School

The church school of Provo has continued increase in its registration in spite of ma removals. With a membership of 190, th was a record attendance on a recent Sund of 178. The school is graded throughout, classes ranging from kindergarten to adult. T latter is known as the "Pilgrim Class" and h a membership of over 60. The school has very finely conducted primary department. July 4 the church was invited to particip in the civic celebration and was represent in the parade by two floats. One was in half of Meno Trope kindergarten and show a class at work. The church float represent a winter church-going scene of the Pilgri and was exceptionally well done. The net crease in church membership was 20 for first half of the year.

WYOMING

Progress in Casper

At the Easter morning service in Casper new members were received, 23 of these joini on confession of faith. In May an every me ber canvass was held, resulting in pledg amounting to approximately $2,250 for loc expenses and world-wide work to the end the year. One of the most interesting featur of the work is the men's A. O. T. S. Club whi meets once a month for dinner. This has n a membership of 35, with a prospect of doubli this number when the fall work starts Some of the meetings take the form of outdo picnics, when the men act as hosts to the wives and friends. During the spring the cl had addresses on "Anglo-Saxon Friendship "The Inspiration of Great Literature, or Wh to Read and Why," "The Native Indian a His Music," etc. A special Pulpit Committ has charge of the Sunday services during t vacation of the pastor, Rev. A. E. Cooke.

COLORADO

Good Student Work in Granby

Mr. Herbert M. Worthley, a student of Ba gor Seminary, is assisting Rev. Thomas Hou ton at Granby and Hot Sulphur Springs. H has done considerable pastoral calling, necess tating long hikes over the hills. He has orga ized a boys' class in the Sunday school Granby, with an enrollment of 12 member known as "The Lettuce Growers' Class. Preaching services have been held every Su day morning, nearly filling the church, whic has a seating capacity of 35. Mr. Worthle bears a summer commission from the Hom Missionary Society.

Crested Butte Improvements

The church building of Crested Butte bein sadly in need of repairs, a group of energeti workers under the leadership of Mr. Lorne W own, summer student pastor from Union minary, New York, organized a "paint fund" mpaign. With the proceeds from the sale of old building behind the church, it was pos-le to re-side the church building. Sufficient ney was received, in the solicitation of funds, give the church two coats of paint, and the lding now looks beautifully new. Several od musicians spending the summer in town contributing to make the church services ractive. A young girls' choir has been or-nized. Concerts, picnics, and hikes have con-uted some of the summer's social activities.

rker Basin Bible School

A two weeks' Bible school was conducted in rker Basin in June. This effective type of ristian service has been much appreciated the people of the valley. There were 19 ldren enrolled, and the average attendance s about 15. This was larger than the public ool enrollment.

lbran Hospitality

The Colorado State Conference was held in lbran in June, the people of the entire val-responding loyally with a hospitable wel-ne to the visiting delegates. People of the ious Protestant denominations, Roman tholics, and non-church members, all joined the common cause.

yalty in Washington Park, Denver

May 24 was the 25th anniversary of the ordi-ion of Rev. W. O. Rogers, pastor of Wash-ton Park, Denver. The occasion was gra-usly remembered by the Sunday school and rch members. Two beautiful bouquets were sented to Mr. Rogers, and after the evening vice the congregation remained for a social r and light refreshments were served by the ies of the church. The young people are wide awake. A daily vacation Bible school, with over 50 in attendance, was conducted in three grades, six young people from the Sunday school assisting every day for four weeks. A free-will offering was given each week by the parents for expenses. In June the Young People's Class gave a play which was so successful that it was repeated the following night with an even larger attendance than the first night, netting a total of $40. In May the church decided to set out four shade trees in front of the lot. The Sunday school, being offered a chance to pay for these, immediately pledged enough money for six trees, so now four grace the front of the lot while two are planted in the back. Considering that on June 1 there was yet no church organization and no morning service, the prospects are most encouraging.

When Sunday Comes
By John Andrew Holmes

A foot-loose pastor makes a tongue-tied preacher.

Arriba's Children's Day

Children's Day was observed in Arriba on June 7. There was the usual program by the children, followed by a basket dinner. The afternoon service included an address on religious education by Rev. H. V. Wilhelm, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Limon. In the evening an American Board lecture on Angola called forth an appreciative audience.

Sermonettes in Berkeley Community, Denver

In Berkeley Community, Denver, the pastor, Rev. G. T. Nichols, has been giving a series of sermonettes to the Junior Christian Endeavor Society. The society meets in the basement after the Sunday school hour, and during the singing of the first hymn at the preaching service, the members march up, singing the hymn with the congregation. They remain during the responsive reading, the Scripture, prayer, and sermonette, which is illustrated by objects and sometimes by chemical experiments. At the singing of the second hymn, they march out and finish their service in the basement. Two high school girls were sent to the Boulder School of Missions, where the pastor's wife was chosen to be hostess of the Congregational cottage.

Children's Week in Lyons

Children's Week was observed in Lyons with special meetings for children each day—chapel service at the high school, a day for mothers, a mass meeting in the evening which filled the church to capacity, following a children's parade through the main streets of the town accompanied by the singing of Sunday school songs and hymns. Practically every child in the public school participated. The object was to boost for the vacation Bible school which opened June 6 with an enrollment of 30 despite the fact that it was held during the fruit-picking season, which is a busy time for the children. A Christian Endeavor Society has been organized with a membership of 25. At the July Communion service, 15 members were received into the church. Rev. A. J. Andrewson is pastor.

TEXAS

Good Work of El Paso Pastors

At "El Buen Pastor" (Mexican), El Paso, the film services held during Easter week proved so successful that the pastor, Rev. J. J. Valencia, is planning to use them more frequently next winter. Mr. Valencia gives invaluable assistance to Mexicans entering the United States,

WE SPECIALIZE in Brotherhood. ¶ The world and and war problem is the Race Problem. ¶ Over eight hundred thousand Congregationalists have for seventy-nine years made their faith in human brotherhood vocal through advising them as to immigration laws, making them acquainted with the duties and privileges of citizenship, and helping them to obtain work. The Christian Endeavor Society meets every Tuesday evening to discuss religious and life problems. The chorus of the church is recruited from this group of young men and young women.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

¶ Shall that voice now be silenced through merger? ¶ Read "The Witness to Brotherhood" in the September issue of the "American Missionary Magazine."

The pastor of First, El Paso, Rev. F. H. Fox, is in considerable demand as a speaker by many clubs and organizations of the city. The moving picture program is increasing the evening attendance. On Sunday evening the pastor devotes five minutes to answering questions that have been handed in during the week, which are later published in the daily papers. At the Sunday morning services, brief statements have been made by laymen, called Minute Men," telling what the church means to them. Many of the statements have been unique and original, and all have been good.

NORTH DAKOTA

A Unique Experience at Independence

A bi-lingual ordination service in the Gros Ventre and English was held at Independence Church June 26. The church, in true Congregational form, had called a council of neighboring churches to examine Edward Goodbird, and if found to meet the requirements, to proceed with his ordination. Eight churches were represented in the council, six of them English speaking and two Indian churches.

The examination was held in the morning, the candidate giving his statement of faith and Christian experience in his native tongue and having it translated into English. Dinner was served at noon to all who had gathered for the occasion by a committee of the Indian church, special service being rendered in the preparing of the meal by Deacon Wolf Chief and his wife in memory of their son, whom they had recently lost.

The ordination occurred in the afternoon. The church was packed beyond its seating capacity. Edward Goodbird, the Christian leader among the Gros Ventres, is part of the results of Dr. C. L. Hall's faithful work on the Indian reservation for the past 49 years. It was the regret of all that Dr. Hall was in the hospital at the time of this service and was not able to be present and share in it. However, Robert Hall, the son of Dr. Hall, and boyhood friend of Edward Goodbird, served as interpreter for part of the service and very impressively gave the charge to the candidate. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. James Elvin of Dickinson, and this was interpreted, as were other parts of the service into the Gros Ventre tongue by Mr. Baker of the reservation. For 24 years Edward Goodbird has been living the "Jesus way" and for nine years has been preaching as a licentiate. He is now giving his full time to the ministry under the supervision of the Elbowoods mission.

As the first native Congregational minister ordained on the reservation Mr. Goodbird has a great opportunity for service. There were many evidences of the high respect in which he is held by his own people. He has shown a faithfulness and persistence in securing his training that might well be imitated by many situated under circumstances far more favorable. It was a unique and impressive experience both for the Indian churches and those from the English speaking churches who attended.

MISSOURI

Rev. F. W. Leavitt at Webster Groves

Rev. F. W. Leavitt has been supplying the pulpit of First, Webster Groves, during five weeks of the summer. The pastor, Rev. J. J. Bradley, has a three months' vacation, the major part of which he is spending in Europe with the Sherwood Eddy Seminar, and in a tour of Palestine. On the eve of their departure from Jennings, Lat, Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt were honored with a number of social parties, the interdenominational council of religious education, the Philharmonic Choral Society, the church choir on different evenings bringing their greetings and choice gifts. At the final church reception the gifts included a richly tooled handbag and $100 in gold.

IOWA

50th Anniversary in Gowrie

First Church, Gowrie, celebrated its 50th anniversary on July 12. The church was organized by Rev. D. G. Youker, who served the church as pastor for 19 years. On his retirement from the pastorate he continued to live in Gowrie

AN INCOME FOR LIFE

The Chicago Theological Seminary

offers attractive ANNUITY BONDS, bearing liberal rates of interest for life.

These bonds are issued on both single and double-life plans. They are safe, non-fluctuating in value, and are especially attractive as gifts from laymen to pastors, or for birthdays, graduations, weddings and all other occasions where the combination of Christian sentiment and a life income is desired.

Write for special booklet on Annuities.

OZORA S. DAVIS, President 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

BRIDGMAN SCHOOL FOR BOYS

DR. and Mrs. Howard A. Bridgman will open their home in Shirley Center, Mass., this autumn to a limited number of boys between the ages of nine and fifteen.

THE appeal of the school will be to those who value a healthful physical environment, careful supervision, a home atmosphere, thorough instruction, and the effort to build character.

MR. James Chester Flagg will have charge of the academic work. He is a Dartmouth graduate, has taught in former years at Milton Academy and Hackley School, was Headmaster of the Danforth School in Framingham, and for the last three years has been connected with Lawrence Academy at Groton.

DR. and Mrs. Bridgman have been instrumental since 1922 in rebuilding and reorganizing Lawrence Academy. Prior to that time Dr. Bridgman was Editor of The Congregationalist.

Address BRIDGMAN SCHOOL, Shirley Center, Mass.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

VACATION PLACES

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, home-like rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

PASTORATE WANTED

Pastor wishes church in rural or semi-rural community. Federated or union church in Southern New England preferred. Address "M. A.," Congregationalist.

Congregational minister, well educated, with wide experience as teacher and preacher, desires pastorate. Iowa preferred. Rev. Woodcock, Deep River, Iowa.

POSITION WANTED

Desire position to teach in high school, Science Department. Address "F. T. I.," Congregationalist.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS

Connecticut Boarding Home. Wanted in Windham and New London Counties, Protestant boarding homes for Jack, 9 years; Rob, 6; Ted, 3; all Americans, exceptionally bright. Apply Connecticut Children's Aid Society, Brown Thomson Bldg., Hartford, Ct.

Wanted—A business woman as a paying guest in a quiet home in Dorchester, Mass. Large, sunny room. Convenient to cars. Address "A. S.," Congregationalist.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Offering Envelopes

For all purposes. Prompt Service

Ask for Prices

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

d now at the age of 84 years he gave the incipal address at its 50th anniversary celeation. Greetings were given by representaes of the Manson and Farnhamville churches, ich were organized by Mr. Youker at the ne time that he organized the one in Gowrie, d letters of greeting were read from former stors and parishioners. The church is repsented by former members in half the states d in Canada, and also by missionaries in dia and China.

ood Work in Pleasant Grove

Pleasant Grove Church, Rev. Owen Thomas, stor, had been closed for over a year, when e Sunday school was reorganized in May, 24, with an enrollment of 19. The enrollnt is now 42. The average attendance from ıy until January was 38. It is a standard ıool, and tied with another school in Class C r the Asa Turner silver cup for the Iowa ate Association of 1925. Children's Day was served and an offering was taken which covd the whole apportionment of the church novelence for 1925. The church has been ofed, plastered, papered, and all bills paid. A ung people's Sunday school class are all conbutors to the support of the pastor's salary.

MINNESOTA

cord Attendance in Slovak, St. Paul

Slovak, St. Paul, Rev. C. J. Troka, pastor, w the record attendance of the history of e church on Easter Sunday, with 120 pres-t. In the evening the Sunday school program ain filled the church, some latecomers being liged to stand.

anish Work Progresses

The Ladies' Aid of Finnish, Cloquet, has en active, meeting the expenses of the daily cation Bible school, which had a two weeks' ssion with an enrollment of 15 children. The stor, Rev. August Lappala, serves several ıer communities in connection with his work Cloquet. Special anniversary services were ld at Jacobson and Stony Brook, where atıdance and interest were not only local but ıny outsiders taking an active part. At both rvices an offering was taken for the Home issionary Society. A very promising Sunday ıool has been organized at Sawyer, in the art of a large Finnish settlement. There are ıny places around Cloquet without the Gosl message. Mr. Lappala spends a part of s time visiting Cromwell, Nashwauk, Pine ver, Prairie Lake, and Savannah. This is pioneer work.

WISCONSIN

ree and Four Fields Service

Rev. L. G. Moland has been holding regular rvices in his three-fold field, giving the secd and fourth Sundays of the month to Clinnville, and the first and third Sundays to avarino and Galesburg. Special outdoor eetings have been held during the spring and mmer. The first anniversary of the Galesrg Sunday school was celebrated April 5. egular morning service was held at 10.30, and the afternoon a special program was rendered which the pupils took part. A picnic nch was served. The day was an inspiration teachers and pupils alike. Another day in e open was enjoyed on June 21, when invitions were sent out to the Sunday schools Navarino and Maine. The weather was vorable and the attendance good. The presence of Dist. Supt. J. W. Wilson contributed much to the success of the program.

Rev. M. C. Holmes has a four-fold field of service, including Maple Valley, Pulcifier, Lakewood, and Unity Center. During the month of April he conducted a series of special services in the two latter places. The pastors of the Methodist, Christian, Danish Lutheran, and Presbyterian churches co-operated in a fine spirit, preaching alternate evenings during the whole series. A ten days' vacation Bible school was conducted at these two points during the month of June. The enrollment at Lakewood was 22, with an average attendance of 16; at Unity Center the total enrollment was 18; with an average attendance of 14.

ILLINOIS

Dr. Mills at Wellington Ave., Chicago

Rev. G. S. Mills, who has just begun his pastorate at Wellington Ave., Chicago, after a supply of six months, is a native of New York. His father began his ministry in the Dutch Reformed Church, and afterwards held Congregational pulpits in New England. He is still living at the age of 86, and is pastor emeritus of the church in Limerick, Me. Dr. Mills had his college training at Dartmouth, where he graduated in 1890. For three years following this he was head of the English department in the preparatory school connected with Colgate University, and took his first seminary year there in Hamilton Theological School. He transferred to Andover Seminary, where he graduated in 1895, and had his first pastorate in Belfast, Me., where he served for nine years. He then served Second Church, Bennington, Vt., for 21 years. He came to have in this long period many responsibilities in the town and state, in civic and church affairs. He has been many times a delegate to the National Council, preacher and president of the State Conference, chairman of the Religious Education Committee of the Conference, and has carried many other responsibilities.

Rev. G. S. Mills

He came to Wellington Ave. upon the resignation of Mr. Vogt to serve as stated supply and was then called to the permanent pastorate. His work has been characterized by

Our First Mortgage
REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS
net the investor 7% semi-annual interest, guaranteed as to principal and interest, secured by first mortgages on improved real estate in Central Florida and the West Coast, by one of the oldest and most substantial corporations with 14 years' successful experience in the Florida mortgage field. Write for particulars and booklet.
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

UNUSUAL
Educational Opportunity
FOR YOUNG LADIES who wish to spend a year of study in Florence, Italy, in hea thful home surroundings. Courses under recognized professors in Italian, French, History, Art and Music, Recreational work in Fencing, Horseback Riding and Dancing. Trips during the winter to Rome, Perugia and Siena. School term October to June. Best references given and required. For terms address THE SECRETARY, Box 142, Cambridge, Mass.

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.

(Copyright—The Bookstore)

Is September Your Vacation-Time?

IN THIS tranquil beauty spot, which looks across the glorious Connecticut River Valley, and is in the center of New England, one can spend days he will recollect as among life's best. Golf on a fine course encompassing the House; excellent motoring to such convenient points of interest as Plymouth, Vt., Lake Sunapee, Mohawk Trail, Bennington, and Amherst, Smith, and Mt. Holyoke colleges; mountain-trail tramping—these feature outdoor life. Good food, pleasant rooms, open fires—these but suggest our guests' indoor pleasures.

Write for Illustrated Booklet.

THE NORTHFIELD
EAST NORTHFIELD, MASS.
OPEN ALL THE YEAR
Ambert G. Moody, Mgr.
Frank W. Kellogg, Asst. Mgr.

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies
120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

high ideals in pulpit, in pastoral visitation, and in the work of religious education. He has given attention always to his church and his community, but has at the same time given service to the work of the denomination and to that of the Kingdom. The Wellington Ave. Church is situated in one of the most densely populated residential sections of Chicago and furnishes an opportunity and a challenge second to none in many ways. Dr. Mills has already begun the making of an organization to carry on the work so well begun by his predecessors.

Missionary Commissioned

The commissioning of Rev. Ralph Richard Keithahn as a missionary of the American Board designated to the Madura Mission, India, and as a representative of First Church, Western Springs, took place Sunday morning, June 28.

Seldom has a church and congregation been so deeply moved as when this occasion made its profound impression upon an audience which taxed the capacity of the church. The call from India was given by Rev. J. J. Banninga, D.D., Principal of Pasumalai Theological Seminary. The way Dr. Banninga presented the case for India was virtually thrilling. President Ozora S. Davis of Chicago Theological Seminary delivered the sermon, which was a masterful presentation of the missionary call, using Christ's commission as a text. To those who heard him Dr. Davis seemed to be at his very best. The commission was presented by Rev. William F. English, Jr., District Secretary of the American Board, followed by a responsive service engaged in by the minister, congregation, and missionary. The prayer of consecration was given by the pastor, Rev. V. W. Cooke.

Mr. Keithahn is a graduate of Carleton College, Chicago Theological Seminary, and for the past three years has been a graduate student at Yale, where he just received his Ph.D. He goes out to India as a member of the Chicago Seminary Band, which is centering its work in the Madura Mission. Mr. Keithahn is a man of scholarly attainments, pleasing personality, and promising ability. His statement of his purpose in going to the foreign field, upon the occasion of the Commissioning Service, will never be forgotten by those who heard him.

When the young lady who is to be Mrs. Keithahn joins her prospective husband in India a year hence there will be three families on the field as members of the Chicago Band, the other members of the group being Rev. and Mrs. Clarence E. Wolsted, supported by the Winnetka Church, and Rev. and Mrs. Bryan S. Stoffer, supported by the Wilmette Church. The idea of the Chicago Band originated with Professor Henry H. Walker of Chicago Theological Seminary, and has been a potent factor in developing missionary interest by linking up Chicago Seminary graduates with local churches to support them on the foreign field.

The Western Springs Church, from all indications, has promise of a really significant future under the leadership of its able and aggressive pastor, and the residential development of the suburb, which is advantageously located in the path of the western suburban drift. This definite missionary alignment, coming at this strategic time, should mean great things in the development of continued support for our missionary enterprise.

MICHIGAN

Polish Parish School Fruitful in Detroit

Sunday evening services have been discontinued for the summer months in Polish, Detroit. The parish school, which was conducted throughout the year from 4 to 6 daily, had its commencement June 30, when 130 children received their diplomas. The influence of the school has been felt in the community, and it has been an important factor in firmly establishing the work of the church. On Easter Sunday a class of 10 boys and girls was admitted to the membership of the junior congregation. Mrs. Woynarowski, the wife of the pastor, has regained her health and recently joined her husband in Detroit.

ALABAMA

Fellowship Meeting in Tallassee

In June a two days' Fellowship Meeting was held in Mt. Olive, Tallassee, seven churches being represented. Rev. R. A. McKay serves both Tallassee and East Tallassee. There a fine church school in each place, the atte ance at East Tallassee on a recent Sun numbering 96.

FLORIDA

Progress in South Jacksonville

Mr. Nathaniel C. Long, student pastor, s ing his second summer's commission at So Jacksonville under the Home Missionary ciety, began his work in Phillips Commun June 24, with 25 in Sunday school. Withi month there were 48 on the roll. The yo people have organized a society which m on Tuesday nights at different homes in community. Their program is devotional, erary, social. Refreshments are served the close of each meeting. The average tendance is 25. In the interim between Long's two summer pastorates, there have b no regular preaching services, with only o sional visits from Dr. L. H. Keller, Rev. E. Gillette, and others.

West Palm Beach Church Active

Mr. Ivan Grimshaw, Yale Divinity stud is serving at West Palm Beach this sum Splendid prayer meetings, led by laymen in church, have been well attended. There been a good attendance also at the Christ Endeavor meetings and the bi-monthly sup of the Minute Men's class. A special mus

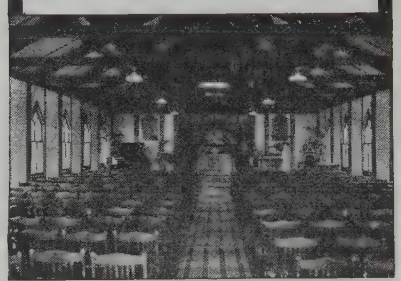
A Successful Mission Assured with an M & M PORTABLE CHAPEL

Ideal for outlying congregations not ready for large church. When this edifice becomes a reality the M & M Chapel can be erected in a new field or sold to another congregation in same city or shipped elsewhere.

Substantial Attractive—Economical

Ready-built in sections with windows and doors in place, complete with glass and hardware. Bolted together in a short time by unskilled labor. Superintendent furnished at a nominal fee if desired. Have given satisfaction for 25 years. Isn't there a need for a mission church in your community? Send today for free catalog, full particulars.

MERSHON & MORLEY COMPANY
92 Main St., Saginaw, Michigan



Church
EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

CHURCH WINDOWS AND MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS BRONZE AND MARBLE
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
Jacoby Art Glass Company
Dept. 54 2700 St. Vincent Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B

Church Furniture
Pews · Pulpits · Chancel Furniture · Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

Pulpit Gown
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New Yor

ESTEY
PIPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
Brattleboro Vermont

MEMORIAL WINDOW
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Ma

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1114 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

rice was presented one Sunday evening by young people, and a sermonette on "The ue of Music in Worship" was given by one he young men of the church. The devo- als were conducted by two of the young nen. Mr. Grimshaw gave a series of Sun- morning sermons during August as fol- s: "Three Things of Which I Am Sure— That There Is a God, (2) That I Have a l, (3) That Jesus Christ Is the Peerless sonality of All Time."

TENNESSEE

dy Pastor Paints Roof

he roof of the church in Soddy has recently n painted, the pastor, Rev. J. T. Henry, ng much of the work, with the assistance of e of the church members. The Christian leavor Society conducts the evening church rice every third Sunday, with a program nusic, reading, and discussion. The Pied- nt College Quartet will draw two young n from the congregation of Soddy Church t year. F. L. M.

GEORGIA

y Vacation Bible School in Columbus

Daily Vacation Bible School was held in umbus this summer for five weeks, with average attendance of 27, proving very help- in stimulating interest in the church work. Christian Endeavor Society was recently anized, with a membership of 14. Mr. Cur- J. Matthews is serving as student pastor the summer under the Home Missionary iety's commission.

CONNECTICUT

urch Union in Bridgeport

The coming together of the old North and th Churches in Bridgeport into the new ited Church, receiving from 100 to 200 new nbers every year, and now pushing rapidly completion its new half-million dollar house worship, has been a strong influence in nging about another union now just well un. The Park St. Church and the King's hway Church, only six blocks apart, have ed unanimously to combine. The churches ether have a congregation of about 1,000 plan the erection of a new church edifice inning this fall. Rev. J. B. Dalton, pastor King's Highway, did not wish to consider o-pastorate and resigned, and will leave the in September, the church paying him an ra three months' salary to cover a period of ation and readjustment. Rev. S. F. Rut- ge Peale, pastor of the Park St. Church, will pastor of the consolidated churches and a ector of religious education will be secured assist him under the new régime.

The last church service has been held at ng's Highway but the Sunday schools will tinue to be held in both churches for the sent. As a token of the good feeling with ich the affair has been consummated, Mr. tton is preaching to both congregations at k St. Church during August. The union brought about, not to save money or effort, to save duplication of effort and to in- ase efficiency by a wider range of ministra- n. It is fully expected that the increase of pense required for the erection of a modern urch edifice will be matched by a correspond- increase of activity in Christian service the part of the members, and that the reli- us ministrations will much more completely et all human needs. E. O. M.

VERMONT

ntennial Celebration in Jericho

Sunday and Monday, Aug. 2-3, marked red ter days in the history of Second Church, Jericho. It celebrated the building of the old "Brick Meeting House" in 1825. Fine weather favored both days. Sunday morning Major C. V. Woodbury of Norwich University, Northfield, Vt., delivered an inspiring address to a large and attentive congregation of citizens, old friends, and former members of the church. In the evening a sacred concert was given by a chorus led by Choirmaster Fred A. Percival. The four ushers for the evening, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Whiting, Miss Alida Booth, and Mr. L. C. Rice, were dressed in styles of 1825, and represented some of the founders of the old church.

Monday afternoon a banquet was served to over 200 persons, after which the following program was given, the pastor, Dr. William Cashmore, introducing the speakers. The program included a solo by Miss Cady; historical review, Mrs. E. B. Williams; congratulations from the State Conference of Congregational Churches, Rev. S. G. Barnes, D.D.; from the First Congregational Church, Jericho Center, Mr. E. B. Jorden. Many of the charter members of the old "Brick Church" (Second Congregational) came from First Church, Jericho Center. Major Woodbury also responded. Dean Earl Wilbur, D.D., of California; was expected, but was unable to be in attendance.

Congressman E. S. Brigham of St. Albans gave the address of the evening. The program was brought to a close by a solo, "The End of a Perfect Day," by Fred A. Percival. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. R. G. McLeod of Jericho Center.

Many old friends and former members were present, and letters were received from two ex-pastors, Rev. H. T. Barnard and Rev. C. Pike, also from other friends. A. P. B.

Union Theological Seminary

offers Specialized Training for Pastors of Country Churches and those preparing for RURAL CHURCH WORK

A Special Course by Prof. Ralph A. Felton, of Cornell University.
Supervised Field Work under
Dr. Edmund de S. Brunner, Director of Town and Country Surveys, Institute of Social and Religious Research.

A Rich Variety of other courses available at the Seminary in the Bible, Religious Education, History and Philosophy of Religion, etc., and in Rural Education, Economics, Sociology, etc. at Teachers College of Columbia University.

Full information from
Rev. Gaylord S. White, Director,
Department of the Church and the Community,
Union Theological Seminary.
Broadway at 120th Street New York City

Oberlin Graduate School of Theology

Scholarly and practical training for the ministry, directors of religious education, missionary and Christian Association service. Interdenominational faculty and student body. All the cultural advantages of Oberlin College and its complete equipment. Unusual opportunities for women. Scholarships and financial help available.

Degrees A.M., B.D., and S.T.M.
Correspond with Dean Thomas W. Graham
Council Hall, Oberlin, Ohio

HARTFORD

W. Douglas Mackenzie
President

Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus
School of Religious Education
Dean, E. H. Knight
Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen

Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:
1. The Christian ministry.
2. Religious education and social service.
3. The foreign field.

Each school has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.

HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION, HARTFORD, Conn.

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opened August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate Social Service
Religious Education Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Milwaukee-Downer College
Milwaukee, Wisconsin
A standard College for women.
Full four-year courses leading to B.A. and B.S. degrees. Academic programs, Home Economics, Music, Art, Occupational Therapy.
MISS LUCIA R. BRIGGS, President
For catalogue address the Registrar

Bangor Theological Seminary

The 110th year opens Sept 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor Maine.

EMPHASIZING COLLEGE PREPARATION
MacDuffie School For Girls
ONE YEAR TUTORING COURSE
SPRINGFIELD MASSACHUSETTS
Post-Graduate Course in Music and Household Arts
PRINCIPALS
John MacDuffie Mrs. John MacDuffie

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

GRINNELL
A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.
Applications for admission in September, 1925, are now being received.
An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.
Address:
Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.
G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton
Rev. William E. Strong

Associate Secretaries
Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Ernest W. Riggs

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A.,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox,
Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit s plies and Congregational ministers seeking torates. Maintained by the Congregational ferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Cov Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chairm

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secret and Missionary Education Secret
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and A Education Secret
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secret
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educa Program including Social Service, Mission Education, Student and Young People's Wo aids Ministerial Students, University Past directs campaign to secure Recruits for Chris Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of denomination for the publication and distribu of The Congregationalist, church school eq ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teach magazines, children's and young people's we papers, and books for home and church use, book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Mana
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationa
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congr tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Tre Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTER 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hurl Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PACI 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSION FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSION UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasur Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congre tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY constituent of the Congregational Home Miss ary Society, represents the churches of Massac setts in their home missionary work. The Soci solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditio gifts, administers trust funds for churches. F erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sew Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Col bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF B TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is establishment and support of Evangelical Con gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bos and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.: C. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Se Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites tributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annu Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Supe tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasu Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT constituent of the National Society, solicits tributions, administers Special Trust for Churc and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William English, Treasurer, Congregational House, H ford.

urch and Ministerial Record

Calls

WN, J. MONROE, Lexington, O., to Litchfield. cepts to begin in September.

LE, IRWIN ALLEN, Bakersfield, Cal., to North ington, Mass. Accepts to being Sept. 1.

Ordinations

DBIRD, EDWARD, by Council at Independence, . D., June 26, 1925. Sermon by Rev. James ivin; other parts by Revs. George R. Hull, G. Dickey, Ralph V. Conard, A. C. Hacke, H. W. Case, Robert Hall, and Lawrence Howling Wolf.

Resignations

BLISS, LEON D., Plymouth, Paso Robles, Cal., to begin pastorate of Federated Church, Atascadero.

Personals

FIFIELD, REV. L. W., of First, Sioux Falls, S. D., received the degree of Doctor of Divinity at the Commencement exercises of Yankton College, June 10. He was one of the main speakers on the International Kiwanis Program at St. Paul, addressing 5,000 delegates on "The Golden Rule in Business." He was accorded a rising ovation at the close of the address which is to appear in full in the Kiwanis Magazine. Since January 1, Mr. Fifield has delivered over 200 addresses before clubs, high schools, and business organizations in the Northwest.

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

FIRST ANNUAL CONGREGATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AND SCHOOL OF METHODS, Lake Cobbosseecontee, Winthrop, Me., Aug. 22-29.

Northfield Summer Conferences

MASSACHUSETTS CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR INSTITUTE, Aug. 17-24.

State Conferences

ALABAMA (White), Tallassee, Nov.
CONNECTICUT, South Manchester, Nov. 3-4.
GEORGIA (Colored), Thomasville, Nov. 18-22.
IDAHO, Boise, Oct. 20-22.
KENTUCKY, Evarts, Oct.
NORTH CAROLINA (Colored), Beaufort, Sept. 23.
NORTH DAKOTA, Dickinson, Sept. 15-17.
SOUTH CAROLINA, Columbia, Nov.
TENNESSEE (White), Daisy, Nov.
UTAH, Salt Lake City, Oct.
WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.
WISCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. equests and Annuities are solicited in order that e House may be freed from mortgage indebtedss and the Association thus enabled to furnish r Missionary Organizations with business offices minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. v. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubrd, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 acon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816
ome visitation and personal missionary service onnection with our churches. Emergency re- Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribu- and legacies gratefully received and scrupuy administered.
lam Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. er, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

rporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

aman's Friend Society, Inc.

is Society, reorganized 922, now fully repts the Congregational rches of New England s practical, social and ious work among seaHas finely equipped els at 287 Hanover Boston, and at Vine- Haven, and Reading ns at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. Society provides dormitory accommodations, ng and recreation rooms, religious services, tables, and games of many kinds, a restau- a canteen, shower baths, postal and bank- facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. ributions received on an annuity basis. Pres-, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore usfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; s., Charles F. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. ., Franklin P. Shumway; Office 618 Congre- nal House.

nerican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

e only American undenominational interna- l and national Society aiding seamen. aintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at West Street, New York City. an Libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing New York.
BLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).
lpwrecked and destitute seamen aided.
PPORTED by contributions and legacies.
HN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE EY WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary.
LARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 79 Wall St., York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

adelphia, Pa. Founded 1817 ational, Interdenominational. Establishes and tains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying l districts of the country. Publishes and lates moral and religious literature. Helps churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundawork, not duplicated by any other agency. orted by voluntary gifts. Contributions so- d. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. ributions and communications relative to in any part of the country may be sent to New England office.
W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

RISIBLES

Small Boy (at the zoo looking at stork)—"Mother, I really believe he is trying to see if he can remember me."—Lafayette Lyre.

A monocle is a pane of glass worn in one eye in order that its wearer may not see at one time any more than he is able to understand.—Dartmouth Jack o' Lantern.

Major—"Don't you know yet how to stand at attention?

Frosh (in oversize uniform)—"I am standing at attention, sir. It's my uniform that's at ease."—Penn Punch Bowl.

A Michigan exchange says that a man in its town never allows his wife to do more than half the work. She puts up all the canned fruit in the summer and he puts it down in the winter.—Herald and Presbyter.

"Do you think Tom has changed in the last few years?"

"No, but I guess he thinks so. Always tells of what a fool he used to be."—Notre Dame Juggler.

Burglar—"Don't be scairt, old lady, all I want is your money, and—"

Old Maid (interrupting)—"Oh, go away! You're just like all the other men."—Michigan Gargoyle.

"You n-never seem to t-take any interest in anything I do," sobbed the bride.

"You are quite mistaken, my dear," remonstrated her husband. "I remained awake all night wondering whether it was lead or concrete you put in that last cake you made."—Boston Transcript.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder and The Advance

August 27, 1925
Vol. CX No. 35

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 259
Editorial—The Heart of the Labor Problem 259
Prohibition Has Justified Itself
The Golden Rule in Industry—An Editorial Message 261
From Our Western Editor 263
Man, Machine and Progress, by E. H. H. Holman 264
An Unwritten Song, by F. O. Small 265
The Christian Spirit in Industry, by Horace G. Hoadley 266
The Tsudas, by Albert W. Palmer 266
Little People—An Allegory, by Charlotte E. Wilder 267
The Co-operative Spirit in Industry—Federal Council Labor Day Message 268
Prospects for New Church Locations, by Frederick L. Fagley 269
The Parable of the Exhibitions 269
Young People's Conferences 270
Master Builders of Today, by Loyal L. Wirt 271
Our Invalid Parish—Abused by Life 272
Closet and Altar 272
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 272
With the Children—Prize Gingerbread, by Susanne Alice Ranlett 273
Among the New Books 274
The Congregationalist's Bible Class—Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson 275
Provisional Program of the National Council 276
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 277
Our Readers' Forum 278
Religious Education at Northfield 279
News of the Churches 280
Risibles 287

Little Benny was looking at a picture of Elijah going to heaven in a chariot of fire. Pointing to the halo about the prophet's head, Benny exclaimed: "See, mamma, he's carrying an extra tire."

A group of big business men in Washington were talking one evening about government taxation.

"There is no telling where we will land by the time the tax bill is settled," said one. "Our status is as uncertain as that of an old Negro slave I once heard of. Somebody asked him whom he belonged to. 'I don't know, suh,' he replied. 'Old Marse, he's upstairs playin' pokah.'"—Forbes.

For the First Religious Instruction of Little Children

Object Lessons for the Cradle Roll

By Frances Weld Danielson

A series of fifty-two lessons for children under four years of age, containing stories, plans, songs, and general instructions. May be commenced any time during the year. Price, $1.50

Accompanying Equipment

PROGRAMS FOR THE CRADLE ROLL CLASS

A series of fifty-two programs for the teacher when Object Lessons for the Cradle Roll is used in the church school. Printed in pamphlet form to fit inside cover of book. Price, 25 cents.

BLOCKS

A nest of ten blocks with pictures in two colors, to illustrate the lessons. Price, $1.25. Postage, 10 cents.

OBJECTS

A box of the objects not easily obtainable—cotton boll, wheat, flax, wool and cocoon. Price, 35 cents. Postage, 3 cents.

HOME STORIES

A set of fifty-two four-page leaflets, punched for binding, containing the stories, pictures and suggestions to the mothers for home teaching and occupations. For the children to take home after the story has been told in the church school. Price, 50 cents a set.

COVERS FOR HOME STORIES

Printed on heavy paper and punched for binding, for use of teacher or mother to preserve "home stories" in permanent form. 35 cents per dozen. 5 cents each set.

The lessons are based on the homely everyday things with which the child comes in contact; his pets, clothing, food, nature. Everything is interpreted religiously and God consciousness comes to him as naturally as his love for his mother and father.

Words of Appreciation

"Object Lessons for the Cradle Roll makes me long to be a child again, to be taught goodness in this truthful, appealing way. This is surely a great contribution to make to the cause of religious education. The blocks and the stories are finding their way into homes and hearts everywhere."—Elizabeth Colson.

"The book is excellently written, and is a valuable addition to the literature of religious education. The author catches the child's point of view and uses the child's vocabulary. The children's songs included in the book are delightful."—The Springfield Republican.

Send for returnable copy for examination

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 36 September 3, 1925

CHURCH RALLY NUMBER

Unofficial Church Efficiency

By EDWIN H. BYINGTON

The Church with a Burning Heart

A SERMON BY JOHN MOORE

The Kingdom Come

By CHESTER B. EMERSON

This Is the Time

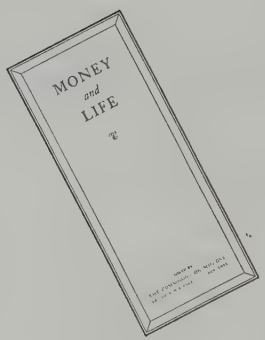
By CHARLES S. TAPLEY

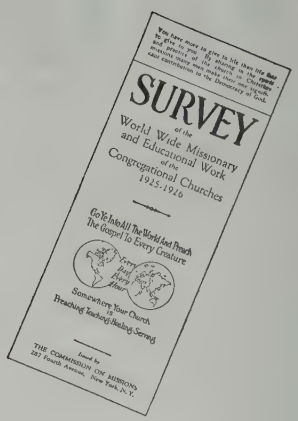
Rally Day in the Churches

AN EDITORIAL MESSAGE

The Parable of the Disappearing Tent

To Meet The Growing Demand





For progressive plans and successful methods of church activities upon the part of the ministers and laymen in every part of our country the Commission on Missions states that—

The single great common undertaking by the churches of our Fellowship is known as our Missionary enterprise.

The reflex influence of intelligent and enthusiastic participation in this undertaking brings to a people vision, power and sense of superlative achievement.

To make such participation both attractive and actual the Commission offers to every church and pastor throughout the country four distinct services.

Expert counsel in meeting the practical problems of promotion.

The message of our going work and achievement by word of mouth through the visit of a Missionary Team throughout every state area during the Fall months.

New Promotional Literature and accessories which are the result of wide counsel and painstaking care to provide what you wish.

A Method whose technique is simple, eliminates all guess work and guarantees satisfaction.

Therefore the Commission invites the fullest use of its resourses for the help and benefit of your church.

THE COMMISSION ON MISSIONS

287 Fourth Avenue New York, N. Y.

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | September 3, 1925 | No. 36

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

Law and Order Bill Pending in Georgia

WE are pleased to learn that Georgia will join the growing list of Southern states which are taking active steps to end rioting and mob violence if the Legislature enacts the Law and Order bill introduced in the House of Representatives recently. The bill provides that in any case of riot, riotous assembly, or mob violence, careful investigation shall be made by the Judge of the Superior Court. If it appears from this investigation that any sheriff, deputy sheriff, jailer, or other peace officer was negligent or incompetent in dealing with such disorder, the Chief Justice or other Justice of the Supreme Court shall appoint a special Law and Order Commission to hear all the evidence in the case and render judgment on the officer in question. If he is found to have been negligent, the Governor shall remove the officer. Proof that any person was taken from the custody of the officer by the mob, or killed or injured while in his custody, shall be prima facie evidence of neglect, to be offset only by affirmative proof that the officer had in fact used all reasonable precaution and exercised the utmost diligence in the effort to maintain order.

The bill provides further that in the case of an officer so adjudged negligent, the Attorney General of the State shall bring suit against such officer for the full value of any property destroyed by the mob, and for the sum of $5,000 for each homicide committed by it. Any person removed from office under the provisions of the act shall be disqualified for a period of five years to hold any peace office of the state, county, or municipality.

Friends of the measure point out that it is in line with similar laws enacted in other Southern states which have been found very effective in the reduction of mob violence. It is said to be widely supported by religious, civic, and welfare organizations over the State. The bill is sponsored by the Georgia Commission on Interracial Co-operation.

International Conference on Alcohol

PREPARATIONS have been made for an International Conference upon Alcohol to be held in Geneva on Sept. 1, 2, and 3. This conference is convoked by the International Bureau Against Alcoholism in agreement with the World League Against Alcoholism. The three questions to be discussed are the following:

(1) The present alcohol regime in the colonies of equatorial Africa.

(2) The fight against smuggling by means of international conventions.

(3) How to avoid the conflicts which have arisen of late years between alcohol exporting countries and nations which have taken prohibitive or seriously restrictive measures against alcohol.

Eminent temperance workers in most European countries and in the United States plan to participate in this conference. Among those invited are the General Secretariat of the League of Nations, the International Labor Office, the International Red Cross Committee, the League of Red Cross Societies, several great missionary societies and the governments of Europe, of the United States and the British dominions. Several governments have already announced their intention of delegating either an official representative or an observer to the conference. We hope it may be taken seriously, and may be a step toward definite reform.

Church Union with Universalists

THE National Council of Congregational Churches, at the coming Washington meeting, will be asked to appoint a special Commission on Fellowship with the Universalist Churches. The request comes from the Northern California Congregational Conference in the form of the following resolution:

The Northern California Conference of Congregational Churches, having been informed that there is a practical interest in church union being mutually expressed among Universalists and Congregationalists, desires to declare its lively interest in this movement and its devout hope for an early and complete consummation of such union both in national organization and in local congregations. To this end be it

Resolved, that this Conference at its annual meeting held at Asilomar August 1, 1925, instructs its delegates to the National Council meeting in Washington in October, to voice our hearty endorsement of this movement, and further that as a practical means we petition the National Council to appoint as promptly as possible a special Commission on Fellowship with the Universalist Churches.

We trust that this proposal may be approved by the Council, and that a special commission, or committee, may be appointed at Washington to confer with a similar group of Universalists. It may be a happy coincidence that when our Council is meeting at Washington next October, the Universalists also will be meeting in their General Convention at Syracuse, N. Y. Whatever the outcome of the unity proposal, it can do no harm to talk things over and see how far in this direction we can carry some of our fine theories of church unity. Our experiences in delightful fellowship with certain individual Universalists lead us to look forward with pleasure and confidence to closer relations with the larger fellowship.

Improving the Piano

A MUSICAL invention which may revolutionize the use of the piano in church and home and concert hall has been demonstrated at Gloucester, Mass. The inventor is John Hays Hammond, Jr. By means of an added special pedal, and the metal "reflectors" near the sounding board, the notes struck may be sustained, even increased in volume, and given the sonorous quality of a pipe organ. All the pleasing characteristics of the piano are also retained. The Hammond device may be attached to an ordinary piano, but the inventor looks for a new type of piano which will gradually take the place of the old. Mr. Hammond has made some important inventions in radio, and projectiles used in warfare. He is a consulting engineer of the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric, and Westinghouse Companies. His father is the distinguished John Hays Hammond, who was chairman of the Government commission which investigated the coal conditions in this country two or three years ago. The first public demonstration of the Hammond piano invention was in the Hammond home in the presence of distinguished musicians, diplomats, and others, including Cardinal O'Connell. Arrangements are being made for marketing the new instrument, probably through some standard piano company. Mr. Hammond says that since the invention of the pianoforte by Cristofori in 1720, it has remained essentially unchanged, its evolution being in detail rather than principle. If the new invention proves a practical success, it may bring important service to our churches, in some cases, perhaps, taking the place of more costly organs.

* *

Somewhat significant of the times are the church notices in a recent newspaper published in one of the most enlightened cities in the United States. Out of eight Congregational churches, four are closed for the summer, and two remain closed until the Sunday after Labor Day. We do not criticize, but we wonder how the record of gain and loss of those churches and the people influenced by them would look if compared with the record of the other churches who continued services during the summer.

Organizing Against Crime

A NATIONAL Crime Commission has been organized in New York for the purpose of waging war on crime throughout the United States. The prime-movers included Judge Elbert E. Gary of the United States Steel Corporation; George W. Wickersham, former Attorney-General of the United States; Richard Washburn Child, former Ambassador to Italy; William E. Knox, president of the American Bankers Association; C. K. Woodbridge, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; Governor George S. Silzer of New Jersey, and Judge Ewing Cockrell of Missouri. A young man, only 29, was chosen for chairman of the Commission to direct its activities. The young man is F. Trubee Davison, a member of the New York Legislature. His father was the distinguished H. P. Davison of the great banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and chairman of the Red Cross War Council during the war. Young Davison has made a fine beginning in public service, and is entering upon this new task with earnestness. He has secured the co-operation of prominent men throughout the country. He says:

We shall first get an expert crime statistician and provide him with an adequate staff. It seems to me personally that murder should be our first consideration. We should find out all we can about murders in this country—not only how many there were, but wherein justice and the punitive agencies fell down if they did.

Meantime, what about the churches and their influence? One of the surest ways to abolish crime is to extend the outreach of the church and Sunday school. Preventive measures are the best. The appalling current records of crime are a challenge to home and church and every social agency for education and character building. As we rally in our churches for the new year ay it be with resolution to do our utmost to make ood Christian citizens of all the boys and girls whom e can reach.

* *

The man who sets a light value on the souls of his llow-men is judging himself by a false standard.

Plans for the Philadelphia Exposition

NE hundred years of American independence will be celebrated in Philadelphia next year with a great ternational exposition. In 1876 the nation's centen-al was celebrated in Philadelphia with the first great orld's fair held in the United States. Since then we ve had the great expositions of Chicago in 1893, and n Francisco in 1916, with the lesser but important positions in Buffalo, St. Louis, Portland, Ore., and n Diego. The critical may disapprove these big ex-sitions, but if properly conducted, they serve many orthy purposes. The evils which have attended some the expositions may be avoided, to a large degree, if e management and the city officials are really in rnest in their efforts to maintain wholesome moral con-tions, and to keep the exposition upon a high plane in l essential particulars.

Philadelphia's Sesqui-Centennial International Expo-ion presents the opportunity to rekindle the altar fires American patriotism, and renew our appreciation of e ideals and institutions which have made our nation eat, which have blessed our people and have served e other peoples of the world. There, in the city where e Declaration of Independence was signed and from hich it was proclaimed in 1776, where the Continental ongress assembled and the United States organized icially as a nation, we may get fresh inspiration from e past and a new vision of American opportunity to-y, her duty and her destiny, also a new appreciation other peoples and their achievements. The assembling people from far and near will be a good experience fellowship, national and international. The conven-ons and conferences will serve the intellectual, re-gious, social, and business interests of all. The ex-bits will be of great service in every department of man knowledge and welfare, in natural and industrial oducts, in the marvels of modern applied science and the fine arts.

The measure of success which may be achieved will pend largely upon those who co-operate in the ex-sition. We trust that there may be generous American -operation and that other nations may be well repre-nted in it. Already participation has been pledged a considerable number of foreign countries, by the nited States Government and various states and cities.

A strong organization has been formed in Philadelphia the Sesqui-Centennial Exhibition Association, with . Freeland Kendrick, Mayor of Philadelphia, as presi-nt; Ernest T. Trigg, vice-president and chairman of e executive committee; D. C. Collier, director-general; eorge W. B. Hicks, executive secretary; and A. C. aker, director of exhibits.

The exposition will be opened June 1, and will close ec. 1, 1926. The exposition site will be in South Phila-delphia, near the Navy Yard, comprising League Island Park and about 400 acres additional, also still more land is available if required. It will be easily accessible from the city with adequate transportation facilities. It will also have water frontage so that exhibits can be landed from steamers on wharves in the exhibition grounds. The buildings will be beautiful and so designed that they can be made permanent. A great stadium with seats for 100,000 is being constructed.

The amusement section will be called the "Glad Way," and the management promise that it shall be high class and morally clean. Historical pageants, parades, reviews, concerts, and important meetings are being planned.

We look forward hopefully to what may be the greatest and best of our international expositions.

A Scientist Looks Ahead

WE live in a world of constantly appearing wonders. The imaginings of Jules Verne and Edward Belamy, which in their day seemed impossible, are coming true; some of them have become a part of the daily commonplace. We may well give respectful attention to the scientist with prophetic vision who suggests today what we may expect in the future. For example (we quote from the Boston Herald), Prof. A. M. Low, a British scientist, might fairly be regarded as well equipped for prophecy: television is being studied with an instrument of his devising; he it was who brought in the synchronous cinematograph, and he who by means of the audiometer has enabled photographers to picture, in all its tones and modulations, so evasive a thing as the human voice.

Some of Professor Low's forecasts relate to mechanical contrivances. "Interplanetary communication" is one of them, holding out the prospect of definite acquaintance with other worlds. The airplane is to undergo further development until "people will think nothing of going, under wireless direction, to Egypt or India, knowing that they can ring up the secretary or the maid at home as they fly over the Red Sea to ask if they left their diamonds on the dressing-table, or to alter the turn of a phrase in an important political dispatch." On land we shall have a new type of motor car such as, by the mere turning of a clutch, may be made to plough the waves or negotiate the atmosphere. All city buildings, heated as well as lighted from a central station, will be provided with flat tops for the landing of airplane passengers and the reception of goods. The business man is to be saved from the trouble of parking has car outside; it will be taken up with him by a special elevator and deposited, until there is further need of it, at his office door.

The days are coming, according to Professor Low, when static will be eliminated and radio apparatus will be so cheap as to enable everybody to listen-in. With prepared food coming in daily from a community kitchen, domestic life will lose much of its worry. "Set the clock dial near your bedside at night, and in the morning you will be called by wireless. During your quickly dispatched breakfast the pleasant-toned loud speaker will sound out the happenings of the previous day, and a television machine will give you glimpses of some of the events." At the home fireside the family will be able to select just what kind of broadcasting they want—"can switch on and listen to a 'row' in the Reichstag, to some cause celebre on trial in the law courts, to a first night in the opera house at Milan, or to a speech on debt redemption in Congress." It will thus be a busier and, we are assured, a more moral world than before through the closer thinking contacts which wireless will set up. Of one thing the professor is absolutely sure—that in spite of radio, even because of it, the world will go on wanting and being supplied with newspapers, and this must mean a continued—we trust increasing—demand for such religious newspapers as The Congregationalist

Rally Day in the Churches

RALLY DAY has become an inevitable feature of present-day church life. In some respects, judged from the standpoint of former conditions and practices, and the ideals that these conditions and practices expressed or implied, Rally Day is an anomalous institution in a Christian church. The church in the expression of this ideal is the one institution that ought never to be on vacation. It ought to be eternally expressing the eternal verities, standing ever with open door and watchful eye for every need and every opportunity of appeal and service. To the strict critic who views the church from this standpoint, every surrender of any service and practice that has been once established is a sure evidence of the church's weakening and failure. The withdrawal of an evening service, the failure summer or winter to carry out every detail of the accustomed program is regarded as a letting down of morale, a sure sign that the church is succumbing to, instead of dominating, the trend of the times.

It is worth while to examine this matter with fair and judicial mind—as far as one can attain to such qualification. It is possible to regard all too lightly the present tendency, that seems ever wider and deeper, toward a summer slump in church activity and service. The church may be entirely too acquiescent in yielding her program to the prevailing conditions and habits. But it must be remembered, however, that "the church" is not some strange entity that will keep itself going apart from the people who compose it. If the church's ideal is expressed in the ancient formula, Where Jesus Christ is, there is the Church, the actualities of church life are no less vitally defined in the formula, Where the people of Christ are, there is the Church. When the people of Christ in a particular community are scattered to the seashore and mountains, the open spaces, and the inland waters and wildernesses, it is easy to say that the church should go on as usual. But how can it go on as usual when the people who compose it are nearly all away. The present summer slump in the churches is an inevitable result of the changed conditions that have brought vacation privileges and recreation within the reach of multitudes who have never hitherto known the meaning of change and relaxation. Should these conditions be altered? Could they be altered if we wished it? No sane man would wish to see the vacation principle weakened. We desire on the contrary to see adequate vacation within the reach of all who labor.

Nor is there any need, though institutions will have to change their program and methods, that there should be any real letting down of spiritual life, though it must be admitted that in the failure to attain adaptation to changed conditions there has been an actual slacking that has seriously affected religion and the church. But we must distinguish between possible and necessary consequences; and much of the slackness that has arisen from altered conditions is avoidable.

There must be, to meet the changing times, a deeper insistence that religion is not primarily a matter of times and seasons—a worshiping in a particular place. The religious life is something that the true men of religion takes with him wherever he goes. When change of residence is the occasion of a general slackening of vital religion there is a weakening not only of an institution but of the very fabric of Christianity. Vacation for people of earnest and wholesome purpose is in itself a spiritual experience. It brings to many time for reading and reflection, new personal contacts, new conversations and interests—new expressions of the inner life that compensate for the seeming failure of "services" and "programs." A true church continues its life even when its people are scattered.

Again, we have been too ready to decry the possibilities and opportunities of an abbreviated church year. In school and college, vacation periods have been recognized as essentials in the program of education. The colleges have done their work in a year that has allowed often as much as four months for rest and change. No one has ever accused the colleges of slackness because of the vacation principle. Summer schools and sessions have become in recent years an important part of college activities, and it is not improbable that the churches will yet find newer and different activities to meet the needs and possibilities of the vacation period. The problem of the local weakening of the church is being partially solved through union services, and the development of this in Middletown, Ct., and possibly in other communities of which we have not heard, is the combining of the churches to provide for a summer pastor, who shall serve not merely as pulpit supply but in all the pastoral relations while the regular pastor are absent. Vacation schools, summer conferences, retreats, and tours of fellowship and study are developments that are worth considering before one concludes too readily that slackness is the chief or only factor of summer church life.

The real test of the church's vitality is the immediateness and vigor of its rallying as people return to their homes and normal conditions are re-established. Rally Day has become an important feature of church life hurches might function effectively like schools and colges with a long vacation, but if Rally Day is lightly garded, or meaningless, they are apt to function no ore effectively than would schools or colleges if pupils nd teachers came straggling in any time after the openg day. Rally Day is, therefore, something more than mere incident of the church's program, or a device for imulating attendance. It is, as its name implies, a -allying, or binding together again of scattered and vided elements. Under modern conditions it has beome as important and essential a feature of the church's fe and work as is registration day, or opening day in ducational institutions. It is in the hope of making ally Day a day of real rallying, a breaking-ground for ew spiritual association and enterprise, and not merely n artificial feature in the church calendar, that the way of progress and effectiveness is found. A church's power to rally represents its power for worship and service.

Let there be then on the part of our people a real rallying on Rally Day. Let every one who possibly can, make it a point to be in his place on that day. There are duties to home and nation that no self-respecting man or woman would neglect. Are there not similar duties to the church? And is not Rally Day an occasion upon which the church might appeal as Nelson appealed to his sailors at Trafalgar: The Church expects that every man this day will do his duty. Would that the church could write that message confides, as Nelson actually wrote it (expects was substituted at the last minute for convenience in signalling), and would that the church might have as sure a response!

Characteristics of the Present-Day Student

By President Irving Maurer, Contributing Editor

THERE has been a good deal of talk in college circles and out during the last few years about the supposed eterioration in the idealism of our student bodies. One ears a great deal from the alumni of various schools, rom men and women who have been battling with reales of life, about the fact that our college student today oes not approach the fact of college with the seriousness f purpose which characterized the older generation. uring the year in which I have been at Beloit, I have een interested in studying this question with a view to scertain the facts. I do not think that as yet I am in a osition to speak with authority, but I am rather led to he conclusion that the judgment above described is uperficial. It is partly the fault of the young people hemselves, for our present generation of college students re rather indifferent to the question as to whether their est or their worst side is uppermost, and they are going head fulfilling their own aims in life with a nonchalance s to what the older generation thinks about them. For xample, it is quite apparent, when one spends a few days n any of the better colleges of the present day, that the ocial life of students is more deliberately planned for nd seemingly occupies a larger place in their program han was the case ten or fifteen years ago. But, when ne dips beneath the surface, it is not difficult to find, beeath the apparent over-emphasis on social activities, a enuine effort toward class work and a very frank plan or life work.

I do not believe that our young people today are deiberately more given over to having a good time at whatver cost, than were we. And they would be most surrised if this would be our judgment of them. I should ke to consider five or six characteristics which have imressed me in the life of the students at Beloit.

First, the young people today know at an earlier age hat they intend to do in life. Whether their judgment s accurate or adequate I do not venture to say. As I ook at our class of 1904, I can recall how large a perentage of us came to our senior year in Beloit without aving the least idea of what we were going to do after raduation. Today students early in their college course begin to elect studies because they have a definite life task in mind.

Second, the college student today is just as willing as any student ever was to work hard and to earn his way through college. Throughout the city of Beloit, in various capacities, our men are spending a lot of time doing more or less important jobs, and our problem in Administration Committee is a very keen one as to how to protect some of our students from overworking because of the large amount of time they are willing to spend after college hours, earning their way.

Third, I think that college students today are more experienced than we were in mapping out reading courses. This is a very commendable development in recent years in college classroom work, and while students are apparently weak today in language preparation, they are better developed in this capacity for organizing material.

Fourth, the college student today is thoroughly in touch with important movements in politics and in industry. In oratory and debating one realizes by the themes submitted that our college young people are doing a lot of observing, reading, and thinking about the actual world in which they live.

Fifth, when one realizes the experiences through which the world has passed, I am greatly pleased to see so much freedom from a cynical attitude. I expected to find a great deal more of it than I did. As I come to know the Beloit student today I find him with healthy mind, with wholesome reactions, and with generous purposes. I do not think that the proportion of drifters is increasing. In religion there is a notable lack of student initiative, but at the same time a very genuine interest in any attempt to interpret religion in terms of modern life.

Sixth, above all, I want you to know that our students are an active lot. There are not as many of them spending their greatest activity on their studies as I wish there were, but Beloit is still a very active, energetic place in which everyone is thoroughly alive. Any one who spends a number of years in the life of this college cannot but be more adequate in his approach to the world.

From Our Western Editor

The journalistic world was shocked last week at the news of the death of Victor F. Lawson, for a great many years editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News. Mr. Lawson had lived so quietly and had so completely submerged his own personality so far as the public was concerned, that he was little known save by public men and city leaders and those in his own special work. He was one of the giants who made the achievements in the field of journalism outstanding during the last two generations.

Mr. Lawson was born on the near north side of Chicago, seventy-five years ago. The city at that time had a population of about 28,000. His father, Iver Lawson, had come to America from Norway a few years before the birth of his famous son. He was a shrewd business man, an ardent Republican, and a community builder. He was the last City Marshall of Chicago. At the time of the Chicago fire his fortune was estimated at one million dollars, but he lost a great deal in this disaster. He died two or three years after the fire, leaving to his son considerable property.

Victor Lawson was educated in the Chicago public schools and in Phillips Andover Academy. He had planned to enter Harvard, but had to give up his studies on account of trouble with his eyes. He inherited from his father part ownership of the Daily Scandinavian and showed great interest in the work of the paper. In 1875 Melville E. Stone and others founded the Chicago Daily News and began its publication in the same building with the Scandinavian; their total capital was $5,000. The new paper was a penny sheet and its publishers had to have pennies imported to enable the people to make change. A few months after the founding of the paper, Mr. Stone bought out his partners, and a little later sold the paper to Mr. Lawson who retained Mr. Stone as editor. Mr. Lawson gave himself to a scientific study of the business management of the paper with the result that it soon began to prosper. A little later he transferred a one-third interest to Mr. Stone and the two were close associates until 1888 when Mr. Stone retired and Mr. Lawson became sole owner and editor.

Mr. Lawson has to his credit three or four outstanding achievements in the newspaper world. In 1878 when the old Evening Post suspended publication the Daily News purchased its assets, including the Associated Press franchise. The rival news gathering agency of the Associated Press was owned by a few New York newspapers and run upon a commercial basis. The Associated Press held that news should be collected and distributed upon a co-operative basis, not for gain, but to present reliable information to the public without bias of any sort. Mr. Lawson soon became president of the Associated Press and later a member of the board of control and chairman of the executive committee, so that the task of fighting the New York agency fell upon him. Samuel Bowles of the Springfield Republican rated Mr. Lawson as the most useful citizen of the United States because of his work for the Associated Press. In this task, he and Melville E. Stone were closely associated.

Mr. Lawson had some experience in the morning newspaper field. In 1881 he and Mr. Stone began the publication of a morning edition of the Daily News, afterward called the Record. This paper was unique in the morning field because Mr. Lawson would never permit a Sunday edition. He made such a good paper that it was able to compete with other morning newspapers. It had an enviable reputation as a clean, reliable, up-to-date family newspaper. After some years Mr. Lawson sold the Record so that he might give his entire time to the Daily News.

He was a pioneer in foreign news service. The representatives of the Daily News round the world came to be well known to the newspaper public of America and were counted upon to furnish accurate, reliable, and unbiased news and opinions of movements in other lands, and this is true of these correspondents at present. Mr. Lawson never allowed his own personal opinions to tincture the news of the headlines of articles in the slightest degree. The offices of the Daily News in foreign countries are centers to which Americans go for help, for advice, for travel directions, and not infrequently for financial aid.

It would take much space to describe the many activities carried on by Mr. Lawson for the welfare of his own city and district. He maintained every summer a great center for unprivileged mothers and children. He financed lectures for many Chicago communities. He fought crime and evils of various sorts through his newspaper. He kept up a constant crusade against gambling. From the beginning of his career he fought the grafter in politics and has sought to produce clean, wholesome, and progressive government. He has been one of the men most hated by unclean politicians. He never replied to their denunciation, but went calmly on with his work against them.

His campaigns against evil were always conducted on a high plane. His editorial method is well seen in the attitude of the Daily News toward the Volstead Act. Evidently Mr. Lawson believed that this act was extreme and that it could not be enforced. He has said so several times in the paper, but said it in a fair way. He has denounced nobody. To Mr. Lawson the fact that a minister believed in the Volstead Act did not make him a hypocrite. The paper constantly stood for the enforcement of law, but at the same time indicated that it believed the Volstead Act ought to be modified.

Mr. Lawson never allowed business terests to interfere with the news departme of his paper. Much pressure was brou to bear upon him again and again to preve the publication of items that would refl upon advertisers who spent much mo with the News. He would never yield. happened sometimes that the man who tr to get such favors would find that the Ne went out of its way to publish the item wh the patron had sought to suppress. breadth of vision in his work was markable. He was naturally conservat and yet his paper took on modern featu as rapidly as any paper in the count Stories, everyday philosophies, Hit Miss columns, popular biographies, woma work, a department for open letters discussion, and many unique features found a public through this paper. has throughout the history of the pa helped to develop feature writers. Perh the most famous of these was Eug Field who became connected with the mo ing edition of the paper in 1883 and tinued his famous column, "Sharps Flats," until his death in 1895.

With all his conservatism Mr. Law gave the best leadership of the Wes chance to reach the people through his pa For many years Dr. Graham Taylor contributed a weekly letter. He told two or three years ago that not more t once or twice in all this time had Lawson raised a question about the tude taken in his articles. Mrs. Lawson some years ago and to the public Mr. L son has seemed to be a very lonely m He had nothing about him of the " fellow well met" attitude toward oth He did have the power to bind to him his relatives and his employees as well the members of a group of friends i close, intimate, personal relationship. He to his credit the development of a num of young men in whom he believed, an whom he gave opportunity for growth.

He was a simple-minded Christian believed in the Gospel of the living Ch and the one book for him was the B Reference has been made above to his de to keep the Sabbath. Some years ago proposed to furnish popular conc throughout the Chicago district, but it found that the only available time woul Sunday afternoon. He appreciated his religious training so much that he ref to finance concerts which were to be g on Sunday, holding that the day ough be used for moral and religious instruc He became a member of New England gregational Church while still a very y man, and was wholeheartedly devote its interests.

He owned, it is supposed, a large fort What disposition his will makes of it into whose hands the control of the News will pass are not known at this ing. He was a wise, level headed, Chris administrator, who gave more than years of painstaking, devoted service t country, to his city, and to his church.

Chicago, Illinois. B. W.
August 21, 1925.

The Church with a Burning Heart

A Sermon by Rev. John Moore

Amesbury, Massachusetts

Text, Luke 24:32—"Did not our hearts rn within us?"

HAT is what they said when they re- called their eight mile walk from rusalem to Emmaus. But look at them ien they start! No men were ever more wncast. They were dazed and disap- inted with the experiences of the last few ys. They had trusted that Jesus would estore Israel," that is, conduct a social volution by breaking the tyranny of the oman yoke. But the Cross on the hill as the grave of their fond hopes. "They ried their dead hopes with bitter tears." hey had based their hopes on a certain eory of social reform rather than on the wer of personality. Consequently they did ot recognize the Master of life approach em, come alongside of them, and step into eir stride. They thought him a hermit Jerusalem—he knew so little! But he ored like a gimlet into their hearts in his xpositions of the prophets. The pilgrims' erves began to prick and tingle and the lood to dance in their veins; their thoughts egan to kindle and the fire of their under- anding to glow.

Christianity Born in Burning Enthusiasm

We must never forget that Christianity as born in a blood-red earnestness, a burn- ng enthusiasm, a divine dementia. The asis of Christianity is a bloody cross, and s symbol of growth and progress is a aming tongue of fire. There is color for ou! There is nothing anaemic and pallid bout Christianity. It puts a white bird ithin the breast, but gives the touch of carlet to all one's actions! When Christi- nity loses its heat and flame and passion ien take it from the cross of their regard nd bury it in the tomb of their indifference. No wicked generation will stand a tepid Christianity, and none can withstand a urning church. Christianity at its best is nflammatory, explosive, revolutionary, cre- ative. It enters the life with a spiritual leansing like flame, it sharpens to the point f acuteness every personal and social prob- em by throwing light into it, it brings the iery intensity of spiritual perfection to urn like an unquenchable fire in our souls. "I came," says Jesus, "to fling fire on the earth." In his matchless sermons and his peerless deeds you can see him thrusting red-hot fire at the foundations of the world- order—not to destroy, but to fulfill, that is to fill full,—of gold and precious stones, in the place of baser metal! In the terrific fires of God's judgment through Christ only our adventures and enthusiasms will avail to save us! Christianity and the church of the living God can only live by burning, for our God is a consuming fire!

Now many things are seeking to rob Christianity and the church of this flaming ideal, this inflammatory touch—an obstinate obscurantism, for instance, that would put the eyes of religion in the back of its head. The special complication of our age lies in the unmeaning clamor of those who place science and religion in unreal opposition. The currents of life are bearing us onward so swiftly that we cannot steer by anything but the stars. We should be false to the fire in our bosoms if we hugged the six-mile limit and never got up steam and made for the mighty oceanic deeps and the lifting horizon. We cannot moor our boats to an obsolescent theology. We must, perforce, set out across our Sea of Galilee with Christ in the boat. A true religious faith will send us through red seas and dead seas, round horns of intellectual and moral adventure to discover new worlds for old. The fire from heaven really tries the rivets in our boilers!

Again, a cold intellectualism would rob the church of her tongues of fire. A sterile rationalism that worships only reason is as much of a peril to religion as a theological obscurantism. The one has brain fag, the other brain fever! The one leads us out into a well arranged cemetery, the other bids us sit at a chess board and with cunning caution mate in so many moves! The malady of one is fear, of the other, cold! One would accommodate Christianity to the intelligence of the past; the other would accommodate it to the intellectual present. One has tampered with its oracle, the other is tempted by its oracle. By all means let us have knowledge, but also emotion, faith, and reverence, the reverence that will uncover before the facts of life as before the facts of science and the axioms of philosophy. Man's dreams are often truer than his oracles. The intellectualism that has only frosty light and no holy flame soon turns the church into a cold storage plant. God may forgive our ignorance, but never a tepid heart. "I would that thou wert cold or hot. So, then, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth."

Still further, a superfine respectability would take the fervor of fellowship from the church and the blaze of brotherhood from her message. The emphasis comes to be no longer on the elect, but on the select! The church, then, is tense, but not intense! It lives in danger of having its candlestick removed, and dying of dignity! The church dignified!—indeed! Yet her Lord died upon a cross between two thieves, a loathsome death of which Cicero said, "May it never come nigh a Roman citizen!" The church that stands on its dignity just stands—that is all! The God of the Incarnation did not stand on his dignity, he stooped to our poor clay, wrapped and veiled himself in it, filled it with celestial fire, transformed its dirt to grandeur, its dust to deity. The church with a burning heart decides between dignity and destiny, and chooses destiny. She burns with such splendor of service as to touch everything and turn it into radium! That proud Pharisee Paul surrendered exclusiveness for community when the spirit of Christ apprehended him on the Damascus road, turned from a Jewish aristocrat to the supreme democrat who could hold Jews, Greeks, Romans, barbarians, bond, free, as his creditors. His life was all light, all fire, pure burning splendor! The two disciples on the Emmaus road feel their hearts burn within them in love toward the Stranger, and they invite him into their hospitality, into the fellowship of their homes and their hearts.

Our common human nature has been ever in love with a modified Christianity. It has watered down the "sincere milk of the word." It has taken the sting out of Christ's sharp sayings by all sorts of scholastic casuistry. The church has arroyed Christ in priests' robes, the ephod of dogmatic theology, and put the reed of nominal Christianity in his hand. It has invested him with but the show of sovereignty and given him the hollow homage of "Hail, Master!" It has dressed Christianity in all kinds of vesture, accommodating it to human sense, to human reason, to practical materialism. It has not resisted unto blood! It has been afraid of the fire! The church has, indeed, kindled a few fires —for the heretics! So the flames have danced at Smithfield, at Saint Andrews, at Prague, at Geneva, and the souls of Savonarolas have "gone out in fire!" Strange that the heretics should be burned, and the hypocrites be upholstered with ecclesiastical privilege! Yet what would Christianity have ever done, and where would the world be, but for the fools and fanatics who carried torches, dropped sparks, and kindled fires that enlightened, energized, and warmed the world? What would life be but for the brotherhood of the burning heart, the church of the burning shining light? The call of today is for a church that can burn ardently, with incandescent glow and fiery intensity, and not with the phosphorescence of spiritual decay. Three things will always characterize the church with a burning heart.

The Marks of a Truly Christian Church

It will be evangelistic. Everything great is shot through with passion. The church must keep the passion for souls. Her religion must be impassioned and passionate. She is the guardian of an experience, the herald of a passion. Churches have been divided into evangelical and non-evangelical. It is very difficult to see why the distinction should persist, for the old Deism has gone and the new Theism puts God not outside his world, but inside; it wipes out of existence the gulf between God and man. We cannot ask any longer whether Jesus is God or man, we know he is both! Our different conception of God has made us think differently of the Bible, of Christ, of the Atonement, of Prayer, and of Sin. The modern conception of divine immanence has obliterated forever some old landmarks and divisions.

But mark, there is a tremendous difference between a church that is evangelical and one that is evangelistic. An illustration may carry the point: In the highlands of Scotland is a lovely lake, and pilgrim feet find their way to it every year to look at its gleaming water and be refreshed with the beauty of its scenery. But the lake does not complete itself thus. It is carried in pipes down to one of the great cities to refresh the inhabitants of suburbanism and slumdom with the water of life. To be evangelical is to be pellucid of doctrine, clear of creed, correct of liturgy. But to be evangelistic is to have pipes going out to every house, into every home.

It will be a missionary church. The world issue hangs critically in the balance now. Never since Apostolic days was the missionary appeal louder and more importunate than now. Listen to the voices in India, China, Japan, Africa, the islands of the seas! These countries are feeling their way to strength and power. They are reaching out with groping, grasping tentacles for intellectual illumination, moral enlightenment, spiritual nourishment. They are asking for the bread of our brotherhood, the beauty of our Gospel's fellowship, the light and the leading of our Christian institutions. Can we take their problems on our hearts, their difficulties in our hands? Providence has shaken the races of mankind so close together these last few years that either the world must be evangelized and Christianized or something terrible will befall us. We look around the world today and note the quickening pulse of some peoples, their rise to power, their prodigious experimentation in the fields of human affairs, and the cynicism and despair that has seized others—we look and say, Now for the church the hammer of the world's clock strikes the hour! Let us thank God for the splendid men and women who have dedicated their lives and sundered every tie in order that the Gospel light and warmth might shine in darkened pagan lands. Let us send them the sinews of their warfare—our prayers, our wealth! Oh, Church of the living God here is your opportunity! I see a brilliant student, a mathematician and a scholar, crowned with the honors of his university, consumption eating at his lungs. He goes on a nine months' voyage to India, and at thirty as he enters that great continent he cries, "Let me burn out here!" His body wasting with disease he reads languages, talks with the natives, and at thirty-two they bury him in Persia, a worn-out and broken old man, because the fire of Christ's love burned so intensely within him. "Let me burn out here!" "Let me burn out here!"

It will be a praying church. Only so can the fire be kept burning on the church's altars. Prayer is primary. The church's evangelism, the church's missionary enterprise, can only be kept up by constant and importunate prayer. "Prayer," says Dora Greenwell, "is the instinct of the redeemed soul." In a discussion of prayer we touch an amazing amount of perplexity in this scientific age, but amid all the confusion a few things stand out clear and sublime. First, in prayer man is calling in a perfectly natural way for supernatural aid. This is the bare fact, however it may be interpreted. The act of prayer tells us that there is no hope for ourselves in ourselves! Secondly, a knowledge of our need drives us to the knowledge of God as Creator, Redeemer, Sanctifier, Father—infinite Love. That is to say, we get glimpses of his mind and heart, and strange dreams wake within us of union with him to be consummated some day. Thirdly, he makes us ever to desire for ourselves that which he desires for us. Till this response accrues the petitioner feeds on emptiness. Inwrought prayer is a very fundamental thing in the Christian's life. We may question if any heart ever prays except as renewed by the Holy Spirit, deep calling unto deep. Certainly it is one of the most liberating experiences that one can know! Of all forms of labor prayer is the hardest. Let us, therefore, have done with the half-truth that "work is prayer"; it is so only when "prayer is work." Prayer is so difficult that we will try anything else! —social service, liberal giving, program-making, anything! But these are weak substitutes for conquering prayer, intercession. To the soul that has found the breast of God the fixity of natural law means little, certainly it is no obstacle to the praying soul; the tarriance of the thing asked for lays no blight upon the soul's vision, for it sees steadily and wholly into the great spiritual fact that prayer is a part of that natural law, and is treasured in the purpose of God. The eyes of the soul once cleansed by prayer see clearly prayer as opportunity, and prayer as power.

The church with a burning heart will have more than a prayer meeting; it will have a meeting where people pray in genuine intercession; prayer will stream from them like a river and swell like a sea! They will do more than recharge their batteries, they will slip their hands into God's hands and help him work the miracle!

Take a final look at the two dispirited pilgrims of the twilight hour. They were running away from Jerusalem. Their theory was shattered, their hopes and dreams were broken. The Stranger introduced them to the conquering might of personality in heaven and earth, their hearts burned within them, revelation flamed around them. They rose up the same hour and walked back eight miles to tell the other disciples that they had themselves seen the Lord and tasted the power of his resurrection. Into the room where the others are huddled in fear they breathlessly rush with their personal experience. The others listen with what astonishment we may imagine. And while they are all holding high fellowship and testimony their Lord appears again—to Thomas the doubter. Their experience brought revelation to him, he cried, "My Lord and my God!" Torch lights torch, faggot burns faggot, fire kindles fire! Something passes from heart to heart like chained lightning and pulls people into the play of the Gospel's central realities. Soon you see not cringing men, but Peter "standing up" fearlessly; Peter and John amazing people with their "boldness." The exciting drama begins which puts upon the head of Jesus "many crowns," and ina rates his reign from the rivers to the of the earth. Read the Acts of the Apo It is the most adventurous and exc record extant. You hear the hurry and tramp of feet in its pages, the disciples mobilizing for the greatest crusade planet has seen. These men and wo are like concrete with a streak of running through it! They pray and pre till prison doors fly open, ships cross st seas, fearsome men are nerved to frozen zones and dark continents, men mad with passion as persecu are converted in their tracks. Everyw the lightning, everywhere the tongue fire, everywhere the resistance unto bl The church with the burning heart has the world on fire!

This is the Time

By Charles S. Tapley

I must frankly confess that during summer season I have not been in churc much as I should. I have no excuse offer. But I realize that this is the to get back on the job, and prepare for winter's activities.

I planned all the week to go to the mor service last Sunday, but when Sunday rived I postponed it.

A striking example of the one who is ways looking ahead and intending to things is brought about by the expres so common in Mexico where, whenever desire anything done, you are assured it be accomplished mañana (tomorrow), when tomorrow arrives it is the same th mañana, and so it goes on from day to and is never done. Too often do all o follow this same example, until today a v known quotation is, "Procrastination is thief of time."

I think we are all too inclined to crastinate. This is the time to mend ways and to get back where we belong. us pull ourselves out of the rut, if we ar one, and try churchgoing.

We must be alive and eager for opport ties for true service. Many do with op tunities as children do at the seashore; t fill their little hands with sand, and t let the grains fall through one by one all are gone.

Opportunity is rare; but those who t advantage of it are rarer.

Time sweeps on, evenly and surely, k ing the same pace for all men!

The most successful church is not one in which a few people take the lead one in which every attendant has strength and capacity for leadership.

It will come hard the first Sunday to tend, but when the habit of churchgoing re-established it will prove a great comf

We can accomplish so much more if have a large group of interested people.

It ain't the guns nor armament
Nor money they can pay,
But the close co-operation
That makes them win the day.
It ain't the individual
Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlasting teamwork
Of every blooming soul.

Unofficial Efficiency

Church Service Which Assures Success

By Rev. Edwin H. Byington

WHAT will enable a church to attain the maximum success possible with its rticular environment and equipment? eadership it needs, but leadership unsupported is impotent. Earnest lieutenants are sential, but no commander and his staff er won a battle by themselves. Thorough ganization, with numerous capable committees, is an asset but inadequate. Not as substitute but supplementary to these, official efficiency is needed.

At a brotherhood dinner a man reported me that three strangers had been seated the same table with him, with whom he d made himself acquainted, introducing em to others and ascertaining their identy for me. This man was not an officer of e brotherhood, nor a member of the hospility or membership committee. What he d was not his special duty, but he did it, instance of unofficial efficiency, the uccessful accomplishment of unassigned rvice.

The Unemployed Majority

A church having only organized efficiency uffers from a serious deficiency. The larger is, the more true this is. In a church of venty members an office exists for almost very one; but in a church of two hundred embers, while a score may hold office and s many more serve on important committees, four-fifths are in the unofficial class, nd in a church of a thousand members early nine-tenths are.

We are so enamored of system in these ays, of assigning tasks to appointed orkers, that we overlook often this large ajority whose unofficial activity ought to e stimulated and appreciated far more than is. While many do their best under the pur of official position, many others dislike ffice and committees but enjoy working in free fashion as opportunities present themelves. Not all are adapted to team-work. ou cannot harness hunting hounds and rive them. They find their quarry when ree to follow the scent. In one of my arishes the person who outstripped all in ringing people into the church neither held n office nor was on any committee. I was stonished when calling in a distant section f another parish to find how much was beng done by one of the shyest of women who ould have left the church rather than accept an office and whom nobody would have hought of putting on a committee. Some of he energy expended in multiplying ecclesiastical machinery might well be diverted nto inspiring this unmarshaled majority, who seem to be handicapped by lack of offiial position and assigned tasks.

The Advantages of the Handicapped

Their activity multiplies points of contact. ap roots, trunks, and branching limbs must e, but how meager the tree life if rootlets o not reach out in every direction, and how cant the crop if twigs do not push out, here nd there and everywhere, to give a chance members has contacts unrealized by the leaders and opportunities unrecognized by them. To assign would be to limit. Because they are free they can achieve.

They also dare to attempt what officials may not and pastors must not. They are not bound by precedents, neither do they establish precedents that will torment those who follow them. Their acts do not commit the church. If a mistake is made, it is their own lookout. Therefore they may take risks and at times secure important results out of the reach of officials. Such a man's freedom from official limitations makes him sometimes an easier instrument of the Spirit of God. The wind bloweth where it listeth and the free may fly with it. Most of the prophets were not officials; neither was John the Baptist, nor the Master.

An unofficial worker sometimes feels an enthusiasm often absent from official routine. The spontaneity of the act, originating with him, imparts a zest to the attempt and a delight in achievement ordinarily characteristic of an adventure. The average person has a thrill when all by himself he sees, seizes, and brings to a successful issue a real opportunity. Let this experience be repeated not by one alone but by many associated together in a common enterprise, and a warm, glowing spirit will appear not easily generated otherwise. In fact enthusiasm seldom permeates a church where unofficial efficiency is absent.

Unofficial efforts at times have an efficiency surpassing that of the corresponding official acts. A newcomer to a church complained that he had not been hospitably received. When reminded that the minister had repeatedly welcomed him at the church and had called on him, he acknowledged it but said that the people had not greeted him. Surprise was expressed that the ushers, usually very careful, had missed him. Then he confessed that they had shaken hands with him cordially but, he said, that was their business and it did not satisfy him. He wanted unofficial hospitality and, however unreasonable he may seem, most of us will acknowledge that in visiting other churches it is the informal, spontaneous cordiality that impresses us more than any official welcome.

Business vs. Religion

The demand for business methods in the church should not be ignored, but it should be recognized that, in business, system is the great factor and unofficial efficiency a negligible element, while in religion one is as important as the other. In fact, organization alone would be unfortunate, tending to make the church a great human machine rather than a spiritual force. The marvelous spread of Christianity in the second and third centuries, whereby it won the Roman Empire, was due almost entirely to unofficial efficiency, there being no great missionary societies, nor were the churches organized to ership and organization must be recognized as foundations. Nevertheless these undirected, unrelated, scattered efforts of the unorganized majority are important, are essential for the best results and deserve a place in the category of efficiency.

Making the Unofficial Efficient

How can these many individuals, without assigned place or task, be moved to render valuable service? In various ways, but especially by a three-fold recognition and emphasis.

First, a recognition of the spheres wherein unofficial activity can, may, and should operate. This should be thought out clearly by the leader, discussed by the officers, understood by the people. As some hillsides and lakes are known to be unrestricted, open to all who would gather violets and water lilies, so should certain fields of church activity. People often do nothing because they are afraid of trespassing or interfering. The area for this purpose will vary with the church, its condition, and environment. It may be reporting the sick, the afflicted, the strangers, the "good prospects," for membership in the Bible school or some other organization; or calling to welcome, or comfort, or cheer, or congratulate; it may be bringing people to the church, or taking its message to them, or asking them to join the church, or leading them to accept Christ; it may be some civic duty; it may be intercessory prayer. All should understand that in the realms decided upon there were no assignments, that volunteers would not be trespassing, in fact that if they did not come forward the tasks would be left undone. Point to the field and make a ringing call for volunteers, leaving all decision and action to them.

Second, a recognition of election by opportunity. If the so-called church idlers were asked, "Why stand ye here idle?," many would answer, "Because no man hath hired us," that is, no man hath put us in an office or on a committee. The Calvinistic emphasis on the doctrine of divine election for salvation had some harmful effects. Fully as many has the modern democratic doctrine of election for service. "The elect" are made such by the church ballot and the non-elect are out of it. This feeling must be combatted. Organization, whether of labor, trade, or government becomes very exacting in its demand that whatever is done must be done by the one to whom it is assigned and by no one else. Red tape! Woe, if the church is thus bound. Declare that what is nobody's business is the business of the man to whom it first presents itself. Divine election and appointment for service come by opportunity. Occasionally some officious person will overdo it, or the inexperienced will blunder, or some officer will resent such activity, but the gain will so much exceed the loss that appointment by opportunity may well be urged earnestly and often.

Third, a recognition of the value of such services. Organized effort, embracing the activities of many, in reporting results, shows a large total. Every participant, feeling that he has a share in the whole, is satisfied and encouraged. In unofficial activity, each effort, standing by itself, seems small and worth little. There is neither tabulation nor inspiration. There is therefore the need of frequent and hearty public appreciation of the value of these individual voluntary acts of service. Often should an instance be mentioned showing its worth. This should be followed with a ringing challenge to the whole company, "Go and do thou likewise."

"All velvet" is a colloquial expression to indicate clear additional profit, over and above the normal gain from any effort or enterprise. Such is unofficial efficiency. Without increasing the financial budget of a church or its existing organizations, much additional spiritual power may be generated by developing this form of activity. To its presence may be attributed the otherwise unaccountable vigor, prosperity, and influence of some unusually successful church. It is the sine qua non of the maximum.

The Women of Aigues-Mortes

By Rev. Newton Marshall Hall, D.D.

ON the edge of the dead waters of the Camargue in Southern Provence is Aigues-Mortes, the "City of Dead Waters." The sluggish tides of the Mediterranean once came up to its walls and even now the sea is not far away from its southern sally-port. The wonderful medieval walls which rival the fortifications of Carcassonne were built as they are now from 1270 to 1285. But it was not the walls or the medieval fortifications which interested me most at the City of Dead Waters.

Aigues-Mortes is literally the City of the Dead, of ghosts. Its present inhabitants seem lively enough but just the same it is a city of ghosts, and chiefest of the ghosts is Saint Louis, whose martial figure in bronze stands in the public square. As I sat down to an excellent lunch at the Hotel de Saint Louis, I half expected to see the streets of the city filled with the fluttering pennons of a hundred knights,—the leopard of England, the lion of Venice, the fleur-de-lis of France. I expected to see Louis himself in full armor, riding through the streets with his beautiful queen, Blanche of Castille, one of the fair daughters of Raymond Berenger and Beatrix of Castille, and his two stout brothers, Charles d'Anjou and Robert d'Artois, and the Lords of Auvergne and Baux, Burgundy, Monferrat, Brabant! All that splendid company which embarked on Friday, the 20th of August, 1248, from the harbor of Aigues-Mortes, knights and nobles and their squires, ladies and their attendants, sailed away and the Saracens cut them to pieces when they reached the Holy Land and captured King Louis himself. While he was yet a captive his queen gave birth to a son, Tristan, and sad enough the whole story is, for the plague broke out and little Tristan died, and the king, lying on his bed of ashes, died too, his last breath a prayer for the Holy Land and its people. A great soul, a saintly soul, a gallant soul, and he looks it as his mailed figure faces the sea in the square of Aigues-Mortes.

A Shrine for Protestant Pilgrims

There are many other ghosts at Aigues-Mortes, but the most interesting to a Protestant are the shades of the captive Huguenot women, and the Tower of Constance, in which they were imprisoned, is likely to become a shrine for Protestant pilgrims since the journey from Nîmes or Avignon is no longer a terrible one but a matter of a few hours in a comfortable motor bus of the Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean Railroad. As I have written, the promising Reformation of the Albigensians was supposedly drowned in blood. I wonder how much satisfaction the tally of something over 100,000 innocent men and women really gave the Pope. But the tale was not all told when the last of the Albigensians perished by fire and sword. There is a certain document, and the Pope should have been familiar with it, in which we read of the earliest Protestants: "They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented . . . and these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Of what use was it? Out of that first fury of persecution came the Pope's own church and ours. You may persuade men to change their faith—the Poor Men of Lyons did that easily—but you cannot compel them, no, not though you use fire and sword. The blood of the martyrs, which is the seed of the church, lay dormant in the soil of Provence.

Then the mysterious wind of the spirit blew over it and it awoke to life. The Reformation swept Europe, and the Huguenots, not learning the lesson, persecuted in their turn, but again heresy was supposedly overcome on the red night of St. Bartholomew. Now at Nîmes there was a church of the Huguenots. For the heinous offence meeting together for prayer the mem of this little church were arrested, brut treated, and consigned to various fo of punishment. The women were sent prison in the Tour de Constance Aigues-Mortes. We know the names of s of them; there were Margherite Forest and Sarah Granier. Their hair was crop short,—modes as well as customs chang it would not be so great a punishment to present-day women—and they were imp oned in a room which you may still see large round room with grated windo which is likely now to become a sacred pl for all Protestants.

We should not have known much ab them had it not been for a strange discov In 1880 a bundle of letters which had b sent to them by their friends from outs was discovered. One of the most interest was written by Katharine Gauteyret to S anna Mauran, her daughter-in-law, twe six years old, the newly wedded wife Bartholémy Mauran, master baker of Nîm A baby was born to her in the Tour de C stance. With the letters her mother-in-l had sent her some planks for a bed, t sheets, and some other things for her co fort. Ah, that mother-in-law was a g sort! This is a part of her letter:

28 Août 1730. A Mademoiselle Suss Maurane à la tour de Constance. Maden selle et bele fille. Je vous felisite du que Dieu vous a donné Et moy qui vous brase de tout mon ceur vous soitant m beneditions et que Dieu vous le veuil c serve par sa sainte grase. Je vous env . . . bant pour un lit et sing planche p m . . . nogier de Saint-Lauran. Je vous env . . . et dux linseul et de serviete quan . en . . . lit en le vous soitant vous me . pour dauntan que j'ay. . . .

Other letters were written by the husba of Elizabeth Michel, very fine and brave a pathetic letters. Several of these women canted after twelve years of imprisonme Who can blame them? But some remain faithful and at last in 1767 came the go Prince de Beauvais, who closed all the h rible prisons in which the Huguenots we confined. There is a contemporary accou of the official visit to Aigues-Mortes, writt by a nephew, Stanislas Jean de Bouffler have no colors in which to paint the rors of the picture which gradually grew on our unaccustomed eyes. The scene was leous yet pathetic, and interest in its vic- ns struggled with disgust at their condi- n. Almost without air and light, fourteen men languished in misery and tears within at stone-walled chamber. As the comman- nt, who was visibly touched, entered the artment, they all fell down together at s feet. I can still see them, bathed in ars, struggling to speak, unable at first to anything but sob. Encouraged by our ident sympathy they all began to tell us eir sorrows at once. Alas! the crime for nich they were thus suffering was the fact at they had been brought in the same reli- on as Henri Quatre. The youngest of them as fifty, and she had been here since she as eight years old. In a loud voice that ook with emotion the marshal said, 'You e free!' and I was proud to be his servant that moment."

The Women of Aigues-Mortes

A great story and one not without its les- ns with respect to heresy and the dangers intolerance.

An Impressive Service

It was a mid-summer Sabbath and a service as being held in the Congregational meeting- ouse of Walpole, Mass. At the organ sat a nall, white-haired old man, his fingers softly ouching the keys with a skill born of over 65 ears' experience in this, his own home church. t was Mr. Joshua Allen, or "Uncle Joshua," s he is lovingly called by his many friends.

As the sweet melody died away, a tall, gray- aired gentleman arose from the minister's hair; like one of the prophets of old he seemed, is whole personality radiating physical vigor nd spiritual power.

This venerable servant of God was Rev. Edwin A. Adams, D.D., and like Mr. Joshua llen, he, too, was nearing 88 years of age. Dr. dams' life-long ministry has been to the Bohemians of Prague, Austria, and to the Bo- emian colony in our own great city of Chicago, nd now his influence is being felt in this New England town where he taught as a young man nd where he won his bride nearly 60 years ago.

As the beautiful service progressed, Dr. dams' only sign of weakness became evident when he said very simply, "I have asked my laughter to be eyes for me." She arose and tood beside him, a woman of great dignity and ersonal charm, reading the Scripture lesson in clear, sweet voice. It was a Father and Daughter picture long to be remembered. And t was indeed an honor for her to share in the ervice, for Miss Katherine Adams is the Presi- lent of the Constantinople College for Girls, nd a leader in the life of the new Turkey.

Dr. Adams' message was based upon the ext: "I have many things to say to you but ve cannot bear them now; howbeit when the pirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into ll truth." His remarkable voice rang out with great power and his earnest questions, "Have you found God, do you know the spirit of Truth in your own life, has he a message for you?" sank into the minds of his hearers with deep and solemn meaning.

As "Uncle Joshua" took his place once more at the organ and the voices of all present blended together in the old hymn, "Master, let me walk with Thee," the spirit of God brooded upon all hearts and the unique service ended in a hush of peace.

ELLA NEWHALL PLIMPTON.

The Kingdom Come

By Rev. Chester B. Emerson
Detroit, Michigan

"WHAT do I love when I love Thee?" asks Augustine. The answer is the main pleading of Our Lord's Prayer, "Thy Kingdom Come." "Who is Thee?" The power by whom the Kingdom is to be established. Our God is he in whom we trust as we give ourselves and our possessions for its establishment on earth. What is Thy Kingdom? The reign of love in a unified society.

"The Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven" is a prayer and it is also a plan of campaign. It means that all the Kingdoms of this earth become the Kingdoms of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. It means that all the peoples shall be federated by his Spirit. That the weak shall not fear the strong and the strong shall not bruise the weak. That the competent shall serve and uplift the incompetent. That the pride of race shall not be in privilege but in service. That religion shall not be exclusive but contributive. That neighborly regard shall govern political diplomacy, that destructive abilities shall be turned to combating and controlling the forces of nature for the good of mankind.

The song of the angels—"peace on earth, good will among men"—is poetry, to be sure, but it is also the most practical and economical policy for the world.

Everything material that we seek for we find. Shall it be less for us in the realm of the Spirit? Shall we win every battle with the earth and yet lose our own souls? Shall we learn to speak to each other and trade with each other across the continents and seas and yet not learn to love each other? Shall we harness the winds and waves and yet have no control over the passions of our hearts? Shall we rid us of pestilences and let hatred and jealousy and selfishness poison our lives? God forbid! Peace shall be in the earth. Good will shall obtain among men. God hath willed it! Christ's gospel of a society in which the spirit of redemptive love shall prevail is not an impossibility. It can be a reality. It is for the Christian of the earth to say when.

Believeing in God's unfailing providence, and steadied by his unalterable purpose, the true disciple of Jesus follows into the hardest and darkest ways of the world sure that his Father's business of the Kingdom is there to be done and will be done. The whole world is a field for conquest. Life itself is a struggle for victory. The fundamental trust is that victory is possible. Faith is the victory that overcomes the world.

Has it ever been otherwise? Doubt never dug a well, nor built a house, nor drove a shaft. Doubt never sailed the sea nor soared the air. Doubt never discovered a continent, nor won a country. Doubt never made our Republic, nor started a League of Nations, nor farther visioned the Kingdom of God. But faith has done all these things.

When he plants his seed and tends it the farmer knows that all he can do is only five per cent. of what is needed to insure a crop, yet he trusts the universe of God to give the other ninety-five per cent. and he reaps in due season.

So when we labor for the Kingdom we put our little, insufficient all at work, and God, whose riches and resources are unsearchable, gives the increase.

We have a wonderful mobile force at the front—home missionaries in lumber camps and mining towns and city slums; and foreign missionaries in every land, among every people. They are our advance guards after whom we must follow hard. Our business is not to stay with stuff but to bring up the stuff.

Never will we forget the men at the front during that terrible spring of 1918 in France; no news but retreat after retreat. Some one would cry, "Are we down-hearted?" A terrific shout answered, "No!" Then followed the agonizing question, "But what are they up to at home? Where are the guns and ammunition and planes?"

In just this sipirt are the workers living on the field at home and abroad. When we think the apportionments are too high, let us look over our amazing spending for luxurious housing and envious display and wasting pleasures.

Investments with diminishing returns—Oh! for greater investments in the Kingdom of God. They bring some thirty, some sixty, some one hundred per cent., and in such coin as the changes of fortune cannot affect.

Ours is the ancient challenge of the church—to capture the heart of the world for Jesus Christ. It will not be done as in the armies of the nations.

They use their power to bruise and break,
We use our power to heal and bless.

They fight with treasure seized.
We fight with treasure spent.

They win by lives taken.
We win by lives given.

The apostles of Jesus Christ saw what needed to be done for the Kingdom and they did it. Seeing as we do the terrific needs of our day, shall we not meet them?

It will cost sore knees and calloused hands, and wearied minds, and tired hearts and empty purses. Would we have it otherwise? Have we not chosen to be good soldiers of the Cross?

If any man will follow Christ he must go where Christ leads and serve as he asks.

If the present-day fight for the soul of the world lays some heavy conditions of discipleship we shall the more surely have the reward of discipleship. "Well done thou good and faithful servant." "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

There will always be an old and new theology—old learning and new learning—but the real test will be bringing men to God for their redemption.—Bishop William F. McDowell.

Church Building Co-operation

Biennial Report to Be Presented at Washington

By Frederick L. Fagley

"Practical church union is not a theory but is an effective method of church work now in operation in many communities," says Dr. James Robert Smith, Church Building Secretary of the Congregational Church Building Society in the report of this society to the National Council of Congregational Churches which meets at Washington, D. C., in October.

DR. J. R. SMITH

As an illustration of the way church union is developing in the church life of America, Dr. Smith tells of how the Congregational denominational officials advised the Congregational Church of East Lansing, Mich., to withdraw from the denomination and to become an independent body, in order that three other denominations might co-operate with the Congregationalists in building a new church and paying the salary of the minister, thus ministering to the needs of an entire community.

This sort of policy marks an entire change from that of former years when the denominations were all eagerly trying to build their own denominational churches in order that the "Gospel (according to their own interpretation) might be preached."

East Lansing was an especially favorable situation for trying out this form of church co-operation. Here is situated the State Agricultural College with 2,000 students coming from all over the state and from many denominations. Around the college is a town of about 2,000 people.

For many years there had been but one church in the community, and that a small Congregational church. To this church came a goodly number of students and townspeople. The time came when added church facilities were needed, and various denominational bodies were appealed to for help. But it was found that there were not enough people of any other denomination to build and keep up a church. So it came about that the Congregational national officers suggested that the Congregational church withdraw from its denomination and form a union church, and then appeal to the various denominations to help in building a new church and paying the pastor's salary.

The four denominational bodies uniting in this practical church union program are the Michigan Congregational Conference, the Michigan Baptist Convention, the Michigan Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Synod of Michigan of the Presbyterian Church.

Each of these state bodies elects or appoints a member of the church as its representative on the board of trustees of the church, and the church members select six additional trustees, making a board of ten, which has in hand the business of the congregation.

A new church costing $200,000 will be built with contributions from the local field and a contribution of $25,000 from each of the four denominations. The pastor of this former Congregational Church is Rev. N. A. McCune, a Methodist minister, who is pastor not by the bishop's appointment but with his consent.

Dr. Smith points out that here is a case where the Congregational denomination did not give to this church when it was a Congregational church but that now when it has withdrawn from the denomination, the official leaders plan to give it thousands of dollars of denominational money. This new plan is expected to secure the united and enthusiastic support of the Congregationalists as well as that of the other denominations represented.

The Congregational Church Building Society has other interdenominational projects on hand for which appeals for money will be made. Among these are the two large church buildings for the Canal Zone, for the union churches at Balboa and at Cristobal. Both of these will be interdenominational. The American Church at Paris is another union church which the Congregational Board is helping to build.

These are but a few of the projects which this Board is undertaking and for these and other buildings both of church and parsonages the Society has given during the two years covered by this report the sum of $1,159,640. Much of this money will be repaid by the churches helped and when this is done the money will then be sent on its way again to help other churches.

Among the special features of the work of this society of far-reaching influence may be mentioned the special efforts being made in behalf of the Mexicans in the United States. In New Mexico, with more than half of its population Spanish speaking, the Society is aiding in the building of churches and parsonages, thus aiding much in Americanizing these people.

Among the Germans, Scandinavians, Finnish, and Slavic the society is helping to build churches, parsonages, and parish houses which will have wide-spreading influence in helping these people to understand American ways and ideals and to become better citizens.

In the cities on the Pacific Coast there is great need among the Oriental people. The society is helping to build union churches for the Chinese in San Francisco and for the Japanese in Los Angeles and in Salt Lake City. These churches not only help the peoples in their respective communities but the society, by helping in these enterprises, is also helping to create among these people both in America and also in the foreign countries better feeling towards America and all things American.

Other churches are being built for the Indians in North Dakota and in many other cities and rural sections the society is helping to build churches, parsonages, and parish houses.

In the two years and three months covered by this report, the society has assisted in building 262 church buildings and 80 parsonages. The gifts of the society have totaled $1,159,640, other expenses have totaled $170,000, and permanent funds have increased from $296,197.52 to $1,181,372.51.

Why Join the Church?

1. I ought to belong to the Church because I ought to be better than I am. Henry Ward Beecher once said, "The Church is not a gallery for the exhibition of eminent Christians, but a school for the education of the imperfect ones."

2. I ought to belong to the Church because of what I can give to it and do through it as well as because of what I may get out of it.

3. I ought to belong to the Church because of memories; memories of things I can never forget; memories of faces that will never fade; memories of vows that are the glory of youth.

4. I ought to belong to the Church because of hope; hope that lives when promises dead; hope that paves the way for progr hope that visions peace and social justice; h for time and hope for eternity.

5. I ought to belong to the church beca of the strong men in it who need re-enforc and the weak men in it who need encourag

6. I ought to belong to the Church, but until I am ready to use it and to let it me in its work of teaching the truth of and serving the needs of men.—From Calen of Center Church, Hartford, Ct.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Disappearing Tent

It came to pass as we journied that sojourned in the tents of Kedar. And eve morning the servants in the camp blew instruments of Discord and pounded on Pa and Pots and Basons and Marched arou the Jericho of our Habitations, and the Ca vas Walls of our abode fell down in ju thirty minutes after the first blast of t horn and bang of the pan. And if any la or gentleman had lingered in bed, and w not dressed, it did him or her no good shout in protest, for the morning toilet h to be finished in the open. And by the ti we were seated for our breakfast, we l held our Tents and our Beds and our Ba gage all loaded on Mules and Camels, a moving away we knew not whither. Neith did we see it as we rode, for often it we another way.

And we saw it not at noon, for we lunch in the shade of trees if there were trees, of walls where there were no trees, a sometimes we found the peaceful shadow a Great Rock in a weary land.

But late in the afternoon, as the sun w setting, we rounded a turn in the road, came to the top of an Hill, and there beheld our Tents. And inside of every se eral tent were the Beds and the Basons a the Baggage all set and in waiting. A believe me, it was a welcome sight. Neith did we ever behold it without a thrill.

Now I have lived for three-score years a changing world, and I know that here w have no continuing city. And I endeavo each day that I may nightly pitch my mo ing tent a day's march nearer Home. A I have seen much that I cared for that ha moved on and left me puzzled and bewi dered, and sometimes in tears.

But I know what another Traveler mea whose name was once Saul, who is als called Paul, when he said, We know that our earthly house of this tent wherein w have our mortal life were stricken dow and collapsed so that it seemed dissolved i nothingness, we have awaiting and prepare on us a Building of God, an House not mad by hands, in the place toward which w journey. Wherefore, I witness the movin forward of the things I love not witho some sorrow and concern, but without utte dismay. For some time, when the day i near its ending, and the sun is nigh unt its setting, I shall pass through a valle and around an hill, and I shall see the hom prepared for me; and not for me only, bu for all who have like precious faith.

Wherefore, comfort one another wit these words.

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council in October

High Spiritual Tone

o the Editor of The Congregationalist:

As a servant of the churches for more than years as a missionary, I am glad that some ve expressed the hope that the coming Coun- will have a high spiritual tone.

It is important that our work be done in a isinesslike way. But it is more important at we have the right business to do. Our urches as a whole are weak in two most portant things. One is the lack of personal nversational evangelism. The other is the ilure of parents to give their children reli- ous instruction and inspiration at home. If r Council succeeds in influencing our people do these things, that so many have been eglecting, new life and power will come into e churches.

Drs. Cadman and Sheldon and others, through e Christian Herald, have started a popular, ation-wide crusade of prayer and work for e things here suggested. It will be the salva- on of our country, and the way of deliverance om ominous social evils. Let the Council fall line. May the Holy Spirit guide us.

Elbowoods, N. D. C. L. Hall.

About Reorganization

The union of the Presbyterians and Congre- ationalists will be very desirable provided we an maintain the freedom of doctrine and the beral attitude toward fellowship that charac- erizes Congregationalism. The Presbyterians ave an excellent system, and could contribute uch in the line of organization, but we have e freedom in creed and doctrine that they eed. Probably they will have to fight to win e battle for freedom of faith, and we shall ave to be a bit more centralized before union an come.

I am heartily in favor of the union of all our issionary agencies into two boards. In fact, do not know but that one would be better, ut two is a great advance over the present ituation.

Along international lines I think we should eiterate our belief in America's speedy en- rance into the League of Nations and the World Court. Perhaps a definite statement on ur attitude towards the so-called Defense Day ould be well worth while. It is futile to pass rom the endorsement of one scheme for world eace to another until we have attained the rst desideratum, which is America's co-opera- ion with the world in the movements already n. America can furnish no leadership until he is willing to co-operate, and the churches ay as well say so.

Charles City, Ia. Walter M. Swan.

A Nomination for Moderator

Looking toward the nomination for Moderator f the National Council I would like to present he name of Mr. Frank W. Harwood of Apple- on, Wis. Mr. Harwood has been actively en- aged in our denominational programs and heir execution since early manhood. For forty ears he has been serving not only his own ity but the larger interests of the Kingdom. Congregationalism in Wisconsin and elsewhere s vastly richer because of his statesmanlike onsideration of questions relating to its growth. He is serene in judgment; a success- ul business man; certain in his grasp of the ssentials of the various movements both in our church and in the larger area beyond; an executive of high rank, and has been a member of various national committees from time to time. His wide circle of friends and acquaint- ances believe he would serve as Moderator of the National Council in a manner which would measure up to the high tradition of the minis- ters and laymen who have filled the office.

Champaign, Ill. Robert J. Locke.

Favors Merger

Who shall be the next Moderator of the National Council?

He should be a layman.

What about the representation of women in the Council and in our missionary associations?

Yes. I believe they should have full repre- sentation.

Should the Presbyterians and Congregation- alists unite?

Yes.

What should Congregationalists say on public questions? For example, social reform, inter- racial, international questions?

Should say very little till they know more, and are fully qualified to make statements.

How can the energies of our layman be more largely utilized?

By using them on committees, etc., as speakers, getting their opinions on floor of National Council.

Should there be but one Board of Foreign Missions?

Yes.

Should there be but one Home Board?

Yes.

Should the Foundation for Education be merged with the Education Society?

Yes.

Is there any reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not be administered by the same organization?

No.

Shall we lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects in the Apportion- ment by merging some of the societies?

No.

Should the "Missionary Herald" and the "American Missionary" be united into one mag- azine, or become a monthly edition of "The Congregationalist," or should all three con- tinue as at present?

First two—one, The Congregationalist—one.

Are we properly emphasizing or over-empha- sizing the State Conference in our present or- ganization?

It seems to be moving in the right direction.

Should each society approach the local church and the individual Congregationalist in the in- terest of its own receipts, or shall all commit the major portion of their cultivation of income to a common agency working in co-operation with the State Conference?

One common agency.

What should be the relation of the women's organizations to the general organizations of the church, locally, state-wide and nationally?

Through the church.

Kerrison Juniper.

St. Petersburg, Fla.

Oppose Merger

We think it would mean the direst calamity to the work to combine the three publications. Many take two but would not take the one higher priced.

We have always taken the Missionary Herald —our parents were under the American Board in India from 1839 to 1849—and we have always had the American Missionary, and feel both are needed. We are opposed to the merg- ing of the work of the A M. A. with any other board.

Mary A. French.
Elizabeth French Pierce.

Salem, Iowa.

The Call to Go Forward

It is with so much interest that I read what is being given in your paper as to changes being made in our benevolent societies that I am prompted to add a few words, though they may be of little worth.

My interest in the organizations mentioned is keen; and I would have each member of our churches eager to strengthen and extend their work.

Observation has shown that the various names of the organizations seem puzzles to many. In the auxiliary societies much time and zeal have been given to make the meaning plain of the C. C. B. S., W. B. F. M., etc. Then to hear in the corridor later, "I never can keep those names straight."

But they do know home and foreign mis- sions, so why not do away with the names that distinguish the objects of work? Ministers should instruct and members should learn the individuality of our missions—home and for- eign—and be made to realize the needs of the work and the responsibility of church members to pay the Apportionment.

While inspiration comes from reading and keeping in mind the achievements of the past, the call is to go forward and accomplish more work.

It was pleasing to see on the same page with Mr. Brownlee's recent article in behalf of re- taining the A. M. A., because of the wonderful things it has done, the quotation from Lowell:

New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient good uncouth:
They must upward still and onward
Who would keep abreast of truth.

Adjusting our machinery so that its manage- ment will not minimize the output seems of first importance. Fewer organizations and more concreteness of work will make better appeal to the supporters. In giving the needful attention to this readjustment there does not seem time to spend in discussion of alignment with other denominations, save in the work for humanity.

There is no record that our Master spent time talking about creation or ways of baptiz- ing. Why should we, when there are things to do that He commands?

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

"Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel."

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Following these commands: "Therefore if any man be in Christ he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are new"—and the rest of of Chapter 5, II Cor- inthians.

Marci Addie P. Farrington.

Washington, D. C.

The church's great duty is to exemplify in personal religion and in public righteousness the inevitable consequences of acceptance of and loyalty to the dynamic conceptions of the Christian faith. She can recognize no artificial division of the interests of life into sacred and secular.—William A. Harper.

Death of Dr. Frederick B. Bridgman

South Africa has lost a great friend, who loved her more than he loved his own life. In very deed he laid down his life for her. Such a friend was Frederick Brainerd Bridgman, who died at Portland, Me., after an operation for appendicitis, Sunday, Aug. 24.

A deep love for Africa was inbred in Dr. Bridgman. His father and mother were pioneer missionaries at Infumi in Southern Natal, when Frederick was born, May 18, 1869. Shortly after his birth, the family took up residence and work at Umzumbe, where the boy lived until he was twelve years old. At that time he was as fluent in the Zulu tongue as a native boy. For the next fifteen years he was away from home and parents with the exception of a brief visit to Africa.

Rev. Frederick B. Bridgman, D.D.

For four years he lived in New Britain, Ct., where the home of Mr. J. B. Smith was opened to him and to his sister (Mrs. Amy B. Cowles). There he received his public school education. In 1885 he went to Oberlin for college preparation and later his college course, graduating in 1893. He took his theological training at Chicago Seminary, graduating in 1896.

Then came the question of lifework, but it could hardly be called a question. His mind was made up as well as that of his fiancee, Miss Clara Stearns Davis, daughter of the Board's great missionary, Dr. J. D. Davis of Japan. "I believe," young Bridgman wrote, "my life will count most for Christ by going to the foreign field. I cannot conscientiously be a preacher of the Gospel and remain in this country unless providentially hindered from going abroad."

The Board, however, was hard pressed for funds and could not send the young people out that year, to their great disappointment. Mr. Bridgman then urged that permission be given him to go out and raise his own support. It was nearly a year before their going was authorized, the young theologian in the meantime having taken temporary charge of the church at Spring Valley, Wis. They were finally appointed in March, 1897, and the young couple sailed from New York for their beloved Africa in September of that year. It cannot be said that Fred Bridgman was sent; he was pulled back by an irresistible love for the people.

Entering into his labors first at Umzumbe, he was later stationed at Durban and at once threw his whole energy into the problem of reaching with the Gospel the tens of thousands of natives who had flocked to the city. He really was the first city missionary in Africa. There he worked out the problem of winning as many of the young men as possible, training the more promising ones as lay preachers whom he sent out on Sundays to preach the simple little Gospel sermon which he had taught them. During his activity there, he built a splendid church and five chapels.

Johannesburg, 500 miles away, was then coming into prominence through its discovery of the gold fields, and even greater masses of natives were being herded together there. Dr. Bridgman was sent to carry on the work there on a much larger scale, for 200,000 natives needed his wise and loving help. There he broadened his method of winning men through his social service vision. In bringing this vision to a reality, he has been ably assisted by Rev. Ray Phillips, who went to Johannesburg in 1918. By a far-reaching activity through motion pictures, stereopticon talks, supervised sports, and above all preaching, the epithet formerly applied to Johannesburg, "the university of crime," lost force. A fine church was built and also ten chapels, but of even greater note was the conversion of hundreds of young natives who, going back to their native kraals and villages, carried the Gospel. In Inhambane alone were found seventy centers of evangelism started by these young, eager converts to Christianity. This new field is a stern challenge which the American Board is most anxious to meet by sending a missionary there to put the work on a solid foundation.

Few missionaries have ever had such su backing by government officials and busi leaders as Dr. Bridgman. Tens of thous of dollars a year have been placed at his posal for the social service work at Johan burg. He was particularly happy in his ab to bring whites and blacks together for mu conference and good will. The Bantu M Social Center, so recently built and opened, this for its chief purpose.

During this furlough year it was a bitter appointment to Dr. Bridgman when he ordered by the physicians to desist from speaking. He did so long to present his sage and to secure new friends and suppor for the work. But a splendid philosophy patience stood by him.

Funeral services were held in the Aub dale, Mass., Church, Aug. 26, in charge of Howard A. Bridgman, D.D., who is a ative. Secretaries Patton and Riggs, and George A. Wilder of the South African Mis gave rich testimony to the rare qualities of and service which Dr. Bridgman so freely hibited, not only to Africa but to the King everywhere.

At the same hour a mass meeting was at Durban in memory of Dr. Bridgman, there was probably a like service held Johannesburg.

The body was cremated in accordance the wishes of Dr. Bridgman, in order that ashes might be taken back to his beloved Af and deposited in the sacred little spot at Ad where lie his father and mother.

One of the great missionaries of the pres day has passed on. C. E. W

Isles of Shoals Conference

The Best of the Ten

THE tenth conference of Congregationalists at the Isles of Shoals closed Aug. 24, after two weeks of delightful fellowship, instruction, and inspiration. Nature was in a kindly mood all through the session and at every opportunity the attendants at the conference were eagerly seeking boat trips with Oscar Leighton about the islands, or the rocks on the ocean side for musing and reading, or the spacious piazzas of the old hotel. "The best room in this place is out-of-doors" said more than one guest. The injunction of the Master to his disciples, "Come ye apart and rest awhile," is easy to obey literally at Star Island. Away from the road dust and fumes of hurrying motors, beyond the call of the telephone, this conference lives a quiet life in the midst of the sea and dreams dreams and sees visions.

An Excellent Program

But the program has never been apart, but has dealt always with problems of life and faith and with the wide task of the Christian Church. This year missionary problems were stressed during the first week. Professor Laura H. Wild, after a year of teaching at Ginling College in China and of intimate observation in much travel in the Orient, raised the question, "Have we a distinctive Christian Gospel?," and discussed it from various points of view—its teaching as compared with that of other religions, its ethics, its spiritual consciousness. Every one felt the shame of our Christian shortcomings as Dr. Wild described the reactions of Chinese Christian students as they came in contact with bitter sectarianism which had been transplanted from America to China, with the immorality of nominal Christians in port cities and elsewhere in the Orient, and with so much that is un-Christian in our c munity and school life in America. What h we to offer that is better than what they ready have? Miss Wild said that the 53d ch ter of Isaiah, which depicted service thro suffering, was nowhere matched in any ot religion. Jesus Christ is the most wonder being in all history in the way that he co bined the mystic sense of the presence of with the most practical ethics of daily life.

Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Eaton
As they were leaving Star Island

President George E. White of Anatolia C lege impressed all with his statesmanlike pre entation of the problems of Christian educati the Near East. Mr. Frank E. Bridgman, om his vantage point of many years' service the State House in Boston, led a series of nferences on Better Citizenship. Other eakers of the first week were Rev. Dorothy Robinson of Holyoke, who described her exriences in two fields in student summer serve; Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, who spoke on ractical steps towards peace; Dr. E. Victor Bigelow, who led the delegates about the island s he lectured on its geology, and Rev. John Reid, who preached the first Sunday on "The Old Fashioned Joy of Going to Meeting."

SEC. AND MRS. FAGLEY
With their children, Bobbie and Frances, at the Shoals landing.

The second week brought a change of program n the advent of two teachers from Yale Divinty School, Professors George Dahl and Charles A. Dinsmore. The Old Testament was the field n which both found their subjects. Professor Dahl lectured on the Prophets of Israel and the Modern Age, while Professor Dinsmore spoke n the literary qualities of the Old Testament. Rev. William E. Barton, D.D., gave two enteraining lectures on his trip around the world, while Dr. Frank Lincoln Moore gave two illustrated lectures on the Romance of Home Missions and Our Picturesque Southwest.

Many activities were carried on by the conference members throughout the two weeks. The women created the atmosphere of the home churches by conducting a fair, maintaining a home-made candy table, serving afternoon tea which this year became a popular feature.

BEST OF ALL

The attendance this year was the largest in the history of the Shoals meetings, and the general feeling was that it was the best of the ten conferences that have been held. Great credit is due to the officers for this achievement—Mrs. Eleanor Brooks Gulick of Wellesley, executive secretary, C. W. M. Blanchard, who looked after finances and saw to it that a comfortable balance remained after meeting all expenses, and the president, Dr. Edward D. Eaton, who constructed the program and led the conference with dignity and great personal charm. Dr. Eaton has consented to serve another year as president, and the other officers were all re-elected. The cheer with which so many sojourners at the Shoals have been sent off on the "Sightseer"—"Next year! Next year! Next year!" has been echoed in all hearts. The Shoals Conference has found itself. More than sixteen states were represented this year in its membership and there is reason to expect an even wider representation next year. J. R.

Wisconsin Conferences

This year was the fourth in Wisconsin's experience with young people's conferences. The first one at Green Lake in 1922 had 27 enrolled, in 1923 the registration was 78, in 1924, 113, and this year 154. In addition a conference for the northern part of the state was held this year at Northland College, Ashland, with a registration of 35. This was a most enthusiastic conference and the field promises to produce a registration twice as large next year. Both conferences were a wonderfully balanced combination of the serious and the humorous, the physical and the mental, the social and the spiritual, work and recreation, prayers and cheers, hymns and yells, and sermons and stunts—all had a place without any incongruity.

The equipment at Green Lake was greatly improved this year and yet the large delegation taxed the accommodations to the utmost. The faculty consisted of Rev. Howell D. Davies, Wauwatosa, teaching Bible and Congregational History; President Silas Evans and Supt. Theodore R. Faville, conference preachers; Secretary R. W. Gammon, Bible and Young People's Work; Rev. Grace E. Mayer-Oakes, Bible and Dramatics; Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Nolting, Foreign Missions; Rev. Harry E. Peabody, Bible; Miss Edith M. Town, Miss Bertha Wheelock, and Miss Mary B. Stevens, Teacher Training; Supt. John W. Wilson had charge of the Devotions and taught Home Missions; Rev. Mark G. Inghram was Leader of Song and Recreation, and Rev. Harry C. Kuhnert was Dean and counselor for the boys; Miss Julia Rockafellow was counselor for the girls, and Miss Mary Orbison was nurse. Dr. Peabody gave an address on "Evolution and the Scopes Trial." The young people chose Roger Ela, Dorothy Smith, and others to edit the daily paper known as the Green Lake Squawk. It was remarkably complete with editorials, ads, bed-time stories, continued stories, news, scandal, and joke sections. The young people put on an evening's program which was remarkable for the high grade talent presented.

The conference at Ashland received most generous hospitality from Northland College. President Brownell, Dean Hitchcock, and other college representatives not only gave themselves unreservedly to making the conference a success, but they also secured the cooperation from the city of Ashland which made possible afternoon trips that were a great delight to the young people. The conference preachers were President J. D. Brownell and Supt. T. R. Faville. Rev. F. W. Heberlein taught Home Missions, had charge of devotions, and was counselor for the boys; and Mrs. Paul Doescher of Chicago taught Dramatics, Foreign Missions, and was counselor for the girls. Rev. H. D. Davies taught Bible and Congregational history; Dr. R. W. Gammon, Bible and Young People's Work; Prof. E. E. Speicher, Bible; Prof. W. H. Walker taught two classes in Psychology and Pedagogy, and gave the Convocation Addresses; and Rev. C. W. Warren was Dean of the Conference. The conference was remarkable for the fact that not once during the week did any young person have to be reproved for failure of any sort. Dr. R. W. Gammon was director, and Miss Sallie A. McDermott, registrar of both conferences. The credit for the success of the conferences is due to the leadership of Dr. H. D. Davies and Rev. Harry Kuhnert, and to the fine attitude of the State Conference and the pastors of many of the co-operating churches. It may be necesssary to hold two conferences at Green Lake next year to accommodate all who wish to come.

Criticism or Praise?

By John Harrison Allen
Haverhill, Massachusetts

In one of our small, county-seat towns there is published a newspaper which is a model of neatness of typography and of artistic "make-up." It is all the more commendable because the work is done under the handicap of a small and somewhat antiquated equipment. One is surprised, indeed, to learn that the owner and publisher of this attractive weekly was for some years a "tramp" printer and a finished failure at his trade.

"Sickness and adversity caused a nervous disorder," says the newspaper man. "Only the man who has been through such an experience can fully understand. My nervous condition caused me to blunder several times. The foreman of the shop upbraided me before all the workers and threatened dismissal. My shaking hands after that spoiled almost every stick of type that I set. And in a few days I was 'on the street' looking for a new place.

"That winter I found and lost positions in every print shop in that city. Nerves, every time. Then, against my natural inclination, I took to the road, a tramp printer. A week or perhaps several weeks or at most two months in each town and then move on—discouraged and broken. So it went for almost ten years.

"Then, happily, I came to a town where the owner of the printing office was different. Other men had pounced upon me at the first mistake, so that I had lived under a nervous fear. This man was patient. On my second day I apologized for an error in a store ad. He replied that he, too, made mistakes.

"One morning this unusual man stopped beside me and remarked that I was the best grammarian and speller he had ever had in the shop. This was the first morsel of praise I had had in years. Words can hardly describe the effect on me. His commendation was like strong medicine. How it steadied my nerves. My work that day showed great improvement and my employer commented on the fact. Soon I began to lose my haunting fear of going wrong. For years, you see, I had lived under a perfect nightmare of fear, the dread that I would make mistakes—that I was destined for failure. But in this shop fear let go its hold. My work improved every day. Today I own my own paper and it is praised by larger newspapers as one of the most attractive, small-town weeklies in the country. My boss 'bragged on me' and that was the turning point in life."

To Study Africa

Dean E. W. Capen of the Kennedy School of Misions in the Hartford Seminary Foundation announces a special intensive course on Africa to be held in the School in Hartford, Oct. 1 to Dec. 22, 1925. The lecturers will include Prof. D. Westermann of the University of Berlin, an authority on African linguistics and anthropology, and Dr. J. H. Oldham, Secretary of the International Missionary Council and Editor of the International Review of Missions, will lecture on the relations of missions to government. There will be lectures also by Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, Educational Director of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, Dr. H. L. Shantz of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. J. H. Dillard, President of the Jeanes and Slater Funds. Rev. Thomas S. Donohugh of the Methodist Board, Dr. P. H. J. Lerrigo of the Baptist Board, and Rev. E. W. Riggs of the American Board, who have recently investigated conditions in Africa, will report their conclusions.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

"Alway, Alway Something Sings"

Before light this morning the sweet patter of raindrops spoke to my waking ear. Another morning when I woke it was the bluebirds filling the sunshine with their bursting, bubbling song that I heard. At such sounds, and when my ear catches the trilling of the young hylas at night, or the buoyant call of a neighbor cock, I rejoice that the music of life is not shut within close bounds.

When trained artists draw immortal strains from tense catgut, from quivering reeds, from twisted tubes of brass, from taut sheepskin, I receive an ecstatic pain of pleasure that makes me clench my fingers suddenly and breathe in shuddering gasps. But sitting here in my cabin I find that the wind makes music as it hurries down the mountain's side, and that the swift wings of a humming-bird among my blossoms, the home-call of the cows when the day begins to wane, the rustling of the dried leaves in the autumn, the distant sputtering of a useful little engine, the crunching of boots in the winter snow, all make music for my ear. And always, in sunshine and in storm, not in summer alone but also when the frost binds our intervale in a hard grip and the snow is four feet deep, the mountain brook, tumbling its way out from mysterious solitudes into the companionship and service of man, gurgles and ripples and trills, and weaves a marvelous polyphony of sweetest overtones upon the constant undertone of its deep, rich fundamental. Sung to the Creator by one of the loveliest of his creatures, the canticle of the brook ceases not day nor night. In the dead of darkness, when I wake from sleep, it is still there, a note of joy.

If you separate yourself from the world and enter the forest alone, you find in the solemn depths small sounds that are dulcet to the ear, —little rustlings, little twitterings and chatterings. But the evensong of a hermit thrush from some tree cathedral in the forest is by no means out of keeping with the gamut of the useful buzz-saw, and I love the song of a mowing machine at work in the June timothy and redtop, and listen with pleasure to the mellow calls of the farmer to his horses.

There are men whose endowments and opportunities enable them to make little music but this music of labor; but it is no little thing when it can be said of a man that

His song was only living aloud,
His work, a singing with his hands.

In the hurtling noises of a great city, it is not so easy to feel the presence of music. Man in his unconcern has permitted fierce ugliness to develop in connection with his many inventions. Even the hurdy-gurdy is become more blatant and less musical as the barrage of noise with which it has to compete has continually increased. Yet—listen to that same city at midnight. Set yourself on a hill, and give ear to the life vibrant below you. A marvel! The noise is now a music. And who, having once remarked it, can forget the sonorousness of London when that everlasting roar is softened to its least? Even at this distance it throbs in the ear—deep, ceaseless, an awful compound of business and pleasure, restlessness and repose, peace and anguish, sorrow and joy, weakness and strength, great despairs and great longings, great sins and great faiths. And over all that organ-point melodies are played by the chimes in their steeples, and the deep, solemn voice of Big Ben calls to the city to think of time and eternity and God.

Closet and Altar

OVERCOMERS

This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.—I John 5: 4.

Every temptation is to be conquered. I want you to believe this, joyfully and gladly to believe it. It is the condition of victory. You can do nothing while you despair. Before any man can achieve a triumph, he must believe in its possibility. But all things are possible to him that believeth.—J. D. Jones.

Difficulties make men of us. Summer sailors, yachting in smooth water, have neither the joy of conflict nor the vigor which it gives. Better the darkness, where we cannot see our way, and the wind in our faces, if the good of things is to be estimated by their powers to "strengthen us with strength in our soul!"—Alexander Maclaren.

Athletes that know their proven strength,
Ships that have shamed the hurricane:
These are my brothers, and at length
I shall come back to joy again.
However hard my life shall be
I know it shall not conquer me.

Aline Kilmer, abr.

He who does not do his duty in this world will never do his duty in any world. He who does not do his duty to his brother will never do his duty to his God. I am bound to put my whole strength and energy and wisdom into my business. To be lackadaisical, half-hearted, so taken up with things above as to be slipshod in my dealings with things below, is neither to serve God nor man; neither to serve this world nor the next. Because I am a Christian I am bound to be earnest and indeed enthusiastic in all that makes for the welfare of the place in which I live, and of the people about me, and of the nation to which I belong. He will never do his duty as a Christian who does not do his duty as a citizen. I am unworthy of my liberties unless I seek to extend to others the good that has been conferred upon me. Surely there is nothing more cowardly than that which seems to say: "This is the victory that overcometh the world, to run away from it!"—Mark Guy Pearse.

Notice in the first place that it is possible to be a Christian anywhere. Pergamos was the place where Satan's seat was: and yet even in that city there was a Christian church concerning many of whose members the Lord could say that "they had held fast to his name, and had not denied his faith." Christianity is not a thing of locality, but of character.—William M. Taylor.

I beseech Thee, my most gracious God, perserve me from the cares of this life, lest I should be too much entangled therein; also from the many necessities of the body, lest I should be ensnared by pleasure; and from whatsoever is an obstacle to the soul, lest, being broken with troubles, I should be overthrown. Give me strength to resist, patience to endure, and constancy to persevere.—Amen.

Thomas à Kempis.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

The World's Best Known Praye

A Variation from the Usual Comment

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

I have just returned from four fast-fly weeks in England, Scotland, Normandy, Brittany. Everywhere one meets evidences places for prayer. It may be in majestic cat drals like St. Paul's, London, splendid old Y cathedral, or that at Peterborough, or We minster Abbey, or Notre Dame in Paris. centuries in these great temples the lips h been legion which have spoken these wor "Our Father."

In the midst of one of London's busi streets, the Strand, one sees two little st churches, St. Mary's and St. Clement Dan The former is on the site where a chu stood in 1135, of which Thomas à Becket w rector. Through all these centuries in th little shrines, kings, queens, lords, and ladi and thousands of ordinary souls have used words of this prayer.

In the grim old Tower of London, the sce of more cruelty, probably, than any other pla in England, where Mary Queen of Scots w beheaded, where two young princes were m dered, one is taken into a dingy little chap St. John's, the oldest church in London. Thi of the comfort poor souls found there duri those dark days with the words of this simp prayer upon their lips.

In the charming little villages always co spicuous are the solid little stone church where the simple people for five or six hu dred years have found their inspiration in t words of this age-old prayer. At Stratford, o must not miss the little church, whose age ru back to the 13th century. There, where he no lies buried, Shakespeare joined with others the use of this prayer. At Stoke Poges, whe Gray caught the inspiration of The Elegy Wr ten in a Country Churchyard, there he, fro his youth up, joined with others in the use this prayer we love to use.

One ran across the ruins of beautiful old a beys like those at Melrose, and Holyrood Edinburgh. Though now only grim walls r main, they, too, in centuries gone by, heard th chanting of these words. And in the old monas teries, only the bare outlines of whose found tion are now to be seen, this prayer was up the lips of those old saints as they wandere about in their gray or brown or black robe

And then the picturesque old castles numerous in Scotland, perched on some com manding, rocky eminence, all had their chape where knights and ladies and kings and queen repeated the words so well known to us. recall going out to the ruins of Brougham Castle at Penrith near the Scottish border, wit a group of young people. It was half past te at night, and in the fading light of the lon day we poked around the haunted (?) ruin There we found the little chapel. Little wa left, but yet enough to realize where the alta stood, and where the same beloved prayer wa said in times of warfare and peace. In Edin burgh Castle, grim old reminder of tempestu ous days in Scottish history, there still stand a tiny little chapel of St. Margaret, built i the old Norman days. There in that ding little place of worship, hardly more than te by fifteen feet, Malcolm Canmore's saintl queen found solace in the words of this prayer

In Brittany, with its charming little hamlets there is always most conspicuous the church usually a gem of architecture. In them th simple Bretons for centuries have said thei Pater Nosters. Tucked away in the woods and on the hills one is continually running acros

(Continued on next page)

he Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul in Thessalonica and Berea

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 13
Acts 17: 1-12

People who think that the chief thing in life to avoid trouble ought to beware of Christ nity, or at least of the sort of Christianity t Paul had. The synagogue seemed to be most dangerous place that there was for ul. The record of his missionary journeys nuch the same from place to place in telling v Paul went to the synagogue on the Sabh; how at first he was listened to with erest, but how quickly as the novelty of his ching was discovered, bigotry and prejudice, using to reason and argue, drove him forth, some instances embroiling him with the civil horities.

Paul had just come from prison after such experience, but fresh from Philippi he purs the same course at Thessalonica. Why? cause if the synagogue was the place of ger, it was likewise the place of opportun-

A few real converts meant a great deal e to Paul than danger and suffering for self. Here in Thessalonica he succeeds in cussing the Messiahship of Jesus on three secutive Sabbaths before trouble becomes te. Then opposition becomes so violent that ul has to escape.

Note how bigotry and narrow prejudice al-ys play the same game from age to age. The s of truth and progress, whose zeal is blinded ignorance and prejudice, are unscrupulous. ything is welcome that may help to defeat edom in thought and the quest of truth. So e Paul's foes made use of "lewd fellows of baser sort." Also, as patriotism, the high-virtue of the saint whose religion inspires noblest citizenship, is likewise, as Dr. John-described it, "the last refuge of the scoun-l," the enemies of Paul, when they could meet his arguments, charged him with dis-alty. It were well if the people in modern erica who are too ready to call "Red" and olshevist" at every idealist might take to rt this lesson. This was exactly the sort of ng from which Paul suffered. The accusa-n against Jason was that he had harbored se who taught that "there was another king, Jesus."

Good men suffered from these foul tactics g ago, just as they are made to suffer to-. Paul had to leave Thessalonica. But his ng driven out could not affect his ministry. went on to Berea, accompanied by Silas. l here, again, they sought the danger-point opportunity—the synagogue. The Jews of ea were more noble than those of Thessa-ica. Many converts were made, of Jews, of "honorable women," and men, who were eks. The story of what was being done ched Thessalonica and Paul's old foes came Berea and stirred up trouble, so that Paul t on to Athens, leaving Silas and Timothy ind. But the seed had been sown in good und. Berea has become a symbol for in-est in Christian truth.

Christian Endeavor

(Continued from preceding page)

in little stone chapels, where these most reli-us folk have been wont to withdraw and offer this little prayer. On the little island of d rock, Mont St. Michel in Normandy, at very top stands a beautiful chapel on the of an abbey at least 1,100 years old, nded probably by monks from Ireland. Here ough all these ages the words of this prayer, ether in Latin or in French, have been on ips of those who have worshiped there.

On the highways, at the juncture of the roads, sometimes in front of the old churches, stand crosses with figures of the Christ upon them. They were erected that the people might continually be reminded of Him who gave this prayer to the world, and in front of them the simple peasant finds the deepest satisfaction of his soul in these old words.

It is truly wonderful to realize how this prayer the world knows best has been spoken aloud and repeated in silence, in these age-old places,—in stately cathedrals, within grim castle walls, in remote chapels, and by the wayside. The world could not have been what it is today without this little prayer so simple, so complete, that the Master first taught his disciples nineteen centuries ago.

Congregational Churches and the Prayer Meeting

By Henry A. Stimson, D.D.

I have a pretty clear conviction that the vigor and the permanency of our Congregational churches depend upon the weekly prayer meeting. Historically our churches in village and city have been made by their pastors. Every New England church of any age cherishes the tradition of its noted ministers. They were the leading men in the community and their sermons were the intellectual stimulant as well as the spiritual food of their hearers. Senator Hoar once said to me as we walked together in Worcester: "The story has never been written of the debt of the New England Bar to the country ministers. Our best lawyers have most of them come from the country, and it was the home pastor who made them the men they are."

To show the character of his preaching this story used to be told of Dr. Emmons. As he stood at his gate one Monday morning a villager hurried to meet him. "Dr. Emmons," he said, "you contradicted yourself yesterday! You said so and so, and last Sunday you said the opposite. How do you reconcile it?"

"What have I to do with last Sunday?" was the quick reply. "Reconcile it yourself!" And he turned back to his house. The story is quite as valuable in that it shows he had about him men who took note of what he preached and thought, and talked about it through the week.

I know perfectly the limitations of the old-time prayer meeting, for it seems to have largely passed away. I have "borne" with many things "gladly." When I have ventured to speak to a very good man about his taking up so much of the time, I have been answered, "Oh, somebody has been talking to you. Don't mind them. I could tell you what they say about you but I don't pay attention to them."

"Nevertheless!"—If I may resort to Mr. Beecher's single remark in the prayer meeting after some not dissimilar occurrence—when with grateful heart a minister considers the help he had from the sweet-spirited, warm-hearted, earnest Christian men in his church, respected and honored of all who knew their Bibles, had acquired the gift of prayer and who "spoke in meeting," he cannot but feel concern for our churches if no public use is made of such men. If, according to the prophet, a "book of remembrance was written of them who feared the Lord and spake often one to another," there must be something of permanent value in the habit. There will to all appearance soon be more of it for the Lord to "hearken and hear."

Our Congregational system has always been representative of that democracy which the world is supposed to need. It was never so definitely on trial as it is today. A world untrained for democracy is going either to accept and fit itself for it, or to reject it altogether. Public opinion is made today the supreme if not the final authority. And public opinion, unless the public is trained in the exercise of public responsibility, is only the passing impulse of the mob.

Our churches are committed to the form, at least, of democracy. If their "public" is not trained to both the worth and the value of "opinion," the churches themselves will tend to fall into the hands of irresponsible and autocratic men. Exceptional circumstances, very able preachers, large endowments, change in the environment, may prevent this but it becomes merely a question of time. The "congregational" element vanishes.

I may be mistaken. I am aware that I belong to a day that is gone. But I am very conscious of the power that was introduced into Methodism at the beginning by the testimony meeting. It certainly has justified itself. Christian Science shows its wisdom in the large place given to testimony which crowds its mid-week meetings.

I am well aware of the burden of mere "talk." I have suffered, and I also have had my rebuke, but my memory dwells on the many thrills I have had when the prayer, the testimony, the confession, the quiet, enlightening, heart-felt word has come from the floor, which has troubled my heart and reached every heart in the room. It made, if not holy ground, a meeting not to be forgotten. The presence of the Holy Spirit in the hearts and lives of the people and manifest in the words of men whose lives are in accord is, of course, the only source of life in a church. But the presence of Christ himself is quite as often felt in the place of prayer and the voices of his people as it ever is in the church.

Christian Endeavor has done much to keep the young people in the way of this experience, but unless I am greatly mistaken there is real danger of our churches losing the support it should have from them, and fast coming to have a generation of new members who know nothing of the practice or the privilege of prayer and speech in the assembly of their fellows. The midweek sermon or lecture of the pastor, valuable as it may be in its way, cannot make up for the loss; and the superior attitude of older members in their preference for this other form of meeting, may not be altogether wise. It certainly is proving costly in a way not appreciated by the church.

Journeying

By Madella Mackenzie

In the backyard of a city street
All day in my hammock I lie.
Unable to roam—away I go,
For I have from earth to the sky.

The Monarch, Mimic, the Swallowtail,
Flutter by on beauteous wing;
And what prima donna can I miss
When I hear the oriole sing!

The dragon-fly darting in and out
(Once a grub in the pond you lay)
What preacher of fame can better tell
The glad story of Easter Day!

I watch the sun as he goes to rest
Beyond purple and golden bars.
And night pulling down her curtains gray
To sprinkle them over with stars.

Why should I mourn though bound to my home,
All day in my hammock must lie;
Does God give more to mortals who roam,
Than I have from earth to the sky?

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Church, Pulpit and Parish

THE CHURCH OF THE SPIRIT, by FRANCIS GREENWOOD PEABODY (Macmillan. $2.00). This "brief survey of the spiritual tradition in Christianity" completes the series of studies concerning the teaching of the New Testament and its applicability to modern life begun in Professor Peabody's well-known book, Jesus Christ and the Social Question, and continued in The Apostle Paul and the Modern World. In the present volume Professor Peabody has set out to answer the question: What kind of church will represent a spiritual Christianity? He brings to his task two deep and essential qualifications, viz., a sympathetic spirit in relation to the expressions of "authoritative" Christianity in the historic church, and an uncompromising spirit of constructive criticism in defining wherein such historic Christianity has departed from the Christianity of the spirit. The book seems to us particularly fine in its definitions and discussions of liberal Christianity, and in its criticisms and constructive suggestions in the matter of Christian unity. Professor Peabody's discussions will do much to confirm the faith of those who believe that present-day movements for Christian unity move entirely too much in the realm of organization and authority and too little in the realm of the spirit—the only realm in which there can ever be that vital Christian unity in which freedom and variety of experience and expression are as essential and inevitable as a common element in life and faith. The Congregationalist strongly commends Professor Peabody's new volume. We hope that it may be possible to discuss editorially some of its most distinctive contributions to present-day thought.

IN PULPIT AND PARISH, by NATHANIEL J. BURTON (Macmillan. $1.75). This volume is a reprint of the Yale Lectures on Preaching for 1883-84, with eight additional lectures. Probably we cannot do greater justice to Dr. Burton's volume than to quote the high tribute of a Yale lecturer whose own volume in this series occupies a high place. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson wrote the publishers regarding this book:

> I am glad you are reprinting Nathaniel J. Burton's Lectures on Preaching. I have always considered his lectures one of the very best courses in the entire Lyman Beecher's series. I was fortunate enough to come upon these Burton Lectures near the beginning of my ministry, and they left a mark on me which abides to this day. One cannot read them and ever forget them. They were juicy when they were delivered, and at the end of forty years they are juicy still.

The practice of republishing notable religious books is one that we hope publishers may find rewarding. Successful novels are always available in later, and often cheaper editions, but it is sad to think of the number of religious books of a quality that ought to have made them available for all time that are now "out of print," and accessible only in scattered libraries, or by chance, and at high cost.

THE STORY OF THE CHURCH, by CHARLES M. JACOBS (United Lutheran Publication House. $2.00). An outline in simple presentation, adapted to the ordinary reader, of the history of the church from the end of the first century to the end of the nineteenth. The author's purpose has been to provide "a volume of small compass, that will lay especial stress upon the continuity of that stream of life which has flowed down through the centuries from Jesus Christ." Such a task is not small either in nature or extent, but Dr. Jacobs has utilized his 400 pages with good effect.

Psychology, Child Training, and Religion

PRACTICAL PSYCHOLOGY, by BURT BYRON FARNSWORTH (George Sully & Co. $2.50). Professor Farnsworth is head of the Department of Psychology and Religious Education in the International Y. M. C. A. College, at Springfield, Mass. In this volume, which is well adapted to average readers who desire a clear, intelligible statement of the main lines of psychology, he has brought together the substance of lectures delivered in years of teaching. The book is devoted to "men and women in the industries and professions" and presupposes no previous knowledge of the subject. It is essentially a practical volume intended to reveal to the reader the nature and meaning of mental processes and the "how" and "why" of character development. Edward W. Bok, in highly commending Professor Farnsworth's volume for its ability to lead people at large to a better understanding of themselves, says: "I like, particularly, the stress which Mr. Farnsworth lays on the importance of a thoroughness before speed and accuracy before skill. Here he puts his finger on what is, if there be such a thing, the secret of success."

PSYCHOLOGY OF LEADERSHIP, by HENRY EDWARD TRALLE (Century. $1.75). Dr. Tralle, who is also a leader in religious education, devotes his volume, like that of Professor Farnsworth, to the practical aspects of psychology, concentrating upon the conditions and personal aspects of leadership. His book is well adapted for young people who have ambition to make the most of their lives. It is based upon solid knowledge of the well-established conclusions of psychology—an important factor at a time when this field of study is being so largely exploited by dogmatic, but untested, theories. The book is helpful for its practical suggestions and illustrations, and though itself popular and non-academic in form and treatment, the bibliographical notes at the conclusion of each chapter indicate the academic sources of material for further study as well as the best general literature relating to the theme.

PSYCHOLOGY FOR CHILD TRAINING, by ARLAND D. WEEKS (Appleton. $2.75). The author of this book is Dean of the School of Education in the North Dakota Agricultural College. His aim is to present in a comprehensive and comprehensible way the specific knowledge that has been attained regarding the psychology of childhood, and to suggest the uses and implications of this knowledge for the development of the best possible methods of child-training. The book is based upon stated principles of psychology, but is practical rather than theoretical in its treatment. The exercises at the close of each chapter help to enforce its teachings and the bibliographical references are full and competent. The first part of the volume deals principally with instincts, there is an interesting survey of methods of child training, historically considered, and the latter part deals with the actual problems of training and development.

WHOLESOME CHILDHOOD, by ERNEST R. GROVES and GLADYS HOAGLAND GROVES (Houghton Mifflin. $1.75). In the same field of the practical psychology of child-traini this volume written by parents, for pa Professor Groves is Professor of Social Se at Boston University and is well-known fo books on social subjects. This volume has written by the authors out of wide exper both in their own home and out of the co which they have been asked to give by parents who have presented their problems. method of the book is notable. It deals successive periods in chapters as follows The Foundation Period: First Six Mo II. The Period of Discovery: Six Month One Year. III. The Period of Achievem One Year to Two Years. IV. The Perio Contacts: Two Years to Three Years. V. Period of Self-Discipline: Three Years to Years. VI. The Period of School Advent Six Years to Ten Years. VII. The Perio Stress: Ten Years to Fourteen Years. parents dealing with children in any or a these periods will find here valuable suggesti

SCHOOL AND HOME, by ANGELO PATRI (pleton. $1.50). A special, but exceedingly portant, phase of child training—that of relationship between home and school in educational development of the young—is treated by one who is not only recognized foremost authority, but who is also ackn edged as a master of common sense and judgment. Angelo Patri's syndicated arti in the daily press have been a notable contr tion to child training and have made hi national figure of great interest. In this ume he discusses such questions as w parents can do to make sure that their c dren's education is effective, what parents' sociations and "home school" associations do to improve conditions, and what may be d generally through appreciating and apply sound principles of child training. The aut has the knack of expressing wisdom in cle interesting, and unmistakable ways.

RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE, by R. H. FIS (Doran. $2.25). This volume, which con tuted the Baird Lectures for 1924, we unh tatingly pronounce of outstanding importan Few recent books make as interesting readi and it strikes right into the heart of the wh subject of the psychology of the religious li Moreover it is a challenging volume in wh many present-day psychological conclusions the field of religious education are submitted rigid, and as many will think, very effecti criticism. It is a volume which, if read at widely in America, is likely to serve as a c rective to the hastiness with which assum tions, now almost recognized as laws, have be made upon an entirely inadequate bas Broadly speaking, it is a plain, straight, whol some appeal to common sense in the discussio and evaluation of religious experience, by man who knows the scholarly backgrounds his subject, but who is not carried away what he himself calls "the grotesqueness much of the explanations of mental facts by th 'New Psychology.'" The careful student wi not neglect whatever light psycho-analysis ha to throw upon experience in general and upo religious experience in particular, but it is relief to find a volume which is not itself "ob sessed" with the terminology and ideas Freudianism and behaviorism, and that doe not regard all of life as explained by "obse sions," "inhibitions," and subconscious fac and processes.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Saturday Night Suppers

By Rose Brooks

was the custom, in Bradley Burns' neighood, for the boys to be asked to one anr's houses for Saturday suppers, when s were sure to be plentiful. One Saturday ning, Bradley's mother, baking cookies and s in her white kitchen, happened to think it t be Bradley's turn to ask boys to supper. ing him, she said, "We'd better have one wo boys to supper tonight, Bradley. You've out to supper two or three times since e had any one here. Whom shall we ask?" Well," wavered Bradley, for it was exely hard to choose among his many chums, ll, whom do you think?"

amiliar voices warned that the neighbor- boys were approaching, and looking out, her saw the whole clan, making their noisy with the ball, bat, and catcher's mitt, to baseball field at the end of the street. "Oh, !" she called, and instantly nine small boys mbled over the wall and swarmed up the steps, sniffing expectantly.

other distributed a handful of warm cookies the accompaniment of loud and joyous ks, and said, "Bradley would like to have of you boys come to supper tonight. I der which two we'd better have." Neighood affairs were always conducted with t impartiality and candor. Looking over upturned faces, she went on reflectively, think it will be Bob and Tom,—the two r ones from two families. Come at six."

ob and Tom had each a younger brother; before accepting, Bob said to the smaller , "Do you mind? It's fair, you know."

t's fair if we come next time," agreed the ller brothers.

Mrs. Burns," said Tom judicially, "are you g to ask Billy and Jack next time?"

Next time," promised Mother, liking the it of the older boys, but smiling inwardly he discussion.

Next Saturday?" asked Billy gravely, be- giving final permission to his favored older her.

I can't promise it will be next Saturday," Mother, grave as he, "but I promise you will be the next to be invited. You know n't ask you all four at once, because our fashioned table isn't as large as it ought e."

It would take lots of beans, too," remarked practical member of the assembly.

All right," agreed Billy and Jack. "Go ad, we don't mind." And off they all tered.

Wouldn't it be a delicious world if grown- were as frank!" chuckled Mother, as she ed back to her baking.

harp at six, she went to the front door and g the old brass Swiss cow bell,—Bradley's mons for home-coming. Promptly three s appeared, Bradley visibly important as t.

Hello, boys!" greeted Mr. Burns pleasantly. ady for beans?" No sooner were all seated n tongues were loosed. No restraint nor hfulness, and conversation flowed steadily into unexpected channels.

Know that big balloon in on the Common," an Bob. "Was that a war balloon, Mr. ns? Well, I didn't think it was, really, but there was a scout inside that roped-off place and he said it was a captive b'loon." Stopping to take a mouthful of beans, he lost his audience, and Tom, fidgeting for his chance, broke in.

"Chairs creak in the daytime same's they do at night, wicker chairs, you know, only in the daytime there're lots of other noises and you don't notice 'em much." Tom, unwarily abandoning his topic to drink his cocoa, was routed from the field.

"Are there any savages any more, Mother?" Bradley was agog with interest. "Real ones, I mean. There's a story about a man who went up a river in Africa and—"

"Have you got to Africa in your geography?" interrupted Tom. "What's the biggest river in it?" That question having been successfully disposed of, the usuual and nerve-racking naming of state capitals began. Mr. Burns sighed with relief and Mother fled to the kitchen for fresh supplies when the ordeal was over.

"I love cocoa," said Tom, as his cup was filled, in a tone that would certainly never lead one to suspect that he had it with great frequency at home. "You don't know where cocoa comes from," he turned to the boys.

"I do, too!" Bradley assured him. "They make it out of palm trees!"

"Palms!" jeered the other two, with no idea of sparing his feelings. "It's beans! Not like these beans, though,—big, long, brown pods that smell good."

"Vanilla beans," said Mother,—her first word in the flying conversation. Father had remained entirely dumb.

"But there is something to eat, and you like it, that does come from the inside of palms. Begins with s."

"S, s," repeated the boys, eager for any game. But after many wrong guesses they had to be told.

"Sago," said Mother. "About the same as tapioca."

And so it went till the last mouthful of Spanish cream and the last cookie crumb had vanished.

"Now go and have your game of parchesi while I clear up."

Three small boys stretched themselves comfortably on their stomachs around the open board and the game was played fast and furiously, all rights preserved, no favors shown!

"Listen to them!" said Mother in the kitchen. "I'd be aghast if I hadn't heard it so often. You'd think they were deadly enemies, wouldn't you?"

"Been through it myself, as well as hearing those youngsters," chuckled Father. "Not as hard to entertain as some guests of maturer years at our board?" he questioned gravely.

"Hardly! And aren't they fun! I feel as if I'd been whizzed through space at ninety miles an hour. Savages, balloons, my goodness, what don't they talk about?"

"There didn't seem a dearth of topics," agreed Father.

"I can't imagine, any more, living in a house that didn't have a procession of boys trapsing through it, can you?"

"Wouldn't want to," admitted Father, remembering how horribly still the house always seemed when Bradley was out of it even for a day. "Hear them squabble!"

The telephone rang. "Yes," answered Mother. "Yes, I'll send him right along. He is a little late because the parchesi game was long. Oh, we always enjoy having them."

"Your mother, Tom. She wants you to start along."

"I'll go, too," said Bob. At the door they paused and Bob was spokesman for both.

"We've had a fine time," he said, and meant it every word.

"You won't forget it's Jack's and Billy's turn next?" Tom ran back to ask.

"I'll not forget," and from the door Mother

THE OLD SWIMMING HOLE

saw each little figure trudge obediently straight for home.

"Now Bradley, skip for bed. Yes, I'll come up when you call you're in."

"Appreciative guests," remarked Father from behind his newspaper. "You don't seem as tired as after some of our dinner parties."

"Wouldn't it be jolly if grown-ups could stay that way? I am glad we know lots of boys! It certainly was a locust party,—not one crumb of one thing left!"

(All rights reserved)

Our Readers' Forum

A Word to Ministers

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Is it not true in many instances that the committal service at the grave of our dear ones has little of comfort in it, and tears our bleeding hearts as the funeral service does not do?

May one reason be that, during the preceding funeral address, Scripture reading, prayer, and even singing, our thoughts have been constantly turned toward heaven with all its beauties and restful delights, in connection with the member of our family just lost to us, while now, as we stand around the new grave with breaking hearts, the words of the committal service—"Dust to dust, ashes to ashes"—as a lump of earth is thrown within, bring our heavenly thoughts down to earth with a shudder, and we go away with a heavy sense of having left our dear one in the cold ground? O ministers of the Gospel, if instead of repeating those customary words you would only quote: "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." Then would we leave the fresh grave feeling our loved one is not there, but is experiencing those things eye hath not seen nor ear heard.

CLARA HAMILTON REED.

Brookfield, Mass.

"And Thy Neighbor as Thyself"

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

The deepest reason for sustaining prohibition seldom appears in discussion. When a city compels obedience to the traffic officer, no serious objection is raised against this interference with personal liberty. The wisdom of such ordinances as are needed to protect human life is generally conceded. It is true that some eccentric individuals wish to risk their lives in violating these regulations. It is also true that certain persons wish to jeopardize their own safety and that of others by drinking or selling liquor in violation of law. The cases seem fairly parallel. If we support laws to guard human life in the one case, why not in the other?

If a man thinks the habit of drinking liquor will injure him directly, he may approve the law as tending to his own advantage. Many who drink do not believe themselves to be in danger from the habit, and to be deprived of their pleasure for the sake of others seems to them unjust.

But it must be remembered that drunkards are made from moderate drinkers, not from abstainers. A temperance lecturer once received an urgent summons to a home of wealth and luxury. There the mother showed her young son, physically a fine speciman of manhood, lying in a drunken stupor, a habitual drunkard. In a city filled with open saloons such a case was hopeless. The tragic end came soon. I once heard a physician describe cases under his care in a state asylum for inebriates, now closed, basing his accounts partly on observation, partly on the words of the men themselves. After the stories of suffering and crime his frequent comment was, "That man had no idea of becoming a drunkard. He began with his glass of beer." Those moderate drinkers who look at prohibition merely as it affects themselves should remember such instances.

However, there is another point of view, and it concerns those who will probably escape serious results from their habit of drinking liquor, though of that no one can be sure. A minister gave as his reason for coming over to the ranks of abstainers, his unwillingness to retain a custom that brought misery to so many. That is the attitude of the gentleman, whose life is a succession of uncompelled acts suggested by his code. It is the spirit which says, "If meat causeth my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh forevermore, that I cause not my brother to stumble." It is the spirit that prevailed on the Titanic, when the strong gave up all, that the weak might live.

FANNY COMSTOCK.

Worcester, Mass.

Dr. F. B. Bridgman's Last Letter

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Your issue of Aug. 13 contains an article describing the use of motion pictures by American Board missionaries in Johannesburg. While appreciating what was said, yet there were inadvertently one or two misstatements which require correction. To any one acquainted with the attempted revolution with its accompanying reign of terror to which Johannesburg was subjected during February and March, 1922, the caption, "use of motion pictures to quell a strike outbreak and restore order," is surely amusing. For it was only by the employment of thousands of troops, supported by field batteries, aeroplanes, and tanks that General Smuts succeeded in rendering Johannesburg streets safe once more. When it is said that "a strike broke out among the workers" and "the ignorant blacks fell an easy prey to agitators and they milled around and were on the point of open rebellion," the impression given is altogether erroneous. It was only the white miners who were on strike and guilty of insurrection. Throughout those perilous weeks the 300,000 blacks on the Rand behaved with a self-restraint beyond reproach. Just because they refused to fall "an easy prey to agitators," the revolutionaries tried to incite the blacks to disorder by attacking them. With no provocation whatever, the whites shot down over 60 natives and wounded many more. At this point civil war came very close to being changed into that race war out of whose chaos the white strikers hoped to emerge victors by the establishment of soviet rule.

But what was the service rendered by motion picture programs during those tense weeks of mob law? Simply this. The strike by white miners had thrown 180,000 blacks into enforced idleness, week after week these thousands had nothing to do but loaf around in their compounds as virtual prisoners, the sullen victims of the caprice of lawless whites. Here was a potential danger which caused the authorities no little anxiety. Now during the preceding year as a part of our social service program, Mr. Phillips had succeeded in organizing open-air movie exhibitions in the compounds. Screens were set up, operators engaged, and a weekly program put in running order. Then the strike came on and the mine management asked for a double program which proved a great help in quieting the excited natives and gave th something to talk about.

FREDERICK B. BRIDGMAN.

(EDITORS' NOTE—This letter was written Dr. Bridgman in his summer resting place Maine just before his death. He was ill at t time, and this was the last letter he was a to write.)

Public Sentiment, If Expressed, Would Stop War

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

The elimination of war continues to h foremost place among affairs of men. Yet g ernments move so slowly toward that end t peace societies multiply and individual citize are taking the initiative and suggesti methods of procedure for its accomplishme

In England a pledge against war has b highly commended and has received the su port of thousands. It should be brought to t attention of every thoughtful American, for is approved by such leaders as H. G. Wel John Galsworthy, Norman Angell, and t Bishop of London, and was adopted at t Conference of the C. O. P. E. C. at Birmi ham in August, 1924. It reads as follows:

ARBITRATE FIRST

Believing that law must take the place War in the settlement of international d putes, we, the undersigned, desiring to uph our country in all that makes for righte strength, solemnly pledge ourselves to withh service from any Government which refuses submit the causes of the dispute to an Int national Court or which refuses the arbit decision so given.

It seems rather strange that this pledge h not received more notice from peace worke in this country and been given more pu licity. Suppose, out of our 120,000,000 inha tants there were between 5,000,000 and 1 000,000 adults who would sign the above pled and send it to Washington, would it not ha the effect of hastening somewhat the rather di tory movements of our governmental offici toward procedures that would definitely a decisively make for lasting peace?

Should the above pledge seem in any w objectionable it would not be difficult for a individual to write one that suits him, or f an organization to formulate one to which members would subscribe. The important thi is that every adult who is opposed to war a believes without any hems or haws or "but that law should supersede war as the meth of settling disagreements between natio should let his stand be known where it w have effect—to the authorities in Washingto What is needed is the expression of an arous public to spur on our too cautious officials.

There are many persons in the United Stat (perhaps quite a number in other countrie who believe that the government of this count has before it the greatest opportunity for ser ice to the whole world ever offered in assumi the leadership, in a courageous and uncon promising manner, for the abolition of intern tional warfare. That consummation can achieved if only the will for it be stro enough.

Brookline, Mass. LYDIA G. WENTWORTH.

Country life without religion drives the so and daughters of the farmer away. Count life with religious support will build up t whole nation, by strengthening the small co munities to produce the products of wealth a culture and by lighting the torch of religio genius, of artistic passion and literary expre sions: for those are conceived in the small co munity where every man knows every other a neighbor.—Warren H. Wilson.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

Concrete Example of Co-operation

Since 1923 there has been a fine co-operation community religious work between the ristian Association at the University of ew Hampshire and the two neighboring rural rishes of MADBURY and LEE. The latter had ce been prosperous communities, each with settled pastor; then the population dwindled til they consisted of but 40 and 60 families

REV. JOSEPH E. BARKER
University Pastor and Y. M. C. A. Secretary at University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H.

spectively. For some time previous to 1923 ere had been only occasional services in charge supplies sent from the University faculty. At present the two churches have thrown their lot with the Christian Association, aring in its budget and being ministered to the University pastor, Rev. J. E. Barker, a raduate of Yale and of the Yale Divinity chool, and for some years a missionary in hina. Various mature students acted as Mr. arker's assistants. Emphasis has been placed on social service through organizations like e Girl Reserves, Pioneers, and Friendly In- ans, etc. A number of young people have en received into church membership from ese organizations; several adults also joined, d others, retaining their membership in arby towns, became affiliated members.

Each year a conference or field day is held r the boys and girls, with games, refresh- nts, swimming, inspirational talks on man- rs, etc., and a devotional address. Other so- al activities attempted during the past year, l designed to appeal to the community spirit, were a harvest supper, an address on issues and parties in the political campaign, a minstrel show, supervised dancing, evening lectures on Japan and China.

Since January, 1925, the work has grown to such an extent that each church has been assigned a student as regular assistant to the university pastor, funds being provided for this work by the State Congregational Conference. During the summer these young men remain on the field and add a well-planned athletic program to the social and religious program.

The central purpose of all is the development of a broadened character and a community spirit, expressing itself in religious worship, in social activity, in neighborly kindness, and in co-operaton for the common good.

Ohio Young People's Conference

The Fourth Congregational Young People's Conference of Ohio was held at Lakeside, July 6-13. It was the most successful of the four held.

The attendance this year was the best yet, in full-time delegates. There were not so many visitors and week-end delegates as heretofore. This is as it should be, as week-end delegates who have not caught the spirit of the conference tend to weaken the closing days. The number of full-time delegates in attendance this year was 197. The total attendance, including faculty, counselors, week-end delegates, and visitors, was 237. The Ohio Young People's Conference is unique in that while many of the states limit their conferences, for various reasons, to the high school group, Ohio has two groups, a high school group and a senior group sometimes called the college group.

The attendance in the four years has averaged about 50 per cent. senior and 50 per cent. high school. Because of this grouping the high school group have the older ones to look up to. This is of great advantage to them because theirs is more naturally a hero-worshiping age. The senior age being the age of choice, gives Ohio, I would judge, in comparing with others, more definite decisions; to go back to high school, to go on to college, to go to night school, and in a number of definite cases to choose Christian service for their life work. Last year in the field work of the Sunday School Extension Society there were employed four of the Ohio Lakeside young people. There were studying for the ministry last year three young men and in training schools for pastors' assistants three girls.

The ministers of the Ohio Congregational Conference in general consider this one of the best pieces of work which the Education Committee has planned.

Florida Summer Student Work

Through the Home Missionary Society, Florida has five Summer Student ministers. Rev. N. G. Long, of Yale, is spending his second summer with the South Jacksonville Church. It is a mission field near the city and no other church ministers to the scattered population. Rev. O. T. Kirby, of Yale Seminary, serves the pastorless church at Key West, preaching to large and growing congregations on the old island swept by the Florida boom and undertaking the amazing task of building the Dixie Highway across 80 miles of Gulf and Keys to the mainland. Rev. S. E. Frost, a graduate of Yale Seminary, is serving the Coconut Grove Church and developing mission work in an adjacent field. Rev. W. V. Meredith, as supply at Miami Beach Church, is doing mission work with an unchurched group in the northern part of the peninsula. Rev. Ivan Grimshaw, of Yale Seminary, is handling the summer work of West Palm Beach Church, in the heart of developing communities where new churches are to be organized. The churches are delighted with the high character of the service rendered by these students.

Young People's Summer Activities

Mr. J. Owen Smith, Yale Divinity student, has been conducting daily vacation Bible schools in various rural communities in Montana. A ten days' school was held in Columbus with 66 children enrolled. In Billings the total enrollment of the daily vacation Bible school was 27.

Mr. Cecil E. Frazier, student summer pastor, has conducted twelve vacation Bible schools in Montana this summer. Each school closed with a community dinner and program. At Bell Tower, 12 pupils were enrolled, ranging in age from six to 21 years, while the classes were graded with primer to college freshman. Since the closing of the vacation school, a good working Sunday school has been established.

Ballantine sent four boys and four girls to the Congregational Assembly at Billings. On the night of July 3, they gave a play entitled, "Aaron Boggs, Freshman," for the purpose of raising money to pay the expenses of the delegates. The Sunday following the assembly they gave reports of it in church with outstanding messages.

Mr. Carl H. Wilhelm, student summer worker under the commission of the Home Missionary Society, participated in the Billings Assembly, giving a morning course for the young people on "Life Problems," consisting of six lectures, with 72 enrolled. He also conducted an evening series of "Quiet Hour" studies on the temptations of Jesus.

Mr. M. M. Knappen, Yale student under the summer commission of the Home Missionary Society, is serving seven rural points in South Dakota—Mission, Parmelee, Norris, Cogswell,

LEE AND MADBURY CONFERENCE

Brood, and Cedar Butte. A Sunday school was organized at Neville Schoolhouse, three miles northwest of Brood. Mr. Knappen has interested himself in community projects, such as the community club, good roads rally, barbecue, etc.

A daily vacation Bible school was held in Mobridge, S. D., with 80 pupils enrolled and an average attendance of 65. Seven teachers cooperated with Mr. Homer E. Dalrymple in making the school a success.

Mr. Jesse F. Perrin, son of Supt. D. J. Perrin, returned to Hermosa, S. D., in June for his second summer pastorate under the Home Missionary Society.

Mr. Lorne Brown, of Union Seminary, served Crested Butte, S. D., and surrounding points during the summer. A midweek service was held at Smith Hill Mine.

MONTANA YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY
Held at Billings, July 11-20

From East to West

MAINE

An Organist's Remarkable Record

First Parish Church, Saco, mourns the passing of Prof. Charles W. Shannon, its beloved organist emeritus, who for 42 years was organist and musical director. Professor Shannon has the unusual record of having served as a church organist for 60 years. He leaves a bequest of $1,000, the income to be expended in keeping the church organ in repair. The organ, which is one of the finest possessed by any church in the state, was a gift from Col. Richard Shannon of New York, as a memorial of his brother's long and faithful service.

The attendance at the summer Sunday evening services is still continuing around the 1,000 mark. The midweek services are attracting from 500 to 800. The minister, Rev. L. B. Walker, is called upon for numerous addresses in other localities.

First Church, Calais, Observes Centennial of Its Founding

First Church, Calais, Rev. W. H. Palmer, pastor, has just observed the 100th anniversary of its organization on Aug. 17, 1825. A two-day celebration brought together many former members and friends from a distance. The centennial sermon was preached on Sunday morning, Aug. 16, by Pres. Warren J. Moulton, D.D., of Bangor Seminary. A praise service was held on Sunday evening in which the greetings of the local churches were presented by Rev. H. A. Perdelwitz of the Union Church and an address was given by Rev. Clayton D. Boothby of Meriden, Ct., a former pastor. Monday, the 17th, the anniversary day, included a service of reminiscence and review, a social period and luncheon and a service of inspiration and the forward look. The only living former pastor of the church, Rev. R. A. Macdonald of Westbrook, Me., delivered an historical address and the history of the church as written by the historian, Miss Clara Rideout, was read by Mrs. W. H. Foster. Letters from former members and friends were read, including messages from the descendants of two of the charter members. The closing address was delivered by Rev. W. C. Roberts of New York.

An unusual feature of the celebration was the "looking backward" room which was furnished with old-time furniture and contained an exhibit of many articles of historical interest such as books, pictures, pamphlets, dishes, and silver. Many of the women of the church dressed in the costumes of 100 years ago and helped to give a touch of realism to the olden time.

MASSACHUSETTS

Rev. R. A. Christie to Go to Middletown

After eight years' service at Florence, Northampton, Rev. R. A. Christie has resigned to this fall to First, Middletown, Ct. He went Florence from People's, Providence, R. I., first pastorate. At Florence, under his leaship the church has nearly doubled in membership, the debt has been canceled, the annbudget has been increased nearly 60 per ce and the benevolences have almost doubled. the Easter Communion 82 new members w received. The plant has been greatly improv summer camps have been established for b and for girls. Mr. Christie has been presid of the Laurel Park Chautauqua, of the Con ticut Valley Congregational Club, chaplain the Jerusalem Lodge of Masons, and of Northampton city government. He has b actively associated with the Y. M. C. A. has been in constant demand as a speaker. point of service he is the dean of the Protest clergy of Northampton. His father is R G. W. Christie of South Coventry, Ct. M Christie is a charming partner in his labo The Hampshire Gazette concludes a most kin editorial with these words:

His enthusiastic leadership and wholesc influence have left a lasting impression on community, and Northampton will follow work in a larger field with affectionate inter

First, Middletown, to which Mr. Christie

Oberlin Graduate School of Theology

Scholarly and practical training for the ministry, directors of religious education, missionary and Christian Association service. Interdenominational faculty and student body. All the cultural advantages of Oberlin College and its complete equipment. Unusual opportunities for women. Scholarships and financial help available.

Degrees A.M., B.D., and S.T.M.
Correspond with Dean Thomas W. Graham
Council Hall, Oberlin, Ohio

PACIFIC SCHOOL OF RELIGION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA
Sixtieth Year Opened August 17, 1925
Prepares men and women for
The Pastorate — Social Service
Religious Education — Foreign Service
Research
Practical Instruction. Opportunities for Self-Support.
Facilities of University of California.
Graduate Degrees. Faculty of Ten.
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction.
COME TO CALIFORNIA TO STUDY
HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

Bangor Theological Seminary

The 110th year opens Sept 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor Maine.

Gordon
A Graduate School of Theology and Missions, of high scholastic standards and evangelical loyalty. Degree of B.D.
Theological, Missionary, Religious-Educational College course of 4 years, college standards, broad curriculum. Degree of Th.B.
NATHAN R. WOOD, President
Gordon College of Theology and Missions, Boston, Mass.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

SEA PINES School of Personality for Girls
THOMAS BICKFORD, Founder
Outdoor life. Training in self-discovery and self-direct Stimulating ideas of health, responsibility. Christian fluence. One hundred acres, pine groves, seashore. Col Preparatory, Cultural, Secretarial and Athletic courses. A Crafts. Dramatics. Music. Corrective Gymnastics. Rec tion Camp July and August. Summer Courses and Coun orship Training for older girls and young women.
Miss Faith Bickford, Miss Addie Bickford, Director
Box V, Brewster, Mass.

The Training School at Vineland, New Jers
Devoted to the interests of th whose minds have not developed normally. Schools, shops, far research laboratory. $1,200 per annum. E. R. Johnsto Director. C. Emerson Nash, Superintendent, Box 4

DO YOU WISH TO BUY a second-hand organ? Try an ad in our classified columns.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston

n called, has a membership of 700. It is the est church in that city, and one of the oldest Connecticut.

CONNECTICUT

signs from Westfield, Danielson

Rev. W. B. Williams of Westfield Church, nielson, has resigned his pastorate and has epted a call to North Church, Berkeley, Cal. accepting his resignation, the Westfield urch drew up and adopted resolutions ex- ssing deep regret at the loss of their pastor l appreciation of his eight years' service to church.

NEW YORK

om Ellington to Little Valley

After a delightful and highly profitable min- ry of two and one-half years at Ellington, v. A. K. Blaze left that church, Sept. 1, for ttle Valley, where a field of great possibili- s awaits him.

During his ministry at Ellington, all depart- nts of the church have responded to his lead- hip, and from both a numerical and financial ndpoint, the church has taken its place ong the aggressive rural churches of the te, but underlying it all is a rare spiritual velopment.

OHIO

mmanuel, Cleveland, Unites with Mizpah

In the Aug. 20 issue the statement was de regarding Emmanuel Church, Cleveland, at it voted to disband. This statement is in- rrect. Emmanuel Church, in its regular semi- nual meeting, unanimously voted to merge th Mizpah Church, and the buildings, being e property of the Ohio Conference, were sold it to a church of another denomination.

F. T. B.

ovak Activities in Cleveland

On May 13 a concert was held at Sokol Hall, eveland, under the auspices of the Slovak tional Association of America, a non-secta- n society. Five hundred people were in at- ndance. The young people of Cyril (Slovak) urch took part in the program. Cyril's serv- s are held as usual during the summer nths. The Sunday evening services are con- cted by the pastor, Rev. A. J. Moncol, partly English and partly in Slovak. The singing also in both English and Slovak.

INDIANA

ng Ministry at Elkhart

Rev. Andrew U. Ogilvie, who will close his storate at ELKHART Sept. 1, had his college training at Bowdoin and took his seminary work at Bangor. After two years of special study in Harvard he came to Elkhart in 1900. The church was then worshiping in a wooden shack and there were 32 people at the first service. During the 25 years' ministry a commodi- ous brick structure has been erected, a rong congregation brought together, and the urch thoroughly organized. Mr. Ogilvie and e church have been known as leaders in all ovements for community betterment. He has en in a special sense a pastor of the city d has found abundant opportunity for his essage, not only in the pulpit, but through the ily press. Indiana is theologically speaking mewhat reactionary and at best is not strong ongregational territory. Mr. Ogilvie brought his constituency modern messages and liberal outlook. His success has been remarkable, especially if one takes into account the conditions. He has not as yet made plans for his future, further than that he will remain in Elkhart for the present.

REV. A. U. OGILVIE

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

Two men offered to give unto the Lord. And one, being of a generous spirit, said unto him, "After I have first met mine own necessary expenses, behold, all that I possess is thine." The other, being parsimonious, spoke thus: "Lord, I give thee only this single penny. All that remaineth is mine own, to do with as I please." But when those men had gone to their rewards and the books which the Lord had kept with them were opened, behold, the account of the parsimonious man was found written in letters of light for the good his penny had done, while the balance of the generous man was found written in red.

NORTH CAROLINA

Good Work in Larger Parish

Rev. S. M. Penn is serving a larger parish in North Carolina, including Star, Sophia, Bailey's Grove, Flint Hill, and Greensboro. The attendance at the Bailey's Grove Sunday school has reached the 100 mark. Two new members have been added to the church roll—one by letter and one on confesson. Attendance has also increased at Sophia and Flint Hill, registering as high as 100 at the former place for some of the sessions in June. A Sunday school with an enrollment of 20 has been organized in Greensboro.

NORTH DAKOTA

Christian Fellowship in Leeds

At Leeds the Lenten season was observed with a special Communion service for communicants only, of whom there were 80 present representing the Congregational, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Norwegian Lutheran, Christian, Brethren, Anglican, Free Lutheran, and Christian Science, besides some who were former Catholics. There was a fine spirit of Christian fellowship, and the service was most impressive. The church has been holding services in the Empress Theater, pending the acquirement of its own property. The pastor, Rev. F. M. Irwin, conducted a daily vacation Bible school in June, covering a period of more than three weeks.

Velva Pastor in Demand

A male quartet has been taking the place of the chorus choir in Velva for the past few months. The pastor, Rev. A. R. Bosworth, gave the commencement address and preached two baccalaureate sermons, one for the high school at Velva, and the other at Bergen, 12 miles distant. The Sawyer Church, which Mr. Bosworth also serves, entertained the Minot Association April 30 and May 1.

Student Pastors in Regan and McHenry

A daily vacation Bible school was conducted in Regan with a splendid group of boys and girls. In a town of 200, there were 50 children attending the school. Mr. Edwin R. Howard, student summer pastor, has been holding preaching services in Regan on Sunday evening and in Wing in the morning.

Interest in the McHenry Sunday school is increasing under the leadership of Mr. Donald S. Costello, student pastor for the summer under the commission of the Home Missionary Society. Baseball, horseshoes, and other games,

ACCIDENT INSURANCE AT ACTUAL COST

IOWA STATE TRAVELING MEN'S ASSOCIATION — STM — DES MOINES

For Clergymen and Laymen Who are Preferred Risks
(Ages 18-55)

$10,000 Protection has never cost over $9 annually—Under supervision of Insurance Department of the State of Iowa

$25.00 WEEKLY INDEMNITY
Superior rating in the Insurance Field —Membership exceeds 75,000 from every state in the Union and Canada.

OLDEST OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD
No Agents—No Expensive Overhead—Furnishes accident protection at lowest cost. For application blanks and further information write

IOWA STATE TRAVELING MEN'S ASSOCIATION
H. E. REX, Secy.
Fleming Bldg. Des Moines, Iowa
$2.00 pays in full until next February

Missionary Education Tours offer
—absolutely first class travel and hotel accommodations
—every opportunity for sightseeing
—unusual contacts with the life of the countries visited
—a view of missionary work at first hand
—a maximum of enjoyment for a minimum of expenditure
Full program includes
Mexico—starting October 12th, duration three weeks
Around South America—sailing November 7th, duration three months
Around the World to Egypt and Palestine—sailing December 12th, duration four and a half months
For information, address
MISSIONARY EDUCATION MOVEMENT
John Cobb Worley, Travel Secretary
150 Fifth Ave., New York 517 Western Mutual Life Bldg., Los Angeles

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, public and private schools in all parts of the country. Advises parents about schools.

LABOR DAY!
It is fitting that as the Nation sets aside a day of rest and uplift in the proclamation of the achievements and goals of Organized Labor, so should call attention to the "labors of love" that have been so freely rendered for generations by its ministers, without recognition or material reward, for the benefit of mankind.

The Chicago Theological Seminary

"Wherefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not vain in the Lord." (I Cor. 15: 58.)

OZORA S. DAVIS, President 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

with hiking and swimming, on week days is unifying the boys' class. A point system has been inaugurated—10 for Sunday school attendance, 10 for church attendance, five for offering, three for being on time, and three for bringing a Bible. Recently the church members held a "bee" when the women cleaned up the interior, and the men the exterior, of the church. The grass around the church has been leveled.

Rev. R. V. Conard's Helpful Churches

Rev. R. V. Conard ministers to three fields—Killdeer, Halliday, and Dunn Center. The Dickinson Association, to which these churches belong, met at Halliday on May 11-12. Two Indian visitors from the Forth Berthold Reservation, in company with Mr. Robert Hall, created considerable interest. Mr. Little Owl, a deacon in an Indian church on the Reservation, spoke in his native tongue. Mrs. Little Owl also made a short address, Mr. Hall acting as interpreter. They told of the long, hard struggle to raise a building fund for a church, there being $200 still lacking. At the suggestion of one of the delegates present, nearly this entire sum was pledged by the churches represented.

The annual Young People's Conference and Camp was held at Valley City, June 17-24. Mr. Conard drove down with his service car, plowing through 308 miles of mud, and taking three boys, one from each of his churches. As this was the first time any of the boys had ever attended a camp of this kind, the experience was well worth while. Four delegates from Killdeer attended the state Christian Endeavor convention held June 28 to July 1, at Bismarck, 140 miles distant. Mr. George Fairbanks, a student from Union College, Chicago, is assisting Mr. Conard this summer in conducting daily vacation Bible schools in his parish.

McHenry Summer School

Twenty-six children between the ages of 10 and 15 attended the daily vacation Bible school in McHenry, held in the town schoolhouse from July 20-31. Mr. Donald Costello, student pastor, was the sole instructor. On Sunday evening, Aug. 2, graduation exercises were held at the regular church service, when the children were presented with certificates of attendance. Each pupil took part in the program. The best notebooks and a list of honor pupils were on display in the church lobby.

Minot's Daily Vacation School

The daily vacation Bible school in Minot this summer had an enrollment of 75. The average attendance was better this year than ever before, having increased each year since 1922 when the enrollment was 35. There were five teachers, and four classes including the first eight public school grades, as well as a kindergarten class numbering 22.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Stevens Church Corner Stone Laid

The laying of the corner stone of the new community church in Stevens took place on Sunday afternoon, July 12. About 200 people attended the services. Dr. J. H. Andress, of First Church, Sioux City, Iowa, spoke upon "The Need of the Church in the Community." The church choir, recently organized, made its first public appearance at these services.

Elk Point School Grows

The Sunday school in Elk Point continues to grow. During the spring quarter an average attendance of 103 was reached. Because of the growth in the primary department, another class was organized to meet the emergency. Great interest and efficiency is shown by the teachers, whose enthusiasm is contagious. The Sunday evening film services have been satisfactory, attendance reaching as high as 130 even on hot, oppressive evenings in June. During July and August these services have been discontinued. On Palm Sunday 14 were received into the fellowship of the church, 12 on confession of faith and two by letter. On Memorial Sunday, one of the country clubs presented the church with a beautiful flag and standard. The service of the church extends throughout the surrounding country, many of the members living 10 to 20 miles from Elk Point. Rev. Edwin Brown is pastor.

Church Buildings Improved

The church building of Fort Pierre has been remodeled, with a complete modern kitche

HOOT MON!

Raise funds for your Christian Endeavor, Sunday School, or other Church Societies selling delicious Scotmints. Six flavors—Peppermint, Yeast, Wintergreen, Clove, Cinnamon, and Licorice. Sell for 5c. Everybody has a nickel and everybody likes Scotmints.

NO CAPITAL REQUIRED

We extend you 30 days' credit, ship in any quantities and any assortment of flavors.

	320 Pkgs.	500 Pkgs.	1000 Pkgs.
Sells for	$16.00	$25.00	$50.00
Costs you	9.00	13.50	26.00
YOUR PROFIT	$7.00	$11.50	$24.00

SCOTMINTS CO., Inc., Desk C C-2, Jersey City, N. J.

Clip or Copy and Mail NOW

SCOTMINTS CO., INC.,
Desk CC 2, Jersey City, N. J.

Send .... packages of Scotmints—Following assortment.
....Peppermint ....Licorice
....Yeast ....Cinnamon
....Wintergreen ....Clove

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Church .....
Society .....
Reference .....

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

VACATION PLACES

The Heights House, Lunenburg, Vt., in the vicinity of the White Mountains. We offer the comforts and conveniences needed for a successful vacation and rest. No hay fever. Booklet. A. J. Newman, Prop.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, home-like rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

PASTORATE WANTED

Pastor wishes church in rural or semi-rural community. Federated or union church in Southern New England preferred. Address "M. A.," Congregationalist.

POSITION WANTED

Pastors interested in securing a church assistant with varied practical experience, good antecedents and references are invited to correspond with the Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Companion—A New England woman, capable and reliable, desires position as companion and general helper. Address P. O. Box 261, Sharon, Mass.

Desire position to teach in high school, Science Department. Address "F. T. I.," Congregationalist.

HELP WANTED

Earn $25 weekly, spare time, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary. Copyright book free. Press Syndicate, 1228 St. Louis, Mo.

TEACHERS WANTED

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS

Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Ala., wants a mathematics and science teacher. Has some one an upright piano in good condition, business desk, or books to replace loss by fire? Write H. Jenkins, 84 Pine St., Burlington, Vt.

For Sale—A brass chandelier with eight Rochester burner lamps, in good condition. Inquire of J. E. Hopkins, Thomaston, Ct.

Connecticut Boarding Home. Wanted in Windham and New London Counties. Protestant boarding homes for Jack, 9 years; Rob, 6; Ted, 3; all Americans, exceptionally bright. Apply Connecticut Children's Aid Society, Brown Thomson Bldg., Hartford, Ct.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Mail Order Printing. Ask for quotations. 500 envelopes and 500 letterheads or statements or billheads, $5.00. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

LITERARY

Speakers, Writers—Material prepared on special subjects. Expert service. Authors Research Bureau, 500 Fifth Ave., New York.

First Aid for Whooping Cough

Rub Roche's Embrocation thoroughly into the little sufferer's chest. Penetrating deeply it helps loosen the phlegm and brings relief.

Roche's has earned the endorsement of thousands of mothers—used successfully since 1802. All Druggists.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc., New York
W. Edward & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

Record Books | For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Church School Superintendent, the Secretary.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston, 156 5th Ave. New York, 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

he basement. New lighting and a furnace e been installed and the whole building has n painted on the inside. The total cost of e than $1,000 has all been paid. Much of work was done by volunteer labor, the pas- Rev. J. C. N. Pengelly, doing much of the ng. The Sunday School has reached the water mark of 148 in attendance. Ninety pins were given to as many children for ect attendance during the entire session he school for a year.

he Badger parsonage has recently under- extensive repairs, including the building porch, the finishing off of the basement, other needed improvements. Much of the was done by volunteer labor, the pastor g the carpenter work on the porch and painting. Rev. R. B. Holden is beginning seventh year of service in this field.

COLORADO

d Work in Sixth Ave., Denver

he Young People's Society of Sixth Ave., ver, closed the year's work the first Sunday une. The membership, which is composed enior high school and college young people, numbers over 40. The men's club, organ- a year ago, now averages about 75 in at- ance. The gymnasium has been running on a full program since dedication, with nearly 100 people organized in the various groups.

Student Pastorate Over Ten Places

Cope is another of the many Western mission points served this summer by college and seminary students under the commission of the Home Missionary Society. Mr. H. S. Lawrence was student pastor there, besides serving nine other points. July 12 a successful Sunday school rally was held.

NEW MEXICO

Gallup Pastor's Community Service

First, Gallup, sent 13 delegates to the State Conference at Phoenix. Rev. W. H. Elfring is active in community service, preaching the anniversary sermon for the Odd Fellows Lodge, the baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of the Gallup high school, and the St. John's Day sermon for the Masonic order. He also gave the commencement address at the Rio Grande Industrial School at Albuquerque.

Albuquerque Church Grows

Notwithstanding the exceptionally warm weather in June, the Sunday school of University Heights Community Church, Albuquerque, has grown in numbers from 74 to 122, with a cradle roll of 21. Our church has an exclusive territory of over 5,000 population. It has, through the Y. W. C. A., sponsored two "Girls' Reserve Club," meeting in Community Hall on Thursday and Friday of each week, with a membership of over 50 girls. A Boy Scout troop has been organized. Rev. H. W. C. Ainley is pastor.

Hurley Attendance Increases

The population of the Camp at Hurley has decreased, but church attendance is increasing. At a service for the Masons on June 21, over 50 Masons were in attendance. One hundred new Worship and Song books have been purchased by the Ladies' Aid. Rev. S. A. Wright is pastor.

MONTANA

Successful Vacation Schools

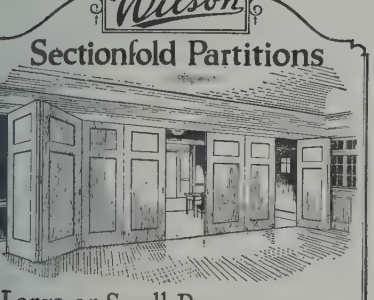
Mr. Elmer Newton Eddy, Yale Divinity student, is serving Rapelje and Molt this summer under the commission of the Home Missionary Society. He has conducted two daily vacation Bible schools. At Molt he had sole charge of the work, with 12 children in attendance. At Rapelje 46 pupils attended, and the teaching force consisted of six. At the close of the school a program was given, with an exhibition of the work.

Rev. E. J. Sipes, with the assistance of Mr. Cecil Frazier, student summer worker, commissioned by the Home Missionary Society, has conducted a number of daily vacation Bible schools in his large territory. At Ekalaka the school attendance broke all previous records, being nearly double that of last year. The sessions were held in the church building the first two days, and then, for lack of room because of the growing classes, were transferred to the county high school. At Schofield Schoolhouse, 15 miles west of Ekalaka, a daily vacation Bible school of one week, with 17 pupils enrolled, resulted in the organization of a Sunday school with a promising future, which will include the Big Hill district six miles distant. Here also a vacation school was conducted with an enrollment of 20 pupils, closing with an exhibit of the work and the union of the Schofield and Big Hill schools in a community dinner. The Pershing school, twelve miles southeast of Big Hill, and 15 miles south of Ekalaka, was attended by 19 scholars. This school closed on July 3, and celebrated the Fourth with a community picnic dinner, games, races, stunts, and an exhibition of the work accomplished.

A vacation school, with an enrollment of 40, was held at Melstone in June, with a closing exhibition on Sunday evening, drawing a large attendance of children and adults. This was followed by a social gathering in the church parlors, where refreshments were served. The children did good work, memorizing songs, books of the Bible, five of the Beatitudes, and a prayer. The reading of Dr. Stocking's Mr. Friend o' Man was greatly enjoyed by the pupils, also Harold B. Hunting's Stories of Brotherhood.

A vacation school conducted at Nibby, nine miles from Ballantine, resulted in the organization of a Sunday school.. Intermittent serv-

Wilson
Sectionfold Partitions



Large or Small Rooms
As Occasion Demands

WITH Wilson Sectionfold Partitions a large room can be easily and quickly subdivided into several small ones, suitable for meetings and classes of various sizes. Adaptable to old buildings as well as new.

Send for 40 page Catalog No. 11

THE J. G. WILSON CORPORATION
ESTABLISHED 1876
11 East 38th Street New York City
Offices in all principal cities

BALOPTICONS

are used in thousands of schools churches and hospitals. This line of lanterns, for slides and opaque objects—for projection in daylight as well as in the dark—is the most complete in the world.

Write for Catalog

usch & Lomb Optical Co., 706 St. Paul St., Rochester, N.Y.

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B

Vivid with meaning throughout the ages

Sweet and precious are the memories evoked by the rich mellow tones of Deagan Tower Chimes
Stirring the innermost depths of human emotions these Golden Voiced Chimes exert a powerful influence for good throughout the community, thus making them, indeed, the memorial sublime.

Deagan Tower Chimes are played by the organist from electric keyboard. Standard sets $6,000 and up.

J. C. Deagan Inc.
Established 1880
169 Deagan Building, Chicago, Ill.

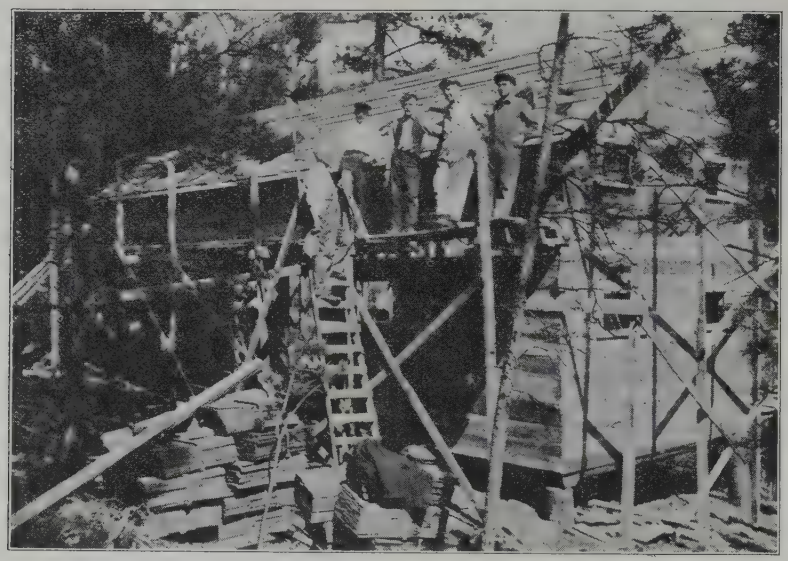
Belfry Plans
When building or remodeling your church make sure that the belfry provides for chimes. We gladly co-operate so that if chimes are offered as a memorial they can be readily installed

THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

Individual Cups
Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free.

Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio.

COMMUNION SUPPLIES
We supply every essential for the Communion service. Trays, Glasses, Covers, Plates.
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago



FACULTY HOUSE, BLACK HILLS YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY, PLACERVILLE, S. D.
This building was erected this spring by the ministers of the Black Hills region. The well-known home missionaries, Rev. Henry W. Jamison of Newell, Rev. George E. Stayton of Trail City, Rev. W. F. Ireland of Spearfish, Rev. Paul J. Kussman of New Underwood, and Asst. Supt. George Williams are shown in the picture.

ices have been held at this place for several years, but now the school is being cared for by the people themselves. Mr. R. J. Herberts, student from Yale, is acting pastor with a summer commission from the Home Missionary Society.

OREGON

Rainier's Vacation School

Ninety children were enrolled in the Church Vacation School, Rainier, practically all of this number being under 13 years of age. The average attendance was as high as 70, and 100 people were present at the display program put on at the end of the two weeks' school. Most of the children were enthusiastic, and many of the mothers expressed their appreciation. Since the coming of Rev. G. W. Churchill to this church, an every member canvass has been conducted in which nine men and six women participated. Letters from the pastor and the finance committee were sent out to 185 families in the community, 150 families being seen personally.

Our First Mortgage
REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS
net the investor 7% semi-annual interest, guaranteed as to principal and interest, secured by first mortgages on improved real estate in Central Florida and the West Coast, by one of the oldest and most substantial corporations with 14 years' successful experience in the Florida mortgage field. Write for particulars and booklet.
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.
THE LESLIE
A quiet, cosy little House by the sea. Now open. Private baths. Descriptive booklet. 21st season.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

BLAZE, A. K., Ellington, N. Y., to First, Little Valley. Began Sept. 1.

DAVIES, HOWELL D., Wauwatosa, Wis., to The Dalles, Ore. To begin Sept. 6.

DRYER, I. MORSE, Ripon, Cal., to Pacific Grove, Cal. Accepts.

HASTINGS, HORACE, Lake Linden, Mich., to Shandon, O. To begin Oct. 1.

STOOK, ARTHUR M. S., Reinbeck, Ia., to Forest Grove, Ore. To begin Sept. 6.

STOVER, H. C., Federated, Freewater, Ore., to Central, Salem. Accepts.

WILLIAMS, W. B., Westfield, Danielson, Ct., to North, Berkeley, Cal. Accepts.

Resignations

COFFIN, GEORGE H., JR., First Congregational Church, Plymouth, Ct., to accept pastorate of Federated, Greenland, N. H.

WEAGE, E. D., Guerneville, Cal.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Bartlett	1	1

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

State Conferences

ALABAMA (White), Tallassee, Nov.
CONNECTICUT, South Manchester, Nov. 3-4.
GEORGIA (Colored), Thomasville, Nov. 18-22.
IDAHO, BOISE, Sept. 29-30, Oct. 1.
KENTUCKY, Evarts, Oct.
SOUTH CAROLINA, Columbia, Nov.
TENNESSEE (White), Daisy, Nov.
UTAH, Salt Lake City, Oct.
WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.
WISCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

Personals

BAYES, REV. R. E., formerly of Second Church, Beverly, Mass., has returned to this country after 12 months' absence. While spending the academic year at Mansfield College, Oxford, Mr. Bayes devoted most of his Sundays to preaching in Congregational, Baptist, and Wesleyan Reform churches. Mr. and Mrs. Bayes spent the Easter vacation in France. They are now staying with former parishioners at North Beverly. Mr. Bayes occupied his former pulpit on the last three Sundays of August.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimu charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven wor each. Address Obituary Department, T Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

REV. JOHN H. HOFFMAN

Rev. John H. Hoffman, born June 10, 1847, a Vermont farm, of sturdy Yankee stock, di Aug. 12, 1925, after six weeks' illness, at Verdu City, Cal., his home for the last two years.

He pluckily worked his way through scho graduating from Bates College and Bangor Se inary, and for nearly 50 years preached the Gosp as a Congregational minister. His last pastora of three years at East Jaffrey, N. H., was marked successful.

He leaves a large circle of friends wherever has ministered, east or west.

He was recently chosen president of t Southern California Vermont Society of ov 1,000 members, and the day before he was tak sick he wrote a poem for the New England picn

His first wife was Elena L. Gordon, instruct in music at New Hampton Literary Institutio who passed away Feb. 12, 1917, at West Broo field, Mass., soon after the observance of the 40th wedding anniversary, greatly mourned the many who knew and loved her.

On Aug. 21, 1918, he married Mrs. Alsaida Eldridge, of Henniker, N. H., who survives hi He also leaves a son, John W. Hoffman, Verdugo City, Cal., a daughter, Mrs. Herbert Blodgett, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., and one gran son, Robert H. Blodgett, of St. Johnsbury, who graduation next June at the University of Ve mont he had hoped to attend.

He never lost his vigor or his youth, a radiated good cheer. While he will be sore missed by the large circle of friends, the infl ence of his consecrated Christian life will live in the hearts and lives of those who knew a loved him.

By his request the funeral service was co ducted by his long-time friend, Rev. James Francis of Los Angeles, formerly of the Clare don Street Baptist Church, Boston.

G. H. D.

DR. JAMES PHILIPS HOYT

Dr. Hoyt, son of Rev. John B. Hoyt, was bor in Coventry, New York, in 1844. He took h bachelor's degree (Phi Beta Kappa) and h master's degree from Yale. He was also a grad ate of the Yale Divinity School. At the age twenty-three, he was married to Emma A. Jud of New Haven, Ct. To this minister's hom was given twelve children, of whom five son are living and are now filling important pos tions in business and professional life. He ha great joy in the affection and success of h children and to the close of his life followed the and their families with a father's rare devotio

He had successful pastorates of several yea each at Sherman, Newtown, and Cheshire, Ct part of the time adding teaching to his pulpi and pastoral duties. In 1892, he was marrie to Sarah E. Judd, and in 1901 entered upon fruitful pastorate with the First Church, of S Petersburg, Florida. His work in Florida wa characterized by constructive leadership, not onl in his own church, but throughout the entir state. He held the important offices in h association and the State Conference, and in 191 Rollins College granted him the degree of Docto of Divinity.

As a preacher, he was scholarly and eloquent He combined the trained mind of the schola and thinker with the pastor's earnest desir to instruct and lead his people. He had a ver large, well-selected library and lived much i the fellowship of great writers. As pastor, h was faithful, warm-hearted, wise, commanding the respect of the community and drawing th church to him in real affection. When he close his ten-year pastorate in St. Petersburg, th church made him pastor emeritus and he honore this office as few pastors could do. Very beautiful was his loyalty and his trust in the young pastor, Dr. Kerrison Juniper, who later took up his work and carried it forward in new and ways, making the church Dr. Hoyt loved he really great churches of the denomina-Thus, he carried into his riper years the ism and ambitions of youth, with the ristian's zest for life and immortality.

e last years he published, Death A Birth fe Beyond, with sermons and addresses.
th of his wife a year ago left him alone eautiful home in St. Petersburg, in whose climate it became necessary for him to ost of each year. With the promise of er of years before him in this home so him, he recently was married to Mrs.
t Hoyt Brink. During his summer in gland, a serious illness closed a career by strict adherence to truth, loyalty to nd the church, significant in its devotion loved ones, and commanding the esteem ommunity and the world to which he had ted his very life.

Pitiless Publicity

Editor of The Congregationalist:

ches as well as business corporations
ed to advertise. It pays to advertise, always. The aim is to give informall attention to the virtues of an article, ce examination and arouse interest in e of increased trade or co-operation.
publicity exalted the virtues, then we well have much of it, but when news ce and anything and everything that s to have news value is eagerly sought, ay be a publicity that is harmful.
nister asked a reporter why he did not more prominently the regular services church. He was told that the regular per things did not possess much news ut rather the exceptional things were
"If you and one of your deacons get into an altercation and have a fist the midweek service we would be glad e that up." And so without regard to ct it will have, except in rare cases, publicity is given the most deplorable ns and the most serious tragedies.
sad to find with what readiness some ll rush into print and broadcast their es. Let their wills be crossed, not to do as they please, insisting upon g their own will, without considera-others and not sensing the untold hey may do, and some small dis-nt—and it is usually small—in meeting will be magnified, the public l of it, and the church get an evil nd prejudice aroused in many minds.
e possible ministers or churchmen will et revenge? Is the Christian heart so ristian, so full of selfishness, that it yield and work for the common good?
not enough charity that suffers long kind, that has enough long-suffering to allow church people to differ and riends and work in loyal co-operation?
y be true that each side has a real e, but will it improve matters to tell hborhood about it? Shall we seek to hers take sides? Misunderstandings

NOTICE

e National Council Office desires to a complete file of pictures of former rators. Pictures are desired of the wing:

REV. W. I. BUDINGTON
HON. L. S. FOSTER
HON. W. B. WASHBURN
HON. LORRIN A. COOKE

information that will assist in securing pictures will be greatly appreciated.

Address, National Council Office
Fourth Ave. New York City

are bound to come and woe to him by whom they come, but there is much more likelihood of a peaceful solution by conference and prayer than by each nailing up his theses that all may know the facts as he claims them to be.

In judging a matter as well as reporting it there are three requirements: that we have all the facts, are unbiased in our judgments, and have the correct standards. With all these, we should ask further, is it kind to tell, is it necessary, will it help? Many hearts are saddened and great harm is done to the work of the Kingdom by one church fight. And when schism has done her perfect work it may be you will find two hostile camps instead of brothers with good will. They may be enemies without mutual esteem and each seeking his own rather than another's good. Who dares take the responsibility for splitting a church, and how shall the separate parts ever be successful without the Spirit of Christ? The church is the corpus, the corporation, of Jesus, to act under the guidance of the Spirit, and hatred and love will not dwell together there. If minister or church member find after patient forbearance that fellowship is impossible, then let them quietly withdraw and remember to observe that silence is golden.

The church is faulty because composed of human elements but let us be jealous of her good name and not guilty of lessening her influence or hindering any soul from availing itself of her benefits. The Japanese soldier delights to give himself for the Emperor. Shall we not gladly sacrifice ourselves for the larger good of the Kingdom? The devout soul learns not to insist even on his manifest rights but rather accepts every consideration and opportunity as a privilege. He thinks of others' rights, not of his own. He does not stand upon his dignity. He is thankful he has so much; not disturbed because he receives so little. Let minister and church member remember the words of James, "The tongue is a little member, is set on fire of hell, and out of the same mouth may come blessing or cursing." Let us refuse publicity that will be unkind, accomplish no good, do untold harm, and dishonor Christ. Let us keep church fights out of the papers. It pays to advertise what draws us together and increases our mutual respect, but not our divisions nor our differences. Let them be untold.

GEORGE D. OWEN.

Fairhaven, Mass.

The Leper Who Came Back

This story is not about the one leper, who was a Samaritan, who turned back to give Jesus Christ thanks for his healing, but it is about a Good Samaritan who happens to be a Filipino.

Among the early converts of the missionaries who first went to Novotas, a large fishermen's village near Manila, was a young man of great zeal and earnestness named Victoriano Mauricio. He became a constant student of the Bible and was appointed first an exhorter and then a local preacher. He was present at all quarterly conferences to give in his report, showing the progress of his studies and the number of sermons he had preached and prayer meetings conducted.

But alas, Victoriano fell ill, and the doctor pronounced him "a leper."

Now the government of the Philippines has provided a colony for lepers on the Island of Culion, about two days' journey by boat south of Manila. Thither went Brother Mauricio, with many other lepers. They are still being gathered up at the rate of about one thousand a year from the various islands of the group. On the island of Culion the government has spent a great deal of money, and has built one of the finest sanitary villages to be found anywhere in the Orient. It is provided with clean streets, good living quarters, splendid artesian water, and electric lights, but no one, not even a leper, cares to go to Culion, for it means to him isolation, separation from friends, and probable death.

Victoriano took his Bible and his hymn-book with him. These two books the Filipino preacher always carries. He soon began singing in his home and on the streets, and in a short time gathered a company of faithful believers together. The American Mission to Lepers built him a church in which he has been preaching for a number of years. A couple of years ago a missionary and his wife came over from Cebu to live on the island eight months during the year, and with this encouragement the work has greatly prospered, until the church has had to be enlarged to more than double its former size. The leper members of this church themselves led a movement to build dormitories and a small hospital where the Protestant lepers could have proper attention. The government appropriations have not kept pace with the growing needs at Culion, although one-sixtieth of the appropriable money of the Philippine Government goes to the care and treatment of lepers. In a recent pronouncement by Governor General Wood, after a visit to Culion, the newspapers made him say that he expected to call upon the people of the United States for one million dollars in order that Culion might be properly equipped.

Now lo! a miracle takes place! Pastor Mauricio has been as faithful attending the clinic for treatment as he has been in looking after his church work. One day after examination the doctor said: "Victoriano, you are cured. In a short time we can send you home." To almost any other leper at Culion this would have meant release from prison and the charnel house of death. For a time Victoriano was very happy, but as the time came for him to leave he thought of the beloved members of his flock, and he went away with sorrowed anticipation. He was happy to get back to Novo-

(Continued on page 319)

An Instant Success

Hymns of the Christian Life

Edited by Milton S. Littlefield, D.D.

Published February 1st, 1925. Over 12,000 copies sold. Price $135.00 per hundred.

Examination copy on request

A. S. BARNES AND COMPANY

1855 7 W. 45th St., New York 1925

Buy a Bible

for yourself,
home, church or friend

Send for Catalog or call at the
Massachusetts Bible Society
41 Bromfield St., Boston

THE PILGRIM HYMNAL

"The best hymn book in America"

Sample copy on request

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston
156 5th Ave. New York
19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.
G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton
Rev. William E. Strong

Associate Secretaries
Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Ernest W. Riggs

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A.,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox,
Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries
Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.: Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York
Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.
Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulp
plies and Congregational ministers seeki torates. Maintained by the Congregation
ferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J.
Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Ch

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATIO SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Se and Missionary Education Se
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service an Education Se
Rev. Harry T. Stock,
Student and Young People's Se
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Ed
Program including Social Service, Mis Education, Student and Young People's aids Ministerial Students, University P directs campaign to secure Recruits for C Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHIN SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest denomination for the publication and distr of The Congregationalist, church school ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, t magazines, children's and young people's papers, and books for home and church us book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business M
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregat
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachus
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Co
tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook,
Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE IN 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. I
Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secret

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE P
760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs.
Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exe

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISS
FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs.
Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISS
UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Tre
Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Co tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCI constituent of the Congregational Home M ary Society, represents the churches of Ma setts in their home missionary work. The solicits bequests, pays annuities on cond gifts, administers trust funds for churches.
erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus
John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D.
Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Bost

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIA
Solicits gifts from churches and individual bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION O
TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object establishment and support of Evangelical C gational Churches and Sunday Schools in and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.;
Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entire Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invite tributions for this purpose. Bequests and A Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, S tendent; Rev. William F. English, Tre Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTI constituent of the National Society, solicit tributions, administers Special Trust for Ch and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts.
Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. Willi English, Treasurer, Congregational House, ford.

Leper Who Came Back

(Continued from page 317)

his friends and relatives were glad to

After a few months, however, Mauri- nd that he had left his heart in the urch in Culion, and made application n. This was granted, and today you l this Good Shepherd, a healed leper, and out among the afflicted people of Culion, ministering to them in the Master's name.

There are 5,500 lepers in Culion, provided with home and hospital by the government, but it remains for the church of Jesus Christ, through his appointed ministers, to bring unto them love, comfort, hope, and salvation. The churches of the United States are functioning in this way through the American Mission to Lepers, whose offices are at 156 Fifth Ave., New York City.

erican Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches.

s and Annuities are solicited in order that use may be freed from mortgage indebted- d the Association thus enabled to furnish ssionary Organizations with business offices imum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. dward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hub- reasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

n St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816 visitation and personal missionary service ction with our churches. Emergency re- creation and Fresh Air Work. Contribu- d legacies gratefully received and scrupu- dministered.

Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

ted Boston Reorganized 1922

an's Friend Society, Inc.

ociety, reorganized now fully rep- he Congregational of New England actical, social and work among sea- as finely equipped at 287 Hanover on, and at Vine- ven, and Reading t Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. ety provides dormitory accommodations, and recreation rooms, religious services, es, and games of many kinds, a restau- canteen, shower baths, postal and bank- ities. Donations and bequests solicited. ions received on an annuity basis. Pres- v. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore ld, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Charles E. Stratton: Chairman of Exec. anklin P. Shumway; Office, 618 Congre- House.

ican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

nly American undenominational interna- d national Society aiding seamen. ins a Sailors' Home and Institute at Street, New York City. Libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing v York. SHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). ecked and destitute seamen aided. ORTED by contributions and legacies. B. Calvert, D.D., President; George Webster, D.D., Secretary. ce C. Pinneo, Treasurer, 76 Wall St., k, to whom contributions may be sent.

erican Sunday School Union

hia, Pa. Founded 1817

l, Interdenominational. Establishes and Union Sunday Schools in the outlying stricts of the country. Publishes and moral and religious literature. Helps hes of Christ by its pioneer and founda- k, not duplicated by any other agency. d by voluntary gifts. Contributions so- nnuities arranged for. Legacies received. ions and communications relative to any part of the country may be sent to England office.

W. L. Carver, Supt., 8 Beacon St. Boston, Mass.

A Correction

In the issue of Aug. 13, on page 220, there was an item about the anniversary of Rev. C. E. Gordon, stating he had been 41 years in the ministry. It should have stated that he had been 49 years in the ministry.

RISIBLES

Fair Friend (as band strikes up a waltz): —"What's that out of?"

Distinguished Musician—"Tune."—London Mail.

As the dancer took his fair partner down to supper, she seemed to hypnotize the waiter told to serve them, for he seemed incapable of taking his eyes off her.

At last the dancer could stand it no longer.

"I say, my man," he observed, "what makes you stare so rudely at this lady?"

"It ain't rudeness, sir, believe me, it ain't," returned the waiter. "Its genuine admiration. This is the fifth time she's been down to supper tonight.—London Humorist.

His Last Sermonette

A minister was trying to make use of some safety matches which had been in the house for a long time. They would not light when scratched on the box. "Aha!" thought he, "they will make a good illustration for the children, of a life that has lost its religion."

On a Sunday not long after that, he was standing before the audience with his box of matches. He began to tell what he was to illustrate, and then scratched a match. To his surprise, it lighted. He tried another, and that also lighted. The talk was spoiled, and he had to admit it. He has given no object talks since.

Still more to mar the effect of the matches, a little fellow who had been present afterwards asked his aunt, "Why did Dr. B. have matches in church? Does he smoke?"

The minister on this Sunday morning forgot to read the order of service in the church calendar. An anthem had been inserted in place of one of the hymns. At that point, the minister rose, announced the number of hymn to be sung, and began to read it.

At the same time, the leader of the choir, intent upon his part of the program, signalled the choir, located back of the minister, to rise. He wondered why they stood up so reluctantly, he wondered why the faithful organist did not perform. Then realizing that there was confusion and a mistake, he signalled the choir to be seated.

The minister, unconscious of anything wrong in the choir, was much annoyed by smiles and broad grins in the pews. He felt of his tie—it was straight; he smoothed his hair, and kept on reading the hymn, which increased the humor of the whole situation:

In vain we sing our tuneful lays,
In vain we strive to rise.
Hosannas languish on our tongues,
And our devotion dies.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

September 3, 1925
Vol. CX No. 36

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

Rates: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. Remittances: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. Change of Address: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 291
Editorial—A Scientist Looks Ahead 292
Plans for the Philadelphia Exposition
Characteristics of the Present-Day Student, by Irving Maurer
Rally Day in the Churches—An Editorial Message 295
From Our Western Editor 296
The Church with a Burning Heart, by John Moore 297
This Is the Time, by Charles S. Tapley 298
Unofficial Efficiency, by Edwin H. Byington 299
The Women of Aigues-Mortes, by Newton M. Hall 300
An Impressive Service, by Ella Newhall Plimpton 301
The Kingdom Come, by Chester B. Emerson 301
Church Building Co-operation, by Frederick L. Fagley 302
Why Join the Church? 302
The Parable of the Disappearing Tent 302
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 303
Death of Frederick B. Bridgman 304
Isles of Shoals Conference 304
Wisconsin Conference 305
Criticism or Praise?, by John Harrison Allen 305
To Study Africa 305
Our Invalid Parish—"Alway, Alway Something Sings" 306
Closet and Altar 306
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 306
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 307
Congregational Churches and the Prayer Meeting, by Henry A. Stimson 307
Journeying, by Madella Mackenzie 307
Among the New Books 308
With the Children 309
Our Readers' Forum 310
News of the Churches 311

Johnny was asked if Edison made the first phonograph.

"I should say not, the first one was made of a rib," replied Johnny.

The little girl, with childlike frankness, was talking family affairs at the neighbor's. "Mamma wouldn't pay the telephone bill," she said, "and papa wouldn't pay it, and so now the phone is out of order."—Boston Transcript.

BIBLES FOR RALLY DAY

American Standard Version

NELSON SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLES

These Bibles contain the Old and New Testaments, and Practical Helps and Questions and Answers specially designed for the religious education of the young. Following the Helps there are a number of the fine old hymns and the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer, the Beatitudes, the Creed, the Parables of Jesus, the Miracles of Jesus, etc. All printed on fine white Bible paper, from clear type. A beautiful Bible that any boy or girl will be pleased to own.

Ruby Type, Illustrated. Size 32 mo., 3⅝ x 5⅝ inches and 1⅛ in. thick. With 31 full-page illustrations in Sepia and 6 colored maps.

50½—Leatheroid, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges. $1.85

68—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges. With 32 full colored illustrations. $2.60

NELSON POCKET SIZE BIBLES

Ruby Type. Pocket size, 32 mo., 3¾ x 5⅝ in. and 1⅛ in. thick.

Illustrated Edition. With 31 full-page illustrations in Sepia, and 6 colored maps. An ideal Bible for Sunday School use, combining good, readable type in a small size book. Printed on Fine White Bible Paper.

49L—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, gold edges. $2.25

49ML—Genuine smooth, dark maroon leather, overlapping covers, red under gold edge, ruby type; 32 full-page illustrations. Proven choice of the children. Size, 3½ x 5⅝ in. $2.25

49GL—Same as above: Dark green leather. $2.25

No. C142 RUBY TYPE BIBLE

With 31 Full-Page Illustrations in Sepia and Six Colored Ma
Size, 3½ x 5⅝ in.

Bound in Smyrna Morocco, sand grain, divinity circuit, ove lapping covers, silk headband, silk marker, embossed backband round corners, red under gold edges.

Publisher's Price, $2.25; Our Special Price, $2.

60—Bound in Cloth. Stiff covers, square corners, red edge Sunday School Scholar's Bible stamped in pure gold cover. No illustrations. 95 cen

MINION TYPE. Size, 24 mo., 4 x 6 in.
With 12 Colored Maps, and 25 Outline Maps Through the Tex

112—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, rou corners, red under gold edges $2.

MINION TYPE
Size 24 mo., 4 x 6 in. and 1⅝ in. thick. With 12 full colored map 25 outline maps and presentation page in colors.

110½—Leatheroid, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corner red under gold edges. $2.

135—Genuine Leather, overlapping covers, title in gold, red und gold edge, illustrated in color, maps, and helps. $3.

Minion Type. Size, 4 x 6 inches, 1½ in. thick. Containing 25 New Instructive Outline Maps.

101—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, tit stamped on back in pure gold. $1.

Special Book for Sunday Schools

NELSON HANDY SIZE BIBLES

Brevier Type. Size, 12 mo., 4⅞ x 7 in. and 1¾ in. thick.

This Bible is printed from large Brevier type, easy readin and in pocket size, light weight. Printed on Fine White Pape 190—Cloth, square corners, red edges. $1.

Rally Day and Reopening Day Post Cards

For All Departments in the Church School

PRICES:

20 cents a dozen; $1.25 a 100

Assorted as desired

No. 2400. For Cradle Roll and Beginners

No. 2402. For Juniors

No. 2403. For Intermediates, Seniors, and Young People

No. 2401. For Beginners, Primary, and Juniors

This new series is the most attractive we have ever offered our church schools. They are charmingly colored, reminding one of the strikingly beautiful Maxfield Parrish prints. Place for message on address side of card.

No. 2404. For Adults

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston

19 S. La Salle St., Chicag

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 37 September 10, 1925

First Congregational Church, Hollis, New Hampshire

Dedicated August 23, 1925. Rev. C. F. H. Crathern is the minister.

PROGRESS IN LEADERSHIP TRAINING

WEIGHTIER MATTERS OF THE LAW

A Sermon by Arthur Deering Call

The FALL CHURCH PROGRAM

I. Parish Study

A thoroughgoing study of the needs and opportunities of the parish is the first essential of success.

From this study of the parish and its needs the pastor and his workers will know where to begin and the direction in which to work that the church may go forward in its ministry to the community.

II. The Fellowship Visitation

The Fellowship Visitation can well interlock with this parish study. Let the Visitation begin with New Residents and the Unchurched.

A general Visitation of all the homes of the parish will do much to put the church and its program of worship and service into the thought of the people. One to two conferences should be held with the visitors before they go out to the homes of the community.

III. Church Rally Sunday

The second Sunday in October will be generally observed as Rally Day, but each church should select the day best suited to its needs.

The Fall Church Rally is the central feature of the Fall Program. The aim is to have every possible attendant in the House of God on a given day when the importance of church attendance and vital church connection shall be emphasized.

IV. The Autumn Ingathering

An Autumn ingathering has high value not only because those who unite with the church gain what amounts to almost a full year of service but also because such a reception of new members will give tone and meaning to the whole year's plan of church work.

For this ingathering a carefully selected Invitation or Membership Committee should be trained and with prayerful thought assigned particular individuals and families to visit. They should seek out these people with a view of securing them for membership in the church.

New Helps for Pastors and Church Workers

Text Book of the Invitation Committee. By Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, D.D.

The five lessons in this text book are valuable for class study and for private reading. This book will fill a long felt want. Send for free sample. $3.00 per 100.

Four New Leaflets on the Church and the Community

These leaflets are the result of the practical experience of a pastor who specialized in Community Service. They are valuable for mailing to the parish or for distribution at church. They are without imprint and each has space for the pastor to add his own message and signature.

The Fellowship Series . . . 1 cent each.

No. 1—Why the Church is of Value to You.
No. 2—What the Church Should Do for the community.
No. 3—How You Can Help This Church.
No. 4—What This Church Offers You.

A Sample of No. 1 has been mailed all pastors with "An Outline of the Fall Program." The same material will be mailed free to any church worker on request.

For additional information address

THE COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM AND DEVOTIONAL LIFE of the NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Rev. William Horace Day, Chairman
Rev. Louis T. Reed, Vice-Chairman
Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, Secretary

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | September 10, 1925 | No. 37

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.
Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh — News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D. — Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

Beautiful Little Church

WE are pleased to publish upon our cover this week a picture of the new church building in Hollis, N. H. is a fine example of the possibilities of combining onomy, utility, and beauty in a small country or village urch. It is a churchly church, in which one feels the orshipful atmosphere and sees the symbolism of the nctuary. And it is a true Congregational church. Dr. athern deserves much credit for his leadership in this oject. Others will be helped by this practical example what can be done in a rural community.

eath of British Weekly Editor

HE British Weekly, which so recently experienced a seemingly irreparable loss in the death of its great itor, Sir William Robertson Nicoll, has sustained a rther loss in the sudden death of his notable successor, ev. J. M. E. Ross. In taking up the work as editor of e British Weekly following Dr. Nicoll's long and emi-nt association with the paper, Dr. Ross faced what emed to many a well-nigh impossible task. A small man ould have succumbed readily to either of two tempta-ons—that of slavishly imitating his predecessor, or of aking such a complete departure from the traditions the paper as to indicate a somewhat wilful and pre-mptuous spirit. Dr. Ross successfully avoided both ese pitfalls. Without subjecting the paper to conspicu-s change he quietly and unostentatiously put into it ements of individuality and personality. One felt the continuance of the traditions with the consciousness of a firm hand still at the rudder. We have heard many who, like ourselves, have been readers of the British Weekly of long standing, comment upon the effective, yet unassuming way in which Dr. Ross proved equal to his time of testing. Nothing could, of course, exactly take the place of Dr. Nicoll's own most distinctive contributions, but apart from that it is doubtful whether the British Weekly in recent years has ever been better than during the brief period of Dr. Ross' editorship.

The Coal Strike

THE union miners and the operators of the anthracite coal mines of Pennsylvania have disagreed again, and again the mines have been closed. As heretofore it is a strike and a lockout against the public. The press reports indicate the same old fighting attitude which has characterized the relationships between the union miners and their employers in recent years. Selfishness, disregard of the public welfare, and a course which in the long run is bound to react against both miners and mine operators, seem evident. There has been no serious effort to reach an agreement on either side. Both sides have their grievances; ultimately they will have to be faced and adjusted. When will men learn to settle their differences before rather than after a costly struggle?

The miners want ten per cent. more wages and the "check-off" method of collecting union dues by the companies from the miners' wages. The operators refuse these demands. One effect of the high prices and uncertain supply of anthracite coal has been to bring in a larger use of substitutes—soft coal, coke, and oil. The market of these substitutes is rapidly increasing, as it should increase.

Leadership Training

WE are glad to be able to give liberal space in this issue to the subject of leadership training. A rapidly rising movement is developing among our Congregational young people which gives great promise for the future. The secretaries of our Education Society and the editors and writers of our Publishing Society are in the van of progress in this work. The articles by Secretaries Gates, Gammon, and Grey are suggestive and helpful as they explain the objectives, the study material, and report what is being done in different parts of the country. Especially noteworthy is the work of the young people's summer conferences, which Dr. Gammon discussed at length in The Congregationalist of Aug. 27. Interpretative reports of these conferences have been appearing in our recent issues, and are worthy of careful reading. There, certainly, is effective leadership training. Our churches need to have more teacher training classes and more classes in which the broader purpose of training for Christian leadership is developed. The future of the whole Christian enterprise depends upon preparation today of those who are to lead tomorrow.

Unjustifiable Pessimism

A CORRESPONDENT in Oregon sends us a clipping from the Washington Farmer of Aug. 20, which says:

The union of Congregational, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches in Canada, completed only last June, is said to be falling apart already. A dispatch from Montreal quotes leading members of the respective churches as saying that the consolidation has been a distinct failure.

We have not seen this "dispatch from Montreal," and this is the first we have heard of the union of Canadian churches "falling apart." On the contrary, there are many indications that the United Church is solving the inevitable problems of denominational administration and of local readjustment as rapidly and satisfactorily as could be expected. In some communities, where division was acute, the situation is exceedingly difficult, but reports in Canadian papers that have not been particularly favorable to the union movement indicate that the anti-union element, claiming to be the "continuing Presbyterian" church, is suffering more than the United Church from the weakness incident to such local division. The tendency, in fact, has been where a Presbyterian congregation was hopelessly divided over the question of union, for the pro-union element to withdraw and unite with local Methodists and Congregationalists to form a strong congregation of the new United Church, leaving the anti-union Presbyterian element so weakened numerically and financially that the problem of carrying on has been so beset with difficulties as to leave the future uncertain.

"Dispatches from Montreal" regarding church union should be read with reservation of judgment and with consideration of their source. Montreal is one of the outstanding centers of anti-union sentiment, and the anti-union movement has had much of its narrowest and bitterest expression in that quarter. If one desires to know the facts it is worth while to consult Montreal men lik our own correspondent, Principal D. L. Ritchie, Rev. W. G. Ward, and Rev. Richard Roberts—all men wh are sympathetic with the church union movement, bu who by training, heredity, and circumstance, as new comers to Canada, are sufficiently detached to view a that is happening with a certain impartiality that is no likely to be present in the Presbyterian partisan of unio ism or anti-unionism. Above all, let us repeat what w have formerly said, that it will take years instead o months to reveal the true significance and effective result of the movement that has created the United Church o Canada.

* *

A correspondent asks, "Will it ever be possible an practical (possibly the idealist may make it practical) t have a Protestant service on the Sabbath at 6.30 A.M.? It is further explained by this earnest inquirer that h believes there are places where working people who mus work on Sunday would welcome the opportunity fo early morning worship. What do others say to the sug gestion? Has it been tried?

What Mr. Lawson Has Done

ON our Western Editor's page, Dr. Gammon tells th story of the generous gifts which the late Victo Lawson of Chicago made through his will. As reporte these gifts include $50,000 for the American Boar $25,000 each for Northland, Berea, Wheaton, and Yankto Colleges, $50,000 for the Northfield schools, $100,000 eac to the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., th Chicago Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Chicago Common and Chicago Theological Seminary. The Chicago Co gregational Missionary Society receives $1,300,000 i trust. It also shares in the income of residuary trus funds, which are expected to be large; the Chicago Sem nary and Chicago Y. M. C. A. are also residuary legatee Some fifteen institutions have legacies from the fortu of this Congregational layman.

Congregationalists everywhere will rejoice with u that Chicago Seminary is to have its financial resource increased in such generous measure. It will make possib the immediate development of a policy of expansion an enlarged service which will be the realization of dream which hitherto have seemed to be far in the uncertai future. The good news which the will brings was complete surprise to Dr. Davis and his associates in th Seminary. There will be money to raise, but the heav financial burden has been lifted, and a great new fiel of opportunity opens before the Seminary.

The good fortune of the Chicago City Missionary S ciety opens other doors of opportunity for the Congreg tionalists of Chicago which will challenge the wisdo and statesmanship of their leaders. We may expect t see the development of a policy of church extension an church service which will be distinctive and far-reachin in their benefits. This is a highly commendable inves ment of the millions thus set apart by Mr. Lawson.

Other men of wealth may be helped by Mr. Lawson example to endow some of our great Congregational e terprises, which otherwise struggle for money and ar seriously limited in the service which they can rende

Ve hope other city missionary societies may be set free o do what needs to be done in the great centers of popu-ation, and which is hardly possible except as people of ealth contribute large endowment funds for them. A onderful new day would come for all our missionary so-ieties, our Christian colleges and seminaries, and our hurches, if our friends of large means would so invest eir fortunes that these agencies may have adequate en-owment for strong and constant service in the future. ere is the call of stewardship and of Christian states-anship.

Memory in Religious Life

DAVID BELASCO contributed an editorial on Faulty Modern Memory to the Boston Herald recently. The oted playwright asserted that "the greatest human fail-ng" of our times is lack of memory training. Another rominent newspaper printed a dialogue in which two oung business men—successful and evidently recent raduates of college—discuss with ludicrous results the alue of the classics in their contribution to English and ommon knowledge. "The majority of men," said Mr. elasco, "neglect this greatest of all attributes, memory." Ve touch a key to certain pre-eminent difficulties in re-gious life and organization. Young people's work and e church school reflect this same neglect. A midweek ervice, surviving the wrecks of time, indicate it. In the ulpit there is too often a painful evidence of the ability o forget. After fifty years Mr. Belasco stated that he ould repeat verbatim intricate speeches from rôles layed and could recall in their entirety plays written those early days. He pointed out that not only great riters possess minds which "are storehouses of facts," ut that modern inventors must have "super memories."

From this angle the reader will note that the Church reveals a striking and lamentable ignorance of the Bible. Men and women are unable to use it effectively. High school youth in general have not the passwords of its fixed personalities. They are unable to quote from the Scriptures, the finest body of world literature. Possibly numerous and variant versions discourage attempts to memorize. Probably our complex life presents too many appeals; it divides time, interest, and energy. There should be a revival of direct quotation. In the field of Christian religion the Bible should be read with a view to impressing the mind with its finer passages.

There are a few clergymen known to us who invariably present the Scripture lesson without the book. Such a method challenges attention. It illumines the reading. No minister can follow this custom without increasing intelligent expression. The very process leads to interpretation. If the price is high, results correspond. Congregations might well sing familiar songs without the hymnal for better and more spontaneous production. That which is doubtless even more to the point is to be found in an application of Dr. Chalmers' famous word: "The expulsive power of a new affection." Modern novels with their too frequent obsessions, popular songs with jazz words, poetry which forgets high standards in morals, or that aims at mere amusement, do not equip a treasure-house of memory. These are only substitutes. In life's crises they neither comfort nor enrich. Memory is to be fed with good. We must find room in our minds for the choice and rewarding. If we desire we can make place for the best. But remembrance can never serve a double standard with high efficiency and blessing. There is connection between true life and what we once called learning by heart.

Tolerance

THE Christian world is confronted today with no deeper or more serious question than that of determining the nature and status of tolerance, and of defining om a Christian standpoint its limitations and inade-uacies, or its sanctions and its demands. Is tolerance moral liability or a spiritual asset, a defect or a virtue? it something that Christians should assiduously culti-ate and practice? Or is it something that men of honesty nd of intensity of conviction must eschew as partaking compromise with what they deem to be error and sin?

It would seem that the matter ought to be very readily ttled in the teaching and practice of Jesus of Nazareth, ho based his religion in its origin, nature, and expres-on wholly upon love. And love would appear to be the ry essence and motive-power of tolerance. But plaus-le theories and practical attitudes have been substituted r the simple obligations of love; or the sense of fear nd the apprehension of danger have stampeded the moral nd spiritual realm with very much the same spirit with hich militaristic passions supplant all sense of the ob-gations of brotherly love in times of national peril or of ternational strife. Hence it arises that the intolerance, at would seem on the face of it contrary to the spirit Christian love, becomes regarded in some quarters, even in the very name of Christ, as a peculiar merit of strength, conviction, and intensity. Men pride themselves upon their intemperate devotion to their party, or their principles, or their cause, or their church or denomination. They make such a veritable cult of intensity, if not of a sort of swashbuckling, that they feel no obligation to love or understand those whom they deem their opponents. Patience, fairness, magnanimity are foreign to this dogmatic and crusading temperament, and the very symbols and expressions of this type of religion become redolent of the militancy of implacable enmity. The bombardment, the charge, and the firing line soon supplant in such militant Christianity the symbols of love and of vicarious suffering.

If it be urged that the symbols of militancy are freely employed in the New Testament it should be remembered that, though Jesus spoke of division and of the coming of the sword as inevitable in the challenge of his teaching, he placed the responsibility for these things upon the foes of his kingdom, and distinctly repudiated the spirit and weapons of warfare as a means of maintaining and advancing his own cause. Also, if Paul urged the Christian to put on his whole armor, it must be remembered that it was the "armor of God" and that the very feet that brought man into the fray were to be shod with "the preparation of the gospel of peace."

The case for tolerance as a Christian virtue, and as a blossoming of the Christian virtues, was ably stated some years ago by Phillips Brooks in two lectures which have been recently republished in a little volume under the title, Tolerance (Dutton. $1.00). These lectures, primarily addressed to the students of divinity schools, are of such profound importance for all Christians that we should deem it a high service to the cause of true religion to assist in securing for this volume wide circulation in Christian circles everywhere.

Bishop Brooks distinguished between tolerance and toleration, the former a temper or disposition, the latter "the behavior in which that disposition finds expression." He chose to speak of tolerance because it is larger than toleration, and in this he showed the insight that one would expect to find in a man of masterly penetration. The problem that is confronting the world today is not that merely of toleration, but that of tolerance. One constantly finds that men who are sheer fire-eaters in their writings and in their public advocacy of particular causes are tolerant enough in personal contact. But what is the value of toleration in minor, private contacts, when a man has done all in his power to produce an intolerant spirit in those who take his words and attitude seriously? What we want to know today is whether tolerance as a principle is right and sound, or whether it is weak and harmful. If toleration is virtuous and praiseworthy in private intercourse, is not tolerance a virtuous principle? Why should men be tolerant even in minor relationships if tolerance itself be not a good thing?

Phillips Brooks comes straight to the heart of the matter in asserting that true tolerance is characterized as much by positive conviction, as by sympathy with men whose convictions differ from our own. He repudiates in the very beginning of his argument the saying of Charles James Fox that "the only foundation for tolerance is a degree of scepticism," and he repudiates equally as "melancholy words" the statement of "a most respected clergyman of my own town" at the dedication of a statue of John Harvard, implying that intolerance was a necessary concomitant of earnestness and conviction. This Boston clergyman had said of the Puritans: "They were intolerant, as all men, the world over, in all time, have always been, and will always be, when they are in solemn earnest for truth or error." In calling these "melancholy words," Phillips Brooks adds that "the historical fact is melancholy enough," and he sees likewise something profoundly melancholy in the suggestion that earnestness and tolerance must always be divorced. "That condemns mankind," he says, "to an endless choice between earnest bigotry and tolerant indifference."

Against such a position Phillips Brooks take a clear and unqualified stand. He asserts most emphatically that "so far from earnest personal conviction and generous tolerance being incompatible with one another, the two are necessary each to each," and he quotes the words of Frederick Maurice to the effect that "charity is founded on the certainty of truth."

This is putting the matter of tolerance upon its high, true, and proper ground, and Phillips Brooks finely distinguishes between real tolerance and the pseudo-toler ance of mere indifference to truth and an indulgent att tude toward wrong. He analyzes the nature of toleranc with masterly precision, and with equal skill surveys th historical expression of tolerance and intolerance. Find ing, in this survey, the imperfections of historical Chri tianity mainly in the failure to accompany earnestnes with the spirit of Christian love, Phillips Brooks place the hope for the future in the dominance of men by th personality of Christ. To be at once "men of truth" an "men of Christ," revealing his spirit in all inquiry, acti ity, and relationship, is the sure and inevitable highwa to that tolerance in which intensity of devotion to trut and right is inextricably woven with the Christian spir of courtesy, kindliness, consideration, and good will.

Having asserted with great clearness the nature an law of tolerance as a Christian principle, Phillips Brook in his second lecture defines with equal clearness wha ought to be its practical manifestations. "The Churc which is," he says, "the home of clear faith and spiritua consecration, ought to be the citadel of tolerance." Her Bishop Brooks suggests the deeper problem of toleran arising out of the question of what ought to be the Chri tian's attitude toward the thing that he believes to b "totally and irremediably bad." One wishes that upo this point there might have been in addition to sugge tion the minute analysis and treatment that are accorde the nature and practice of tolerance in the Church, b Bishop Brooks, addressing divinity students, was co cerned chiefly with the means of attaining tolerance the world of religious relationships. He does, howeve define with much value a basal principle in the exerci of tolerance toward evil and evil-doers. "Stand guard he says, "over your moral condemnation." It is to be e ercised with clear discrimination between error and gui

This particular phase of tolerance is one that will be much careful study, examination, and restatement. lies near the very soul of a redemptive gospel. One wou not in any way disparage the emphasis upon ethics or t zeal of the crusading reformer, but there is a danger th ethical interest may lack warmth, and that the reformi spirit may lack kindliness. Neither ethics nor zeal entirely Christian until each is dominated with a gre compassion. We are challenged anew with the questi whether there be a sound and true ideal in the verse:

> There is no place where earth's sorrows
> Are more felt than up in Heaven;
> There is no place where earth's failings
> Have more kindly judgment given.

If that is a true expression of Heaven, and of Heaven attitude, we need more of that particular sort of Heav on earth, and especially of that sort of Heaven in t Church.

It is a vast theme, this of tolerance, and we hope return to it. There is need at present of a careful anal sis of the nature and effects of intolerance, which is e pressing itself in many forms, and which is taking itself the prestige of great organizations and great name In America at present, religiously, politically, social the peace, safety, happiness, and destiny of the dem racy depend upon clear vision and courageous practice the matter of tolerance. There is profound need that re gious teachers should themselves see clearly.

From Our Western Editor

Victor Lawson's Funeral and Will

The funeral of Mr. Victor F. Lawson, ose death was noted in this department t week, was one of the most unique ever d in this section. It was conducted by sident Ozora S. Davis in the New Eng- d Congregational Church, of which Mr. wson and his wife were long-time mem- s. This church had filled a large place in life. He joined it as a young man, soon er he became a Christian under the aching of Dwight L. Moody. He found bride there and there they were married, l this church, his home, and the Daily ws were the three great interests of his . The funeral occasion brought together ding newspaper men of the world, the e-President of the United States, the yor of Chicago, many leading men and nen in all fields of human endeavor in Middle West, fellow church members of . Lawson, and ministers and leaders of ious denominations. In the great bank flowers was a bouquet sent by President lidge.

The service was exceedingly simple. It sisted of the rendering of three hymns a chorus choir, the reading of several sages from Mr. Lawson's Bible, and a ef address. The hymns were, "America Beautiful," "Lead, Kindly Light," and ne Homeland." The passages read were ones most heavily underscored in Mr. wson's Bible. To two of these passeges he l evidently turned for inspiration and ength when he was tempted to lower his ndard of work, and to the other two he l gone for comfort in days of loneli- s and bereavement. The passages are tthew 7: 24-27, which reads:

Every one therefore that heareth these rds of mine, and doeth them, shall be ened unto a wise man, who built his house on the rock; and the rain descended, and floods came, and the winds blew, and at upon that house; and it fell not: for was founded upon the rock. And every e that heareth these words of mine, and eth them not, shall be likened unto a fool- man, who built his house upon the sand: l the rain descended, and the floods came, l the winds blew, and smote upon that use; and it fell: and great was the fall reof.

And I Esdras 4: 33-41:

Then the king and the nobles looked one on another; so he began to speak concern- truth. O sirs, are not women strong? eat is the earth, high is the heaven, swift the sun in his course, for he compasseth heavens round about, and fetcheth his rse again to his own place in one day. Is not great that maketh these things? there- e great is truth, and stronger than all ngs. All the earth calleth upon truth, and e heaven blesseth her: all works shake and mble, but with her is no unrighteous thing. ne is unrighteous, the king is unrighteous, men are unrighteous, all the children of n are unrighteous, and unrighteous are such their works; and there is no truth them; in their unrighteousness also they all perish. But truth abideth, and is ong forever; she liveth and conquereth evermore. With her there is no accept- ing of persons or rewards; but she doeth the things that are just, and refraineth from all unrighteous and wicked things; and all men do well like of her works. Neither in her judgment is any unrighteousness; and she is the strength, and the kingdom, and the power, and the majesty, of all ages. Blessed be the God of truth. And with that he held his tongue. And all the people then shouted, and said, Great is truth, and strong above all things.

The other passages were Isaiah 41: 8-10:

But thou, Israel, my servant Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend, thou whom I have taken hold of from the ends of the earth, and called from the corners thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant, I have chosen thee and not cast thee away; fear thou not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.

The last passage was the familiar ninety-first Psalm.

Mr. Lawson had not received a college training, but he was, in the best sense of the word, a man of wide culture and reading. He had been fifty years an editor and an editor has focused upon him the tides of the human heart. He had abundant opportunity during the fifty years to find the real answer to humanity's question, "Oh, where shall rest be found?" This newspaperman, acknowledged to be one of the greatest of this newspaper age, found his poise, his security, his inspiration, and his strength for the unknown future in the Bible and in the Eternal Spirit, which he believed to be the spirit of the Bible. He was pre-eminently a man of two books—the Bible and the dictionary.

It is remarkable that Mr. Lawson should have found one of his favorite passages in the apocryphal Book of Esdras, and yet the passage sets forth the dominating purpose of his lifework. He had a passion for honesty, for sincerity, and for truth. He did not seek to make his paper sensational, but he did wish for it above everything else to state the facts and to state them in the proper perspective. He was a man of calmness and poise. His comrades in the service describe moments of great excitement in the Daily News office when everybody else yielded save Mr. Lawson. These Scripture passages also indicate that he was a man of deep, sincere religious life and that he tried to have his religion rule him in business relationships and that he found comfort in it in the days of sorrow and bereavement. In these times when wealth and the luxury that it will buy, furnish many seeming panaceas for the ailments of the human soul, this man, who had at hand everything that wealth and education could furnish, found his healing not in them, but in the Eternal.

* *

Mr. Lawson's will is a most revealing document. It indicates that his supreme interests in life were religion and education. Perhaps Mr. Lawson was, in the best interpretation of the term, the most finished man of the world in the Middle West. He was a real cosmopolitan—he was equally at home in his own office or in the offices of the great metropolitan newspapers of Europe. He was in a real sense a world spirit. He ought to have been a good judge of the things that are to last. He staked his major benevolences on religion and education—he believed the Scriptures when they say that the seen is temporal, but the unseen eternal.

He remembered in his will, first of all, relatives, friends, and employees. This quiet man, who exhibited little emotion in public and whose name was never allowed to appear in his newspaper for publicity's sake until after he was dead, had a passion for friendship. He remembered his associates in service, from editor to chauffeur, and they speak of his relationship with them in affectionate terms. He was generous with all of them, but his large gifts went to religion and education. Here is the list:

Chicago Congregational Missionary and Ex- [illegible] who would needlessly set foot upon a worm." In one of his most impassioned speeches Mr. Emerson said: "The sentiment of mercy is the natural recoil which the laws of the universe provide to protect mankind from destruction by savage passions." Elsewhere he said: "I do not mean by 'gentlemen,' people of scented air and perfumed handkerchiefs, but men of gentle blood and of generosity, 'fulfilled with all nobleness,' who, like the Cid, give the outcast leper a share of their bed; like the dying Sidney, pass the cup of cold water to the dying soldier who needs it more. For what is the oath of gentle blood and knighthood? What but to protect the weak and lowly against the strong oppressor?" Mercy is the echo to the Orphic lute of love. That story of that otherwise unknown Samaritan along that road to Jericho is the greatest exposition of social welfare ever written.

Faith

But neither justice nor mercy would long endure without a belief that they are both worth while. It is a beautiful fact of history that men and women have believed in those high qualities which we call honor, loyalty to a promise, justice, and mercy. Our world has believed, does believe, and will continue to believe in these things. The noun for this word believe is faith. It is a sincere thing. In religion it is beyond the reach of the senses or of logical proof. It is of the very essence of religion. It is a spiritual apprehension. It is the chief and never-failing demand of Jesus. "All things are possible to him that believeth."

Yet we, like the scribes and Pharisees, are diseased with self-seeking egotisms and fetishes. We, too, exploit our religious shibboleths with irreligious fervors and hates. It sometimes seems as if we shall never get over our theological hair-splittings over the problem of "original sin," of "the origin of evil," of "predestination," of "who was Cain's wife," or "did Joshua stop the sun on Gibeon and the moon in the valley of Aijalon," and the like. As if these ever presented a practical difficulty to any one, ever cast a real obstacle in the way of one honest achievement. Emerson with his sure touch placed

"I Would Not Forget"

By Florence Lane Dresser

In the Great Silence as I quiet lie,
With every pleasure past and cares that fret,
Some little things I loved on Earth one while,
I'd not forget.

The first soft light that steals across the sky,
Telling the night has gone and that the day,
One of the world's great miracles, once more
Is on its way;

The misty look that comes to boughs once bare,
And then the tender green that covers all,
The gleam of blue-bird's wing, and pattering down
The warm rain's fall.

The first glad thrilling note the robin sings,
While yet the chill of winter's cold is here,
Sounding at early morn and at day's close,
So sweet, so clear.

These little things and more I could not name,
To which life's hours forever are in debt,
Because they make its pleasures, soothe its pain,—
I'd not forget.

stantly finds that men who are sheer writings and in their public advocacy o are tolerant enough in personal contac value of toleration in minor, private man has done all in his power to proand spirit in those who take his words and What we want to know today is whe principle is right and sound, or whet harmful. If toleration is virtuous a private intercourse, is not tolerance a Why should men be tolerant even in if tolerance itself be not a good thing?

Phillips Brooks comes straight t matter in asserting that true tolera as much by positive conviction, as by whose convictions differ from our ow the very beginning of his argument t
James Fox that "the only foundatio degree of scepticism," and he repudia ancholy words" the statement of "a m man of my own town" at the dedic
John Harvard, implying that intolera concomitant of earnestness and conv clergyman had said of the Puritans:
ant, as all men, the world over, in a been, and will always be, when they a for truth or error." In calling these Phillips Brooks adds that "the histo choly enough," and he sees likewise s melancholy in the suggestion that ea ance must always be divorced. "T kind," he says, "to an endless cho bigotry and tolerant indifference."

Against such a position Phillips and unqualified stand. He asserts mo
"so far from earnest personal conv tolerance being incompatible with o are necessary each to each," and he Frederick Maurice to the effect that on the certainty of truth."

This is putting the matter of tole true, and proper ground, and Phillip

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Monument of Lysikrates

We journied unto the land of the Grecians, and sojourned in the city of Athens. And it was many years since I had been there, but I felt at home.

And we came unto a small circular building that stood where the ways met, and I said unto Keturah, This is the choragic monument of Lysikrates.

And Keturah said, I never heard of him.

And I said, Neither did any one else, save as men speak his name when they behold this monument.

And Keturah said, It is little to a man's credit to have a Monument by which he is to be remembered if there be nothing but his name to remember.

And I said, Thou art a wise woman, and I agree with thee as usual.

And she said, Tell me what is a choragic monument?

And I said, When a man excelled in poetry or song, or became a winner in the games, they gave him a prize, which in itself was a thing of not much worth, and was commonly a small Tripod, about like the black walnut card-receiver in thy mother's front hall, save that this was of bronze, and possibly a trifle more Artistick. And each of the winners of those Tripods said within himself, I will erect this Tripod on a Monument fronting on Main Street in order that all the Athenians and all visitors in Athens as long as the world shall stand shall know that I was a Winner. And the Street was once lined with such like monuments all the way from the base of the Acropolis to the Hotel Grande Britagne, if that or the butter they serve in it were there in that day. But of all those Monuments erected by men who won the Marathon or recited the Prize Poem, or wrote the Best Seller, or delivered the best oration on the League of Nations or the Dawes Plan, this one only remaineth.

And Keturah said, It is fortunate for Lysikrates that it was his monument that happened to stand. And yet I think I should not care for a monument of that sort.

And I said, It serveth a very useful pu pose. In the first place, it is the oldest e isting building of the Corinthian order. A in the next place it showeth that he wh setteth out to win fame, and appeareth win it, hath less than one per cent. of chance that his monument will mean an thing to posterity concerning himself.

And Keturah said, It is a very attracti little building. Let us enjoy it for its ow sake, and forget Lysikrates.

And I said, The world hath already fo gotten him, and we will do likewise.

Among the New Books

CYCLOPEDIA OF PASTORAL METHODS, co piled and edited by G. B. F. HALLOCK (Dor $2.50 net). A volume of prayers and of de catory forms and ceremonies for special oc sions, weddings, funerals, Communion servic baptisms, confirmations, and ordinations.

PSYCHOLOGY FOR BIBLE TEACHERS, by H
WARD ALDRIDGE ANNETT (Scribners. $1.5
The author has spent fifteen years in India
the director of teacher-training for the Worl
Sunday School Association. The present v ume, though academic in its backgrounds, non-technical and is intended as a clear sta ment for those who are not necessarily vers in psychology of the laws and discoveries that science as they apply to teaching, and pecially to the teaching of the Bible. It is valuable treatise, worthy of commendation all who are engaged in the teaching of the Bib
The appendices provide lists of reference lit ature for each chapter and interesting sugg tions concerning subjects for research and d cussion.

MORE PSYCHOLOGY AND THE CHRISTIAN LI
by T. W. PYM (Doran. $1.60). Mr. Pym, w is head of Cambridge House, and Chaplain
King George V, has written a former volu on Psychology and the Christian Life to whi this is a sequel. The present volume, howev stands by itself, and may be read without ref ence to the former book and also without pre ous knowledge of psychology. Its chapter he ings indicate its scope: The Will and the Im ination, Instinct and Imagination, Psychol in the Bible, and General Conclusions. In last chapter are references to Emotionali and Exploitation, Dope in Organized Religi etc. The treatment is practical and unconv tional, and the book provides much sane wholesome illustration.

Weightier Matters of the Law

A sermon preached in the Mt. Pleasant Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., August 9, 1925

By Arthur Deerin Call

(EDITORS' NOTE—Mr. Call is a layman of . Pleasant Church, and the competent edi- of the "Peace Advocate.")

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith.

THESE words, spoken by Jesus to the . crowds, including his friends, on his last irney into Jerusalem, were bold, uncom- table, bitter, terrible words. They mark e final break between this reformer and e rulers of his day. This is but one of ven indictments, the severity of which is equaled in literature. Our sense of the lemnity of these words is deepened when recall that they were uttered by one lly conscious not only of their significance, t of the fact that they meant his convic- n and punishment unto death.

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, pocrites! For ye tithe mint and anise and mmin, and have left undone the weightier atters of the law, justice, and mercy, and ith."

Certainly the religious condition of the ople of that day was in a bad way. There as no little adherence to the letter of the w. While men were professionally pious, ey struggled for mastery, attempting to alt themselves at the expense of others; ey scoffed at the religion of any who might ffer from them; they proselyted and ren- red no service to their proselytes. Their ligion ended with the mouthing of phrases; ey contented themselves with ceremonials til they were likened unto whited sepul- ers, which outwardly appear beautiful but wardly are full of dead men's bones and all uncleanness. The most striking fact is at they were supporting their institutions religion without any regard for the fun- mental things in religion. For example, ey supported their religious institutions by ntributing anise, a sort of parsley, and hag- ed over the question of whether or not they ould give the flower, the seed, the stock, me two of them, or all three. They were ying to obey the law at as little expense s possible. They were of the kind who to- ay would put a dime in the plate if they ink themselves observed; if no one be look- g, they may make it a nickel or a button r a deceiving gesture. They had no sense r the weightier matters of the law, justice, nd mercy, and faith.

JUSTICE

Jesus charged them to observe the weight- r matter of justice. That men aspire to stice is one of the great hopes of the orld. Because of it we have integrity, just ealing, fairness, balance, impartiality, ruth. Without it society could not endure. The difference between an educated intel- gence and an uneducated intelligence lies rincipally in this: the educated intelligence ees things in their right relations, the un- educated intelligence does not. The uneduc- ated intelligence emphasizes unimportant things as important, and the important as unimportant. This process of seeing things in relation is human thought. When we are thinking we are seeing things in relation. When we are seeing things in relation, we are thinking, judging. When we are judg- ing we are testing the fair principles of justice. In the last analysis, therefore, jus- tice is simply horse sense. The pathos of evil is its insult to justice. The remedy for crime is not to repeat a creed, to put a coin in the contribution box, to hold the mouth at a certain angle, to tithe mint or anise or cummin, but to pursue what an an- cient Roman lawgiver once called "the con- stant and unchanging will to give every one his due," which is justice.

Justice, the goal of law, what Disraeli called "truth in action," is the soul of gov- ernment. It may become a moral dynamite and end in the wreck of empires. "Without justice," said Augustine—great father of the Christian Church—"what are kingdoms but highway robberies on a grand scale?" Speak- ing in Pittsburgh, July 4, 1902, President Roosevelt said: "In the last analysis the most important department of civilized gov- ernment is the department of justice. . . . Justice, which means that each man, rich and poor, big or small, strong or weak, shall have his rights and shall not be allowed to do wrong to his fellows." When in November, 1918, it was announced to Cardinal Mercier that the World War was over, he remarked, "Today I have but one thought—justice and God." It was inevitable that Jesus should call justice one of the weightier matters of the law.

MERCY

But justice is not all. I am the editor of a magazine nearly a century old, devoted to an international peace through justice. But justice is not enough. There is a certain lack of warmth and color about justice. A world of justice would be, I believe, a world with- out strife and bloodshed; but life demands something more than the mere absence of a tooth and claw behavior.

Perhaps the most familiar word of the French language is merci, meaning thanks. This word comes down out of a worthy past. It is a relative of our word reward. It is of the same blood with our words pity and mercy. He who acts with compassion to serve one in trouble is obeying a higher law than the law of justice: it is the law of mercy. The Hebrews considered their God as a God of mercy. We are led to believe that a frequent emotion in the breast of Jesus was mercy.

"A certain man was going down from Jeru- salem to Jericho; and he fell among robbers, who both stripped him and beat him, and departed, leaving him half dead. And by chance a certain priest was going down that way, and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side. And in like manner a Levite also, when he came to the place, and saw him, passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was, and when he saw him, he was moved with compassion, and came to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring on them oil and wine; and he set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. And on the morrow he took out two shillings, and gave them to the host, and said, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, I, when I come back again, will repay thee."

A readiness to help and to forgive is mercy. Mercy is not a mere sentiment. It is an active, a performing, a functioning ex- pression. Cowper would not enter upon his list of friends any man "who would need- lessly set foot upon a worm." In one of his most impassioned speeches Mr. Emerson said: "The sentiment of mercy is the natural recoil which the laws of the universe pro- vide to protect mankind from destruction by savage passions." Elsewhere he said: "I do not mean by 'gentlemen,' people of scented air and perfumed handkerchiefs, but men of gentle blood and of generosity, 'fulfilled with all nobleness,' who, like the Cid, give the outcast leper a share of their bed; like the dying Sidney, pass the cup of cold water to the dying soldier who needs it more. For what is the oath of gentle blood and knight- hood? What but to protect the weak and lowly against the strong oppressor?" Mercy is the echo to the Orphic lute of love. That story of that otherwise unknown Samaritan along that road to Jericho is the greatest ex- position of social welfare ever written.

FAITH

But neither justice nor mercy would long endure without a belief that they are both worth while. It is a beautiful fact of his- tory that men and women have believed in those high qualities which we call honor, loy- alty to a promise, justice, and mercy. Our world has believed, does believe, and will continue to believe in these things. The noun for this word believe is faith. It is a sincere thing. In religion it is beyond the reach of the senses or of logical proof. It is of the very essence of religion. It is a spiritual apprehension. It is the chief and never-failing demand of Jesus. "All things are possible to him that believeth."

Yet we, like the scribes and Pharisees, are diseased with self-seeking egotisms and fetishes. We, too, exploit our religious shib- boleths with irreligious fervors and hates. It sometimes seems as if we shall never get over our theological hair-splittings over the problem of "original sin," of "the origin of evil," of "predestination," of "who was Cain's wife," or "did Joshua stop the sun on Gibeon and the moon in the valley of Aijalon," and the like. As if these ever presented a prac- tical difficulty to any one, ever cast a real obstacle in the way of one honest achieve- ment. Emerson with his sure touch placed these casuistries where they belong. He said: "These are the soul's mumps and measles and whooping coughs." They certainly are lesser matters of the law.

Men live by faith. In his letter to the Galatians Paul confesses, "That life which I now live in the flesh I live in faith." Practically all of our actions are predicated upon an evidence or conviction "of things not seen," which is faith. Men plant their seeds in the springtime, search for treasures in the bowels of the earth, sail their ships down the seas, train their telescopes upon the infinitely great and their microscopes upon the infinitely small, marry and give in marriage, rear children, and beautify their achievements with science and with song, all because of an abiding faith.

From the windows of my little Washington home, I look out across the roofs and trees, the towers and domes of the city, to the silent, spreading, history-telling hills of Virginia. There below and beyond me are men and women and children, countless automobiles slipping into the shadows of the streets, with their green Gothic arches; there is the Washington Monument, turning to a fairy candle at eventide with its flame against the night sky; there are the schools and churches and hospitals; there is the glory that is the capital of this nation. What has heartened men to build this beautiful city? Greed, lust of gain? True, but in measure. The courts, the Capitol, the government buildings are expressions of the faith upon the part of the people that the government at Washington should live.

And this government itself, a great venture in justice and mercy, could never have survived had it not been for deep-seated faiths. We believe in a central government as an agent of the people; in political safety and progress midway between too much and too little government; in a government of laws and not of men; in a government deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed; in the sacredness of contract; in a minimum of central and a maximum of self-government; in public office as a public trust; in an absence of permanent alliances with foreign powers; in the principle of equal opportunity for all; in the freedom of the seas; in non-intervention except to protect American lives and property; in international co-operation for the promotion of justice under law, and that without the sanction of force; in the theory that foreign powers shall not extend their colonies in the western hemisphere; in the recognition of revolutionary governments only when backed by law, by the sanctity of contracts, by a probable majority, by the principles of democracy; in our Constitution. In short we believe "in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of equality, justice, and humanity, for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes." Each of us is glad to add, also, in the fine phrases of William Tyler Page: "I therefore believe it my duty to my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies."

But faith goes farther. Our reason tells us that we are in the midst of an infinite variety of things acted upon by many forces. These things and forces make our creation as we know it. Reason notes that nothing seems to exist or act without cause. This wealth of creation, it therefore seems to us, must have had a cause. Reason insists that there can be no creation without a creator. Reason and faith join in calling this creator by some name. We choose to call it God.

But faith carries us farther still. It seeks out this God, penetrates the beyond, the around, the within of him. Faith carries us on a never-ending search for ultimate reality. Faith breathes a breath of hope in our nostrils as we climb the endless footpaths of life toward that perfect good which our imperfect minds faintly but increasingly apprehend. Faith is not a self-protecting safety device; it is an adventure, a spiritual flight. This faith, this fructifying fact in life, is the one thing of human history which persistently improves with the passing of the ages. This improvement is not continuous with us or with the ages, but when with us or with the ages it renews its strength, appears again a more intelligent, a fairer, and a purer appreciation. Says the learned professor of philosophy in Harvard College: "The fact of the religious vision, and its history of persistent expansion, is our one ground for optimism. Apart from it, human life is a flash of occasional enjoyments lighting up a mass of pain and misery, a bagatelle of transient experience."

Faith paints a meaning on our cradles and on our tombs.

America's greatest short poem, by our "poet's poet," appeared in the first number of our leading literary monthly. Its title is:

"Days"

Daughters of Time, the hypocritic Days,
Muffled and dumb like barefoot dervishes.
And marching single in an endless file,
Bring diadems and fagots in their hands.
To each they offer gifts after his will,
Bread, kingdoms, stars, and sky that holds them all.
I, in my pleached garden, watched the pomp,
Forgot my morning wishes, hastily
Took a few herbs and apples, and the Day
Turned and departed silent. I, too late,
Under her solemn fillet saw the scorn.

Would we assuage our blood-lust, supplant our pagan superstitions, and find peace along the mystic stream of life, laying hold on the true and beautiful? Would we build the temple of our democracy with intelligence and taste, weaving its fabric around the steel frame of veracity, embellishing it with the jewels of service? Would we see with clearness, feel with honor, and act with nobility? Would we meet the charge that our religion is irrational, passionless, concerned only with organization, pew rents, creature comforts, and banal thirsts for distinction? Would we face our necessary labors with resolution, every challenge with courage, and death at last as the noblest of adventures? Would we stand in our pleached gardens, forget not the kingdoms, stars, and sky that holds them all? Would we remove from face of the departing day that haunting of scorn? Then we shall forsake, for sake we must, all contentment with the eralism of the scribe and the formalism the Pharisee, for unto them is only woe.

The hope of our forward reaching manity is in the creative appreciation "the weightier matters of the law, just and mercy, and faith."

On Report of Committee o Twelve

I

The portion of the published recommen tions of the Committee of Twelve relating the merger and consolidation of the for work is a plan worked out, and recommen after thorough discussion, by a committee the Prudential Committee, which was fur and carefully considered by the full commi before adoption as a reply to the request of Committee of Twelve for their views. I thus the well digested judgment of the inter affected, as to the best course of action un present conditions, and the acceptance of unchanged by the Committee of Twelve easily understood; we can even hear their s of relief when it is presented.

Retaining the historic name—A. B. C. F. —let us accept and adopt it as an evident s in advance!

This report was adopted by the Boston c mittee early in May and was in the hands the Twelve at their meeting on May 17 New York. It could not have been known them in advance, or at least to only a few the members. At that meeting the quest was first to be decided: "How many homel societies are to be retained?" It is an o secret that the committee found itself ho lessly divided between four and five, and journed for a session next day, at which unanimous agreement was reached upon o neither side being willing to yield their vie but both preferring the compromise, which w the first choice of none!

Up to that time, after the meeting in C cago, all the discussion had been upon the s position that the idea of one homeland soci had fallen into more or less "innocuous des tude," and the astonishment at the final o come of the deliberations of the Twelve w extreme.

How much consideration of the difficulties the proposal could the Twelve have give when we realize that the plan for the wide differing interests, to be pitchforked togeth in such summary fashion, is the same identi plan—"verbatim et literatim et punctuatim" which had been worked out for them, not them, for the homogeneous foreign work, a presented forty-eight hours before? Are not entitled to a more fully considered a well-digested plan of merger, federation, union of some sort, from the Committee Twelve? What the foreign committees spe months of work upon, and presented as the considered conclusions, in accord with urge pressure from the workers in the field, m very well be accepted for them. Is there a good reason for assuming, without study, a consultation with those experienced and co versant with all conditions, that this sam plan will meet the problems and circumstanc of the home societies?

Why not accept the report in this regard a report of progress? and ask the Twelve t study further, for the Council of 1928, the di ficulties of the problems of the home organiza tions, and furnish a better solution than ha yet appeared. ENQUIRING LAYMAN.

England's Problems

As Seen Through the Eyes of the Lord Bishop of London

An Interview by A. Z. Conrad, D.D.

response to a most cordial invitation from the Lord Bishop of London, I nd myself at the door of Fulham Palace, bright morning recently. Passing ough the wide halls of the Palace, I was ered into a spacious room where the hop meets his guests. In a few moments, ourtly and benignant looking man, robed a loose fitting purple gown, entered the m, and with quick step, advanced and ex- ded his hand in hearty greeting, saying he smiled, "I am most happy to receive . You are from Boston, one of the great ies of your great country, and a noted ter of religious life and influence. Please ne into my private room, where we will undisturbed. I am happy to reserve an ur for this interview." The room we en- ed was a spacious and well-furnished om, with large windows looking out upon lawn and the palace grounds. After as- ing His Grace of my appreciation of his rtesy, and a little time occupied in gen- l conversation, the real interview began:

I am interested to learn from your Lord- ip the extent and real significance of the glo-Catholic movement.

Yes, I understand, the Anglo-Catholic ovement. Well, it is already a powerful ctor and increasingly influential. Its de- lopment has been due to a number of ings. Many of the churches of our order ve been dull and ineffective, you might y, indeed, unattractive and barren. The rvice itself was lacking in appeal and a ore elaborate order of worship seemed ecessary. This was one reason for the ange. Wherever introduced, the more nate ritual has had the effect of arousing terest and bringing new life to the church. hen again, there was the matter of doc- ine; many of the vicars were apparently sing their hold on the fundamentals of the ith, and the Anglo-Catholic movement has stated in the strongest terms the great ndamental truths of the Christian religion nd insists on unequivocal allegiance to the reat symbols of the faith. Furthermore, is movement emphasizes the Historic Epis- pate and recovers for the church the great cclesiastical Tradition.

You believe, then, that this movement is roving beneficial to the church?

Most assuredly. It is, however, necessary o avoid going too far toward Rome. We are till a long way from accepting some of the enets of the Roman Catholic Church. There s no question but what a deepening interest n religion itself is resulting on this move- ent. The recent great convocation in Al- ert Hall, when the auditorium was packed o the limit, showed how wide the range of nterest has become.

Do not many Anglo-Catholics go straight n into the Catholic Church?

There are some, but I would not say a ery great many when considered relative to he entire number of Anglo-Catholics. Un- loubtedly some do go straight on because, ou see, the Roman Catholic Church does now what it believes and why it believes it, nd those who have wearied of the timidity nd uncertainty so often appearing else- here, enter the Roman Catholic Church on hat account. On the other hand, the Anglo- Catholic movement furnishes just the same ertainty and security and beauty of serv- ice demanded by the lovers of both cer- tainty and ritual and thus furnishes no excuse for going into the Roman Catholic Church.

What progress is being made towards church union?

Church union, Ah, that is an interesting question. When it comes to sympathetic relations, there certainly has been a great advance among the various branches of the churches of Christendom. The hostility and the competition of former days is largely disappearing, for which we may all be grateful, but as to organic union, that is undoubtedly just as far away as ever. It is not even in prospect. Many of us cannot see that in the present state of religion, organic union is even desirable. What we do want is a close federation of all religious forces to carry on works of political and social reform and also to develop a genuine fellowship, but more than that we cannot expect.

What part is the church taking in political and social problems in England?

Well, as organizations, we do not enter the political arena, but we are taking a very active part as Christian citizens. In reality, therefore, the church is doing a vast deal to improve conditions. A powerful religious influence is exercised in the promotion of all of our great works of reform. I, myself, will, for example, be at the House of Lords this very afternoon in an effort to defeat a bill that has been introduced to lessen the privileges of the poor people in connection with our public parks. We are increasingly united in every movement that has as its object social betterment.

What are you doing in England to lessen the evils of drinking? I have been appalled at the extent of drinking in public houses, both of men nad women, and I can hardly see how England can hope to improve her material condition while she is spending a million dollars a day on drink. It seems to me this must be disastrous economically and socially.

Yes, it is an awful calamity. We are certainly increasing our effort to curtail the evils which are everywhere apparent from drink. I have personally revived the Church Temperance Organizations all over England. We are endeavoring to wake people up to the perils of the present situation. I may say, however, that as far as England is concerned, the church is not favoring prohibition, but local option. Drinking customs are too deeply rooted here to make possible any enforcement of a prohibition law, even if we had it. We hear many conflicting reports about your experiment in prohibition in the United States. It might succeed there, and we hope it will, but conditions here are very different. I am sure, however, that we must do something to lessen the evil or it will ruin us economically.

Is England recovering from the moral slump that has been experienced all over the world since the war?

It is hard to say. The effect of the war was demoralizing and conditions are still bad. We must all hope for a religious awakening. Nothing else will set the world right.

A general discussion regarding world peace and kindred topics followed, in which the Bishop expressed great confidence in world peace through closer international relations. He then told of his own schedule of activities. Immediately following this interview he was to meet four young men who were candidates for Orders, then a committee of women from a neighboring parish concerning some public question, then representatives of a school for feeble minded, then to the House of Parliament, with several minor engagements following. He expressed the belief that a man in a public position should never withhold himself from those who desired access to him, and that of all men the Christian minister should be accessible at times to people whom he might assist. Thus the delightful interview was concluded.

It has been painful to note the depression which prevails in England on account of unemployment and bad trade conditions. Taxes are increasingly burdening the people and many firms of a hundred years standing have been compelled to discontinue. Shopkeepers are holding on, hoping almost against certainty that the tide will turn. The United States' high tariff laws and her insistence on debt payment come in for much better criticism. Nevertheless, this is true, there is no such attitude of antagonism or bitterness toward the United States, either in England or France, as many writers and speakers would have us believe. I have met people of all classes and occupations in England and Scotland and find generous and kindly attitude toward the United States and a deep desire for a continuance of amicable relations and a closer unity.

The "dole" continues to be a real menace and yet the Government is powerless to withdraw it or even to limit it while unemployment is so general. No political party is able to present a solution of the pressing problems of the hour. The "Reds" are restlessly active in their effort to break down the Government and the existing capitalistic order. The English-speaking people must be solidly united in order to meet successfully the growing dangers to world peace and economic prosperity. The peace of the world can only thus be guaranteed. But not alone political and social conditions require this closer union, but the Kingdom of Christ also calls for it.

Though the world outlook is by no means what we could desire, there is much promise in many directions. Large and intelligent groups of men are firmly fixed in their determination that the nations shall be bound together indissolubly and that reason shall take the place of war in the settlement of future disputes. There is no organization either existing or prospective which gives as much promise of permanent peace as the League of Nations. This organization has more of practical wisdom in it than any other scheme or program ever presented to the nations of the world.

Leadership Training

Knowledge and Skill Versus Ignorance and Incompetency

By Herbert W. Gates

THE construction engineer of a large firm was once approached by a man who held the position of inspector of concrete work for the city.

"I have a little job I want to do at home and I need a bit of cement and sand. Have you some that you can spare?"

The engineer, probably sensing the advantage of being on good terms with the man on account of his position, replied, "Sure. How much do you want?"

"Oh, just a little bag of cement and a few shovelfuls of sand," said the other, and then he added, "Say! Tell me, how ought I to mix it?"

Every now and then some disaster to a building, bridge, or dam takes its toll of human lives and then the public discovers that the construction of the work had been approved by inspectors who need to be told the simplest rudiments of the process they are supposed to examine.

One evening a student in a large university came to call on the university pastor. They sat by the fire for a time, talking about various things, then the boy blurted out, "I came to see you for some advice. I've lost all my faith in religion and I don't like it."

"That's hopeful," replied the pastor. "It's the fellows who have lost their faith and don't care that make me worry. Let's go back and see where you dropped it, and see if we can't pick it up."

It was not difficult. The young man himself traced it back to a well-intentioned but poorly equipped Sunday school teacher who, in his ignorance of the true meaning of the Bible and of the mind of the growing boy, had done violence to the latter's sense of justice, and then condemned his instinctive protest as impiety.

The connection between the two incidents is obvious. The same error lies at the root of both, that of assuming responsibility in a matter requiring both knowledge and skill without the training that would furnish either. The results are often disastrous in either case.

It is easy to see the mistake after the damage has been done. It is easy, too, to blame inspector or teacher without touching those higher up. Bad politics, the greed of the corrupt politician, and the careless indifference of the public as long as the crash is delayed, are responsible in the first instance. Is it any less dangerous, to put it mildly, for the officials in a church school to assume responsibility for the delicate and important task of guiding the development of religious life in the child without doing everything possible to secure adequately trained and spiritually competent leaders?

Repeated surveys have called our attention to the large proportion of young people who are dropping out of the church school and to the other large number with whom, even though the school secures their bodily attendance, it fails to arouse interest or create enthusiastic loyalty to Christ and his cause. Pupils draw sharp comparisons between the quality of teaching in the public school and the church school, all too often to the disparagement of the latter.

Let us repeat—it will not do to blame it all on the teacher. Some of them are careless, indifferent, mechanical, dogmatic. But, take it all in all, the Sunday school teachers constitute the most conscientious, unselfish, and loyal portion of our church membership. The marvel is that they have done as well as they have in view of the careless way in which many churches regard this department of their work. Not until the church awakens to a fuller realization of the importance of the right sort of religious education and gives evidence thereof in more adequate expenditures of money and effort to provide adequate training and equipment can we expect great improvement.

It is for this reason that the Education Society regards leadership training as its most important line of service and is endeavoring, so far as its very inadequate resources permit, to make available to the churches the best possible methods and materials for this work.

The means of leadership training are varied, ranging all the way from that done in the local church school to courses in college and university and the professional training offered by the school of religious education. Each church should utilize as many of these as possible, beginning with that which lies nearest at hand.

The materials for our purpose are also varied and, fortunately, increasing in quality as well as quantity. Our own Publishing Society, the close partner of the Education Society in this service, is doing valuable pioneer work in this field in addition to that which it shares with other denominational publishing houses.

The following suggestions are offered in the hope that they may prove stimulating and practically helpful in planning the work of our schools for this year.

1. The Officers' and Teachers' Conference. The old-time teachers' meeting has fallen by the wayside. Regarded merely as a coaching class for the teaching of next Sunday's uniform lesson, we need not greatly mourn it, but to ignore its larger possibilities is a calamity. It should be a conference for the discussion of principles and methods of religious education with special reference to the problems of the local church school. The Teaching Church, a discussion course prepared by Benjamin S. Winchester and Erwin L. Shaver, is admirably adapted to just such purposes. This course will appear in the Adult Bible Class Magazine this fall and will later be published in pamphlet form. It is a thorough study of the work of the church school and its relation to the church, with thought-provoking questions for discussion, and abundant references.

Organizing the Church School, by Henry F. Cope, is another suggestive book along the same general lines, as is the little book by Frank W. Smith, How to Improve Your Sunday School.

2. The Training Class in the Local Ch School. This may take various forms, cording to local conditions and the lea ship available. It may be a class held connection with a Church Training I tute for six or eight weeks, or it may part of the graded course of instructio the church school, continuing throughout school year. These classes give opportu for more intensive and specialized work, s as the study of methods for different groups, by those who are working or ex to work in the respective departments of school.

There are many good texts for such w The Pilgrim Training Course covers th years of forty lessons each. The texts the first two years are published in f units each. For the third year there are r ready fifteen good texts, covering such s cialized topics as child study, story telli method, and administration, each desig to be taken in about ten lessons, and e having reference to the work of a spec department.

There are many other texts, equally go so that any group may find that which best suited to its immediate needs. Th cover such special topics as project teachi missionary education, social service, edu tional dramatics, interpretation and tea ing the use of the Bible, and so on. A part list is given at the end of this article.*

3. The Community Training School or stitute. Some churches are so fortunate to have within their own membership p sons who are competent to give leadersh to a comprehensive course of teacher tra ing. These are the exception, however. T steadily growing co-operative spirit finds e pression in the community school in whi all the churches may pool their resources leadership and thus afford a better type training than any one could furnish. It obvious that every church should avail itse to the uttermost of any such co-operati movement in its community and secure th largest possible number of carefully select students from its own membership. An i creasing number of churches are maki provision for paying the registration fees their students, wholly or in part, and are r ceiving large returns on the investment.

The International Council of Religiou Education is doing much for the standar ization of work and the interchange credits between such schools in which the have the hearty co-operation of denomina tional boards of education.

In many communities the churches hav united in an Institute of Religious Educa tion continuing for a week or more. Whil these cannot do as much as the school whic holds one or two terms of ten or twelv sessions each, their service is not to be ig nored and they are often the first step to ward the establishment of the community school.

4. The Summer Conference. Probably no one feature of our work has yielded greate returns, particularly in the discovery and

ing of leadership in young people's work the summer conferences now held each in the majority of our states. Thirty- of these conferences have been held this summer under Congregational auspices, about four thousand young people en- d and the churches that have encouraged attendance of their young people give dant testimony to their value.

addition to these denominational con- nces one should note those conducted training in religious education and mis- ary education in many parts of the try under interdenominational auspices. Summer Schools of the International ncil, the Missionary Education Move- t conferences, and such schools as those East Northfield, Massachusetts; Durham, Hampshire; Chautauqua, New York, Winona, Indiana, are examples.

College Courses in Religious Education. Christian colleges are giving increasing ntion to courses in Bible study and reli- s education. Why not hold before our ng people the idea of taking these with definite purpose of fitting themselves for er work in their own churches? In the e universities, many of our university ors are rendering valuable service by ducting classes for voluntary study along same lines. This work might well be sys- atized and developed. The Student Life artment of the Education Society is ly to aid in such development.

he field of professional training in reli- us education in our theological seminaries schools of religion is another subject may be reserved for fuller treatment r. The suggestions that have been offered n up abundant possibilities for advance ard an abler leadership of our children youth. Any church that earnestly uses opportunities within its reach will have en a long step forward in one of the t essential departments of its work.

The Education Society is prepared to give table recognition in the form of certifi- cates of credit to those who have completed courses under approved conditions. A plan is being worked out whereby credit leading to a teacher-training diploma may be given for a wider range of work. Its definite promotion and administration must wait until it is possible to employ a full-time secretary of leadership training. Meanwhile, as has been stated above, the Society stands ready to aid with practical advice in the choice of materials and plans for organizing leadership training courses.

Selected Lists of Teacher-Training Texts

PILGRIM TRAINING COURSE

irst Year. Four Units: The Pupil, L. A. gle; The Teacher, L. A. Weigle; The Message he Master Teacher, Winchester; Organization Administration of the Church School, earn, 25 cents each.

econd Year. Four Units: Teaching Value of Old Testament, Myers; Teaching Value of the Testament, Duncan; Program of the Chris- Religion, Sanders; How to Train the Devo- al Life, Weigle and Tweedy. 25 cents each.

hird Year. Specialization Courses: price, 60 ts each. A Study of the Little Child for chers of Beginners, Whitley; Story Telling for chers of Beginners and Primary Children, her; Methods with Beginners, Danielson; Study the Primary Child, Whitley; Methods for Pri- y Teachers, Lewis; Study of the Junior Child, itley; Organization and Administration of the ior Department, Koontz; Psychology of Early lescence, Mudge; Community Forces for Re- ous Education of Early Adolescence, Fiske; mmunity Forces for Religious Education—Mid- Adolescence, Fiske; Study of Adult Life, res; Principles of Christian Service, Cope; The ucational Task of the Church, Bower; others preparation.

ther Texts Recommended: You Can Learn to ch, Margaret Slattery, $1.35; Learning and ching, Sheridan and White, 80 cents; How to ch Religion, Betts, $1.00; Methods in Teach- Religion, Betts, $2.50; The Project Principle Religious Education, Shaver, $2.75; World ndship Through the Church School, Lobingier, 5; Projects in World Friendship, Lobingier, 5; Bible Study Through Educational Drama- Helen Willcox, $1.00; Handbook for Workers h Young People, Thompson, $1.25.

his is a very incomplete list. Additional sug- tions to meet specific needs will be gladly fur- ied on request.

Middle West Teacher Training

By Robert W. Gammon

Chicago, Illinois

Teacher training is carried on in the Middle West by the same methods that are in general use in other parts of the country. Our work in this particular in all denominations, save perhaps the Methodist, lags. It is for most of our churches the most difficult part of the program of religious education and yet it is the most fundamental. Churches are ready to put money into buildings for the use of children and youth, they will readily adopt new courses of study and up-to-date methods, and will pay good salaries to directors, but individual members are slow to give themselves to teaching and to preparing themselves to teach. This attitude can be easily explained. Buildings, equipment, and directors of religious education can be secured by writing a check. That's all the sacrifice that it takes. Doing a real job of teaching takes the deepest sort of sacrificial living. No wonder we make haste slowly in teacher training.

We have many churches using the time-honored method of maintaining local classes in teacher training. These classes are taking courses ranging all the way from six weeks of superficial study to the real work found in the three-year courses now offered. The teaching of these courses is done by pastors, by public school teachers, and by specialists brought in for the task. Some of these classes take our regular Pilgrim Teacher Training Course, pass the examinations, and receive credit. A large number of them do not report their work at all and do not register with our Education Society or with the International Council of Religious Education and the members of the classes do not care for credit. Congregationalists do not like to conform and they show this as plainly in regard to teacher training as to anything else. We find evidences often that more is happening in our churches in this work than we had supposed.

The church at Hankinson, N. D., furnishes an outstanding example of what may be accomplished by a class in the local church if the work receives real attention. This church has little more than a hundred resident members and is apparently an average village church. It carries on week-day religious instruction and maintains a vacation Bible school. The pastor has been the leader of the training class. He describes its work as follows:

A Successful Village Class

The teacher training class has successfully completed the three-year Pilgrim Training Course for Teachers. The class started with a number of teachers and would-be teachers coming to see what this new thing under the sun would be like. Of this number two stood by through the vicissitudes of class meetings and final exams and amid the accidents of changing residence and family emergencies, which removed many of the first comrades. So now these two women are in possession of their diplomas for the three-year course.

Three things have always encouraged the members of the class to do loyal work. First, a keen sense on the part of the members that religious education is one of the most fundamental and most rewarding functions of church work. Second, a satisfaction with the value of the courses followed, for they felt that they were getting practical help for the educational program of which this church makes a great deal. Third, the coveting of the diploma, for they never forgot that this meant recognition by the Congregational Education Society and by the International Council of Religious Education.

At first the class attempted to meet once each week. It was found later more convenient to do intensive work over short periods, with vacations between. So the later policy of the class has been to have two one-hour meetings each week during seasons of the year convenient for the members. The class chose the administrative units for third-year specialization. We were more than a little pleased with the breadth of religious education to which these units introduced us, going first over the history of the modern movement and then into the most modern theories for advanced work.

The success of the work at Hankinson can be attributed to the leadership of Rev. Clarence Carr. It is practically always true of classes that do good work and continue over a period of two or three years, that either the pastor or other adult leader gives much time and effort to the class. Practically any church can have a successful teacher training class continually at work, if it is willing to pay the price, through the pastor or other leaders, that Mr. Carr has paid at Hankinson.

The city training class has been used with a good deal of success in the Middle West. Heretofore many of these classes were organized and carried on independent of the interdenominational forces in religious education. They have usually been held one night a week for ten or twenty weeks. Some of the work has been superficial, but much of it has been worth while and practically all of it has tended to show the need of teacher training and has helped to introduce teachers to up-to-date methods and literature. The state and local councils of religious education are now fostering these schools in the states of the Middle West and are giving helpful leadership. Perhaps this type of training will more and more take the place of the old-fashioned county and township convention. Teaching in these schools is done for the most part by members of the staff of councils of religious education, by denominational leaders, and by local ministers. The demand for schools of this type is greater than the forces can now supply.

Training in the Colleges

In great centers, such as Chicago, the colleges and universities are carrying on classes with a great deal of success. The faculties of both Northwestern University and the University of Chicago give themselves to this service almost without reservation.

Ripon College, Ripon, Wis., has permeated its whole district with the spirit of teacher training. Prof. W. J. Mutch, President Silas Evans, and local leaders in the different cities have enlisted a loyal constituency of churches to such an extent that the teaching morale of the whole district has been greatly helped. Increasingly our colleges are giving attention to this work.

The raising of the standards of teaching in our church schools tends to bring to their service public school teachers who have had excellent training in psychology and pedagogy. The organization of week-time schools of religion in many cities has caused not a few public school teachers to take short courses in religious education and to give themselves to the teaching of religion in these schools. This work reacts upon the church school held on Sunday in such a way as to compel it to make its teaching better. Apparently we are at the beginning of a new era in teaching religion—an era in which we shall expect teachers of religion to be just as thoroughly trained for their task as are teachers in secular schools.

Teacher Training in Northwest

By Rev. Fred Grey

Seattle, Washington

Few churches are undertaking, in any systematic and thorough manner, the training of their own leaders. Pastors and superintendents feel reluctant to begin a work which seems to demand so much time and special preparation. Most are willing to give a free hand to any visiting secretary who will do this work for them. The district secretary of the Education Society could put in his entire time in this one phase of his work. But where there are three or four hundred churches to plan for, it would be impossible to meet the demand. If this leadership training in the local church has to depend upon the personal oversight of the district secretary, then, in the very nature of the case, it simply cannot be done. Our first real need, therefore, is for pastors and superintendents—or committees on religious education—to equip themselves for training their own workers. There seems to be no other way of meeting the present need of trained leaders in the local church.

Seattle City-Wide Institutes

In an attempt to meet the situation it has been thought wise to gather as many as can be interested in city-wide institutes. An experiment of this kind was made by grouping together four Seattle churches, as centers, and giving one evening to each center each week for five weeks. This gave five evenings to each group, with one week between for reading and study. This plan was carried out with a standardized curriculum and a unified faculty. The attendance at the five centers on any one week would run between 150 and 175. The program for these institutes occupied about two hours each evening. There were three sessions each night. First: there was a lecture (on Mark's Gospel), then an inspirational address, and lastly departmental studies and conferences. Such a simple plan and limited program required a good deal of planning to make it a success. However, the results more than justified making these group institutes a part of the regular yearly program of the Seattle churches. The grouping of the churches is varied from year to year so as to meet the entire constituency.

This work is under the leadership of the district secretary working under the direction of the Educational Committee of the Washington Conference. It is not claimed that a thoroughly satisfactory work is done in five weeks. But it is felt that the seed of good teaching and expert leadership is sown in the mind and heart of those who attend.

The Seattle Graded Union, an interdenominational, voluntary organization, meets every week during the fall and winter for special study of church school problems and training in teaching. This meets in the afternoons in the Y. W. C. A. It is attended largely by women and is one of the most promising and helpful organizations in the Northwest. The standards maintained are the very highest in graded organization and instruction in the church school. Lectures and conferences are arranged to give timely help in the current graded lessons and special attention is given to seasonable programs, Easter, Christmas, etc.

Training Institute in Walla Walla

Under the new leadership of the International Council of Religious Education—both national and state—new plans are rapidly being formed for leadership training classes. Last winter the churches of Walla Walla, with the Ministerial Union of that city and Whitman College co-operating, held a ten-day training institute with encouraging results. Whitman College opened its class-rooms and assembly halls and over 150 teacher workers gathered for lectures and c ences. The denominational secretarie extension workers, with special lecturer speakers, composed the faculty. Eac structor secured standing with the S School Council by submitting an outli his course to the Chicago office. The re teacher training outlines of the deno tions were used as text-books, and me of the various classes received credit fo work done. Such community institut religious education give much promi usefulness.

Keystone View

Dr. P. W. Kuo

President of the National Southeastern University at Nanking, China, and representative to the League of Nations, who is now in this country. He claims that education is the only thing which will bring about international amity and fellowship between China and the United States.

Week-Day Schools

The rise and popularity of the vac Bible school and, of late, the great ca week-day schools of religion, have done than all our appealing to awaken intere leadership training classes. Many sc and churches find themselves forbidden form of activity because they cannot their hands upon trained teachers. We the aggravation of the necessity! In to meet this need the Educational Cou of both Seattle and Portland are ho each year special institutes to pre teachers for these two special form activity. Whatever one may think of Oregon plan of religious week-day sch one cannot help but secretly rejoice for absolute insistence upon fitness for teac in these schools.

Summer Conference Training

In this inadequate summary of wor the Northwest it may be argued that, so only the teacher or worker actually work" is being provided for in these var institutes. Leadership training must two hands at work: one for those who at work and the other for those who have to take the responsibilities of to row. No religious education program worth much that does not look forward confidence and prophecy. In this attemp interest the youth of today in leader training we find that the summer young ple's conference is our best approach.

We have just held our third annual ference at Seabeck. A main part of the riculum provided was directly for the pose of training for teaching in the chu school and in the local church leaders Nothing is more encouraging in all our s mer conferences than the serious way which the young people gave themselves the study of these subjects. Above all t want to know how—how they can teach get results; how they can win others Christ and get them to work in the chur These young people then go home and others interested. Later on the district s retary finds his best helpers, when he vis the local churches, are these same you people who attended the summer conferen There can be no question of the value of summer conference as a school of traini Such words of appreciation as these are ing constantly received: "I wish to expr my appreciation for giving us the opportu ity to attend this conference and by the spiring leadership and thoughtfulness m making this week the happiest one in t whole year for me."

Progress in Negro Education

The American Missionary Association reviews eighty years in Negro Education

By Frederick L. Fagley

eer Sur:

I wants git more eddication. Ise bin achin skule—they aint nothin in it—eez can you git me chance go skule. we ain't got no munny my mammy she hard workin womin. pleez do Respec.

---

he above letter, received by one of the secries of the American Missionary Associa-, tells better than pages of description the l of higher education among Negroes. Here young girl out in the backwoods of Georgia, has an opportunity to teach in one of the ols for colored folks, but she is not ready are equipped teachers to be found. The th has schools for the colored children but oes not allow the whites to teach in these ols and has no schools of higher education n to the colored. This is the situation that fronts the South and which the American sionary Association has been trying to meet eighty years.

n the report of this society which will be e at the Washington meeting of the Nal Council of Congregational Churches, the k of the society will be reviewed by the etaries, George L. Cady and Fred L. wnlee, and the progress being made in ro education will be outlined. The society only seeks to provide higher education for roes but has schools and missions among er races in America. Its work is with the eveloped races under our flag: the Negro, Indian, the American Highlander of the th, the Chinese, Japanese, and Hindu of the ific Coast, the Hawaiians and Porto ans, the lepers at Molokai, and the Spanish-aking peoples who enter our borders from South. It also conducts schools in New xico and Utah.

ts instruments of service are three: the rch, the school, and the hospital. The emsis is upon Christian education. Its schools e the spirit and atmosphere of social setnents where, dwelling together with their chers, the pupils gain as much through peral influence as through direct teaching. ch is made of industrial training and agriture. Everywhere and above all, its aim is discover, develop, and train for their task n and women who are to be the leaders of ir races in their upward march.

t will report: For Negroes, twenty-one demies, four colleges, 6,760 students, 154 rches with 11,323 members. The A. M. A. ugurated industrial training for the Negro; ches many trades, maintains model farms, ming institutes, and hospitals for the train- of nurses, and conducts two theological semries.

For Indians: Twenty-one organized churches reservations, membership 996. One of the t Indian schools in the country at Santee, braska, with 318 students, giving industrial ining for boys and girls and conducting a respondence department.

For Highlanders: One institution with 196 dents, an important school for mountain s and girls on the Cumberland Plateau.

For the Orientals on the Pacific Coast: venty-five churches, 600 church members, en night schools, 300 pupils.

For Porto Rico: Twelve churches, 946 members, hospital at Humacao, Blanche Kellogg Institute—a training school for girls.

For Hawaii: Hawaiian and Japanese churches and a church among the lepers at Molokai.

Institutions for Christian education in Utah, New Mexico, and Florida.

A total of fifty-nine schools, 8,194 students, 614 missionaries and teachers, 218 churches with 17,675 members.

The society will report receipts of $900,000 per year, which funds have been spent in maintaining the schools, colleges, and mission churches among these other races in America.

Can Negroes Be Educated?

The question can Negroes be educated is continually being brought before the American people. Of course every one knows that there are educated Negroes but are these exceptions and not the usual run of colored folks? And if they are educable, what sort of education ought they to have? Theodore Roosevelt once held to the position that where Negroes were educated their education ought to be mainly industrial. The following conversation is on record, showing Mr. Roosevelt's change of mind. In conversation with Dr. Buttrick, secretary of the General Education Board, Mr. Roosevelt once said, "I believe in giving the Negro eight grades of school and then industrial education."

"Yes," replied Dr. Buttrick, "that is good, but who is to teach the eight grades?"

"That's so," said Mr. Roosevelt. "If you are to have eight grades you must have twelve grades to train teachers for the eight."

"Yes," Dr. Buttrick said, "but if you are to have twelve grades who will teach the twelve?"

Roosevelt, slapping his leg, exclaimed, "By George, there is no end to this, is there?"

To which Dr. Buttrick replied, "No, sir, no more end to it than there is to the education of the white boys and girls."

A few years ago there were no public schools for Negroes. Today they are to be found in all the Southern States. The great migration of colored workmen from Southern plantations to Northern industrial centers, influenced largely by the educational opportunities offered in the North, has made it plain that if the South is to retain its laborers, it must provide better schools for their children. The economic argument is exceedingly convincing.

What the A. M. A. Has Done

But many schools mean many teachers, and since, according to law, no white person may teach in a Negro public school, it has become necessary to find a multitude of colored teachers. In attempting to do this, school boards have been forced, for lack of trained teachers, to appoint those who were utterly untrained and unfit for the task. The training of leaders for the colored people is the greatest task to which the American Missionary Association is addressing itself. Dr. George L. Cady, in speaking of the work undertaken by the association to educate leaders, says: "When the refugees began to flock from the slave cabins to the shelter of the Federal armies, the question which confronted the government was whether or not these slaves could be armed and whether they would fight like men. This question was answered by the undoubted loyalty on every battlefield where they were tried. Then the Negroes had a song which has died out of the memories of this generation, and it was set to martial music that thrilled every emancipated man. The song ran as follows:

They look like men,
They look like men,
They look like men of war;
All armed and dressed in uniform,
They look like men of war.

John C. Calhoun did question if they were men. The North and South alike questioned if they were soldiers and, to this day, there are

Principals and Presidents of A. M. A. Schools and Colleges in the South

unnumbered thousands who question if they can respond to a higher education.

On Sept. 17, 1861, the A. M. A. opened the first school for freed men in America. Lewis Tappan, the treasurer of the association—the man who guaranteed any balance for the purchase of "Sarah" auctioned into freedom by Henry Ward Beecher, and immortalized in that beautiful statue beside Plymouth Church, Brooklyn—wrote General Butler, after he had coined that phrase, "contraband of war," for the slave fugitives from the South, asking if the association could not help. About 1,800 of them had been gathered at Hampton and, with the approval of General Butler, the first meeting was held in the old home of ex-President Tyler. A school was then opened on the spot where, 241 years before, the first slave ship disembarked its human cargo on the American continent. It was the first school of that long line of educational institutions which were to follow "lifting the veil of ignorance from the face of the Negro race," so wonderfully pictured in that statue of Booker Washington at Tuskegee. This was the beginning and from that grew Hampton Normal and Industrial Institute.

Then followed the founding of that long list of schools which may be said to be the greatest adventure in brotherhood of America. The white soldiers in the barracks at Nashville, Tenn., marched out, and the black men and women whom they had freed marched in, and Fisk University began its splendid career. Then came Atlanta and Talladega in the very heart of the Black Belt, and Straight in romantic New Orleans with its tens of thousands of colored people of much-mingled blood. Tougaloo took its place in the history of Mississip an old slave plantation, and Tillotson i heart of Texas. Scores of other little in tions dotted the whole of the South—ma them temporary, but some of them to b permanent contributions to the solution o vexing problem.

As Dr. Cady well says:

The South is coming on educationally. results of the work of the association and dred organizations have convinced the that the Negro is educable, and that ignc is not an asset anywhere, at any tim among any people. The preservation o South depends not on the continual su gence, but the uplifting of all its citize The migration from the South to the Nort driven home to the white man the fact t he will keep his greatest industrial ass the South, the Negro must be provided justice in the courts and education fo children.

Delegates to the National Council

Meeting in Washington, D.C., October 20-28

ALABAMA

Rev. H. S. Barnwell, Atlanta, Ga.
Prof. L. C. Farley, Beloit
Rev. James Hyslop, Talladega
Rev. Spencer Snell, Florence

CALIFORNIA

Judge Benj. F. Bledsoe, Los Angeles
Miss Nellie Denman, Petaluma
Rev. Daniel F. Fox, Pasadena
Rev. Edgar R. Fuller, Bakersfield
Rev. John Gardner, Riverside
Mrs. T. T. Giffen, Fresno
Rev. H. H. Kelsey, San Francisco
Rev. Charles L. Kloss, San Mateo
Rev. C. L. Knight, La Jolla
Mrs. C. M. Lamson, San Bernardino
Mrs. James H. Lash, Los Angeles
Dr. J. H. McElinney, Chula Vista
Rev. K. Ogawa, Los Angeles
Rev. M. G. Papazian, Fresno
Rev. C. S. Patton, Los Angeles
Rev. T. Davis Preston, Benicia
Rev. Perry F. Schrock, Santa Ana
Mrs. F. D. Searles, Los Angeles
Rev. J. R. Shoemaker, Fort Bidwell
Mrs. H. F. Swartz, Berkeley
Rev. Hugh V. White, Stockton
Mr. Fred M. Wilcox, La Manda Park
Rev. A. S. Yeretzian, Los Angeles

COLORADO

Rev. W. D. Barnes, Collbran
Rev. George E. Guild, Craig
Rev. Robert Hopkin, Denver
Rev. P. C. Ladd, Denver
Rev. A. A. Marquardt, Pueblo
Rev. Adna Moore, Flagler
Rev. Carl Stackman, Denver
Mrs. Carl Stackman, Denver

CONNECTICUT

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, Norwich
Dr. William H. Allee, Ridgefield
Rev. Frederick Allen, Middlebury
Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, Norwichtown
Rev. Quincy Blakely, Farmington
Rev. Clayton D. Boothby, Meriden
Rev. Enoch H. Burt, Torrington
Mr. Walter G. Camp, Hartford
Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, Cornwall
Rev. George H. Coffin, Plymouth
Rev. John M. Deyo, Danbury
Rev. William F. English, Hartford
Rev. Samuel A. Fiske, Berlin
Rev. Frank L. Garfield, Chester
Rev. James G. Graham, Windham
Mr. William G. Green, Waterbury
Rev. Oliver Huckel, Greenwich
Rev. Charles G. Johnson, South Coventry
Rev. George H. Johnson, New Milford
Mr. Daniel Kellogg, Saybrook
Rev. Edward H. Knight, Hartford
Rev. William G. Lathrop, Mount Carmel
Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, New London
Miss Sylvina Norton, Westchester
Rev. Orville A. Petty, New Haven
Rev. Levi Rees, Stafford Springs
Mr. John G. Talcott, Talcottville
Rev. Alfred G. Walton, Stamford
Mr. Frederick M. Ward, New Haven
Mr. Herbert C. Wells, Warehouse Point
Mr. Stephen Wells, Bristol
Rev. Walter B. Williams, Danielson
Mrs. Walter B. Williams, Danielson
Mrs. B. S. Winchester, Fairfield
Rev. Ernest L. Wismer, Bristol
Rev. Charles S. Wyckoff, Plainville

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. Arthur Derrin Call, Washington
Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, Washington
Chaplain Evan W. Scott, Washington

FLORIDA

Mr. Addison H. Hazeltine, Hendersonville, N. C.

GEORGIA

Rev. J. F. Blackburn, Atlanta
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, Atlanta
Rev. Lewis H. Keller, Jacksonville, Fla.
Rev. A. T. Osbron, Demorest

ILLINOIS

Rev. William E. Barton, Foxboro, Mass.
Rev. Arthur E. Beddoes, Beardstown
Rev. Frederick J. Berghoefer, Chicago
Rev. Frank S. Brewer, Geneseo
Rev. Frank Bush, Chicago
Mr. E. A. Collins, Marseilles
Rev. Earl F. Collins, Naperville
Mr. Marquis Eaton, Chicago
Rev. Stephen D. Fooks, Caledonia
Mr. Warren F. Goodell, Loda
Mr. George M. Herrick, Chicago
Rev. J. J. Kolmos, Maywood
Rev. Robert J. Locke, Urbana
Rev. C. C. Merrill, Chicago
Rev. C. L. Mills, Spring Valley
Mr. John J. Moore, Chicago
Rev. J. W. R. Nichols, Chicago
Mr. S. F. Nichols, La Grange
Rev. Walter H. North, Chicago
Rev. A. W. Palmer, Oak Park
Rev. James W. Parks, Bowen
Mrs. Wharton Plummer, Oak Park
Mr. Harry A. Rice, Elgin
Rev. Wilfred Rowell, Hinsdale
Mr. H. M. Solenberger, Springfield
Rev. Walter Spooner, Chicago
Rev. J. Merle Stevens, Peoria
Rev. George E. Stickney, Jacksonville
Rev. M. Guy Van Buskirk, Oneida
Rev. George B. Waldron, Mounds
Dr. H. H. Walker, Chicago
Mr. Frank M. Webster, De Kalb
Rev. T. Y. Williams, Chicago
Mr. Alfred E. Woodward, Sandwich

INDIANA

Rev. William I. Caughran, Indianapolis
Rev. Martin L. Grant, Marion
Mrs. Christien Humfreys, Angola
Rev. Willard C. Lyon, Gary
Mr. George Van Dyke, Indianapolis

IOWA

Rev. John H. Andress, Sioux City
Rev. Charles W. Basham, Orient
Rev. E. D. Calkins, Britt
Mr. F. E. Frisbie, Sheldon
Mr. W. H. Gardner, New Hampton
Rev. Carl A. Glover, Red Oak
Rev. J. J. G. Graham, Traer
Mrs. J. F. Hardin, Eldora
Rev. Clyde C. Harris, Creston
Mr. C. D. Hayward, Davenport
Rev. V. B. Hill, Danville
Mr. H. S. Howard, Oskaloosa
Rev. P. A. Johnson, Grinnell
Rev. Norman E. Lambly, Ottumwa
Rev. B. F. Martin, Davenport
Rev. A. F. Newell, Garner
Rev. Naboth Osborne, Burlington
Rev. Erwin Schulz, Treynor
Prof. W. H. Stevenson, Ames
Mr. B. M. Stoddard, Sloan
Rev. Walter M. Swan, Charles City
Rev. E. M. Vittum, Muscatine
Rev. Wayne Waters, Des Moines
Rev. G. C. Williams, Newton

KANSAS

Rev. Fred Roys Bush, Kingsley
Rev. C. J. Christianson, Sabetha
Mr. D. O. Coe, Topeka
Rev. O. L. Corbin, Anthony
Mr. H. W. Darling, Wichita
Rev. R. A. Eusden, Lawrence
Rev. John B. Gonzales, Topeka
Rev. C. C. Green, Wakefield
Rev. A. E. Gregory, Topeka
Rev. Charles A. Riley, Kansas City
Mr. J. R. Sargent, Topeka
Rev. Thomas G. Smith, Downs
Rev. Ludwig Thomsen, Osborne

KENTUCKY

Prof. C. Perkins, Williamsburg
Mr. W. C. Turner, Evarts

LOUISIANA

Rev. William A. Bender, Abbeville
Rev. Alfred Lawless, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Edward H. Phillips, New Orleans

MAINE

Rev. Wilbur I. Bull, Ashland
Mr. Ralph Chandler, Machias
Mrs. R. E. Gilkey, Dixfield
Rev. Charles Harbutt, Portland
Mr. John G. Hosmer, Camden
Rev. John Hunt, East Millinocket
Mrs. Charles Hussey, Presque Isle
Mrs. Howard R. Ives, Portland
Rev. Arthur M. Little, Bangor
Rev. Charles H. McElhiney, Madison
Prof. W. B. Mitchell, Brunswick
Mr. Newell P. Noble, Phillips
Mr. E. B. Osgood, Cumberland Centre
Rev. Willard H. Palmer, Calais
Rev. William A. Richmond, Bridgton
Mr. John H. Southard, Wiscasset
Rev. Olin B. Tracy, Norway
Miss Mabel L. True, Dover-Foxcroft
Rev. Henry W. Webb, Wiscasset
Rev. G. Edgar Wolfe, Lewiston

MASSACHUSETTS

Rev. David E. Adams, Ware
Mr. John Albree, Swampscott
Rev. Manley F. Allbright, Allston
Mr. William B. Aspinwall, Worcester
Mr. Roger W. Babson, Wellesley Hills
Rev. Henry L. Bailey, Longmeadow
Rev. Arthur Barber, Lawrence
Rev. Ralph A. Barker, South Acton
Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, Andover
Mrs. Fred C. Brigham, Springfield
Mr. Charles E. Burbank, West Boylston
Rev. Edmund A. Burnham, Taunton
Rev. Ray E. Butterfield, Worcester
Rev. George M. Butler, Dedham
Rev. Edwin H. Byington, West Roxbury
Rev. Edward C. Camp, Watertown
Rev. W. W. Campbell, Rockport
Mr. George D. Chamberlain, Springfield
Rev. C. Thurston Chase, Great Barrington
Mr. Daniel P. Cole, Springfield
Mr. Waldo E. Conant, Littleton
Rev. Arthur J. Covell, Wakefield
Rev. Charles M. Crooks, Barre
Rev. Vaughan Dabney, Dorchester
Mrs. Ralph N. Dennett, North Adams
Rev. C. Williams Fisher, Stockbridge
Mr. Harlan C. Foster, Rowley
Rev. David Fraser, West Somerville
Rev. John P. Garfield, Middleboro
Mr. Elbert A. Harvey, Brookline
Rev. John A. Hawley, Amherst
Mr. C. W. Hazelton, Turners Falls
Rev. Clarence E. Hellens, Fall River
Rev. Charles F. Hersey, New Bedford
Rev. Charles S. Holton, Newburyport
Rev. Horace F. Holton, Brockton
Rev. A. V. House, Danvers
Mrs. Oliver H. Howe, Cohasset
Rev. Henry J. Kilbourn, Stoneham
Mr. Benjamin F. Kimball, North Woburn
Rev. Theodore B. Lathrop, Framingham
Rev. Herbert E. Lombard, Webster
Rev. C. F. Luther, Amherst

v. A. Madsen, Gloucester
v. Alexander L. McKenzie, Walpole
v. Neil McPherson, Springfield
s. Ambert G. Moody, East Northfield of. Frank P. Morse, Revere
v. Henry H. Noyes, Saundersville
s. Asa M. Parker, Bridgewater
v. Albert F. Pierce, Boston
v. Francis A. Poole, South Weymouth
v. Arthur P. Pratt, Greenfield
v. Winfield S. Randall, Westminster
. Rector H. Reed, Baldwinville
v. Thomas C. Richards, Medford
s. Albert Robinson, Peabody
v. Edwin B. Robinson, Holyoke
. Ernest S. Russell, Hadley
v. Melville A. Shafer, Wrentham
s. Henry F. Smith, West Medford
v. Willard L. Sperry, Cambridge
v. Charles L. Stevens, South Deerfield
. John D. Stewart, Hopkinton
v. Samuel Ross Swift, Hinsdale
v. Hanson E. Thygeson, East Falmouth
v. William B. Tuthill, Lowell
. F. D. Underwood, Harwich
v. Herbert Walker, Holbrook
v. Albert P. Watson, Hatfield
v. Kenneth B. Welles, Northampton
v. Robert R. Wicks, Holyoke
v. G. Edwin Woodman, West Boylston
v. Samuel H. Woodrow, Newton Highlands
r. Carl Wurtzbach, Lee

ICHIGAN

v. Gaius Glenn Atkins, Detroit
v. Arie Binkhorst, Olivet
v. E. W. Bishop, Lansing
v. Howard A. Blanning, St. Johns
r. F. E. Bogart, Detroit
r. W. L. Case, Benzonia
r. C. J. Chandler, Grosse Point
v. H. C. Colburn, Ypsilanti
v. G. H. Coman, Richmond
v. Percy F. Dawe, Cadillac
v. Chester B. Emerson, Detroit
v. Edwin Evans, Calumet
v. Charles O. Grieshaber, Grand Rapids
v. J. S. Hamilton, Bangor
v. C. H. Harger, Benzonia
v. W. A. Hutchinson, Gaylord
rs. Zua V. Kedzie, Pittsford
r. S. O. Livingston, Grand Rapids
v. A. J. MacKenzie, Detroit
v. Charles H. Meeker, Armada
v. Carlton B. Miller, Battle Creek
r. J. L. Murry, Grand Rapids
v. S. N. Oliver, Morenci
v. G. Russell Parker, Watervliet
v. C. C. Smith, Olivet
r. Harry W. Sowton, Wolverine
v. J. W. Sutherland, Lansing
v. C. E. Taggart, Reed City
v. Charles E. Trueblood, Alpena
v. Stephen Vaughan, Shelby

INNESOTA

r. C. R. Andrews, Ada
r. H. L. Beecher, New Ulm
res. Donald J. Cowling, Northfield
ev. W. W. Dale, Mahnomen
ev. H. P. Dewey, Minneapolis
ev. E. A. Drake, Minneapolis
r. A. W. Fagerstrom, Worthington
r. C. A. French, Monticello
rof. John H. Gray, Northfield
r. Lyle Hamlin, Spring Valley
ev. William E. Hammond, Walker
ev. A. M. Hanson, Owatonna
ev. Everett Lesher, Minneapolis
rs. Everett Lesher, Minneapolis
rof. R. W. MacLean, Moorhead
ev. William H. Medlar, Wayzata
ev. George P. Merrill, Minneapolis
ev. John P. Miller, Minneapolis
ev. Edwin S. Shaw, Minneapolis
ev. Wallace H. Sterns, Granite Falls
ev. A. K. Voss, Detroit
r. Charles H. Warner, Aitkin
ev. E. F. Wheeler, Princeton
ev. Howard Y. Williams, St. Paul

ISSISSIPPI

r. R. A. Hamilton, Tougaloo
ev. William T. Holmes, Tougaloo

ISSOURI

udge Theodore Alvord, Pierce City
r. E. S. Healey, Webster Groves
r. Henry M. Pflager, St. Louis
r. Clarence Reidenbach, Kansas City
ev. V. H. Ruring, Lebanon
r. Henry Schuler, St. Joseph
rof. G. Byron Smith, Iberia

EBRASKA

ev. O. M. Adams, Lincoln
ev. Mrs. Ada S. Anderson, Omaha
ev. G. R. Birch, Stanton
r. W. H. Birney, Hartington
ev. Noel J. Breed, Hastings
ev. A. A. Cressman, Crete
ev. G. L. Diehl, Norfolk udge Harry Dungan, Hastings
ev. Irvine Inglis, Lincoln
ev. C. G. Murphy, Lincoln
r. J. L. Pierce, Lincoln
ev. Frank G. Smith, Omaha
ev. W. A. Tyler, Lincoln

EW HAMPSHIRE

on. Edward H. Adams, Portsmouth
ev. James W. Bixler, Exeter
Rev. R. B. Chamberlain, Hanover
Rev. Robert H. Dunn, Lancaster
Mr. Fred D. Hemenway, Marlboro
Mr. B. S. Hooker, Bradford, Vt.
Rev. Albert W. Howes, Fitzwilliam
Rev. Henry S. Ives, Newbury, Vt.
Rev. William L. Linaberry, North Hampton
Rev. S. Burman Long, Marlboro
Mr. Fred B. Philbrick, Newmarket
Rev. F. C. Rolls, Hudson
Mr. A. B. Shepherd, Derry
Rev. William F. Whitcomb, Claremont

NEW JERSEY

Mr. F. A. Coombs, East Orange
Rev. John H. MacMillan, Vineland
Rev. N. W. Pendleton, Rutherford
Mrs. D. Foster Updike, Glen Ridge

NEW MEXICO

Rev. J. H. Heald, El Paso, Tex.
Rev. William H. Elfring, Gallup

NEW YORK

Rev. Nathan S. Aller, Phœnix
Rev. E. P. Armstrong, Randolph
Rev. Fritz W. Baldwin, Brooklyn
Mr. Henry M. Beecher, Binghamton
Mr. William J. Blackburn, Oswego
Rev. George A. Brock, Saratoga
Rev. Henry J. Condit, Ithaca
Rev. John C. Green, Rockaway Beach
Rev. Willard P. Harmon, Ticonderoga
Rev. E. D. Hughes, West Winfield
Rev. Frederick A. Kimberley, Antwerp
Rev. Joshua C. Luke, Binghamton
Mrs. Albert J. Lyman, Brooklyn
Rev. A. P. Manwell, Gloversville
Rev. F. W. Murtfeldt, Utica
Rev. S. U. North, Walton
Rev. Charles Olmstead, Fulton
Rev. Charles A. Paille, Endicott
Rev. N. M. Pratt, Lockport
Rev. H. L. Pyle, Watertown
Mr. L. W. Race, Buffalo
Rev. Lewis T. Reed, Brooklyn
Mr. Walter Roberts, Richmond Hill
Rev. Lewis G. Rogers, Buffalo
Mrs. R. R. Rogers, Jamestown
Rev. Alfred E. Roraback, Brooklyn
Rev. William Dana Street, White Plains
Rev. John E. Sweet, Hopkinton
Rev. Frank Voorhees, Miller Place
Dr. Edwin G. Warner, Brooklyn
Rev. Andrew M. Wight, Syracuse
Rev. Evan R. Williams, Syracuse
Rev. George Wilson, Jamestown

NORTH CAROLINA

Rev. Park W. Fisher, Southern Pines
Rev. Will B. O'Neill, Tryon
Rev. George J. Thomas, Raleigh
Rev. H. R. Walden, Troy
Rev. E. L. Wehrenberg, Star

NORTH DAKOTA

Rev. E. A. Allin, Wahpeton
Rev. W. H. Ashley, New England
Rev. R. A. Beard, Fargo
Rev. E. F. Bosworth, Grand Forks
Mr. James A. Buchanan, Buchanan
Rev. O. F. Davis, Michigan
Mr. F. E. Ellickson, Regent
Rev. A. C. Hacke, Fargo
Mr. Ira T. Hall, Hettinger
Rev. George R. Hull, Harvey
Pres. G. A. McFarland, Minot
Rev. C. H. Phillips, Jamestown
Mrs. C. H. Phillips, Jamestown
Rev. E. H. Stickney, Fargo
Rev. G. A. Stroup, Williston

OHIO

Rev. Ferdinand Q. Blanchard, Cleveland
Mr. J. T. Calvert, Medina
Rev. W. J. Campbell, Youngstown
Rev. Raymond G. Clapp, Cleveland
Rev. Charles J. Dole, Lakewood
Rev. Lloyd C. Douglas, Akron
Rev. R. W. Harris, Ashtabula
Rev. H. R. Hughes, Youngstown
Mr. Charles A. Judson, Sandusky
Rev. John L. Keedy, Toledo
Rev. C. A. Keller, Ashtabula
Rev. Wellington M. Leininger, Mansfield
Rev. William H. Longsworth, Canton
Mr. William W. Mills, Marietta
Mr. M. L. Morris, Gomer
Pres. Edward S. Parsons, Marietta
Mrs. John G. Percy, Cleveland
Rev. H. A. N. Richards, Akron
Mr. David P. Simpson, Cleveland
Rev. Raymond W. Steiner, Newport, Ky.
Rev. I. J. Swanson, Ravenna
Mrs. Henry W. Tappe, Cleveland
Rev. Bertrand V. Tippett, Lodi

OKLAHOMA

Rev. W. M. Oakes, Carrier
Rev. Frank M. Sheldon, Oklahoma City
Rev. Samuel Pearson, Houston, Tex.

OREGON

Mrs. Frank G. Taylor, Forest Grove

PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. David Howells, Kane
Rev. Enoch Hughes, Scranton
Rev. Thomas J. Jones, Scranton
Rev. T. S. Lewis, Scranton
Rev. T. Aird Moffat, Kane
Rev. Richard Powell, Scranton
Rev. Henry C. Stallard, West Pittston
Mr. Chester A. Thomas, Scranton

RHODE ISLAND

Rev. Arthur H. Bradford, Providence
Rev. Asbury Krom, Providence

SOUTH DAKOTA

Rev. J. E. Ball, Pierre
Rev. Lewis E. Camfield, Academy
Rev. L. L. Duerson, Gregory
Rev. L. W. Fifield, Sioux Falls
Rev. Nathaniel Hass, Carthage
Rev. Rudolph Hertz, Eagle Butte
Rev. H. W. Jamison, Newell
Rev. Hans C. Juell, Aberdeen
Rev. Samuel W. Keck, Watertown
Mrs. Samuel W. Keck, Watertown
Rev. Glen Lindley, Mitchell
Rev. David J. Perrin, Huron
Mrs. D. J. Perrin, Huron
Rev. Perry A. Sharpe, Vermillion
Rev. Fred Smith, Isabel
Rev. George Williams, Rapid City
Mrs. George Williams, Rapid City

TENNESSEE

Dr. R. A. George, Memphis
Mrs. R. A. George, Memphis
Mr. C. W. Lusk, Chattanooga
Rev. William J. Turrentine, Athens, Ala.

TEXAS

Hon. E. M. Powell, Dallas
Hon. Charles E. Smith, San Antonio

UTAH

Rev. Charles D. Gaffney, Salt Lake City
Rev. Elmer I. Goshen, Salt Lake City

VERMONT

Mrs. Viola Cooledge, Ludlow
Dr. Charles C. Creegan, Northfield
Rev. F. Wilson Day, Randolph
Rev. W. F. Frazier, Burlington
Mr. Wallace H. Gilpin, Barton
Rev. George E. Goodliffe, Morrisville
Mr. Orson Green, Danby
Mr. Justus R. Hoadley, Rutland
Rev. Ola R. Houghton, Wallingford
Mr. H. S. Howard, Burlington
Rev. Charles W. Legge, Swanton
Rev. Henry C. Newell, Middlebury
Rev. Carl J. Peterson, North Croftsbury
Rev. James Ramage, East Barre
Mr. Arthur Stone, St. Johnsbury
Rev. L. H. Stoughton, Hardwick
Rev. Walter Thorpe, Brandon
Rev. Herbert P. Woodin, Brattleboro
Rev. Arthur V. Woodworth, West Brattleboro

WASHINGTON

Rev. J. Charles Evans, Colville
Rev. C. R. Gale, Seattle
Mrs. C. R. Gale, Seattle
Mr. J. J. Gerlach, Spokane
Rev. Joel Harper, Spokane
Dr. C. J. Hawkins, Seattle
Mrs. Harry Jones, Stevenson
Rev. H. C. Mason, Seattle
Mr. I. L. McLaren, Spokane
Rev. G. W. Nash, Chicago, Ill.
Rev. R. D. Nicholls, Lowell
Miss Estelle Roberts, No. Seattle
Rev. W. D. Robinson, Yakima
Mr. W. W. Seymour, Tacoma
Mr. S. B. Shiley, Yakima
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, Tacoma

WISCONSIN

Rev. Thomas Barker, Adams
Rev. Robbins W. Barstow, Madison
Rev. E. Frazer Bell, Madison
Mr. Ben Bradley, Antigo
Rev. J. E. Brownell, Ashland
Mr. T. L. Coleman, Milwaukee
Rev. H. D. Davies, Wauwatosa
Supt. Theodore R. Faville, Madison
Rev. Walter C. Graf, Mukwonago
Mr. F. J. Harwood, Appleton
Rev. F. W. Heberlein, Madison
Rev. William Lodwick, Soarta
Rev. A. F. Newcomb, Williams Bay
Rev. LeRoy C. Partch, Columbus
Rev. Harry E. Peabody, Appleton
Mr. S. M. Pedrick, Ripon
Rev. C. W. Pinkney, Durand
Mr. J. W. Purves, Friendship
Rev. O. L. Robinson, Elroy
Mrs. O. L. Robinson, Elroy
Rev. Frank J. Scribner, Janesville
Mr. C. D. Sieberns, Spring Valley
Mr. E. G. Smith, Beloit
Rev. J. O. Thrush, River Falls
Rev. Charles H. Wicks, Rhinelander

The movement to outlaw war is comparable to the abolition of slavery and to the prohibition of the liquor traffic in its appeal to the Christian conscience. Christianity is opposed to compromise with wrong, therefore the churches should unitedly advocate the outlawry of war as being the only method by which war can be abolished.—William E. Sweet.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Fiction

AN AFFAIR OF HONOUR, by STEPHEN MCKENNA (Little, Brown. $2.50). Mr. McKenna in his new novel aspires to nothing greater than comedy and has written a tale, entertaining and at times hilarious. Some Oxford students plan a news-scoop to give a new chance for life to a bankrupt paper "The Oxford Post," which is owned and edited by one of their friends. A duel is staged with convenient witnesses and a gigantic news hoax is launched. This however has many other results besides attracting publicity for the paper and these are humorously developed in the story.

A VICTOR OF SALAMIS, by WILLIAM STEARNS DAVIS (Macmillan. $2.00). A reprint of an already widely known piece of historical fiction giving a picture of life in Athens at the time of the great struggle with Persia.

AT THE SIGN OF THE SILVER SHIP, by STANLEY HART CAUFFMAN (Penn. $2.00). An inn, known as the Silver Ship, located near Philadelphia in days before the Revolution, is the scene of this spirited romantic novel. There is enough of mystery and intrigue and sufficient fighting to successfully produce the atmosphere of those more adventurous days. It is a creditable first novel of this author.

THE INDIAN CANOE, by RUSSELL D. SMITH (Century. $1.75). If out-of-doors life and fishing attract the reader, this pleasant narrative of a fishing expedition into the Maine woods will be next best thing to the actual experience, for the book is charmingly written.

THE MANSION HOUSE, by ELEANOR MERCEIN KELLY (Century. $2.00). Life at "The Mansion House" on this Kentucky plantation revolves about several very striking personalities. There are an old colonel, a sportsman and breeder of thorough-bred horses, and his intimate friend Judge Dunwiddee, Judith the unusual heroine of the story, and Alan Lloyd the overseer from the Kentucky Mountains and others, each of which seems to embody some distinctive phase of Kentucky life. A gripping story told with vigor and insight which evinces the same power the author has displayed before in two former novels depicting Kentucky life.

BIGGER AND BLACKER, by OCTAVUS ROY COHEN (Little, Brown. $2.00). Eight humorous sketches dealing with a movie venture in Alabama. The stories are decidedly funny but do not depend for their effect upon either characterization or deep insight into the finer qualities of Negro life. The comedy of caricature seems to be the author's sole quest.

ROSALIE, by CHARLES MAJOR (Macmillan. $2.00). Any book by the author of When Knighthood was in Flower is sure of wide reading. This novel dealing with the adventures of a physician of a hundred years ago, condemned to death for a crime of which he was innocent, and who escaped to Northern Canada, is sure to be popular.

CLOTHES MAKE THE PIRATE, by HOLMAN DAY (Harpers). Suggesting in the preface that a story about Dixy Bull, the pirate, told him by Harrison Curtis, an old-time master mariner, as well as stories handed down in his own family, were sources of subtle suggestion for this tale, Holman Day has proceeded artless handlings of situations that bring amaz- W. W. Jacobs, who has charmed so many with his sailor yarns, could have done. There is the same delicious, whimsical humor, the seemingly artless handlings of situations that bring amazing results and provide for the readers endless chuckles. Tidd, a very meek tailor of Boston of 200 years ago, read constantly "The Buccaneers of the Spanish Main" and he made himself a pirate suit. Untoward circumstances forced him to wear this in the character of a pirate chief and be the surprising hero of this rollicking yarn.

MACIVOR'S FOLLY, by HUGH MACNAIR KAHLER and DONALD GRANT HERRING (Appleton. $2.00). An entertaining love story in which figures the struggle of a man of the Carolina hills to retain his forest of pines and to demonstrate that peaches could be grown on these sandy hills.

A FRIEND OF CAESAR, by WILLIAM STEARNS DAVIS (Macmillan. $2.00). A reprint of this well-known romance, the scene of which is ancient Rome, fifty years before the Christian era.

RED ASHES, by MARGARET PEDLER (Doran. $2.00). A modern love story, but the sex interest is romantic, not pathological. A young doctor becomes a recluse because after a night with the boys he performs an operation, and the patient dies. Love rekindled the flame of his life, but it hovered around disaster when it was discovered that the brother of the woman that he loved had been the victim of his blundering.

UP THE RITO, by JARVIS HALL (Penn Co. $2.00). When a story opens in New Mexico we expect adventures in plenty and this story, with its fast-moving incidents and a love story added, will not disappoint.

JUNGLE-BORN, by JOHN EYTON (Century. $2.00). A baby boy adopted by an ape when his parents were killed by a man-eating tiger grows to maturity in the jungles of India. This is the basis of a rather unusual and enjoyable story.

THE LANE, by HELEN SHERMAN GRIFFITHS (Penn Pub. Co. $2.00). A delightful story of an enterprising young woman who comes to a country village to live with two maiden aunts, who incidentally are more amenable to suggestions regarding clothes and present-day modes than are many of that class of society. Doris has some of the dash of her actress mother and she succeeds in using it, supplemented by a tidy little fortune, to bring about improvements in the village. A pleasing romance runs through the story.

MARBACKA, by SELMA LAGERLOF, translated from the Swedish by Velma Swanston Howard (Doubleday, Page. $2.50). Marbacka, the early home of the gifted author, becomes to the reader a real estate, peopled with distinct and varied personalities who give a vivid impression of life in Sweden with its unique customs, folklore, and mysticism. Lieutenant Lagerlof, with his many schemes of improvement, and Fru Lagerlof, the mother, are characters who hold the attention. The simple life here portrayed is in restful contrast with the melodramatic bustle of much of present-day fiction.

PAID IN FULL, by IAN HAY (Houghton Mifflin. $2.00). The Craddock children believe that their father died a hero, giving his life in order to save a little girl from drowning; but it develops later that, unknown to his young wife, he saved himself, too. The next years of his life he spends traveling around the world as a "gentleman" scoundrel, raising money for his personal use by posing as a war hero, breaking women's hearts. But Denny fin pays for his misdemeanors. The story is of keen character portrayal. A bright hu also runs through its pages.

Six volumes containing the works of R ERT LOUIS STEVENSON have just been publis in the Everyman's Library series (E. P. D ton, each volume 80 cents). The first volu of the four now ready contains Treasure Isl and Kidnapped; the second, The Master of B lantrae and The Black Arrow; the third, ginibus Puerisque and Familiar Studies of M and Books; the fourth, An Inland Voya Travels With a Donkey, and Silverado Squ ters. The other two volumes, which will ready shortly, have Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hy The Merry Men and Other Tales in the fi and Poems in the second.

Other Interesting Books

LUTHERAN FUNDAMENTALS, by G. H. G BERDING (Augustana Book Concern).

THEOLOGICAL STUDIES by VARIOUS AUTHO (United Lutheran Publishing House).

The first of these books is a statement Lutheran theology for the layman. It certai is conservative. Regeneration, justification, a sanctification loom large. The whole syst is worked out in logic rather than life. T second book goes more technically and phi sophically into the subject. Among the them treated are the soul and society, the Jesus the New Testament, the New Testament id of faith, the church and the mission of Chri and the authority of Holy Scripture in t early church.

THE GREAT THEMES OF JESUS, by WILLIA THOMSON HANZSCHE (Revell. $1.25). This not a polemic discussion, but seeks to dra men from suspicion and dispute to the spi of Jesus, his sympathy, kindliness, and redem tive love. Among the "great themes," as t author conceives them, are the fatherhood God, the brotherhood of man, the kingdom God, the authority of Jesus, the atonemen truth, faith, and prayer. The keynote of h message is, "We are not making enough Jesus Christ."

UNCLE SAM'S FAMILY, by DOROTHY MCCONNELL. A bright account for little chi dren of ten representative members of "Unc Sam's Family."

SIMON KENTON THE SCOUT, by J. I. COR (Crowell. $1.75 net). An Indian adventur story of the days of Daniel Boone. It is s closely related to historical facts that with th historic figure of Simon Kenton as its hero, seems to instruct and certainly it thrills th reader. It is full of wilderness warfare, hard ship, and narrow escapes.

THE INFLUENCE OF CHRISTIANITY O FUNDAMENTAL INSTITUTIONS, by PHILO W SPRAGUE (Revell. $1.50). Mr. Sprague is a Episcopal rector in Charlestown, Mass. I giving these Bohlen Lectures he follows a lon line of his ecclesiastical kin, not the least o whom is Phillips Brooks and his Influence o Jesus. He has chosen as the fundamental in stitutions the church, the family, the state and the industrial system, and has given us fair analysis and thoughtful discussion of eac institution. Then he shows how far and wit what results the principles of Jesus have beer applied. He also shows where Christianity has failed.

Vital Questions for Congregationalists
To Come Before the National Council

A Washington Layman's Views

Who shall be Moderator of the National uncil?

If a layman, Fred B. Smith. If a minister—y one of a dozen. I don't see that it matters much—not that the position is unimportant, t I believe there is no scarcity of men who uld honor the place and be honored by it. same future time I hope Dr. Jason Noble erce will be given the place, but not the ming year. He has too much else on hand!

The publications, The Congregationalist, issionary Herald, and American Missionary: should like to see them all combined in The ngregationalist, the missionary magazines, t in their present scope, but in a missionary partment in each weekly issue of The Con-egationalist. Such a department, made brisk d snappy and informing, would, I believe, t more missionary information into the Con-egational constituency than by the present rm of presentation. Perhaps such a plan uld eliminate many of the longer articles w published in the missionary magazines, but larger sum total of reading might result. Be-les, a longer article could be featured occa-nally outside the missionary department of e Congregationalist.

There are several questions that involve the erging of forces: one Board of Foreign Mis-ns; one Home Board; the merging of the undation for Education with the Education ciety; administering the Annuity Fund and e Ministerial Relief Fund by the same organ-ations. To all of these possible mergers I y most emphatically, "Yes," that is, unless ere are insurmountable difficulties that a lay-an does not comprehend.

The machinery involved in running the local urch is very simple; the machinery involved running the denominational activities seems ceedingly complicated. While we have no shops, or presbyteries, or synods, and a lot the other things many denominations have, vertheless we have a lot of organization and her "luxuries" that confound and confuse the erage layman.

It has sometimes seemed that every time mebody has thought of something new to do, he was enough of a leader to gather a suffi-ent following to count, he formed a new ganization to do the job—of course not liter-ly, but surely there has been strong tend-cies in this direction.

There are likely two sides to this situation. ne new thing somebody wanted to do, thor-ghly commendable in itself, has likely been t up to an organization already existing to . That organization, with limited funds and cilities, has likely refused because it could nothing else with the limitations that re-ricted its activities.

But now it seems to me that every possible nsolidation that can be made should be made. very organization means overhead expenses, d duplication of effort to a greater or less tent. Merging of two or more organizations to one might mean, and probably would ean, enlarging the operating expenses of the mbination, as compared with those of any of e pre-existing units, but would there not still a great saving?—and without loss in effi-ency. Every dollar saved in overhead and in her operating expenses is a dollar more for tual expenditure in the field.

It seems, on the face of things, like utter olishness to maintain two separate organiza-ns for ministerial aid. I suppose the Min-isterial Relief is in reality a supplement to the Annuity Fund, doing for aged and infirm ministers what the Annuity Fund is not yet able to do. If my conception of the work of each is anywhere nearly correct, the two units have to work in the closest co-operation—or else very much at cross purposes. If this is so, then it strikes me that to maintain two separate organizations is little less than business stupidity. I do not see any more sense in holding as separate organizations the other units that are paired at the beginning of this statement. In fact, I believe a proposal to unite in one great missionary unit all the missionary activities of the denomination, both home and foreign, would be deserving of the most searching consideration. Why not? Can a really sound reason be given for not so doing? Of course it would make an awful jolt in the thinking of some people, but the jolt would not be fatal.

With the foregoing, there is closely related the next question: Shall we lose interest in lessening the number of specific objects in the apportionment?

Is not the Apportionment Plan itself, and its operation, the answer to this question? Has interest declined since the Apportionment Plan was adopted? In my judgment, the local church pays very much more attention to the total of its apportionment than it does to the individual objects named in the plan.

I do not believe there would be any appreciable loss of interest, if the objects for which the larger but fewer units stand for are adequately set forth. Again, I say it is the total of the amount rather than the component parts which go to make it up that the average layman considers—and he doesn't consider it as much as he should.

Washington, D. C. H. P. Gould.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul Writes to the Thessalonians

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 20
I Thess. 2: 1-12

The Epistles to the Thessalonians are among the earliest of Paul's writings that have come down to us; probably the only Epistle that preceded them being that written to the Galatians. This was probably written from Antioch in the winter of 49-50 A.D., while the Epistles to the Thessalonians were written from Corinth, during Paul's stay of a year and a half there, the date being apparently 52 A.D., or the early part of 53. The Epistles, therefore, are not far removed from Paul's visit to Thessalonica, during his second missionary journey and his founding of the church there, as recorded in our last lesson.

In the passage from the Epistles chosen as the text of this lesson Paul refers to these experiences at Thessalonica. He looks back with much satisfaction upon his ministry there. He recalls the fact that although he suffered greatly encouraging remembrance that he had been at Philippi, where he had been imprisoned, his sufferings had not in any way weakened his faith or his boldness in the proclamation of the Gospel. He surveys his ministry with the faithful to the highest ideal and had been concerned not about "pleasing men," but about faithfulness toward God and the consciousness of God's approval. "For neither at any time," he says, "used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness; God is witness; nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have been burdensome as the apostles of Christ. But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children."

Here, surely, is a noble expression of a beautiful ministerial ideal. But it would be a great mistake to suppose that it is of interest and of application to ministers alone. A great and triumphant ministry depends for its support and its sure success upon the ideal of the ministry held by the church at large. Unfortunately, as Paul's Epistles show, the members of the early church did not always have as clear and holy a conception of the ministry as had Paul himself. Probably both in these Epistles to the Thessalonians, and in those to the Corinthians, Paul's insistence upon the purity of his motives and the integrity of his methods arose from the fact that there were critics, then as now, whose fault-finding was not inspired by lofty conceptions of the Gospel and its ministration.

The personal note in Paul's expression of the ministerial ideal is particularly striking. His comparison of himself with a nurse cherishing her children, and his reference to his affectionate desire and to his readiness to give them not only the Gospel but "his very soul" because of his deep affection, are deeply moving. He speaks of laboring day and night that he might not be a burden to them in any way, and although this was more an indication of Paul's intense personal independence, than altogether in consistency with the principle that he asserts elsewhere and that Jesus also asserted, namely, that the laborer is worthy of his hire, it helps to accentuate the fervor and intensity with which Paul put all that he was and all that he had into his ministry.

How simple are the greatest things! Paul sums up his ministry in the purpose to be holy and just and unblameable in his behavior among the people, and he asserts for the Thessalonians the ideal that he himself has followed of "walking worthy of God." Could the supremacy of Christian living be expressed in a more concrete, simple, and practical way? When the church has profound faith in such a ministry as this, when it values aright the highest qualities of a true ministry, this is the sort of ministry it will get. One should not minimize in any way the worth, dignity, and power of Christian ministries everywhere today. More ministers, than critics of the ministry sometimes realize, are inspired by these high ideals of Paul, but the lack of regard for the supreme values in the church constitutes today as it did in ancient times, a great temptation to men to forsake higher ideals for lower, and the supreme spiritual success, which is not always apparent, for the lesser and cheaper successes which are often more apparent than real.

The twelve verses of our lesson constitute from the standpoint of a high ideal for church and ministry one of the most notable passages in the entire New Testament. A church that desires to be spiritually effective might well make this lesson a study not of a week only but of an entire year.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

The Symphony of Life

I read once that a musician, visiting Niagara, was able to determine the fundamental note of the majestic music sung by the cataract as it makes its tremendous plunge. It was, I believe, G major, at a pitch far lower than the deepest tone possible on the world's greatest organ.

I like to think that the vast stream of the world's life, plunging forward on its way to eternity, makes also a mighty music. Wordsworth's "still, sad music of humanity" is by no means universal; the measures of the symphony of life are not all minor. There are, to be sure, the moans of the hungry, the despairing wails of the disheartened, the sobs of those that mourn, the wistful notes of those who aspire but still must suffer; there are the rasping tones of cruelty, the grating noises of hard selfishness, the flat tones of complacent sordidness, the reckless shouts of those who would sell their souls for a bauble, the demon voices of tempters. But along with this one hears, in the great symphony of life, the resounding strokes of willing labor, the brave notes of unsleeping aspiration and eager struggle, the trumpet tones of those who steadfastly hold out against temptation and sin, the melodious notes of good will, and all the notes of kindness, and justice, and love, and self-sacrifice, and noble faith; and those make thrilling major passages of joy and triumph.

It is pleasant to reflect that the greatest music in the world is a blend of the individual notes of a multitude of instruments. The violin can move to tears or laughter, it can soar and touch things beyond the tongue of man to express, it can seem as if it were human heart-strings turned into the vibration of heavenly music by a divine player; yet an orchestra made up of nothing but violins gives incomplete music. One wants also the booming basses, and the resonant trombone, and the cool flute, and the horn with its dulcet call to romance, and the little oboe telling in dreamy tones of open, warm hillsides, blue skies, fleecy clouds, and shepherds piping as they watch their flocks. It is a fine achievement to add even one bit to the creation of the great harmony.

Take then this Symphony of Life: is it not thrilling to the imaginative soul because it is created by unnumbered human instruments, mostly unknown and humble, each sounding in its own place its special note of music, and adding the quality of its individual voice to the glorious whole? Do you not hear splendid notes contributed by souls that are maintaining honor unswervingly where temptation is fierce and honor is hard? Do you not hear drum calls made by frail folk stretched almost to the breaking point, but whose valiant spirits give marching orders to their fellows? Do you not hear trumpet tones given forth by battered and disappointed folk who are resolved, come what will, to keep their souls unconquered? Do you not hear splendid, brave notes made by humble men and women who only by high-hearted determination are able to produce music instead of wails, groans, and rebellious cries? Do you not hear suggestions of a beauty which only heaven can fully develop, because the spirit of man, tempted, yearning, striving, hoping, stricken with suffering yet hounded on by infinite longings, though it desires mortal satisfaction is never satisfied with anything mortal because of its immortal possibilities?

Closet and Altar

THE MEANING OF THE COMMONPLACE

Well, thou good servant, because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.—Luke 19: 17.

The Lord desires to be with us in all the little things of life; for life is made of little things, and if he is not in them he is not in life.—John Worcester.

For it is a principle constantly recognized in Holy Scripture that, since the visible world is a shadow of the eternal, every common and familiar thing has its heavenly counterpart. It was thus that our Lord taught us to rise from the earthly to the heavenly. Would we know what God is? Then he bade us look at human fatherhood and recognize there a revelation of the divine: "If ye, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more your Heavenly Father?" Or would we know what heaven is? Then look at your earthly house: Heaven is "the Father's Home," the Eternal Home.—David Smith.

Those with whom the feeling of religion is only occasional have it most when the awful or grand breaks out of the common; the meek who inherit the earth find the God of the whole world more evidently present, and in the commonest things. That which is best he gives most plentifully. Hence the great fullness of ordinary nature.—George MacDonald.

Despise not thou small things;
The soul that longs for wings
To soar to some great height of sacrifice,
Too oft forgets the daily round,
Where little cares abound,
And shakes off little duties while she looks aloft.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Great services reveal our possibilities, small services reveal our consecration. They call for patience and rigorous fidelity, and the power that can endure through dreary days. So by the daily work we have to do and by the task that is given us of God, we are tested in the whole range of manhood. There are no victories so quietly glad as those that are won within one's daily work. —G. H. Morrison.

Love's secret is to be always doing things for God, and not to mind because they are such very little ones—F. W. Faber.

We ought to cultivate the friendships of little things. Beauty is one of the surest antidotes to vexation. Often when life looks dreary from some real or fancied injustice, or indignity, has a thought of truth been flashed into my mind from a flower, the frost, a shadow, clouds, rainbows, stars, and sunrises!—George MacDonald.

Grant, O Lord, that we may carefully watch over our tempers and every unholy feeling; remove whatever in us may be a stumbling-block in another's way; that, by conforming to thy will in small things, we may hope by thy protection and help to pass safely through the greater dangers and trials to which we may be exposed. Amen.

Christina G. Rossetti.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVO

Giants for Christ

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic f
September 20-26

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

TOPIC: Getting Strength from God. 2 C inthians 12: 6-10; Philippians 4: 11-13.

Light from the Bible Passages

Paul's success never turned his head. W it all he could remain modest. This did mean that he undervalued his abilities, but knew that the power behind them was a from a higher source. He recognized that had physical limitations, and believed t
God sent them upon him to keep him f being self-exalted or self-sufficient. He come to know that God's favor was ev thing and that God could never do much w one who failed to recognize his weakness.
weakness, therefore, was a supreme blessi for thus God could come into his life.
gloried in limitations for then he knew Go power best. He had his ups and downs had not allowed them to change his outl on life or his output of labor. He had covered a great secret: he could do all thi when he let Christ furnish the power.

Leads for Leaders

How many people there are in the chur in your society who are good, but whose go ness is not effective! What did the man me who prayed that he might not only be go but good for something. Think of a g automobile without any power.

Distinguish between power and noise.
twenty-thousand horse-power turbine in ocean liner may not make as much racket a little motor-boat. Is not the quiet power a Christian life most effective?

Is power obtained simply by asking for i
Study our prayers. What more is necessar
Is it taking the power and using it? Is it co vincing ourselves that God is empowering for this and that task?

Paul's word (in Philippians 4:13) has t same root as our word, dynamite. What wou be the effect in a church or a society if Chri furnished the "dynamite?" What is the for behind much of our work: praise, self-glor pride or office?

Thoughts for Members

It is not sufficient to think of God as some organ of the body—the most worthy par such as the heart or brain. God's spirit fil his example with his glory and his powe making the least comely parts noble.—*Charl
H. Brent, D.D.*

Not where proud perils are I place my thron
But with the true of heart, and these alone
So where the contrite soul breathes a true sig
And where kind deeds are done, ever ther dwell I.—The Bishop of Ripon.

Paul was disappointed in not getting releas from a physical affliction which hampered hi in his work. He asked God to deliver him, an God refused. But Paul did not sputter an give up his faith. He went on with his labors and found out to his delight that notwith standing his disability, he could still do suc cessful work.—Charles E. Jefferson, D.D.

A Moment of Prayer

Teach us, O Father, that hardest of lessons to rejoice in our discovery of weakness by which we are made aware of thy strength
By any and all means we would be more use ful to thee and to thy Kingdom. Show us how to make our own thy matchless power which awaits our asking and our taking. Amen.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Kai Phal Pakka

By Anne Pendleton

Johnny and Josie were quarreling. I'm aid they quarreled quite often.

"Don't pick that melon," said Josie. "It t ripe."

"It is ripe," said Johnny.

"But it isn't," said Josie.

"Dear me," said Aunt Lois. "You children nd just like the kai phal pakka bird."

Aunty Lois had lived in India, and could the best stories.

osie and Johnny forgot the melon, and for- their quarrel.

"Oh, Aunty Lois," they begged all in one ath. "Do tell us about that funny bird." nd this is the story Aunty Lois told.

Once upon a time a little old man and a le old woman were climbing a hill. Up, up the hill went the little old man, and up, up the hill after him went the little woman. The path was steep and the little man and the little old woman were tired. ey had come all the way up the hill to Sat from the Balaya Valley below. The man s driving a little old donkey, and the woman s carrying a brass jar on her head.

I wish you could have seen that little old nan. She was lean and brown and withered. r skirt was very, very full, and so long she to tuck the bottom of it up into her belt keep from stepping on it. It was red and ow and had a green border on it, and all r the border were tiny triangular and square ches. The border looked like a piece of one grandmother's quilts. Around her neck the le old woman had five strings of red beads. r arms, from wrists to elbows, were covered h green and yellow and black glass bracelets. d above her elbows up to her little short t sleeves were funny black and red tatooed tures. There were no shoes on her feet, on every toe was a ring, and on some toes ee or four rings. Some of the rings were in silver bands, and some had great knobs them. How she could walk I'm sure I don't w. Around her ankles were big silver klets, three of them on each ankle, and as walked the anklets made a little song, kle, tinkle, that was very pleasant to hear, d in her nose the little old woman wore a ss ring—so big.

The little old man was lean and brown and hered. His clothes were a rusty, dusty r, and for a hat he wore yards and yards cloth wound round his head. His slippers e red, and they turned up at the toes. He ried a big thick walking stick. The stick s bound with bands of brass, and little brass igns were hammered into the wood here there. It was a beautiful stick.

I'm tired," said the little old woman when y got to the top of the hill.

She put her jar of milk on the ground, and down to rest.

I'm tired, too," said the little old donkey himself, and he stood on three legs, dropped ear down, and began to take a nap.

I'm tired, too," said the little old man, and sat down beside his wife. The great round was just getting ready to go to bed be- d the hill.

Come," said the little old man after they rested. "We must hurry."

little old man took off his red slippers with the turned-up toes, and carried them on the end of his stick to keep them from wearing out. The little old woman put the jar of milk on her head again, and they were ready to start.

But the little old donkey was not ready to start. Oh, no, no, not he! He was a tired donkey, and he was sleepy. He wanted to finish his nap.

Jerk, jerk, pull, pull went the little old man on the donkey's rope, and push, push, push went the little old woman from behind. But the little old donkey wouldn't budge,

"Ram, Ram," said the little old man, "we'll never get home tonight."

"Ram, Ram," said the little old woman, "we must get home tonight. But hark! I hear bells. The mailman is coming. He'll help us."

"Jingle, jingle, jingle, jingle," said the bells. "Make way! Make way for the Overland Mail!"

The mailman was bent nearly double with the weight of the mail on his back. He was carrying it from Naini Tal over the hills into Thibet. He had a walking stick, too. It had a spear on one end, and several bells on the other end that kept time is he walked, "jingle, jingle, jingle, jingle."

"Oho! What's up?" asked the mailman.

"This miserable beast won't go," said the little old man. "Won't you prick him gently with your spear?"

But before the mailman could even answer, let alone do what was asked of him, a barking deer bounded out of the jungle to the edge of the path.

"Who, who, who are you?" barked the deer.

The little old donkey was so surprised. He pricked up his ears, kicked up his heels, and ran off down the other side of the hill as fast as he could, and the little old man ran after him.

"Kai Phal Pakka," said the mailman. "The kai fruit are ripe."

"Oh, are they? Good!" said the little old woman. "I'm glad because my old man is very fond of kai fruit. I must hurry and tell him."

The little old woman ran and caught up with the little old man and the little old donkey.

"The kai fruit are ripe," said the little old woman. "Kai phal pakka."

"No," said the little old man. "They can't be ripe."

"Yes," said the little old woman. "The mailman said so."

"But they can't be ripe yet," said the little old man. "It isn't time for them to be ripe. Kai phal"—

"Pakka," interrupted his wife before he could finish.

The little old donkey went on down the hill alone. The little old man and the little old woman grew very angry with each other.

"Kai phal," began the husband again.

"Pakka," interrupted his wife.

"Kai phal," he said.

"Pakka," said his wife, and tossed her head. The jar fell off her head, and the milk took a spill down the hill.

Then a strange thing happened.

The little old man began to get thin and thinner. The little old woman began to get thin and thinner. They faded and faded, and man kept saying, "Kai phal," and before he could finish the little old woman would say, "Pakka." At last they faded all away, even their clothes and the walking stick. Only their spirits were left.

There were two little birds sitting in an oak tree close by. The spirit of the little old man entered into one little bird, and the spirit of the little old woman entered into the other bird.

"Kai phal," sang the first little bird, and before he could sing any more the other little bird interrupted, "Pakka."

"Is that the end?" asked Josie.

"That's the end," said Aunty Lois.

"It isn't a true story," said Johnny.

"No," said Aunty Lois, "it's only a Hindustani legend."

"Just think of never being able to say anything to each other except quarrel words," said Johnny.

"I guess maybe that melon is ripe, Johnny," said Josie.

"Maybe it is, and maybe it isn't," said Johnny. "But that one over there looks ripe. Let's cut it and see."

Josie thumped the melon. It sounded ripe. Johnny cut it. It was ripe. Aunty Lois helped them eat it.

When they had finished, Johnny and Josie almost quarreled as to who had eaten the most, but Aunty Lois began, "Kai phal," and Josie and Johnny altogether in one breath said, "Pakka," and then they laughed.

And after that, when either one of them began to be a bit quarrelsome, the other one said, "Kai phal Pakka" and then they would both laugh, and there wouldn't be any quarrel, because you can't quarrel if you're laughing.

Fuzzy Wuzzy

By Jean H. Brown

Fuzzy Wuzzy on the wall,
Makes believe he cannot crawl,
Stretched out in the sun he lies,
Never winks his beady eyes,
Never moves his bushy head,
You would think he sure was dead.

But you poke him with a stick,
Then you'll see him curl up quick,
Like a little brown, round ball,
Lying on the old stone wall.
I believe, with all his bluff,
He can run all right enough.

Mother says, and guess she knows,
That a Fuzzy Wuzzy grows
Out of teeny weeny eggs,
First it hasn't any legs,
First it only squirms and squirms.
That's the way with baby worms.

And mother says, that very soon
He'll spin himself a warm cocoon,
Out of a soft and silky thread,
All winter long it is his bed,
Where he may sleep and sleep and sleep,
No matter if the snow is deep.

Then when spring comes by and by,
He'll change into a butterfly,
And very beautiful to see,
Yellow or black or green he'll be.
My, that's the queerest of all things,
How Fuzzy Wuzzy could have wings.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

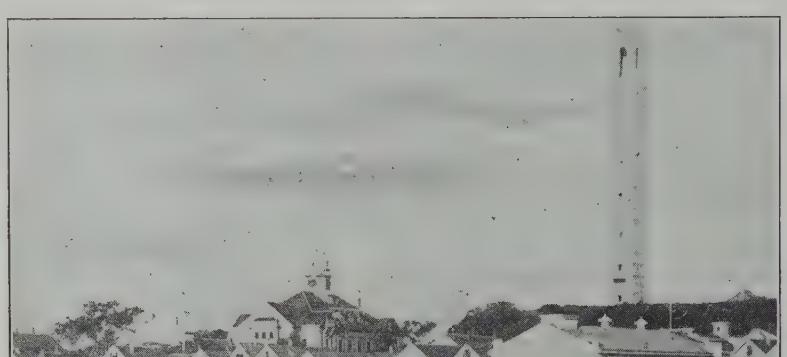
Cape Cod Composite

Annual Review of Activities and Conditions

By Warren P. Landers

This portion of New England's playground seems to compete with Canada's reputation, where the tourist industry is said to be third in all interests. For highways and waterways alike contribute to her increased values as vacation grounds. From Brockton—which in many Joseph Lincoln stories is the metropolitan Mecca—to the tip of the Cape, this year's road construction made scarcely a break for continuous and pleasurable travel. Over the sea Boston boats carried large passenger traffic. The length of the land-trip is sufficient to supply uninterrupted satisfactions both from the historic angle and the offerings of nature.

This year has seen marked increase in business, especially in the trade centers of Hyannis and Falmouth. Housing developments have been in keeping. Doubtless a significant attraction to the Cape are the numerous golf courses, of which there are a dozen, where expense and expanse have become synonymous.



A Glimpse of One of the Cape Cod Towns

Showing the Congregational Church, Town Hall, and Pilgrim Monument at Provincetown

They lure the devotee with as great a call as do Southern winter resorts. Canal popularity is growing. It is still an attraction to the tourist. Since the Canal was opened in 1914 the number of vessels passing through this eight-mile gateway has increased from 582 to 5,489. In 1922 the Legislature authorized a steamship landing, the cost to be borne by Falmouth and Barnstable. This is now a recognized necessity. Among the notable passengers who have this year used the Canal were President and Mrs. Coolidge, en voyage to White Court.

Other Cape visitors this summer have included Mrs. Sally Pratt McLean Greene, now of Lexington, whose Cape Cod Folks of a generation ago had wide circulation. Homer, brother of Floyd Collins of Cave City tragedy, with his dog, visited Sandwich. Dean Rousmaniere, St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston, preached several times at St. Mary's, Barnstable. Dr. Francis E. Clark's late retirement as head of the United Society of Christian Endeavor has given him deserved publicity in current news. Though an eminent Congregationalist, he was not long since made pastor emeritus of the Swift Methodist Church of Sagamore. Senator William M. Butler addressed the Cape Press Club, Aug. 8.

This year the Annalist approaches Cape Summerland by boat, reaching Provincetown, with Pilgrim Monument on its height. Conspicuous among its spires is the Christopher Wren tower of the Universalist Church, painted by Beneker and shown in the local artist colony exhibit this year. Its reproduction by the Literary Digest as a June cover in local color was accepted by townsfolk as a tribute to its "glittering strand studded with sunshine." At the pier, possibly, we shall be greeted by the popular preacher from Amherst Aggie—Rev. John B. Hanna—summer supply at our own church. Congregations are not large but are appreciative. Mr. Hanna proves himself a young people's attraction in their ready co-operation in choir and parish activities. A play was lately given as a successful feature. Provincetown illustrates well many Cape conditions in the field of religious work. Only one church is open the year round. The Home Missionary Society largely confines its effort to the summer. Through the Cape it is expending far less than formerly, its greatest contribution being in behalf of the Portuguese work at Waquoit, directed by Rev. H. E. Thygeson, and in the Finnish neighborhoods of West Wareham and West Barnstable, under the care of Rev. Eino J. Harnalainen.

Truro and North Truro, served by Rev. David Hickey, Methodist, are the first of the Cape's group demonstrations of federation. Both churches in Wellfleet are without regular ministers. This is true of Orleans, though summer preachers are frequently heard in all. At Harwich, Rev. B. F. Lindsay of the B Church at West Harwich is stated supply. ancient church, dating from 1745, is ty The older families have gone and new resi are not always sympathetic with traditio church influence. At the Port the summe ony provides large and often distinguished gregations, with Rev. L. V. Farnsworth p through the year. At Chatham—home o story-writer, Lincoln, and where Mrs. Li participates in charitable-social functi First Church is being well led by Rev. M. Coad. Cheer comes from financial imp ment making possible repairs upon both c and parsonage. Contributions to benevo have nearly equaled apportionment. Su people co-operate.

Union Church, Dennis, with Rev. H. S. ton, nephew of Rev. Charles S. Newbury ticipates a modern parsonage. A site has donated and a considerable sum raised tow the $3,000 required. The ladies' aid so made a good-sized pledge. There were enco ing accessions last year. A cordial attitu evident on the part of vacation guests preach or assist in the musical service. O the young women from this church has joined the staff of the Massachusetts Ge Hospital, Boston.

At Yarmouth, where the First National this year observed its centennial, Rev. Wharton continues to serve the parish with West Yarmouth. A planning board protect and preserve some of the beauty" o town which our high church spire overl is a civic advance. Near-by, at the camp ing grounds, interesting services have been this summer. Among the speakers were B J. W. Hamilton, Washington. Hyannis—shopping center of the Cape—has enterta its usual quota of seasonal gatherings, in ing the county G. A. R., Public Library ference, and the vacation session of the No School, with 300 attending. The Feder Church—made successful by Rev. Sarah Dixon, summering at Cummaquid and a v tion supply—was served this year by Rev. F. Legg. He has also been a recent supply has now gone to Evansville College, Ind., w he will teach. A notable local event this se has been the successful raising of $150,000 mortgage, loans, and maintenance of the Cod Hospital. In ten days the amount was ceeded by about $5,000.

Barnstable recently dedicated a memoria its soldiers of all American wars. It is pl at the point of departure for Revolutio patriots joining Washington at Cambri Cotuit, Rev. E. T. Blake, minister, is adap itself to conditions set up by the federatio Congregational and Methodist Churches. and August residents are ready with sympa and generous support. On the old Metho site a new, adequate federated parsonage been erected. Work believed to be perma has been begun for the Portuguese of the vi ity. A delightful vesper hour was held rece ne old Santuit Church, and repairs are prod making future services possible.

andwich mourns the passing of Mrs. Marsh, of Rev. Edward L. Marsh of the Federated rch. Mrs. Marsh was not only a native of nstable but previous service with Mr. Marsh Yarmouth had endeared her to the Cape.
ough personal worth and ability she was ly known and valued. The spirit involved ne federation belongs to local history. The was the fourth founded on the Cape 37), and by ten men from Saugus who (1638) formed the church long known as gregational and first ministered to by Isaac inson, son of Rev. John Robinson of Pilfame. Among recent supplies have been F. E. Emrich and Sec. J. J. Walker of the ne Missionary Society.

r. and Mrs. Herbert L. Chipman, promiin this church, observed their 25th anni-ary early in the summer. Mr. Chipman is ager of syndicated papers circulating ugh the Cape. Sandwich has this season ed national publicity through the observof the centennial of the founding of glass ufacture. This industry ceased New Year's 1888. A feature of the commemoration an exhibit of old, rare and beautiful specis at the historical building, July 25-Aug. 15.
Commonwealth has just come into possesof the Nye estate at East Sandwich, as nctuary for birds and other wild life.

lmouth, proud of her claim upon Kathe Lee Bates, author of "America the Beau-," daughter of a minister and born and in the town, has this year enjoyed the ices of Rev. H. A. Allenby of the Baptist mination. At West Falmouth the Quaker ting House has opened its doors throughout summer. Often services have been in the a way, but ministers not infrequently ch. In the instance of Dr. Brewer Eddy he American Board—a near-by resident—e is most hearty welcome each season. He ghted the congregation on the morning of 9 by his intimate familiarity with the ory of the Friends and their contribution to and Cape values. At East Falmouth Rev.
G. Thygeson has carried on a devoted min-for 18 years. Great changes have taken
e. Newcomers have been welcomed and are ful. Young men uniting with the church year gave encouragement. Autoists occaally worship in the old church, which dates to 1797. The work among the "Brava" uguese was begun by Mr. and Mrs. Thy-n in 1911. It now forms a permanent part he extra parochial work of his ministry.

daughter of the manse, bearing a well-v Congregational name and herself a sum-visitor, said to me in substance: "It is not lly money that the Cape needs. That is ortant and the Home Missionary Society is g essential work wherever its grants are
e. The real need is a close, intimate inter-sympathy expressed in personal touch." In th Falmouth, where Rev. Herbert Walker
Holbrook and other well-known local Con-ationalists spend their vacations, there are tical demonstrations of this equation. In annual July sale of the woman's society of local church, as well as in the spirit of peration on Sunday, which is a part of the ition of the summer colony, this attitude ears. During the year important renovas have been made in the parsonage and now church is to receive material attention. The ired spirit suggested was lately evident at sset Baptist Church, when the chorus of er (Congregational), of Brockton, with a quartet, participated in the morning serv-Such manifest good will goes far in reducing bitterness growing from indifference and greatly encourages those who work against odds to maintain ancient landmarks.

As we approach the Canal we are reminded of the movement to observe the 300th year (1927) since Governor Bradford established the Trading Post at the mouth of the Manomet, now the western entrance to the waterway. Further north is Gray Gables, where Francis Grover Cleveland—whose engagement has just been announced—was born, the second son of his President father. At Onset our Cape Composite is complete. Summer visitors there are interested in the proposed new library—a modern building for educational and social purposes. In this vacation spot many "meetings" are held, among the more important this year being that of the Latter Day Saints, addressed by Dr. Walter S. Athearn of Boston.

The survey of 1925 leaves me with this conviction: the men and women, lay and ministerial, who are carrying the Master's message in small communities, subject to time-limited annual incursions of people of leisure and often of much money, deserve closer acquaintance and definite, continuous support. "Many of our summer people are not a help morally," writes a correspondent long on the Cape. "Some of them are land grabbers," we are informed. Another "is apprehensive concerning the young people; growing indifference to the churches increased by summer work, sports, and spirit generally, is making it hard to retain our hold upon them." "The attitude of parents is much more lax than of grandparents." "Sixty years ago the people went to church—loads of them. Children never questioned but expected to go." It is easy to see that attention to Sunday on its rest side, and to the church for its moral and spiritual values—thoughtfulness on the part of transient groups pouring into our recreational areas for a brief or longer season, would vastly aid those who are dealing with all-year conditions. It would also contribute to the program of law enforcement. We commend this to our own folk visiting the Cape.

But the spirit of adventure and of faith of the pioneers whose lives coincided with the dates of the beginning of Congregationalism in Barnstable County is well expressed by the actual facing of modern problems as suggested by this thoughtful minister of the Cape: "The needs and opportunities challenge our best. Difficulties but make the work interesting."

An Old New England Church Rebuilds

When that fine old Colonial building of the Congregational Church of Hollis, N. H., was burned to the ground it was a beautiful October morning in 1923. The trees of the field and forest were aflame with autumnal colors. The church went to her burial in her bridal robes. The bell tolled its own funeral knell and more mourners assembled to lament its destruction than worshipers ever gathered to rejoice at its dedication.

When the "fire alarum" rang out from the old bell tower, the New Hampshire delegates to the National Council in Springfield were getting ready for the journey. The Hollis pastor, Rev. C. F. H. Crathern, left his church in ashes and his people in tears and went to the council. He said, "It is no use to sit weeping among the ruins. It is better to attend the council and get courage and inspiration to build a new church."

Dr. W. E. Barton of Oak Park was in the chair, and the Hollis pastor's first thought was, "What a great thing it would be to have the Moderator of the National Council preach the dedicatory sermon in the new church." The hope was realized, the dream came true, and Dr. Barton preached the sermon of dedication in the new church on Thursday, Aug. 23, to a congregation that was thrilled by his inspiring message.

With that fine spirit which is the charm of Dr. Barton's personality, he wrote to the pastor on reaching his wigwam on Sunset Lake:

When you come to look back over your life-work, I am inclined to think you will believe that you have done no better, finer, or more permanent thing than this which you have been permitted to accomplish in a good old New England town. Without such leadership as you have been permitted to contribute, that beautiful church would not have been erected in its present proportions of dignity, beauty, and fitness for service.

For worship, instruction, fellowship, and service that lovely new temple must ever tell of your devotion and heroic effort. . . .

Now may God give you the culminating joy of a large accession to membership among those whose interest has been awakened or reawakened by the great achievement. I am glad to have been with you on the great day of fruition.

Beautiful Interior of New Church at Hollis

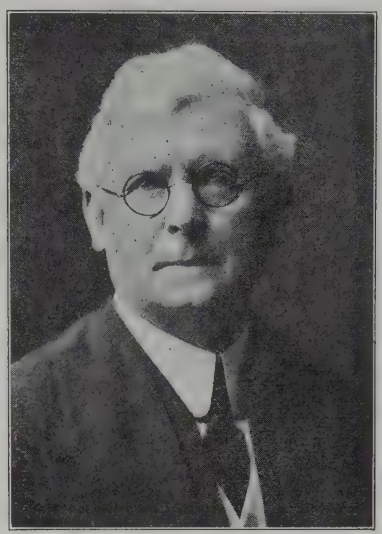
The Old Home Week celebration was given over to the program of dedication. On Sunday morning, Aug. 16, a cornetist in the tower called the people together on the village common to dedicate the bell, given by Judge Frederick A. Hubbard of Greenwich, Ct., Dr. William A. Hubbard, and Miss Mary Tenney Hubbard of New York, in memory of their father and mother. Scores were unable to get into the church. At the close of the service of dedication the bell tolled 1-8-6, representing the 186 years of the organization.

At the open air pageant on the village green in the evening, 500 people saw "The History of the Hebrew Children." The costumes of the participants in the Oriental procession and the sweet voices of the vested choristers as they chanted their songs made a memorable and impressive scene.

The fine Estey organ, which was given by Mr. Nathaniel Proctor of Nashua, an old Hollis boy, was dedicated on Wednesday evening. Mr. Alfred E. Plimpton of Manchester, N. H., gave a recital, assisted by Mrs. Laura H. Kelley of Lexington, Mass., violinist, and Miss Priscilla Gage Sargent of Nashua, soprano soloist. The prayer of dedication was offered by Rev. C. H. Davis of Highland, Cal., a former pastor.

Thursday, Aug. 23, was the great day. Prof. Charles D. Adams of Dartmouth College, who is linked by birth to two historic families in Hollis, gave the historical address in the new church at 10 o'clock. It was a most brilliant and valuable contribution to the history of Hollis. The Governor's Dinner was held in the town hall, which was filled to its seating capacity. The after-dinner exercises were presided over by Winthrop L. Carter, and the speakers included His Excellency, Governor Winant of New Hampshire, who made an earlier sailing from England in order to be present, Dr. W. E. Barton of Chicago, Senator Charles W. Tobey of Manchester, N. H., and Mayor Sargent of Nashua. Senator George H. Moses was absent because of senatorial duties in the West. An appeal was made by the pastor at the dinner to liquidate the debt on the church before its dedication. The cost of the building was $53,419, exclusive of the land. The debt remaining was about $9,000. The women of the church have pledged the last $2,500. A promise of $500 was made if four others will pledge the same amount. One pledge was forthcoming. If the $2,500 can be pledged to be paid during 1925 or 1926 the entire debt will be wiped out.



REV. C. F. HILL CRATHERN
Minister of Hollis Church

The dedication took place in the evening with Dr. Barton preaching a most helpful and inspiring sermon from the text, "This is none other than the Home of God and this the Gate of Heaven." The church was thronged, and as the vested choir of 20 singers marched up the center aisle followed by the eight participating ministers in their black pulpit robes, singing "The Church's One Foundation," it was a impressive scene.

Dr. George H. Reed of Concord, N offered the prayer of dedication, Rev. I Dodge, D.D., of Atlanta, Ga., read the ture, Rev. F. C. Rolls offered the invoc and the pastor led the service of dedic Two former pastors, Rev. C. H. Davis Rev. R. M. French, took part in the servi

It was a great day in the history of Congregationalism.

Assembly Conference in Mont

Montana's fourth Assembly-Conference at Billings Polytechnic Institute, July Distances are so great that combined mee are desirable. Many pastors and their and delegates come as chaperones of the y folks. This year there were four departme pastors, women, young people, and chil Each was led respectively by Rev. A. W. bart, Rev. Rhoda Jane Dickinson, Rev. I Bent, and Rev. J. O. Smith. Over all wa executive secretary, Rev. J. R. Hahn o University Church, Missoula. For month has labored in the midst of difficulties merable and at last "put across" the best o ized assembly to date. A loyal lieutenant local co-worker was Rev. H. N. Blakewa Community Church, Billings. Rev. F. Shorter, Great Falls, elected moderator, also dean of the faculty. Rev. R. E. Allb of Hardin and Mr. J. Herberts of Ballar were recreation leaders, with Rev. A. R Miller of Red Lodge as song leader.

The Eaton Brothers, founders of the "P with their customary interest in young and their usual generosity, gave the use o buildings and grounds free to the Asse Conference.

Saturday was registration day, wit "mixer" that "broke the ice" that evening. day was "North Day," with a former pa Rev. Walter H. North of Chicago, as preac Services were held at 11 o'clock in the la theater of the city on the hottest day of summer and it was crowded. Vespers were in the afternoon in the chapel, with Rev H. Wilhelm of Yale as speaker. The eve meeting was addressed by Rev. W. T. Lock of Boise, Ida., formerly of Missoula and B

Monday, class work began at eight and tinued till 12.30, interrupted by chapel at led by Mr. North. Young people's classes led by Dr. F. J. Estabrook of Denver on ligious Pedagogy," C. H. Wilhelm on " Building," Rev. Harold Cooper of Crete, N on "India," and T. T. Wylie, pastor at Sid on "Religious Drama." At the same hours women were holding their meetings addre by Rev. Obed Johnson, China missionary, Estabrook, and others. Rev. and Mrs. J. Smith conducted children's classes during same hours. The pastor's section was dressed each morning by F. W. Shorter "The Christian and the World," W. T. L wood on "The Age of Science," and by var pastors in a round table discussion on "Pa Problems." Conference business took the hour of each morning.

A rest period followed lunch and then recreation—ball games, horseshoes, hikes, usually it meant an afternoon in the munic pool in the midst of Montana's hottest sum Stunt night with its fun and frolic and m time cheer with the "Yale Band" as chief stigators, with calliope and college songs; af dinner speeches and announcements and "w ing on the steps"—all these varied a week hard study.

Evening inspirational addresses will long remembered, preceded by a young folks' meet

An Instant Success

Hymns of the Christian Life

Edited by Milton S. Littlefield, D.D.

Published February 1st, 1925. Over 12,000 copies sold. Price $135.00 per hundred.

Examination copy on request

A. S. BARNES AND COMPANY

1855 7 W. 45th St., New York 1925

The Book of Books

The Bible

We have it in 90 languages

Send for Catalog or call at the

Massachusetts Bible Society

41 Bromfield St., Boston

Offering Envelopes

For all purposes. Prompt Service

Ask For Prices

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

For 6,000 Years!

Since the days when Moses consecrated the Levites for God's service, holy men have been set aside for the spiritual guidance of mankind.

Never before have outstanding leaders been so much needed for Congregational Churches.

The Chicago Theological Seminary

has trained more than 2,000 men for fields of Christian Service.

It has a place for you!

OZORA S. DAVIS, President 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

y W. H. Wilhelm. Monday night W. T. ood addressed the campfire meeting led H. Bent. In a long hollow, surrounded mense boulders against cliff-like walls, re glowed as the shadows fell. Perched e rocks, high above, with the flickering in their faces, the auditors sat and lis- to the speaker standing at one end. Songs rayer and Scripture preceded an address vill never be forgotten for its depth and and helpfulness. Tuesday night er of India" must have felt at home the mosquitoes outdoors and the heat in- The rest of us were transported with re. Wednesday morning the first "Rim- service was held. At 5.30 the trumpet ed the reveille; at six o'clock half the ed in camp started up the slope. Formed o companies, the young ministers leading Vest Camp and the older men the East they sang the Songs of Ascent: "Early Morning," "Onward, Christian Soldiers," Halting to sing, one stanza by the first and the next by the second, with the eter and leader between, they advanced file up the hill half a mile away. Ar- at the foot of the cliff that towered a hun- eet above—the rimrock—with rock masses oulders forming a natural semi-circular theater, the meeting was continued. An- al singing by the two sections still sep- , prayer, Scripture, made a memorable g with no speaking. A striking number he sudden appearing of a voice far up liff-side exchanging greetings with the :

u that tellest good tidings of Zion ee up into a high mountain.
hou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem, up thy voice with strength.

man, tell us of the morn,
its signs of beauty are.
veler, O'er yon mountain height that glory-beaming star.

man, does its beauteous ray of joy or hope foretell?
veler, yes; it brings the day,
mised Day of Israel!

s the New Day that has dawned on our gathered in multitudes at summer s.

inesday night was "Powell Night," de- d elsewhere. It was preceded by a drama, Li Remembers," given realistically by the n's Missionary Society. The Players from came several hundred miles to put on Rock." It was well worth while. Pro- als could have done no better. Peter Iagdalene and all the cast were superb. on Saturday night, with a cast augmented ssembly attendants, "The Beasts of us" was rendered with equal skill and . It was a happy demonstration by Mr. of his course in dramatics.

day services by Mr. North were held in Church that overflowed into and filled cture room. Vespers were held in the led by E. N. Eddy of Molt and A. R. iller of Red Lodge, who concluded an bly program largely in the hand of the ministers still in or just out of school— teresting and profitable experiment. The g service was in the hands of Obed John- who gave a thrilling speech on "China in ition." Monday saw the clans separat- ooking forward eagerly to "next year."

F. E. H.

"Powell Night"

dnesday night of Montana's Assembly- rence was "Powell Night." Dr. G. J. l, for 25 years superintendent of missions rth Dakota and Montana, is about to re- aving reached the age limit. His friends him to know that they appreciated his long years of service and arranged a special program in his honor. Dr. Cory and Mr. Pollard, pastors of equal age, shared the platform and acted as spokesmen for their brethren. Mrs. Powell was equal partner with her husband in the honors of the evening, with Mrs. Nye and Mrs. Snell, president and past president of the M. W. M. U., expressing our affection and good wishes. Dr. Powell made an extended and interesting address of appreciation and reminiscence, recounting his experiences through the years and expressing his confidence in Montana's future. At its close, a farewell gift was presented to Dr. and Mrs. Powell, made by the churches as well as the pastors—a high grade radio set with loud speaker. Thus they can keep in touch with the world at large and with Montana in particular.

When it seemed that "all was over but the shouting," every one was removed from the platform but the two guests of the evening. A garland was placed about Mr. Powell's shoulders—a la Hawaii! Then to slow music a Saga of the Northwest was recited (and composed) by Rev. Rhoda Jane Dickinson, telling in the rhythm of Hiawatha of the adventures of the Father of the conference, from Ontario's woodland to Montana's plains and mountains. At its close, in a final paragraph, illustrated in life by 25 of Montana's fairest daughters, in gay evening gowns, one for each year of service in the West, the story was made doubly beautiful as the youth of the state mounted the platform from the chapel and gathered about the gray-haired couple whom the conference delighted to honor. Half a dozen knelt to do homage at their feet and presented great sheaves of flowers, whose fragrance and beauty were not greater than those proffering them. And all the time the rest of our boys and girls were crowding the platform till the entire 70 young folks present at the assembly were there, singing with adaptations our state song, "Montana." And this was the end of a perfect day.

F. E. H.

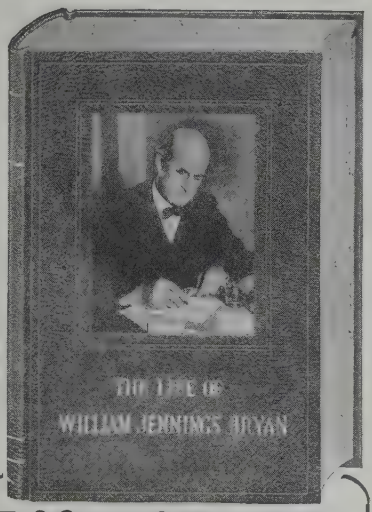
When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

Once upon a time every member of the little church in Smithville removed to Jonestown, while every member of the Jonestown church removed to Smithville; and as the members of each group felt too sentimental toward the dear old church back home to send for their church letters both dear old churches perished.

Iowa Young Woman Goes to China

Miss Alice Murphy, a member of the church at Tabor, Ia., and a graduate of Tabor College, was given a farewell reception on the eve of her departure for service in China under the W. B. M. I. Miss Murphy is to do evangelistic and social work in Lintsing, China. During the coming year she will be in a language school in Peking. She has just completed a year of special study at the Kennedy School of Missions. Her commissioning service was held at Plymouth Church, Des Moines, on June 21,



Life of Bryan

"The Great Commoner"

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick and John Herrick

400 Pages—40 Pages of Illustrations
Clear Type—Good Paper—Cloth Binding

William Jennings Bryan was one of the great outstanding figures in American history. His matchless silver tongued oratory swayed men and women by the millions. His character was stainless—his faith unbreakable. His untimely death was mourned by an entire nation.

His Entire Career

Bryan's greatest political speeches and most noteworthy deeds are here faithfully recorded. How he rose to fame; shaped the destinies and moulded the policies of the Democratic Party for 30 years; how his political enemies admired his honesty, sincerity, courage and strength of character; his courtship and marriage; his congressional career; his uncompromising attitude toward evil; his great battles for the right; his fight against predatory interests; his fight for prohibition and woman suffrage; his religious faith; his career as Secretary of State. All are here set down with remarkable faithfulness to detail.

"The Cross of Gold" "You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon this cross of gold." Read this remarkable speech that stampeded a great convention and thrilled the entire nation! One of the most intense and dramatic moments in American political history. You want to read it—alone worth the price of the book.

"The Prince of Peace"

Again the Silver Tongue speaks with matchless eloquence presenting his deep seated religious convictions. One of the greatest orations ever delivered.

Evolution Read his defense of the Bible in the famous Scopes Case and his posthumous speech. This wonderful book should have a permanent place in your library regardless of political or religious belief. It will be an inspiration for young and old for generations.

Order NOW! Limited Edition. Price postpaid only $2.75. If not convenient to send cash, we will mail book prepaid to your door. Pay postman $2.75 plus C.O.D. fee. Don't wait. Order Today.

BUXTON PUBLISHING HOUSE
21 W. Elm St. Dept. 1029 Chicago, Ill.

Messenger's Scripture TEXT CALENDARS

Make Money for Your Church—
Your Church can raise from $50 to $500 to meet pledges or raise additional funds. Any live organization in your Church can quickly and easily do it selling Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars. Churches the country over have been doing so for years—so can you. Over 3,500,000 Calendars sold last year.

Plans Endorsed by Ministers
Ministers, church societies and classes everywhere endorse and praise our successful plans as dignified methods of raising money for the Church.
Write your own publishing house today for plans and prices on Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars. For 13 years produced by

MESSENGER PUBLISHING COMPANY - - 5932-44 Wentworth Ave., Chicago, Illinois

and she is to be supported by this church. The farewell service in the home church was under the auspices of the women and was deeply impressive.

Young People's Conferences

Pennsylvania Gatherings

The Young People's Conference held in the Kiskiminetas School at Saltsburg, Pa., Aug. 2-10, was a success. The 250 acres of campus with its several buildings offered a fine location. Dr. C. A. Voss, of Pittsburgh, was dean, and Rev. John R. Thomas, of Ebensburg, was registrar. Among the speakers and teachers were Rev. Martin Leiseder, Rev. George R. Andrews, Miss Anna E. May, Rev. H. C. Stallard, Dr. Charles E. Burton, Rev. T. Aird Moffat, Dean Voss, Rev. R. O. Eisele, and Supt. C. W. Carroll. There was an enrollment of nearly 100. An unusual feature was the special train from Pittsburgh on Sunday, the 9th, which brought several hundred adult members of our churches for a great closing service.

The Perkiomen Young People's Conference held its third annual meeting, Aug. 8-17. The attendance was the largest of any young people's conference yet held in the Middle Atlantic states. Supt. Carroll was dean, and Rev. H. W. Myers, Jr., was registrar for the third year. Rev. G. R. Andrews conducted a course in New Testament and one in the organization of church school; Rev. Kyle Booth, Old Testament; Miss Anna E. May, young people's methods; Mrs. Harry D. Kizer, elementary methods; Dr. W. W. Scudder, world-wide missions and a course in Congregationalism; Supt. Carroll, a course in life problems, with such sub-topics as "Keeping Fit," "Thinking Straight," "Gaining a Competence," "Founding a Home," "Finding a Faith," and "Living Romantically." Rev. H. C. Stallard was director of activities, and Rev. C. G. Cooley was director of music. The governmental staff consisted of the dean; Rev. H. J. Deiss, boys' advisor; Mrs. H. W. Myers, girls' advisor; and a student council of three boys and three girls elected by the student body. Dr. A. W. Upton, of Plymouth Church, Scranton, gave a series of helpful sunset addresses. Notwithstan the distance, the Washington churches se delegation of nearly 40. F. L.

Minnesota Conferences

"The best ever" is the unanimous com on the Young People's Conferences held in nesota this year. The momentum of pre conferences was certainly carried forward 1925. Larger attendance, greater enthusi excellent courses of instruction, and recre under competent leadership set the record year. Chanotedah Camp (Woods Dwellers beautiful Fish Hook Lake near Park Ra had a registration of 59 boys and 80 nearly all of high school age. This is the season for Chanotedah Camp, but the held under the auspices of the Minnesota ference. There are great possibilities in camp. Up in the beautiful lake region o state, but a few miles from Itasca State where the Father of Waters takes its ris charming Lake Itasca, in a good Congregat territory filled with young people, with ar larged auditorium where meetings and cl are to be conducted, home-like cottage ac modations, tennis court, playgrounds, boa swimming, fishing, with the fragrant odo the pines, the situation is ideal, combining thoughtful, studious side of the conference the stimulating and happy side of an ou The courses of study were stronger this than ever. The faculty consisted of Dr. R Gammon of Chicago, Rev. W. E. Hammon Walker, Miss Eunice Shaw of Excelsior, V. V. Loper of Minneapolis, and Mrs. ence B. Lindstrom of Minneapolis. Devoti hours were conducted by Rev. W. W. Da Mahnomen, and Dr. Everett Lesher of Mi apolis. Rev. A. K. Voss of Detroit had ch of the song fests and music. Rev. P Packer and Rev. B. L. Richardson had ch of the recreation. Plans are being laid fo even stronger course of study for next "The best thing in the whole camp," as pressed by Rev. E. C. Ford, who has s sored this camp from the beginning, "was high spiritual tone of the evening meetings around the fireplace in the club house."

The Carleton Camp also set a new re both in attendance and in interest. Th seven churches were represented at this c with the registration of 154 students and ulty, a 50 per cent. increase over last year. physical setting and environment of the C ton Camp is almost the exact opposite of Chanotedah Camp. Here are a splendid g of college buildings, with halls, dormitories braries, laboratories, and the imposing Ski Memorial Chapel, which stands like a ben tion of high and reverent worship on the b tiful campus. Prof. Balzer of Carleton Co had charge of Old and New Testament cou Prof. C. F. Echterbecker of Hamline Unive had classes in teacher training, Mrs. Flor B. Lindstrom in pageantry and dramatics, V. V. Loper in prayer life, Rev. Vinton Eastman of Pekin in foreign missions, Rev

Another World-Wide Play!

The ENEMY

by the Author of "THE FOOL"

$1

"THE ENEMY," in an edition uniform with "THE FOOL," will be published at $1.50 in October, simultaneously with production in London, Vienna and New York. Feeling that this great plea for world peace is of especial interest and importance to ministers, in advance of regular publication, Brentano's will issue a special edition

TO CLERGYMEN AT $1

Channing Pollock will take no royalty on this edition, and Brentano's no profit. $1 is actual cost price. Orders must be accompanied by check, and since orders at this price will be accepted only from clergymen, they must be written on your official stationery.

BRENTANO'S PUBLISHERS Dept. A. 1 to 11 West 47th Street NEW YORK

Classified Wants

POSITION WANTED

Widow of refinement wishes position as housekeeper. Best of references. Write Mrs. M. P. F., 490 Beacon St., Boston.

Pastors interested in securing a church assistant with varied practical experience, good antecedents and references are invited to correspond with the Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Companion—A New England woman, capable and reliable, desires position as companion and general helper. Address P. O. Box 261, Sharon, Mass.

Desire position to teach in high school, Science Department. Address "F. T. I.," Congregationalist.

TEACHERS WANTED

Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Ala., wants a mathematics and science teacher. Has some one an upright piano in good condition, business desk, or books to replace loss by fire? Write H. Jenkins, 84 Pine St., Burlington, Vt.

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

Earn $25 weekly, spare time, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary. Copyright book free. Press Syndicate, 1228 St. Louis, Mo.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

For Sale—A brass chandelier with eight Rochester burner lamps, in good condition. Inquire of J. E. Hopkins, Thomaston, Ct.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

BRIDGMAN SCHOOL FOR BOYS

SHIRLEY CENTER, MASS.

Forty miles from Boston

For the boy from 9 to 15 years of ag who needs physical, intellectual an moral training in a small group unde expert masters to qualify for the larg secondary school. Send for booklet oss, assistant superintendent of the Mina Conference, in home missions, Rev. W. ee in social service, Rev. L. M. Tesh in e opportunities within the church, and Lesher in Congregational achievements.

Clarence M. Angel of the Minneapolis Y.
. A. served as chief counselor, and had e of the music and entertainment features.
ring addresses were given by Dr. and Watts O. Pye and Mrs. V. P. Eastman.
Bruce Scott of the University of Minneand Miss Margaret Jager of Carleton di-the afternoon recreational program.
A. H. Gilmore of St. Paul and Supt.
r gave addresses at the morning assembly
ls. The camp was a splendid success in way. The co-operation of Carleton Col-ls greatly appreciated. Much of the suc-of this camp is due to the efficient execu-and secretary and summer conference di-
, Mrs. Trafford Jayne of Minneapolis.

ng People at Seabeck Gathering ngregational young people of the State of ington were in the embarrassing position

e man who said:

How happy could I be with either
Were t'other dear charmer away!"

e great Christian Endeavor Convention at and, a scant 190 miles from Seattle, a colorful, attractive mass of young folks hom the whole city was to be delivered:
ers, bands, great men (possibly Lloyd ge!), Governor Pinchot, Father Endeavor —names to conjure with—all this on the and and, on the other, our young, appeal-nd promising Young People's Annual Con-ce at Seabeck in its critical third year!
a situation was calculated to try the most soul. And it did try us all, indeed. Of e, being young people and life all ahead of nd Seabeck likely to be on hand another —we went to Portland. Nobody could wont that, nor find cause for complaint. And ne will forget the great auditorium, the ng, and the great addresses on vital and timely themes! And no one of us who live on the Pacific Coast will ever forget the strange and wonderful costumes of our Eastern friends who came out fortified with "plus fours" (and even more weird things) to combat the heat—which was "what they had least of" at Portland. We even heard one Bostonian say, "I wish I could stay here all the time"—which goes to prove that some people have an open mind!

It was, however, with some misgivings that we approached the opening day of our Seabeck Conference. Registrations had been painfully slow. But at last there was a quickening of the pulse and the conference came to life with 45 delegates present.

The conference was especially noted for the quality of the young folks themselves. We had a splendid faculty—but even a good faculty would have been at a loss to make headway unless the delegates had been young folks of the best. Not one case of discipline arose, and every one seemed determined to make a record which should be a standard for years to come. It is absolutely proved that our young folks come to these conferences for work and with a serious purpose. Morning sessions were real study hours. Courses were given on "The World-Wide Work of the Church," led by Rev. J. C. Holmes, "The Teachings of Jesus," by Rev. Carl Stackman of Denver, "The Kingdom Without Frontiers," by Rev. Joel Harper of Spokane, and "Preparation for Teaching," by Rev. Fred Grey. These studies proved timely and interesting to the young people. Morning devotions were led by Rev. Paul Van Horn of Vancouver, Wash., on such themes as "Standing Erect," "Questioning God," and "Withstanding Storms." The evening vespers were led by Rev. L. O. Baird, D.D., who used the outlines of worship prepared by Secretary Stock for summer conferences.

The closing service of consecration was held within the stately pillars of the forest temple—a wide amphitheater cut out of the forest where, in the light of many candles illuminating a center star the vows of holy purpose to "follow the gleam" were taken.

The recreational side of the conference life was in the experienced leadership of Mr. William Lampert of Plymouth Church, Seattle.

Delegates who were at former conferences said, "This is the best of all," and more than a hint of truth was in the mournfully chanted "We don't want to go home"! A group of ministers present, seeing all that went on and enjoying an unusual opportunity for fellowship with their own young folks, passed a determined resolution to work for a total registration of 200 next year. F. G.

From West to East

MONTANA

Business Sessions of Annual Conference

Business meetings of the Annual Conference of the Congregational Churches of Montana, held parallel with the Young People's Assembly, were held the last hour of each morning's session.

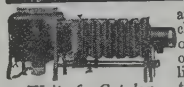
Rev. F. W. Shorter of First, Great Falls, was elected moderator, with Rev. N. E. Hannant of Judith Gap as vice-moderator. Rev. R. E. Allbright of Hardin was elected scribe and Rev. R. B. Edwards of Froid-Medicine Lake, assistant scribe. Rev. R. B. Walker, of First, Billings, continues as registrar and C. L. Wilcox was re-elected treasurer.

A department of religious education was constituted by bringing matters educational under one commission, with Dr. F. J. Estabrook of Denver as executive chairman and Rev. H. N. Blakeway of Community Church, Billings, as conference chairman.

Supt. E. H. Johnson made his annual report, reviewing the year's accomplishments and stressing the main points of the plans for the year ahead. He referred with feeling to Dr. G. J. Powell's imminent retirement after many years as superintendent and associate. Mr. Johnson also referred to the work of his assistant, Rev. F. E. Henry, in the care of the churches. In view of the latter's possible withdrawal, a motion, followed later by a petition, was unanimously carried urging that he be retained.

The endorsement by the Baptists of Billings Polytechnic Institute was acted on favorably, the conference voting to concur heartily in this dual enterprise. The state delegate to the National Council, Rev. F. E. Henry of Missoula, was sent without instruction as to the proposed merger of the missionary societies, but an informal show of hands was unanimously in

Church Furniture
Pews · Pulpits · Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

BALOPTICONS


are used in thousands of schools churches and hospitals. This line of lanterns, for slides and opaque objects—for projection in daylight as well as in the dark—is the most complete in the world.
Write for Catalog
Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 706 St. Paul St., Rochester, N.Y.

Church
EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS
PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND
CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL
CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

Pulpit Gowns
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New York

ESTEY
PIPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
Brattleboro Vermont

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

CHURCH WINDOWS
AND MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
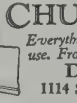
AND BRONZE
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
Jacoby Art Glass Company
Dept 28 2700 St. Vincent Ave., St. Louis, Mo.



CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1114 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

favor of the two-fold plan, provided that the integrity of the A. M. A. be preserved.

The registrar's report gives two new churches organized, with three dropped—present total 108, with 5,549 members. Additions for the year were 721. Sunday school membership is 8,923, a gain of 863. Twenty-eight young people's organizations have a membership of 1,086. There are 30 parsonages and 41 pastoral units in the state. F. E. H.

WYOMING

Good Student Work in Pinedale

Mr. Robert Kemper, student pastor at Pinedale this summer, is serving many surrounding points. Sunday schools have been organized at Cora and Bronx. One carload of people came 15 miles to attend church service. In spite of the distances, people responded enthusiastically to the call to worship.

NORTH DAKOTA

Progress in Adams

Mr. Elmer E. Hoats, student summer pastor of Adams, has organized a young people's choir. New hymn books have been purchased. At Nekoma, a part of this parish, the church building is undergoing repairs, and electric lights are being installed.

Glen Ullin Summer Work

A daily vacation Bible school was opened in Glen Ullin on June 22, with five classes and an enrollment of 51. Mr. Charles E. Sebold is acting as student pastor for the summer under the commission of the Home Missionary Society.

ILLINOIS

Neponset Minister Resigns

Rev. C. E. Goddard, for the past two years and more pastor of Neponset, has resigned his pastorate and has gone to Edinburgh, Scotland, this month, where he will secure his Ph.D. As a parting service to the community, he has just written and directed a successful out-of-door pageant, depicting the early history of Bureau County. There were over 200 participants in the pageant, and nearly 3,000 people from all over the state witnessed the production. Over $1,000 was raised for the public library, of which the town is very proud.

MICHIGAN

Lansing Minister Goes to Kansas

Rev. J. P. Jockinsen has resigned the pastorate of Pilgrim Church, Lansing, to take effect Sept. 15, and has accepted a call to First Church, Manhattan, Kan. During his pastorate the membership of the church has doubled, and the Sunday school attendance has increased from an average of 200 per Sunday to 341. All of the affiliated organizations of the church have been strengthened, and the church debt has been paid in full. The pastor's salary was twice increased, and the parsonage purchased. Sunday school rooms, church and Sunday school hymnals and other equipment have been added. Mr. Jockinsen has been active in many community activities. At the time of his resignation he was chaplain of the Rotary Club, a member of the Boy Scout Council, trustee of the State Conference, and a delegate to the National Council. He leaves the church in an excellent condition. The church to which he goes at Manhattan has for part of its work the ministry to the students of the Agricultural College. It offers great opportunity for service.

VIRGINIA

New Church Building for Disputanta

Slovak, Disputanta, dedicated a church building Aug. 16. Rev. John Kocerha of Pittsburgh preached the sermon.

CONNECTICUT

Resigns Harwinton Pastorate

Rev. James Greer has just resigned the pastorate of Harwinton, where he has been pastor 15 months. On May 3 eighteen members were received into the church, two by letter, and on Aug. 2 seven more were added, all by confession. The membership of the Sunday sc was doubled during the winter and the chu attendance increased from about 40 to n than 100. At the Communion service, Aug a Bible was presented to each of the new m bers who have joined the church during year.

A home department has been organized, wi now has a membership of 48. A $400 d has been paid off and the church building been reshingled at a cost of $500. Another dication of progress at Harwinton is shown the organization of an orchestra, which le in the Sunday services.

Centennial of Building of South Britain Chu

Reverting to the custom of 100 years ago holding one service in the morning and one the afternoon, with an hour's intermission lunch, the church at South Britain early August celebrated the centennial of the e tion of their house of worship. The lunch served on the church green and proved a t of happy fellowship and renewal of old frie ships.

Under the leadership of the pastor, E Earl Pearman, an effective program was p pared, which included adresses by Rev. J. R. Wyckoff representing the Litchfield So Association; Rev. L. G. Coburn of Woodbu Prof. F. E. Pierce of Yale, and a sermon the pastor. Messages of felicitation were ceived from former ministers of the chu Rev. F. C. Taylor of Bolton, Ct., Rev. J. Deyo of Danbury, Ct., and Rev. C. L. Tomb of West Brookfield, Mass.

The South Britain Society was organized 1762. The first meeting house was built in 17 but while it was used, it remained for m years unfinished and in frequent need of pairs. In January, 1825, it was voted to bu a new meeting house on grounds just no of the old site. This edifice, which is present home of the church, was comple at an early date and used for nearly half a c tury until, 100 years after the organization the church, the building was rededicated N 25, 1869, after being entirely remodeled repaired. In later years a comfortable pars age was added to the equipment of the chur

MASSACHUSETTS

Leaves Scituate for Montana

Rev. Carl Knudsen, for two years supply First Church, Scituate, has resigned. On A 19 he was married to Miss B. Sylvia Bl chard of First Parish Church, Brockton. Rev. E. H. Gibson, pastor. Mr. Knudsen t his collegiate course in Montana, to which st he is now returning for assignment in Methodist Conference. He received his S. T. degree at Boston University. Mrs. Knudsen an honor graduate of B. U., class of 1925.

Becomes Associate Pastor of Eliot, Roxbu

Eliot Church, Roxbury, with one of t largest Sunday schools in Boston and an surpassed young people's department, has cal Rev. C. C. Keith to the associate pastorate. comes to this position with a background preaching, teaching, and pastorate experie covering a period of seven years.

Mr. Keith is a graduate of Boston Univers and Andover Seminary. He was ordained 1919 and has held two Massachusetts past ates, in Beverly and North Abington, in t latter place specializing for three years on modern program of religious education and ganizing a week-day school of religious edu tion in his church, a community institute religious education for the training of chur school teachers in the six local churches, a the Abington Church Federation.

In addition to his interest in these activiti Mr. Keith has been a close student of soc

Oberlin Graduate School of Theology

Scholarly and practical training for the ministry, directors of religious education, missionary and Christian Association service. Interdenominational faculty and student body. All the cultural advantages of Oberlin College and its complete equipment. Unusual opportunities for women. Scholarships and financial help available.

Degrees A.M., B.D., and S.T.M.
Correspond with Dean Thomas W. Graham
Council Hall, Oberlin, Ohio

HARTFORD

W. Douglas Mackenzie
President

Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus
School of Religious Education
Dean, E. H. Knight
Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen

Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:
1. The Christian ministry.
2. Religious education and social service.
3. The foreign field.

Each school has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.

HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION, HARTFORD, Conn.

Bangor Theological Seminary

The 110th year opens Sept 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor Maine.

MacDuffie School For Girls

EMPHASIZING COLLEGE PREPARATION
ONE YEAR TUTORING COURSE SPRINGFIELD
MASSACHUSETTS

Post-Graduate Course in Music and Household Arts
PRINCIPALS
John MacDuffie Mrs. John MacDuffie

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

GRINNELL

A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.
Applications for admission in September, 1925, are now being received.
An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.
Address:
Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

ems and is recognized as an expert on oy problem, both in the home and in the unity. In this latter field he gained his ical experience as superintendent of a boys' club and later as staff officer of Boys' Club Federation, international, with quarters in New York City.

Edward Eells Leaves Chesterfield

v. Edward Eells, for over two years pastor hesterfield, resigned a short time ago to t a call to the pastorate of the church in on Center, Ct. He took up his new duties ept. 1. During the two years at Chester- church attendance has increased, new mem- have united with the church, and improve- s have been made in the house of worship, ding complete renovation of the interior e vestry.

t of the membership of the church at on, Ct., to which Mr. Eells is going, have three other churches, the Congregational ch at Talcottville, the Methodist Church ernon Station, and the Second Congrega- l Church of Rockville, now merged with Union Congregational Church of that city. on Center is an attractive residential vil- The church building, more than a cen- old, stands in perfect preservation, one of eautiful historic churches of New England.

MAINE

ner Supplies at Ellsworth rough the efforts of the pastor, Rev. G. S. kes, First Church, Ellsworth, has had rivilege of hearing the following well-known hers: July 26, Rev. J. Gresham Machen rinceton Seminary; Aug. 2, Rev. Anson P. bury of New York; Aug. 9, Rev. Tertius Dyke of New York; Aug. 16, Rev. Henry aunderson of Boston; Aug. 23, Rev. Prof. shaw of Bangor Seminary.

n Chapel, McKinley, Dedicated

e Congregational Parish of McKinley dedi- its new building, named Olsen Chapel in r of the pastor, Rev. O. L. Olsen, on July Mr. Olsen lives at Southwest Harbor, and sters to the church there and at Tremont. Olsen and local workers have conducted a ay school in McKinley for four years, ing in the schoolhouse. The McKinley e are members of the Bass Harbor Con- tional Church. The growth of the Sun- school led to the incorporation of the inley Parish and the building of the el, to which various generous gifts were , including the following: Land, Mr. and Eugene M. Stanley; Ladies' Society of ng Workers, $700; Mr. Henry, Winches- Mass., $500; Stick-to-It Club of Girls, William Underwood & Co., and others, ; McKinley Sunday school, $25; Fred Holden Boat House sold for $300; local contributions, $141; grant from Congregational Church Building Society, $500; loan from C. C. B. S., $500; piano, Miss Jessie E. Olsen, sister of the pastor.

The dedication sermon was by Prof. Charles G. Cumming of Bangor Seminary.

Olsen Chapel will serve the social needs of the community as well as the religious needs. Great credit is due to Mr. Olsen and the loyal townspeople who have co-operated heartily with him in the good work.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ALLEYNE, W. A., Harrison, Mich., to Baldwin. At work.

CARTER, E. R., assistant, Upper Montclair, N. J., to First, Ashtabula, O. Accepts.

CHAMPLIN, C. C., Sonoma, Cal., to First, Pittsburg. Accepts.

HURST, HOMER, to Wayne, O. Accepts.

JAY, H. R., Plymouth, Terre Haute, Ind., to Lockport, Ill. Accepts.

JONES, M. G., Columbus Junction, Ia., to Pittston, Pa. At work.

KUHN, C. L., Radnor, O., to Lexington. Accepts.

LEE, H. J., First, Woburn, Mass., to First, Wauwatosa, Wis. Accepts to begin Oct. 1.

LUCAS, A. B., Baldwin, Mich., to Conklin. At work.

MISAMORE, O. G., St. Paul's, Seymour, Ind., to Fort Recovery, O. Accepts.

STOOK, A. M. S., Reinbeck, Ia., to Forest Grove, Ore. At work.

STUBBINS, T. A., Whiting, Ind., to Jennings, La.

TROKE, J. A. (Methodist), Springfield, O., to Eastwood, Columbus, and to Croton. At work.

WALKER, W. H., Northland College, Ashland, Wis., to chair of philosophy and religious education, Berea College, Berea, Ky.

Resignations

GARDINER, DAVIS, Penfield, O.

MCBIRNIE, W. S., Hamilton, O.

REES, G. H., Boylston, Mass.

RICHARDS, W. J., Shamokin, Pa. Effective Sept. 1.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
MARYLAND
Frostburg		4
NORTH DAKOTA
Barrie		6

Ordinations and Installations

DICKEY, J. M., and CHRISTINE R., o., Lake Worth, Texas, July 17, 1925. Sermon by Dr. F. M. Sheldon; other parts by Rev. Messrs. Frank Atkinson, A. E. Ricker, S. T. McKinney, and J. L. Smith.

GREENSMITH, H. C., i., Wauseon, O.

WOLFE, J. E., i., West, Akron, O.

HAMILTON, F. R., o., First, Blue Hill, Me., Aug. 19, 1925. Sermon by Dr. Warren J. Moulton; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. J. Martin, G. W. Carter, J. H. Nelson, and H. T. Fowler.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

REV. NATHANIEL W. HANKEMEYER

The sudden death of Rev. Dr. N. W. Hankemeyer of Old Saybrook, Ct., which occurred the evening of Aug. 20, just as a little band of his parishioners had gathered, under formal call, to act reluctantly on his resignation as their pastor, brought sorrow to the entire community.

Nathaniel William Hankemeyer, born in Drake, Mo., in 1864, the son of a clergyman, followed his natural bent in procuring a theological education, attending a Chicago Theological University.

In 1890 he married Frances Nellis Van Bibber, a descendant of a staunch old Dutch family, and she remained to the end his faithful companion, counselor, and earnest supporter. To this union five children were born, the only son dying in infancy, and four daughters survive—Mrs. Arvilla Feckler, Mrs. Percy G. Lee, Mrs. Charles H. Fabens and Miss Natalie Hankemeyer.

After his ordination in Ivanhoe, Ill., in 1891, Mr. and Mrs. Hankemeyer entered the missionary field under the Congregational Home Missionary Board and continued ten years in that work. Realizing that a knowledge of medicine would greatly extend the scope of his work, Dr. Hankemeyer took time for a medical course, graduating from George Washington University in 1907, then put his medical knowledge into practice in his missionary work. When the World War came he went into war service with the American Red Cross, being stationed with his family at Camp Meade, and after the war, he was appointed vocational director in the regular army under the War Department.

Four years ago Dr. Hankemeyer became the pastor of the historic First Church of Old Saybrook. A man of wide vision, intensity of purpose and simple faith, he was beloved by his parishioners, respected by his fellow-townsmen and revered by his family.

His funeral was attended from the church Aug 22, a dignified, simple service, such as Dr. Hankemeyer would have loved, being conducted by Rev. Howard M. Wells of Old Lyme and his neighbor-minister, Rev. W. H. Robinson of the Episcopal Church in Saybrook. The burial was in Salem, Mass.

W. H. S.

(Continued on page 351)

ACCIDENT INSURANCE AT ACTUAL COST

For Clergymen and Laymen Who are Preferred Risks
(Ages 18-55)

$10,000 Protection has never cost over $9 annually—Under supervision of Insurance Department of the State of Iowa

$25.00 WEEKLY INDEMNITY
Superior rating in the Insurance Field —Membership exceeds 75,000 from every state in the Union and Canada.

OLDEST OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD
No Agents—No Expensive Overhead—Furnishes accident protection at lowest cost. For application blanks and further information write

IOWA STATE TRAVELING MEN'S ASSOCIATION
H. E. REX, Secy.
Fleming Bldg. Des Moines, Iowa
$2.00 pays in full until next February

Our First Mortgage
REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS
net the investor 7% semi-annual interest, guaranteed as to principal and interest, secured by first mortgages on improved real estate in Central Florida and the West Coast, by one of the oldest and most substantial corporations with 14 years' successful experience in the Florida mortgage field. Write for particulars and booklet.
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies
120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer,
Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively,
Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee,
Rev. William S. Beard,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day,
Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow,
287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget,
244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders,
25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen,
400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan,
1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty,
Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.
G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder,
287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr.,
19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Henry Smith Leiper, M.A.,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox,
Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. A. V. Bliss, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F.
100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD O PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit plies and Congregational ministers seeking torates. Maintained by the Congregational ferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Co Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chair

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secre and Missionary Education Secre
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and A Education Secre
Rev. Harry T. Stock,
Student and Young People's Secre
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educa Program including Social Service, Missio Education, Student and Young People's W aids Ministerial Students, University Past directs campaign to secure Recruits for Chris Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of denomination for the publication and distribu of The Congregationalist, church school e ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teach magazines, children's and young people's we papers, and books for home and church use, book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D.,
Editor and Business Man
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.,
Editor of The Congregation
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusett
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinoi

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congr tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Tre Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTER 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hur Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PAC 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSION FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSION UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasu Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congr tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY constituent of the Congregational Home Miss ary Society, represents the churches of Massa setts in their home missionary work. The Soc solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditi gifts, administers trust funds for churches. F erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sew Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Col bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF B TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is establishment and support of Evangelical Con gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bos and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Se Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites c tributions for this purpose. Bequests and Annu Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Supe tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasu Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT constituent of the National Society, solicits c tributions, administers Special Trust for Churc and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. R Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Ha ford.

Deaths

(Continued from page 349)

MRS. SARA SPOFFORD KIMBALL

. Sara Spofford Kimball, daughter of the Lt. Col. W. P. Spofford, who served in the War, and widow of Rev. Woodbury S. Kimlied at the home of her eldest son in Wal- Mass., Aug. 17, in her 84th year. She was in Dedham, Me. Her husband was pastor urches in Maine, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts. His death occurred in 1882. She is survived by her sons, George W., of Waltham, Joseph H., of Cumberland, Md., and her daughter, Mrs. Nathan W. Goldsmith, of Chester, N. H., and by ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She was for many years a valued member of the First Congregational Church, Waltham. She will be remembered for her high Christian character, her devotion to the church, and to the interests of her home and children. "A mother in Israel."

MRS. GEORGE A. WHIPPLE

Edna Foote Whipple, wife of George Albert Whipple of Evanston, Ill., died suddenly, July 7, at her home in Evanston. Her constitution had been undermined by the care of her parents, both of whom passed away in May within five days of each other. She was born in Chicago, June 8, 1878, the daughter of Charles Benedict and Abbie (Bigelow) Foote. She graduated from Wellesley in the class of 1900. After teaching in the high schools of Oconto, Wis., Portage, Wis., and Evanston, she married at Winter Hill, Somerville, Mass., in 1911, G. A. Whipple, Harvard '93, a member of the faculty of the Evanston High School.

She was a loyal member of the Evanston Congregational Church, which she joined during the pastorate of the present minister, Rev. Hugh Elmer Brown, D.D., in whose ministry she found much spiritual help. Besides her husband she leaves two children, Louise Bigelow Whipple and Charles Foote Whipple, and a brother, Sidney Bigelow Foote of Denver, Col. Her ashes rest in Mountain View Cemetery, Shrewsbury, Mass., the last resting place of her husband's family for three generations.

merican Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches.

ests and Annuities are solicited in order that House may be freed from mortgage indebtedand the Association thus enabled to furnish Missionary Organizations with business offices inimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hub-, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 on Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

acon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

ie visitation and personal missionary service nection with our churches. Emergency re- Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribuand legacies gratefully received and scrupuadministered.

m Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. , Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

orated 29 Boston Reorganized 1922

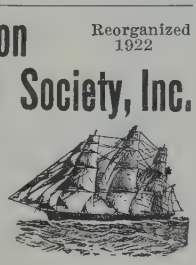
man's Friend Society, Inc.



Society, reorganized 22, now fully rep- the Congregational ies of New England practical, social and us work among sea- Has finely equipped s at 287 Hanover oston, and at Vine- Haven, and Reading at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. ociety provides dormitory accommodations, and recreation rooms, religious services, ables, and games of many kinds, a restau- canteen, shower baths, postal and bank- cilities. Donations and bequests solicited. outions received on an annuity basis. Pres- Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., . Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore sfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Charles E. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Franklin P. Shumway; Office, 618 Congrel House.

erican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

only American undenominational interna- and national Society aiding seamen. ntains a Sailors' Home and Institute at est Street, New York City. Libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing New York. SLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). wrecked and destitute seamen aided. PORTED by contributions and legacies. N B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary. RENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 76 Wall St., York, to whom contributions may be sent.

nerican Sunday School Union

elphia, Pa. Founded 1817

onal, Interdenominational. Establishes and ains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying districts of the country. Publishes and tes moral and religious literature. Helps urches of Christ by its pioneer and founda- work, not duplicated by any other agency. rted by voluntary gifts. Contributions so- Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. butions and communications relative to in any part of the country may be sent to w England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

State Conferences

ALABAMA (White), Tallassee, Nov.
CONNECTICUT, South Manchester, Nov. 3-4.
GEORGIA (Colored), Thomasville, Nov. 18-22.
IDAHO, BOISE, Sept. 29-30, Oct. 1.
KENTUCKY, Evarts, Sept. 26-27.
SOUTH CAROLINA, Columbia, Nov.
TENNESSEE (White), Daisy, Sept. 22-24.
UTAH, Salt Lake City, Oct.
WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.
WISCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

With the Schools and Colleges

Atlanta Seminary's New President

The trustees of Atlanta Theological Seminary did not hesitate long in their search for a successor to Dr. Shipman who resigned in May, and they are to be congratulated that the man of their choice has accepted their call.

Dr. Lewis H. Keller comes from the home of presidents, since he was born in Upper Sandusky, O. He was a farmer's son and did not leave the farm till he was 21. Then, after a year's school teaching, he set his face towards the higher schools. Valparaiso University and Adrian College were his colleges, Yale Divinity School his theological seminary. Returning to the Middle West, he held pastorates in Wisconsin and Minnesota, and while doing so was marked as a man able to superintend church extension work through his energy, constructive ability, and power to communicate his cheerful force to others. Fourteen years have passed since then. For six years he was superintendent of the Wisconsin Conference, for two years divisional superintendent of the Congregational World Movement with headquarters at Oklahoma City and Kansas City, and for the last six years general superintendent of Congregational work in the Southeast and Florida. During much of the earlier time he was a member of the executive committee of the national Anti-Saloon League, and was representing Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa when the Eighteenth Amendment was passed.

Dr. Keller will bring to the seminary the strength, administrative skill, initiative, and optimism which have characterized all his life and, not least, his years in the South. Already he is laying plans for the school which will signify a marked vitality and growth. His building program will strengthen the seminary's place among the institutions of the South, and every student should and will catch his vision of a church that attempts great things for God and expects great things from Him.

F. R. S.

The man who is always telling what great things he would have done under favorable circumstances usually convinces few except himself.—Anna L. Mower.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

September 10, 1925
Vol. CX No. 37

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 323
Editorial—What Mr. Lawson Has Done 324
Memory in Religious Life
Tolerance—An Editorial Message 325
From Our Western Editor—Victor Lawson's Funeral and Will 327
"I Would Not Forget," by Florence Lane Dresser 328
The Parable of the Monument of Lysikrates 328
Weightier Matters of the Law, by Arthur Deerin Call 329
On Report of Committee of Twelve 330
England's Problem, by A. Z. Conrad 331
Leadership Training, by Herbert W. Gates 332
Middle West Teacher Training, by Robert W. Gammon 333
Teacher Training in Northwest, by Fred Grey 334
Progress in Negro Education, by Frederick L. Fagley 335
Delegates to the National Council 336
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 338
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 338
Among the New Books 339
Our Invalid Parish—The Symphony of Life 340
Closet and Altar 340
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 340
With the Children—Kai Phal Pakka, by Anne Pendleton 341
News of the Churches 342

Two Songbooks for Children's Workers

A New Book for Weekday Use

Song and Play for Children

By Frances Weld Danielson and Grace Wilbur Conant

Authors of "Songs for Little People"

Workers with Beginners and Primary Children, especially in weekday schools of religion, mission schools, and similar organizations, will find in this song and play book an abundance of material to enrich their programs. There are sections containing:

Work Songs, Well-Known Folk Games, and Simple Marches
Songs on Friendliness and Service
Songs of Family Life, Songs for Special Days, Hymns
Seasonal Songs, Nature Songs, Animal Songs
Songs for Beginners' Children
Music to Suggest Desirable Moods

$1.25

Recommended for Sunday Use

Songs for Little People

By Frances Weld Danielson and Grace Wilbur Conant

This collection of songs is well known to workers with children the world over, and the demand for it grows greater each year. Thousands of church-school workers find it an indispensable aid. This book also features songs for practically every occasion, and music to suggest desirable moods. Read what Miss Elizabeth Colson, long a successful worker with children, has to say about Songs for Little People.

> "Here is a book that really reaches its audience in a delightfully direct way. Many 'Little People' sing with great enjoyment the songs that Miss Danielson has given them. Because of her sympathy and understanding, she knew which of the old songs to retain, and of the new only those that are good in music and sentiment have been included. The book is a call to praise and prayer, and many children have responded, which is cause for thanksgiving."

$1.25

While Songs for Little People is designed more particularly for Sunday use, Song and Play for Children is prepared for weekday use. This does not mean, however, that each book limits itself to these two fields, for each contains rich material for use whenever groups of children may be gathered together.

Send for returnable copies for examination

Congregational Publishing Society
(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 38 September 17, 1925

William Tyndale

William Tyndale: A Torchbearer Through Four Centuries

By EDWARD DWIGHT EATON

Young People and Church Attendance

By HARRY THOMAS STOCK

Building a Better World

A great task with Christian Education as its most important factor

Clear understanding and practical application of the principles of Jesus, furnish the only adequate solution of the serious political and social problems of today.

The Congregational Education Society

helps the churches to develop an effective program of Christian Education

A FEW EXAMPLES

Summer Conferences: C. E. S. Secretaries helped to plan and conduct 32 of these this summer in which over 4,000 young people were trained for better work in the home church.

University Pastors: 20,000 students of Congregational affiliations in state universities are being helped to think and act rightly in matters of personal religion and social living. They are the best assets of the church.

Missionary Education: More than 5,000 leaders are being helped with plans and materials for their work of creating a larger and more Christian world outlook.

Social Service: Thousands of Pastors and Leaders are receiving trustworthy information about vital social and industrial problems. Only by knowing the facts can one reach sound conclusions.

Young People's Work: A mailing list of 5,000 leaders who receive varied and valuable helps for their work gives just a hint of the extent of this service.

These are but a few of the items that go to make up the sum total of a work that is fundamental to the life and the spiritual health of the church. Others, equally important, await the time when we shall have the means with which to develop them.

We ask you to share in this service. You can do so in two ways:

1. Help your church to raise its full apportionment and thus increase the amount devoted to educational work.
2. Remember the Society with individual gifts, legacies, or conditional gifts as you have opportunity.

The corporate name of the society is

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

14 Beacon Street Boston, Massachusetts

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

ol. CX | September 17, 1925 | No. 38

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D.
Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

r. Carter Emphasizes Decision Day

A LITTLE book of less than sixty pages that ought to commend itself particularly to those of the Con-egational fellowship has just been published by the evell Company. It is Decision Day Talks, by Charles rancis Carter, the well-known pastor of Immanuel Con-egational Church, Hartford, Ct. The printing of these ree talks, Building a Character, My Choice, and What ind?, has arisen through the suggestion that what has roven effective and helpful in Dr. Carter's own ministry young people may be of value to others. Dr. Fred-ick L. Fagley says concerning Decision Day Talks:

Dr. Carter's ministry is noteworthy for its rich fruit-ge in the lives of the young people of his church. These lks which he has used with his Sunday school are plain nd simple in their language, lofty in their ideals, and ill be a source of inspiration and strength to all who ead them. They are intended for the use of pastors as ell as for the reading of young people. They will meet large need in the religious life of our day.

lew Prohibition Enforcement Policy

THE Federal forces charged with the enforcement of national prohibition have been completely reorgan-ed, and there seems to be promise of more effective effort certain lines of law enforcement. The new policy is hat of concentrating Federal efforts upon the larger ources of illicit liquor supply, and leaving to state and ocal police the responsibility of dealing with bootleggers nd the places where liquor is sold by the bottle or rink. Prohibition will never be a complete success until ublic sentiment demands its enforcement. As long as the chief responsibility for law enforcement is in Washington, the sense of local responsibility is not likely to be as strong as it will be when local authorities have the individual task of making prohibition prohibit. On the other hand, the strong arm of the National Government is needed to deal with the big sources of supply and the organized rum-runners. Earnestness and sincerity applied to prohibition law enforcement, with loyal backing by the church people, will go far toward making the United States a sober and law-respecting nation.

The Bicentenary of John Newton

ATTENTION has recently been given in Great Britain to the two hundredth anniversary of the birthday of John Newton, notable for his share in the revival of religion in the eighteenth century in England, and memorable in the church for the fine hymns he has bequeathed to us, including How Sweet the Name of Jesus Sounds, Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken, and Safely Through Another Week. Newton had a somewhat tempestuous experience prior to his conversion. His father became governor of York Fort in Hudson Bay, and the boy, going to sea, was for a time with slave traders. How deep during this period was the debauchery of which he later accused himself is not clear. At any rate he had educated himself during spare hours at sea and he had some fitness for the ministry in a literary way when he came under the influence of Wesley and Whitefield. He was ordained a priest in the Church of England and became curate at Olney, where he developed a close friendship with the poet Cowper. Later he went to a parish in London where his ministry proved attractive to large crowds and also spiritually effective. He was born on July 24, 1725, and died in 1807.

Lay It to Darwin!

"MUCH of the blame for the contemporary uprising in China may be laid on Darwinism" is the statement attributed to Rev. Father J. M. Fraser of St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, in a published interview. The Reverend Father is further reported as saying:

The teachings of evolution have taken hold on the minds of the students, with the result that there has been a bad effect morally. All standards of conduct have gone. There are no ideals. Evolution has a leveling tendency. The Chinese see that it means the degradation of man to the rank of the brute.

No doubt, from many causes, unsettlement has come today in China as elsewhere, but God help the ecclesiastic who can see in the effort of many noble-minded, intelligent Chinese to save their country and their countrymen from the worst forms of industrial exploitation, "no standards of conduct," "no ideals," and "the degradation of man to the rank of the brute"! We should suppose that man is essentially seeing himself and his fellows as something vastly above the brute, when he protests against hours of labor, and conditions under which labor is given, which would be intolerable for beasts of burden. The fact that China is protesting against the ravages of Western industrialism in its most pernicious forms is the surest evidence that China, even in the unrest, is groping after morals, standards, and higher conceptions. If this be evolution, count us among the believers in it!

A New Volume of "Safed"

IT is with much satisfaction that The Congregationalist announces the issuing through the Pilgrim Press of another volume (Fifth Series) of Safed's Parables under the title of The Fun and Philosophy of Safed the Sage. The present volume appears under the name of our distinguished contributor, Dr. William E. Barton, but Dr. Barton's identity with Safed has been so long an open secret that probably all our readers have been aware of the source of the weekly quotas of wit and wisdom, which, written primarily for The Congregationalist appear, through arrangement with our office, in various other religious weeklies as well.

It has long been our feeling that no one feature in The Congregationalist appeals to as wide a constituency as do Safed's Parables. The editorial columns provoke at times decided dissent and equally decided approval, the contributed articles often produce even more violent reactions, but apart from a few subscribers, who fail to appreciate Safed's humor, or who, for some other reason, do not respond to the Parables, the appeal of this feature appears to be almost universal. The Parables, moreover, make distinctive as well as popular appeal. Dr. James Stalker, our eminent Scottish contributor, not long ago requested us to secure for him all the volumes of Safed.

From the few who do not like the Parables of Safed we get interesting, and at times amusing reactions. A leading advertising man of New England discontinued his paper because we persist in publishing a feature which he regards as irreverent. A Western correspondent once protested against the reference in a Parable to "hick towns" and to "yokels," assuring us that her saintly father would never have referred so disrespectfully to places or persons. We assured her that she had taken Safed altogether too seriously, and that in the heart of the biographer of Lincoln there could be nothing but kindliness toward all places and persons, no matter how far remote or lowly.

But the most amusing comment was from an intimate but somewhat literally minded, friend of the editor, regarding Safed's Parable of the Wedding Cake. This, we remember rightly, began something like this: "I have eaten in my time eight cords, more or less, of wedding cake, and most of it was punk." Our literally-minded friend, a Methodist, assured us that if he were a Congregationalist he would write us in expostulation. "That," he said, "is a great lie. How could any man eat eight cords of wedding cake? Moreover, if he accepted people's hospitality, and ate their cake, it was bad manners to call it punk."

The honest literalist is the despair of the humorist, but Dr. Barton in the main avoids the pitfalls and wins from week to week the gratitude of hosts of people who appreciate the good sense, and not infrequently, the deep truth and penetrative judgment that underlie the shrewd thrusts and witty observations of Safed.

A Jolly Prohibitionist

THE people who think that gaiety and jollity went out when the Eighteenth Amendment came in, that real enjoyment is in some way associated with the disregarding or breaking of that Amendment, would do well to take a leaf out of the book of Delcevare King. Mr. King is the Quincy, Mass., banker, who has taken a particularly active part in the promotion of prohibition sentiment and in the advocacy of law enforcement. It was through a prize offered by him that the term "scofflaw" originated. Mr. King's unflagging zeal for the cause of prohibition is equaled only by his reputation in his home town for enthusiasm and originality in the promotion of sports and entertainment. His summer home Kampkliff, overlooking Quincy Bay, is the scene of such remarkable activities along this line, that the Editor recently availed himself of the invitation to look in upon a Labor Day gathering.

The whole affair was characterized by the evidence of a friendly, hospitable, and democratic spirit. The invitation, a rather elaborate piece of printing, was in wording and essence the most informal thing conceivable. Its only personal salutation was in the postal address, but it encouraged one, not only to come, but to "bring friends." Also it intimated that no reply was necessary —just come, if you can, any time between two-thirty and ten, "enter without knocking and leave the same way." As a matter of fact, as the invitation intimated, a "pull" is necessary to get into Kampkliff. The visitor must pull the lion's tail at the entrance, the lion roars rather ominously, but the door opens with friendly greeting. Mr. King bids you welcome, if he happens to be near the door, but at any rate a boy hands you a lollipop and you are immediately initiated into the party, and incidentally made some decades younger.

As the Editor entered he found assurance in the presence of George W. Coleman of "Forum" fame a couple of chairs away. Mr. King was in the center of a circle of young people—one would say in age between six and sixty. Guessing games were in progress but the figure in the center was more interesting than the games in which he was leading. Everything happened with a sort of presto! change!

There was an electric atmosphere of surprise and expectation. Presently the floor was cleared and four over-size "kiddie-kars" were trundled out. Riders, at first young fellows, and later their seniors, were mounted, armed with diminutive brooms, lined up as "Yale" and "Harvard," a big ball produced, and an exciting game of polo began with as much fun for spectator as participant. There were no dull moments; nothing lagged; the life of the party was always in evidence, tireless, full of energy, with no artificial or forced enthusiasm, apparently immersed in the sheer, unconscious joy of giving joy to others. The music began and the young folks danced with happy faces, their host the youngest and liveliest of all. Nor were those who did not dance forgotten—the dancing was interspersed with amusing stunts in which all engaged. The spirit of the occasion was irresistible, though editorial dignity was hopelessly sacrificed when the writer was made the "goat" in the memorable game of "Bobby, I'm bobbed."

But the experiences of an unusual evening are not recalled without a purpose. The occasion, one felt, was a symbol of moral and social influence. The notion, that prohibition is something that has been "put over" by a lot of kill-joys who with dog-in-the-manger-spirit will neither enjoy life nor allow others to enjoy it, never had any warrant. There are kill-joys here and there, but they have been no more numerous among prohibitionists than among any other group in the community. At least, we have known some thoroughgoing antis who were adepts in killing all the joy in their environment. But there is a positive lesson in the example of a man like Mr. King, and his sport-loving proclivities. Laws and inhibitions will never in themselves drive out wrong customs and practices. In the main they are likely to produce only outward safeguards and adjustments, and if they fulfill this social purpose they have done their part.

Real, constructive building must go beyond prohibition and negation to the demonstration and establishing of better customs and practices. If our young people, for instance, are obsessed with the value of false and dangerous forms of amusement, or with the association of evil things with legitimate amusements, it is of little use to wring our hands in pessimism, or strain our voices in protest and denunciation. What is necessary is to show clearly the superior value of the better thing. In the sphere of pleasure and amusement this means to demonstrate that the clean and wholesome, the self-controlled and right-minded is in actual enjoyment (and not merely in moral character) superior to the unclean and unwholesome.

The significance of Mr. King's experiment—if it can be called that—is that nobody, except with a perverted mind, could have imagined this occasion bettered by an occasional hip-flask. We have always had a feeling that the stories of hip-flask-toting among young people are greatly exaggerated, but whether they be exaggerated, or not, we have a feeling that no young flask-toter who had been introduced to this gathering at Kampkliff could have failed to feel the superior atmosphere and the lure of better, cleaner joy.

We should like to see rich men everywhere—and poorer, also, according to their capacities—following Mr. King's example. We should like to see those who have at heart social reform and the building of a better world directing their energies more effectually toward the development of better customs and habits, particularly in the spheres in which customs and habits have been so intimately associated with things either inherently evil, or questionable in their individual and social effect. At any rate while we deplore the selfish and sometimes disdainful ways of pleasure and self-indulgence of the rich, let us put on the opposite side of the account a Delcevare King here and there—perhaps there are many—who finds a joyful interlude in the serious business of banking to give some real attention to the actually far more serious business of play.

Brains, Work, and Government

READERS who have noted from time to time statements regarding the extent of unemployment in Great Britain—said to involve over a million workers—will be interested in a review of the situation recently made by Premier Stanley Baldwin, in which some rather surprising aspects of the problem are revealed. Premier Baldwin stated, for instance, that in spite of the number of people out of work there were actually more people employed in Great Britain at present than before the war, but the population had increased while emigration had decreased. The abnormal unemployment has been restricted to the mines, woolen factories, and iron, steel, and shipbuilding trades, progressive improvement in employment being indicated in the trades most directly related to personal consumption, such as trades involving cotton, boots and shoes, furniture, distribution, etc. Mr. Baldwin expressed the opinion that the purchasing power of the community had not been greatly impaired. In reply to the demand for government action the Premier contended that what Parliament could do must necessarily be limited.

> After all [he declared], in a democracy, if people cannot save themselves, no Government can save them. Ultimately, whatever this or any other Government may do, the only thing that can save the trade of the country is brains and work. We are moving, and we shall move, into a state of far closer co-operation in industry than we have had before.

There is no doubt much truth in this, especially under the present conception and condition of government, but if Parliament—or the representative governing power, by whatever name it may be called—be a real expression of the democarcy it would seem strange that the "brains and work" of a democracy should not be expected to function largely through its most important medium. The citizen of a democracy who is willing to work, and capable of working, but who finds himself, despite his efforts, denied the means of working to maintain himself and his family is justified in feeling that while that situation continues the particular world of which he is the center is all out of adjustment. His problem is, after all, not so different from what it would be were his home assailed by an invading foe. Has he no right to expect that the democracy will make his problem, and that of his fellows, its own? Democracies will always be weak until they learn to fulfill just such obligations. The purpose of saving every worthy citizen from every unjust and intolerable burden that can be avoided ought surely to be one of the highest possible functions of democracy, and of government as the organ of democracy.

Circumstances in England seem to be forcing events and developments that may yet produce as great changes in the functions of government and in social structure as were occasioned in industry toward the close of the eighteenth century when "brains and work" brought in the age of machinery and the factory system. The mistakes that were made then may be repeated in different ways—the dole, as administered seems a very doubtful social provision—but a venturesome prophet might predict broadly what is likely to happen a few generations hence. We are disposed to foresee a time when government will be as deeply concerned for, and as directly pledged to, the establishment of just and equitable conditions for the whole people, as government is now concerned for, and pledged to, its own maintenance. If the reign of the common man, which, in a sense is the essence of democracy, be not a mere phrase, is it inconceivable that the welfare of the common man may yet be as directly and completely an end and purpose of government as the maintenance of the king upon his throne?

Government, rightly conceived, ought to exist not to save us only from particular ills, but as far as possible to save us from them all. If it be said that self-help is on the whole better than government aid, it may likewise be said that if self-government be in any deep sense a reality in democracies, it would appear that government ought to be a very important factor in self-help

The Cult of Intolerance

STRANGELY in contrast with the beauty of tolerance, as conceived and expounded by a noble Christian like Phillips Brooks, and linked essentially with the exercise of Christian spirit and faith, is the cult of intolerance which finds expression today in many quarters, and which not only assumes for itself the high sanction of religion but also finds the support and advocacy of many from whom one might expect the courtesy of culture and the magnanimity of faith.

It is a profound mistake to imagine that this cult of intolerance is confined to what are recognizedly narrow sects and fanatical groups whose bigotry has at least the palliation of ignorance. More tragic and terrible than the bigotry of the ignorant are the insolent and intolerant assumptions of educated and cultured dogmatists, who, starting from the premise of the historic or "orthodox" validity of their own religious conceptions, and the consequent error of all who do not share their particular form of faith, drive their crushing and tyrannical logic through all of life to the disregard of plain facts, commonsense, and Christian spirit—if, indeed, Christian spirit be defined as the spirit of a Christ whose life and teaching uniquely emphasized in all things, and above all things, the supremacy of brotherly love as the counterpart and expression of the love of God, the divine Father.

Insight Dominated by Intolerance

This intolerance of a supposedly superior faith has found strange and alarming expression recently in a remarkable book by an eminent English man of letters. The Contrast, by Hilaire Belloc (McBride, $2.50), is in many respects the ablest and most thoroughgoing interpretation of America by an outsider that has ever been attempted. More impressionistic, and less a formal and detailed study, than Bryce's American Commonwealth, it strikes in many respects much deeper than that monumental work. Its general conclusion is suggested in the title. Mr. Belloc finds in America not a development or expression of Old World civilization, but a new, and contrasted, civilization, in politics, in religion, in letters in social structure and in the general characteristics o this country and its people. His thesis is "that th New World is wholly alien to the Old."

The importance of Mr. Belloc's volume is suggested by the fact that the London Times has described it a "the best book he has given us." It is full of a kee and penetrating insight, one evidence of which may b found in the utter repudiation of the idea, held by mos foreigners, that America is a land where money stand ards and Mammon-worship are supreme. On the con trary Mr. Belloc declares with great boldness, and h supports his conclusion at length, "that no moder society is so free from this detestable heresy [i.e., Mam mon-worship] as the American." In general, the chie defect of Mr. Belloc's survey is the same defect that w find in his religious outlook—he tends to bring every thing too sweepingly under the logic and dominance o his broad and basal conclusions, forgetting that the on sure generalization that one may make about Americ is that it is pre-eminently the land of wide, notable, an significant exceptions.

We have been interested chiefly, however, in Mr Belloc's chapter on The Religious Contrast, and it is her that we have found the expression of the cultured in tolerance against which we protest, as we have constantl protested against Ku Kluxism, dogmatic Fundamentalism and every form of narrow and sectarian bigotry withi Protestantism. Mr. Belloc is an eminent adherent o the Roman Catholic faith. That is his own affair, an his religious conviction and intensity are in themselve commendable. Probably in his private and personal li he believes in and practices toleration. In politics h has been a Liberal, and he has written regarding th French Revolution as only a man with underlying con viction regarding the modern movement of democrac could write. But when it comes to religion he expresse the creed of ultimate and thoroughgoing intolerance

He drives a wedge not only between political freedom nd religious faith, but between what he regards as faith" and the religion of those outside his cherished Romanism, no matter how intelligent, pure and holy his religion may be in its inherent quality and xpression.

The Insolence of Ecclesiastical Presumption

It is time that cultured, intelligent Protestants, who elieve, not professedly but actually, in the right of rivate judgment, and who are determined at all costs o preach and practice tolerance, dared to call this type f Romanistic intolerance by its proper name. Shorn f its aspect of personal sincerity it is nothing but in-olent presumption—lacking in religion even that slight pproach to fellowship which in the political sphere owell described as "a certain condescension in for-gners."

We would not be misunderstood. We have not the ightest intention of joining in the pastime of Catholic aiting, popular in certain Protestant quarters. We ould defend the religious liberties of our Roman atholic fellow citizens as readily as we should assert nd defend our own. Not all Catholics are of this Jesu-ical and logic-chopping spirit which is seeking to ominate the whole field of religion. A noble Roman atholic layman like the late Lord Acton could recognize certain inherent bond between Catholic and independ-nt in the ultimate approach to the problems of church nd state. He saw that in some measure the poles met. ut for Romanists of Mr. Belloc's order, as for a fairly rge group of ecclesiastics who are carrying on inde-tigable and implacable propaganda in America at the resent hour, there is no place either for tolerance, or r a frank and honest recognition on principle of some orth in the religion of those who differ from them.

If these words are considered too strong we point the eader to Mr. Belloc's own statement. He drives in the ost sweeping fashion a distinction between faith and pinion. It is legitimate for a man to make that dis-nction in his own mind. But when he proceeds dog-atically to describe his own beliefs as faith and those others outside his particular group as opinion not ven eminence in letters and scholarship can save him om a pitiful and painful exhibition of ecclesiastical oorishness. The modern Christian world, Mr. Belloc ys, "has lapsed from Faith into opinion, outside the atholic body." By Catholic, it should be pointed out, r. Belloc in the sheerest and most dogmatic way means oman Catholic. What he says, therefore, is that the atholic and the Catholic Church are essentially charac-rized by faith while "outside the Catholic Church to-ay, throughout the Occidental world, throughout Chris-ndom, skepticism is universal. Faith has everywhere elded to Opinion." Moreover, lest there should be any istaking the nature of this Roman Catholic Faith which r. Belloc sets over against Protestant Opinion, he has efined it in the most emphatic way. Faith does not con-st in the love, humility and good works springing out devotion to Christ, which saintly Catholics—who ould deny either their number or their saintliness?—ave shared with saintly Protestants. "Faith is unex-erienced." "It is essentially an acceptation of the re-ligion of others (italics are Mr. Belloc's); which others are the Apostolic College, the Conciliar decisions, and all that proceeds from the authoritative voice of the Church."

Getting Down to Facts

If this means anything it means that (to cite Boston) a man like the late District Attorney Pelletier, prostituting his sworn office to the most incredible corruptions and rascalities, the while he was a high official in the Knights of Columbus, and living and dying, even after his public dismissal and disgrace, as a loyal "son of the Church," is to be regarded as a man of faith, while men like George A. Gordon and Phillips Brooks are to be regarded as only men of opinion. We have sufficient confidence in hundreds and thousands of our Roman Catholic fellow countrymen to believe that their plain, commonsense, wholesome Americanism, if nothing else, will protest against such ecclesiastical blindness and intolerance of soul.

But if Mr. Belloc is right there can be for the thoroughgoing Romanist no such thing as plain, commonsense, wholesome Americanism. In the discussions relating some time ago to the protest by John Jay Chapman against the appointment of a Roman Catholic as an overseer in Harvard University, we were assured by liberal-spirited Roman Catholics that both The Congregationalist and The Christian Register, whose comment we discussed, had misinterpreted and misstated the nature and implications of Roman Catholic authority. We commend to our critics, and to others these words of Mr. Belloc, on page 160 of The Contrast. Referring to "certain consequences of religious difference" as found in Europe and America, Mr. Belloc says:

> Of these by far the most important—so much the most important that it covers all that is worth noting in the field—is the necessary conflict between the Civil State and Catholic Church where the two are not identified. (Italics are Mr. Belloc's.)

The Catholic Church is in its root principle at issue with the Civic definition both of freedom and of authority. For the purpose of the State, religion is either a universally admitted system, or a matter of individual choice. But by the definition which is the very soul of Catholicism, religion must be for the Catholic First, a supreme authority superior to any claims of the State; Secondly, a corporate thing, and not an individual thing; Thirdly, a thing dependent upon Authority, and not upon a personal mood; Fourthly, a guarantee of individual freedom in all that is not of Faith.

That is, in the realm of all that is of secondary importance, a man is to have freedom, while in the only thing ultimately important, the prime and sacred matter of religious faith and practice, man is to be a mere cipher, or a nodding automaton—with everything settled outside of himself. A freedom that is not freedom of faith would be for most of us no freedom at all, but freedom of faith in modern democracies is inevitably associated with faith in freedom. And freedom of faith and faith in freedom when linked together produce that tolerance in spirit and toleration in practice that enable men of various convictions to live together. We shall persist in our belief that such tolerance in conception and practice is not far from "the faith and love which is in Christ Jesus" (II Tim. 1: 13).

From Our Western Editor

The Illinois Merchants Trust Company, executor of the will of the late Victor F. Lawson, in presenting the document for probate the other day estimated its value at $20,300,000. Of this sum the personal estate was estimated at $20,000,000. The will left specific bequests to a number of relatives, close business associates, and institutions to the amount of nearly $6,000,000. It then designated as residuary legatees Iver N. Lawson, the publisher's brother; the Chicago Theological Seminary (Congregational); the Young Men's Christian Association of Chicago, and the Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension Society, each to receive the income on one-quarter of the remaining estate. A conservative estimate places the amount upon which dividends will accrue to these four legatees as about $10,000,000. If this shall be so, it will place our Congregational missionary leadership in Chicago and the Middle West in a very strong position. This does not mean, however, that the City Society and Chicago Seminary will not need the gifts of the churches—they will need such gifts. It does mean that they will be able to serve the churches and to extend the work with an efficiency never before reached and will be able to make the money that the churches give do much greater service than heretofore.

* *

It is altogether probable that laymen often wonder what ministers think about. I have a ministerial friend who uses me for a buffer. When he must have some one to whom to talk about his pastoral work and feels that he cannot confide in a member of his congregation, he writes to me or to other friends. He doesn't always send the letters; sometimes he does. He frankly admits that he does not send the letters for the good of his friends or for publication, but simply to get the matter "off his chest." I am going to break over and set down here parts of one that he sent me the other day. This minister is well trained, has had a fine experience, has had long pastorates and possesses a great sense of humor. The pastorate that he now has is an excellent one, but the people are slow to respond to leadership. This fact undoubtedly accounts for some things that appear in his letter. He says:

> Of all the races, the one where a man has to drag a cat by the tail is among the slowest. However, it can be done. That is to say the cat will come along slowly, though not gracefully, and it will be far from exciting to the racer.
>
> I have often wondered why churches are so often averse to going ahead and why pastors are so perverse as to keep trying to drag them along, much like the race described above. Why should a minister care anyhow? It is not his church. If they do not want to go forward, why should he care? He was engaged to preach and to be their servant and to do just what they want done and not to drag them forward against their resistance. He may endanger his "stand-in" with some of his members by his persistence. If they do not want to do this or that, why should he worry? If his salary is paid on time and if he seems to satisfy the people, why should he care whether anything else is done?
>
> It seems as if some of the men are not working for their salary as the main thing. I knew a minister, a couple of years or so ago, who was very anxious to erect a new church where it was very greatly needed. He gave till it hurt. He was given a considerable sum of money for his old age, by a parishioner of a former parish, and he gave that to the church erecting fund. Why did he do it? Why not let them go on in the old tumbledown church? It seemed to please them to do so. That is the queer thing about preachers, or about some of them at least. They don't seem to know enough to let well enough alone, so to speak.
>
> Hundreds of ministers are dragging their congregations as a man drags a feline by its caudal appendage and there is sometimes a lot of caterwauling. Every inch forward is paid for by a scratch, and if the goal is won and the cat released, then the man has sometimes to run for his life. However, the minister does it again and again and wherefore? What profit has he under the sun?
>
> Another thing intrigues me. Men there are who are terrible sticklers for the divinity of Christ, who do not seem to try very hard to obey his precepts. That seems to me to be an almost unbelievable situation. One would think that if one thought Christ divine he would be very scrupulous to obey so divine a person. It puzzles me greatly to know how to understand such a fact. There are also those who believe in the verbal inspiration of the Bible, who pay very little attention to keeping its directions for their lives, at least on week-days. How can that be explained? It is beyond me.
>
> Perhaps this is the explanation. It may be that they think that religion consists faith, that some things are true, amo which prominently is this: that Jesus d for our sins and by faith in him we forgiven and are saved; that we are saved by works anyhow; and that the tea ings of Jesus are counsels of perfection intended to be followed; that all we are do is to get into the ark of safety and tr to our pilot. Like the Negro, "they h broken ebery one ob de commandments," have never lost their religion.
>
> Solomon or some one else said in the Bi "there is nothing new under the sun." So churches seem to think that this should read, "there shall be nothing new under sun." Their creed is, "'tis the old time ligion and it's good enough for me." T want new automobiles, new radios, n everything else, but to get something bet for the church would show a lack of resp for the fathers who blessedly died and h gone to heaven.
>
> It is a great thing to be able to lau The man who can laugh over his difficult has a lot of amusement in the world; fact he can laugh any old time, but always something to amuse. The man w gets grouchy over troubles always has grouch; he is permanently in the business having a grouch. Well, we laugh. We in the slow race, but we are on the w Well, I have spilled over and feel bet

Isn't it strange that a lot of people p sist in believing that ministers are o serious, that they have no sense of hu and that they are in the phrase of street, "dead ones"? Those of us who kn a great many ministers intimately rea that perhaps there is no other profession t can furnish so many personalities of ri varied, and glorious experience. In t glorious company, this friend of mine ra high.

Chicago, Ill. R. W. C

Revelation

By Whitney Montgomery

I knelt to pray when day was done,
And prayed, "O Lord, bless everyone;
Lift from each saddened heart the pain,
And let the sick be well again."
And then I woke another day
And carelessly went on my way.
The whole day long I did not try
To wipe a tear from any eye;
I did not try to share the load
Of any brother on my road;
I did not even go to see
The sick man just next door to me.
Yet once again when day was done
I prayed, "O Lord, bless everyone."
But as I prayed, into my ear
There came a voice that whispered clear:
"Pause, hypocrite, before you pray,
Who have you tried to bless today?
God's sweetest blessings always go
By hands that serve him here below."
And then I hid my face, and cried,
"Forgive me, God, for I have lied;
Let me but see another day
And I will live the way I pray."

William Tyndale

A Torchbearer Through Four Centuries

By Edward Dwight Eaton, LL.D.

is difficult to realize that less than a century before so modern an event as the ding of our Pilgrim Fathers, there was no lish Bible. Yet such is the fact. Until 5 the English-speaking people had not even New Testament in their own tongue, as translation which was associated with name of Wycliffe, and other renderings arts of the Bible, had never been printed. ry to imagine what it would be for us England and America to have access to Bible only in dead languages! And the ht of England before 1525 was still worse n that, because Latin and Greek were so ch less well known then than now, and far familiar to the clergy. A writer in the temporary Review for July is authority the statement that in England in 1525 re were said to be no less than 20,000 sts unable to translate the Lord's Prayer n the Latin Vulgate into English, and ny of them did not even know who was author.

n these days of centennial observances, at could be more appropriate than the teful observance of this year as the quadentennial of one of the most significant nts in the history of all English-speaking ples and of all the races that the Anglo-xon influence has reached—the publication 1525 of the first edition of the translation the New Testament into English by Wiln Tyndale.

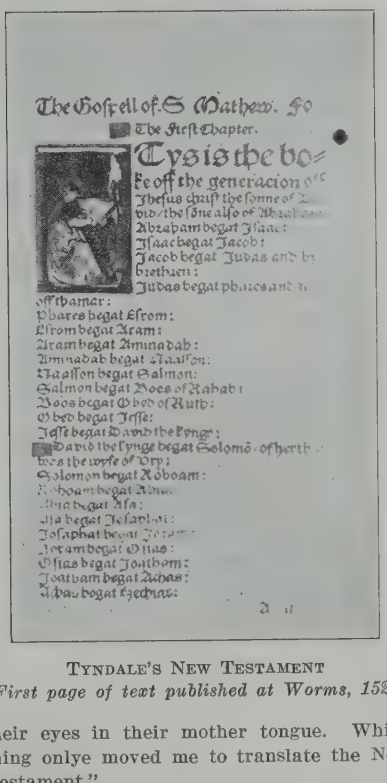
The Eager Student

While we cannot but regret our lack of owledge of the early life of this heroic ing scholar, the very paucity of detail y throw into all the stronger relief the nense achievement of his early manhood, ich was so soon to be cut short by a lent death.

Born in England near the Welsh border out 1492,—that birth-year of a new world, ndale chose the career of a scholar-priest, l when about eighteen years old was enled as a student at Oxford, where he ent five years and attained the degree of ster of Arts. He then passed for further dy to Cambridge, probably attracted by e fact that Erasmus, the great Dutch huanist, had been teaching Greek there. The ter's epoch-making edition of the New stament in Greek was published in Basel 1516, while Tyndale was in Cambridge. Tyndale's securing for himself the advanges of study at both of the great universis would bear out our impression of him as eager young scholar, intent not only on e older discipline, but also on gaining as uch as possible of the new learning whose ing beams were gilding the cloisters of t a few of the ancient centers of education.

A Far-Reaching Resolve

On leaving Cambridge about 1521, when he as some thirty years old, Tyndale took an gagement as private chaplain and family tor at the manor house (said to be still anding) of Sir John Walsh in Old Sodbury, Gloucestershire. His evangelical spirit led him to preach to the peasants in the villages thereabouts, a procedure which incurred the enmity of their ignorant priests. As a result of his efforts to better the spiritual condition of the villagers, he records that he "perceived by experience, how that it was impossible to stablish the lay people in any truth, except the Scripture was playnly laid before



The Gospell of S Mathew. Fo
The First Chapter.
Tys is the bo=
ke off the generacion Jhesus christ the sonne of vyd/the sone also of Abraham begat Isaac:
Isaac begat Jacob:
Jacob begat Judas and brethren:
Judas begat
Phares begat Esrom:
Esrom begat Aram:
Aram begat Aminadab:
Aminadab begat Naasson:
Naasson begat Salmon:
Salmon begat Boos of Rahab:
Boos begat Obed of Ruth:
Obed begat Jesse:
Jesse begat David the kynge:
David the kynge begat Solomō of wos the wife of Ury:
Solomon begat Roboam:
Roboam begat
Asa:
Asa begat Josaphat:
Josaphat begat
Joram begat Osias:
Osias begat Joathem:
Joatham begat Achas:
Achas begat Ezechias:

Tyndale's New Testament
First page of text published at Worms, 1525 their eyes in their mother tongue. Which thing onlye moved me to translate the New Testament."

As was the custom of the period, the manor house practiced a free hospitality, especially to the clergy. In a contemporary chronicle it is stated that "sundry abbotts, deans, and other doctors and beneficed men resorted thither"; discussing with "Master Tyndale, at length they waxed weary and bare a secret grudge in their hearts against him."

There are sayings that flash from the page of history, illuminating entire epochs. Such were the words of the young Monk of Wittenberg, when facing the Emperor Charles V and the assembled dignitaries of the Empire: "Here I stand. I can do no other. God help me." Such was the exclamation of the hitherto unknown Patrick Henry to the irresolute burgesses of Virginia: "I know not what others may do, but as for me, give me liberty or give me death!" Such was the immortal utterance of Lincoln at Gettysburg: "That this Nation under God shall have a new birth of Freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth." With these may fairly be associated the resolution of William Tyndale, after a discussion with a learned and disputatious cleric, perhaps spoken by the young tutor with glowing cheek and kindling eye, at the dining table in the great hall at Old Sodbury: "If God spare my life, ere many years I will cause a boy that driveth a plow shall know more of the Scripture than thou doest."

"This One Thing I Do"

Believing that he could interest the scholarly Bishop of London in an undertaking so important for the religious future of the realm, he went to the capital in 1523; but he soon found that there was too much suspicion in ecclesiastical circles of the enfranchising tendencies of the Bible in the hands of the laity to permit the bishop's co-operation.

Deeming it perilous to persist in his task while remaining on English soil, he bade farewell in 1524 to his native land, which he was never to see again, and became a sojourner in "strange cities." He carried forward his work of translation in Hamburg, and completed it in Wittenberg, where he made the acquaintance of Martin Luther, whose translation of the Bible into German had appeared a few months before.

The printing of his manuscript Tyndale undertook in Cologne; but not more than ten sheets were run off on the cumbrous hand press then in use when the authorities scented heresy and Tyndale fled to Worms, where the financial assistance of some enlightened English merchants enabled him in 1525 to get an entire edition off the press, and 6,000 copies of it were shipped to England. There they met with an enthusiastic reception, were widely circulated, and easily read.

But this popular interest aroused a correspondingly violent official antagonism. In 1526 the bishops denounced the translation and ordered the burning of every copy which could be found. They had a bonfire of Testaments in St. Paul's Churchyard. The Archbishop of Canterbury sent over to the Continent, bought up all copies that could be laid hold of there, and destroyed them. So thorough was the work of extirpation that but one complete copy of the first edition is known to be extant. This is in Bristol, England.

Cardinal Wolsey and Henry VIII made efforts during several following years to have Tyndale arrested and brought back to England for punishment. But the object of their wrath worked quietly on at Marburg, writing several papers on theological subjects which showed him coming fully into accord with the leaders of the Reformation. Indeed on the Lord's Supper he passed beyond Luther to the simpler faith of Zwingli. These writings had great influence in England and increased the hatred with which he was regarded by the ecclesiastical authorities.

While in Antwerp, bringing out revised editions of the New Testament and working on a translation of the Old Testament from the Hebrew, Tyndale was betrayed by a man whom he had befriended and was thrown into prison in Vilvorde Castle, six miles from Brussels. After several months' imprisonment, spent in last revisions of his translations of the New Testament and of portions of the Old Testament, he was brought before the authorities and was formally condemned to death for heresy. On October 6, 1536, being about forty-four years of age, he was strangled at the stake, and his body burned to ashes.

AN APOSTOLIC PARALLEL

There are almost irresistibly brought to mind, as applicable to William Tyndale, the words which the Apostle Paul used regarding himself: "As poor, yet making many rich." Homeless, portionless, well-nigh friendless, a man without a country,—for the rulers of his native land sought him but to destroy him,—betrayed by one to whom he had shown much kindness, the light of the torch he had kindled stamped out by relentless bigotry, in life's prime deprived of life, with flames for his winding sheet—how tragically poor he seemed, even beyond Paul's experience.

Yet making many rich, far beyond his most eager dreams; so much so, indeed, that his may justly be counted one of the richest lives that ever were lived. For in the providence of God, this far-visioned and heroic man was superbly equipped for his great task. He had ample and sound scholarship. All of the great languages of the Renaissance were at his command, both for reading and speaking. He was said to know six languages besides his own "like a native"; these were Greek, Latin, French, German, Italian, and Spanish. His translation of the New Testament was based upon Erasmus' edition of the Greek Testament with comparative study of Erasmus' Latin version as well as the Latin Vulgate of the Roman Catholic Church and Luther's German Bible. He achieved one of the great literary monuments of the world, and the English versions of the New Testament from his time down to the American Revised Version of 1901 have been based largely upon his translation.

The very popular Geneva Bible (1560), the work of Protestant scholars who had fled to Geneva during the Catholic reaction in England under Queen Mary, was in its New Testament merely a revised copy of Tyndale's latest edition. The culmination of all these translations came in the "King James' Version" of 1611. Made by the leading scholars of a scholarly period, in a time of profound religious feeling, and in a pre-eminent epoch of English literature just before the death of Shakespeare, it "remains the noblest example of the English tongue." And the New Testament of this version is avowedly based on Tyndale, and retains ninety per cent. of his work.

A MASTER SPIRIT OF ENGLISH LITERATURE

But not only was Tyndale's scholarly equipment and performance remarkable; he was also gifted with literary taste and rare sense of values in the English language. And all of this was fused into a sublime purpose, ennobled by the shadow of martyrdom which rested ever upon it. It was his purpose to open the treasures of wisdom and knowledge to all who spoke or were to speak his own language. He was determined to put these treasures into the everyday speech of the plow-boy; but it was a speech so interfused in his soul with the passion of the Gospel that his words throb in the heart of humanity, constituting, in its ultimate form of 1611, 1881, and 1901, the highest masterpiece of all English literature.

It was such qualifications, combined with such Christian convictions and purpose, that enabled Tyndale not only to have "a greater influence on the form of the English New Testament than any other man," but also to exert an extraordinary formative influence upon the development of English literature and of English character.

What the English race was destined to be was in Tyndale's time as yet undetermined. It was Tyndale's New Testament that gave that race the vision of the wider world of the spirit, and awakened it to great conceptions of individual and social responsibility. It was the fountain of religious liberty. It aroused and nourished spiritual convictions and aspirations. It gave form and development to English character and thus ultimately to American character.

Not less extraordinary was its effect upon English literature. The only English writer before Tyndale who had appreciably influenced English thought was Chaucer. The language was still in a state of transition and was generally regarded as fit only to serve as a vehicle for the commonplace. Tyndale put a great masterpiece of literature, crowded with the profoundest motives of life and destiny, and clothed in the ennobled language daily life, into the hands of every Engli man, and the future of English literat was assured,—its variety, its depth, its bility, its world-potency. The breadth richness of Shakespeare, the organ tones Milton, the robust humanity of Browni the rolling periods of Webster, the poign simplicity of Lincoln were all implicit in work of this then almost unknown scholar the sixteenth century.

Four mighty centuries have swept th course since 1525. In the first came "spacious days of great Elizabeth," and proved leadership of the English tongue literature. In the second, the victory of c stitutional liberty in England, won by m of the English Bible, and the colonization America by men of like spirit. The thi witnessed the rise of the United States i a free Federal Republic. The fourth h seen the development of the English-speaki race into world leadership. The most endu ing achievements of that race in all the centuries have rested on the foundations l in 1525, and the hope of the future must based upon the same foundation for char ter and life.

We talk of the "best sellers," some them of possible value, most of them ma festly ephemeral. But the real best sell month by month, is still the New Testame in English which Tyndale gave us; and th is the best hope of our race.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Home Harbor

Now after I and Keturah had sailed toward the West until we discovered that the West is in the East, and that by going westward we came to the Far East, we kept on going. And we dipped below the Equator until we lost the Great Dipper and Found the Southern Cross, and we came back North again to find if the North Star were still on the job. And we went on the other side of the Horizon toward every point of the Compass until we found our ship with only one more ocean between us and our own land.

And divers of those we met said, Ye surely will not return without a Longer Visit in Europe?

And we said, We have seen Europe at other times, but if we had not, no price would tempt us now to stay longer. We are ready to Go Home.

And we sailed away from the shores of Europe with glad anticipation, but not half glad enough.

Now as the ship drew nigh out the Dock, we inquired of each other who of our children would be there. And when we came where we could see faces, behold, there was no one on board who had more faces smiling at them than we. For our sons were there, and our sons' wives. And the daughter of Keturah and her husband were there. And beside these were grandchildren and yet more grandchildren. And they cried out, saying, I see Grandpa; welcome home, Grandpa. And they said, There is our dear little Grandma; welcome home, Grandma.

And as we looked their faces grew di for some strange reason, and Keturah wav her handkerchief but found it wet.

And it taketh a long time to bring a sh to the dock, so were we a long time lookin at a very beautiful picture.

And when we came ashore, we had Reception that was worth while.

And Keturah said, I think Heaven will b something like this.

And I said, Keturah, we have lived t gether for Forty Years, and we have kep our troubles out of the Papers, and we ar a Million Miles farther from the Divorc Court than we ever were before, and tha was no small distance; hast thou ever know an Happier Day since first we Stepped O together?

And Keturah said, In divers places wher we journeyed, they met us with Flowers and they twined Garlands around our necks and that was beautiful and warmed ou hearts, but we have Fairer Garlands thi day.

For there were Nine Pairs of little arm of our Grandchildren round the neck o Keturah and round the neck of Keturah' husband, besides the arms of our sons an our daughter and our sons' wives and the husband of our daughter. Yea, this side o Heaven are there no fairer garlands than these.

And for the fortieth anniversary of our wedding we have this good gift of God, that we are home again, and we have each other and our memories and those whom we love. And what more hath Heaven?

Underpaid and Overpaid Ministers

A Study in Service and Salaries

By Rev. Francis L. Cooper

OME men would be overpaid at any salary. There are a few in the Christ- ministry of whom this may be said. ere is no profession equal to the min- y in opportunity for service or laziness. e may throw all of his energies against goads or keep just one pace ahead of m. The strongest temptation to the rgy is to follow the line of least resist- e. Here a man's time is his own. He aches no time clock. He is accountable no authority save the authority of his n conscience. It does not take long to the conscience to sleep and when this ardian of the faith dozes off there in- iably comes a knock at the front door of parsonage. On the threshold stands old -ends! In his hand he carries a plain ckage which has come directly from the tory to the consumer. Even the postman uld not recognize the contents by the apping. Safe then is the shepherd from e suspicions of a critical flock! From at time forth and forevermore all that e preacher of good tidings needs to do is inform the factory of his needs and his rmon comes to him "custom built."

Is he a Fundamentalist? Very well, the hicle conforms. Is he a Modernist? ien let him give his specifications. "Built order and no two alike" is the trade- ark under which this boot-legging factory nds out its material to "busy" pastors. would be bad enough if the whole matter ded there, but once having taken the line least resistance it becomes the line for l action in parish work. The flock may ot discover the shepherd's secret but they ill discover the effect of it in his daily ork. One day the pastor will wonder why e is asked to move. Yes, there are a few the ministry who are paid more than ey are worth at any salary.

Some men would be underpaid at any lary. There are many such in the Chris- an ministry. No calling in life is drawing ore able men than the ministry and there e few in which men are so pitifully under- lued. If the church is to be kept under ie leadership of the strongest men, then ie church must be willing to pay for that adership. The cost price determines the alue of the article. A man usually gets hat he pays for. So does a church. Real argains in the business world are rare espite the multitude of counters bearing at sign. There are no bargains of any ort in religion. There are no counters here the church may exchange a meager m for an embryonic Henry Ward Beecher ho is willing to do pastoral work. That hich costs little is worth little more than costs. Whether we like it or not, the aliber of the man depends on what a urch is willing to part with to get him.

In days not long gone a minister was ex- ected to consecrate himself to the bread nd water line of service and the church sually saw to it that he kept his vow. Such a one so consecrated himself and went as a pioneer missionary into the far west. Early in his ministry, scarcely past the age of the Master he sought to serve, he was forced to pile his five hungry youngsters into a prairie schooner and make his way behind old blind Bolly and limping Jerry to a heavily mortgaged farm. It was a rattling good summer for that family, the "rattling," however, being supplied by the pots, pans, buckets, and iron chain tugs which beat against the sides of the wagon and the tongue thereto. One of the earliest recollections of a certain member of that family was the ridicule with which they were met in the various towns through which they passed as his dusty, weary little face peered out from beneath the flaps of the covered wagon. During those long days on the trail that youngster wondered at the cloud of pain which passed over the strong, beautiful face of his mother. Bread and water consecration cost the ministry one of the finest lives I have ever known.

The church has not yet fully recovered from the time-worn notion that the minister is specially called of God to make sacrificial service for the sake of saving mankind. The antiquated idea still prevails that the wages of the clergy are partially paid off in spiritual values. Often this is a cheap way of dodging responsibility. The old lure of being called to a peculiarly exclusive profession is gone with the passing of the mystical conception that men were hailed by a detached voice and sent out to preach the gospel to every creature without preparation or expectation of rewards here on this earth. Yet many of our young ministers are beginning to wonder if the church realizes that the old lure is gone. Not that men are entering the ministry today for mercenary reasons. I do not know of one man who has made his decision on the basis of the amount of remuneration he is to receive. Furthermore, a minister who has an ounce of spunk in his makeup does not want to pilot any leaky old craft which he must constantly caulk up to keep afloat, no matter what the salary may or may not be. He wants first and most a real job. But no church has a moral right to ask a red-blooded man to act as its agent of salvation on an income below that of the proverbial mouse that inhabits its kitchen.

It has been said before and needs to be repeated again and again that 67 per cent. of the churches of our own denomination are offering less than $1,000 a year as an inducement for strong minded youth to preach the good tidings to the world. Out of the 5,600 ministers in the Congregational churches of America 3,750 are receiving less than $1,000. With that sum the head of the family must feed, cloth, and educate his children and prepare for the unearning years of old age. Only a trifle over three per cent., or about 170 Congregational ministers, receive $3,000 and over in salary. Little wonder so many pulpits are vacant or supplied by discouraged men who labor under the fear that lest having preached to others they shall themselves become castaways in their old age. No man can speak out of a rich storehouse of thoughts if his mind is made spiritless by the jinx of worry. With most men it is not lack of thought but diverted thought that makes them vendors of hot air.

The laity says it wants to hear ideas worth listening to, that it does not wish to witness a weekly pantomime of swinging fists to fill out mental gaps. Very well! There is one way and only one way to get what it wants: pay for it. We should refrain from criticizing our minister until we hear him speak for at least once out of an unfettered mind.

Knox College Calls President

Mr. Albert Britt of New York City was elected to the presidency of Knox College, Aug. 15, to succeed Rev. James L. McConaughey, who resigned to become president of Wesleyan University. Mr. Britt graduated from Knox College in 1898. He was prominent in student activities and during his senior year was editor of the Knox Student, president of a literary society, and manager of the football team. He won a prize for debate in his sophomore year and throughout his course took an active part in debating and oratorical contests. He made a high record in scholarship and is a member of the Phi Beta Kappa. Graduating from Knox, he spent three years in graduate study in Columbia University, majoring in political economy. After leaving Columbia he was on the editorial staff of Public Opinion for a number of years, and was managing editor during the last two years of his connection with the paper. He was then editor of the Railroad Man's Magazine, owned by the Frank A. Munsey Company, and in 1909 he became editor of Outing and held the position until 1923. For the last seven years of this period he was president of the company. Mr. Britt is the author of several books. His book entitled Lincoln for Boys and Girls is scheduled for publication in the early fall. He has had experience in Boy Scout work and on special committes connected with Scout headquarters. He is a member of the Adirondack Mountain Club, and a fellow of the American Geographical Society. He expects to take up his work at the opening of the college year.

Prayer

By Fletcher D. Parker

Father, we thy children in our need
Turn our hearts to thee in humbled prayer,
Sure that in our darkness thou canst lead,
Simply trusting thine enfolding care.

We, in midst of crowding time and place,
Searched for fame and followed lure of gold,
Vaunted show, and boasted land and race,
Now we turn to thee as those of old.

Bringing nothing worthy in our hands,
Failing sacred trusts that thou didst give,
Saddened children waiting thy commands,
Asking, pleading that thou wilt forgive.

Strengthen weakness for tomorrow's test;
Guide us, that far better than the past,
Future years may seek and find the best.
Hold us faithful, loyal to the last.

If some further duty may be ours
In thy shining land of life and light
Grant us vision, courage, patience, powers,
Following Christ to see and do the right.

Young People and Church Attendance

"How Can Our Services Help Meet the Life Needs of Youth?"

By Harry Thomas Stock

THE prevailing attitude of young people is that the meetings of the church must justify themselves by being both interesting and helpful. The inadequacy of such a viewpoint may be argued. But that church is wise which will examine itself to see whether it is actually leading a useful existence so far as the youth of the parish are concerned. The first consideration is not, "How can we get the young people to our services?," but "How can our services help to meet the life needs of youth?"

Intimate conferences with Congregational young people in ten states disclose the fact that they feel little sense of ownership in the church itself and particularly in the "preaching service." The society is theirs, the Sunday morning class session belongs to them in lesser degree, but the main hour of worship is intended for adults. They may graduate into it later. This viewpoint is not unanimous, but it is overwhelming; it is a judgment expressed in no spirit of criticism, but with the calm air of reporting a fact.

The minority avow their ownership in the entire life of the church. The reasons for this sense of possession are easy to discover. It would seem almost trivial to mention the influence of such small matters as ushering and singing in the choir. Yet, boys who share a weekly duty with their elders come to regard the morning services as ours. It is not "good luck," as the pastor at Hyannis, Neb., modestly puts it, that accounts for the fidelity of his high school young people to the evening meeting. It is the knowledge that if they fail to provide good music for that service, the entire meeting will suffer.

A large proportion of the men who enter the ministry come from small churches. Almost every large church is debtor to the village and rural churches, for many of the best lay workers were trained during adolescence in these weak and struggling organizations. Where work is shared church attendance increases. There is more loyalty to the Sunday services in the smaller churches than in the larger.

That this need not be true is demonstrated by our church at Ottawa, Ill. About fifty young people have joined the church during the present pastorate, and with a single exception all of them are loyal to one Sunday service of worship. Before joining the church each of them had a conference with the pastor during which emphasis was placed upon three points: a clean, pure Christian life, loyalty to the services of worship, financial responsibility to the church. All of them find some duty in the church program. The paid quartet has been superseded by a chorus in which the young people participate. On a Sunday after the summer conference the young people conduct the morning service to the great profit of the adult congregation. It would be well for our big churches to break through the impersonal formality which seems to characterize many of their meetings; in doing so they would lessen the distance between the young people and the "preaching service."

Closely related to the foregoing is the suggestion that young people be invited to membership on important boards and committees of the church. Adolescents usually want some adult to counsel them in their societies and departments; they want also to be represented in the government of the larger body. Why not? Who owns the church?

A large church in Montana tried the experiment of having adult counselors for the young people's department and invited young people to membership on the church board. The success of the plan is attested by a statement from a high school girl: "When we young people want something, the older counselors plead our cause for us. On the other hand, we begin to understand the viewpoint of the older folks. So all of us join in the whole work of the church because we know each other better and are interested in all that goes on."

A Church Family

The adoption of so simple, though radical, an expedient cannot be guaranteed as a cure-all. Along with it must go an honest and unaffected comradeship upon the part of the adulthood of the church. Many young people, often erroneously, think that the adults are "against us"; it requires patient and generous fellowship to disabuse the youthful mind of this error, if error it is.

As a matter of fact, in no few cases the older people simply tolerate youth. There is no desire to have young people share the life of the church except upon terms of silence and of becoming adult before their time. The answer to the query as to who owns the church very frequently is that the kitchen committee owns it, or the janitor owns it, or the church board owns it—a church board sometimes made up of men and women of serious mien who regard youth as "young barbarians." Instead of making it easy for boys and girls to center their activity in the church, it is made well-nigh impossible for active adolescents to use the church property. Inflexible rules made years ago are guardianed by inflexible adults, over-proud of their responsibility. These rules are regarded as more sacred than the lives of the children of the community.

Adults who look forward to having children of their own must expect sleepless nights, broken dishes, a drain on their pocketbooks. A church which expects to build Christian character in the youth of the community, under church auspices, must be willing to pay for broken chairs in order to avoid broken lives.

We older people do not intend to be overstern; we love the young people; we only want to see that they do the right thing. But we consider ourselves as "ad-ults—finished products, as Dr. Joseph K. Hart has so forcefully pointed out; we do not expect to learn from youth. Young people must learn from us. This good intention is misinterpreted by youth.

They think of us, too often, as autocrats; they think of the church as an adult institution, the stronghold of things as they were. It stands for restraint, for unreasonableness, for everything that quenches the abundant life. With such an impression of the church, many of our best young people maintain a loyalty to the society and the class, but have no affection for the adult service of worship or the adult church.

Where quite the opposite spirit prevails—where the spirit of the Christian family prevails—the matter of church attendance usually takes care of itself. The Ontario parish in Illinois, where Rev. M. Guy Van Buskirk is pastor, is an outstanding example of general effectiveness. No magic has been worked except such magic as is possible to any community which is willing to build its church as a family in Christ.

"We have a very fine attendance of you people," Mr. Van Buskirk has written. "Th are loyal and ready to take up and car through any task we ask them to do. If the is a special reason it is because we have set a well-rounded program which we set befo them and a red-blooded kind of Christianity the ideal.

"Our church recognizes fully that the mo important part of its work is with its yout Hence its entire program is built with you and its needs ever in mind. This is not superimposed program, but rather one growi out of life itself. The worship services are planned as to give boys and girls the greate opportunity for development through self-e pression. They have a very definite part all the deliberations of the church itself a share in the official responsibility.

"This makes the church very truly 'ou church' for the young people and they respon accordingly. An indication of this will found in the fact that on July 26 twenty peop came into membership, fifteen of whom wer boys and girls who came without solicitatio Most of them came to me saying that the wished to join the church."

The University Church

This suggests the question as to whether is right to make the young people the cente around which the life of the church revolve Is it not enough to consider them as so man people, to spend a "reasonable" sum on th Sunday school, to hold up tried standards o action and conduct to which they must con form, and to give them no prominence whic is not also accorded to the grandparents? Is i not a form of pampering and of "spoiling" t keep pushing them to the fore? Again we recu to the major consideration, namely, that o meeting the needs of growing life. All ques tions of privilege and seniority are subordinate to that of building a Christian generation.

Young people do not want an undue share of attention or responsibility, least of all do they want to have things continually done for them. Yet they are young persons—active, eager, untiring, unretiring, with their future be fore them. What are they going to be? How important is it that they shall be Christian church-going citizens? What is the main business of a parent when his children are at the adolescent period? When we have carefully pondered this question and found the answer, have we not also discovered just where the chief interest of the church should be?

One may take the churches at college and university centers as illustrations of special emphasis upon young people's work. In towns where no special note is taken of the student population church members will not be robbed of their pew space by transient collegians. But where the church is known as one which aims to meet the special problems of students, where the pastor is never too busy for student interviews, and where the worship and activities center around youthful interests—the returns are exceedingly rewarding. The church is full of young people, and there are no fewer adults in attendance, either.

Attend some Sunday morning the Congregational church in the vicinity of the University of Illinois, Wisconsin, or Michigan (to take only three typical cases), and pessimism will vanish. Crowds fill the pews; young men arise early after a late Saturday night party; some-entire fraternities or sororities attend the es in a body. This is their church! It is hurch of business men, professional men, ngmen, society women, girls employed in tores, too. At such points more college nts establish church-going habits than lose when away from home. Would not the of church-going habits back home be ed many times if the local church put at the center in much the way that our rsity churches do?

The Minister

ng people consider the minister a large r in the Sunday service. His age is not a r of first significance. Much more im- nt is his ability to understand youth and ep his own young people in mind when he eaching. He must either have a constant day contact with youthful experiences or le to project himself in imagination into ome life, school life, play life—into the most recesses of adolescent thought and ity.

will know that young people are inter- in life—today's life and tomorrow's. They no great attachment to words, systems, actions. They are idealists and are inter- in religion. They want to know about Jesus, prayer, the application of Chris- ty to present-day problems. They confess inability to discuss many of these matters igently in their own societies. Their com- t is not that the church services are too ous, but that they are too far distant from It is too hard for them to learn about and Jesus and the application of Chris- ty at the average preaching service. (I t here what high school youth will say most any frank discussion.)

e helpful minister finds "Bible preaching" method. Another uses the allegory or . A third discusses current issues. What- the method, the minister who helps young le begins with life and keeps his sermon in with life all the way through.

is the minister who remembers his own erness experiences; who moves about and rstands what young people read and see hear and say; who goes with them across state to conferences and shares their con- tions and enthusiasms and weariesses; himself "fought the call to the ministry ten years, seeking a loop-hole wherever I find one"; who "finally met the Lord at brook Jabbok," and then matriculated in ge at thirty years of age to begin all over n—it is such a minister who understands earning of youth and the "revolt of youth," preaches to young people with great ac- ance. And, therefore, he preaches to older le with even greater acceptance. And when pastor (at Ashland, Wis.) announces a ly sermon on "Evolution" he finds his re- in the fact that lively boys stay home a week-end picnic because the church serv- promises to help them in their intellectual spiritual crises.

ir young people's work the nation over, in denominations as in our own, has multi- in effectiveness during recent years. Pains- g creative effort on the part of employed volunteer workers in the local fields is ng fruit. The summer conferences help tily. At these gatherings we see that g people not only want to play, to argue discuss, to work, but that they also want e talked to and they want to worship. e elements which impress the young people deeply and with greatest permanence are norning devotions, convocation talks, vesper ces, the heart-to-heart contacts with sym- pathetic adults both in formal meetings and in informal groups.

Is it too much to hope that these young people, having had this experience of owner- ship in a church enterprise, this taste of re- demptive worship and stimulating preaching, may find the same spirit awaiting them at home? That minister who has spoken to the young people in his audience, knowing them by name and understanding their personal problems—has not that minister preached be- yond his best? Has he not seen in eager eyes that response which has made him both humble and more than human in his gospel presentation?

A Condition of Success

But when these matters have been attended to—when the young people have been put to work, when they have shared the responsibility of government, when they have no doubt of their full partnership in the life of the church, when the program of religious education has been adapted to meet their immediate and fu- ture needs, when a full supply of "young peo- ple's preachers" has been found—can we be sure that all of our youth will flock to church and be faithful without exception? No vital matter is so simple and automatic. We still have our modern American civilization to take into account.

Young people share the dominant tendencies of the times. They do not live in a vacuum. An adult world is around them, behind them. No patent has yet been found which will sweep the weary working-women and the busy bankers into the churches and keep them faithful to the religion of Jesus. When the means of inter- esting our adult world have been discovered, and when the religion which results from this new interest is more than skin-deep, then there will be less of a "young people's problem." The pastor at Spencer, Ia., is on the right track when he seeks to enlist his men in the full pro- gram of the church, and makes it a main con- cern to incarnate the Christianity of Jesus in the fathers and employers of the community. The effect upon youth cannot be missed.

The problem of youth is the problem of the adult. The son enjoys driving fifty miles an hour for ten hours on Sunday just as his father does. The daughter prefers to sleep until noon after a busy week of "dates," just as her mother does after her busy social whirl. The high school student is "too busy" catching up with his assignments on Sunday just as his parents make this a day of doing odd jobs. Themes must be written just as floors must be varnished and dresses must be ironed.

The theory that we should give all of our attention to the young people and cease worry- ing about the adult is all wrong. We must build the church of the future through our youth, but the future of our youth is being built by our present adulthood—an adulthood much in need of conversion. We need a new family church—a church educationally depart- mentalized, but possessing a unity of spirit and purpose and worship. And we need a new family religion—a family bound together by those ties of common interest and purpose which shall lead the father and son to the same place on Sunday morning.

A Practical Plan of United Church Action

Interdenominational Evangelism

By Frederick L. Fagley

A MOST significant step towards united action by the churches was taken at a conference of representatives of fifteen denomi- nations and more than forty city and state fed- erations, which was held at Northfield, Mass., in June. These representatives, after three days of vigorous discussion, united on a plan of fall work for the churches and agreed to promote this plan in their various denominations and federations.

This is the first time such a gathering has been held, and as the two bodies, viz., the Fed- eral Council's Commission on Evangelism, with representatives of the various denominational commissions, and the National Association of City and State Federations of Churches, agreed to hold joint sessions next year, it is expected that the movement for united action initiated at Northfield this year will grow as experience justifies this type of practical church co-operation.

One of the main difficulties the city federa- tions have had to face in planning a program for the churches of a city has been that the various denominations have been recommending different programs to their churches. Thus it has been through the years. The Presbyterians were following one plan, the Methodists an- other, the Congregationalists had their plan, and so also the other denominations. When, there- fore, the city federations sought to promote a plan for all the churches of a city they have always run afoul of these varying denomina- tional plans and this has brought confusion to the work of the city. Increasingly the churches of cities have been uniting in federation pro- grams and putting aside the denominational pro- gram or using such portions of it as could be worked with the city program.

Such confusion has been needless and un- called for. But the trouble has been to secure any sort of unity at the top; that is, among the denominational bodies. To bring these denomi- national bodies together has been no small task, for the programs the various denominations have been following have grown up through the years and have become familiar to the churches.

That the denominations have at last come to a united program is due in large measure to the effective leadership of the Federal Council's Commission on Evangelism. This body of church leaders has been working for years, in a quiet, friendly way, that the results which now crown its efforts might be realized.

At this conference the Congregationalists were represented by Dr. Day, the chairman of our Commission, and Dr. Fagley, the secretary, Dr. Burton, the secretary of the National Coun- cil, and Dr. English of Connecticut, Dr. Rol- lins of New York, Dr. Deyo of Connecticut, Mr. Johnson of the Commission on Missions, Dr. Burgess of Rhode Island, and others.

The other denominations had like representa- tion and these men were supposed to know the wishes of their respective denominations and to voice their denominational aspirations.

Especially helpful in the discussions were the contributions of the Lutheran representa- tion who stood for a new emphasis on the train- ing of youth, of the Episcopal representatives who stood for a sane and orderly development of the program of the church, and the insistence of the Presbyterians, Baptists, and Disciples on the prime importance of the evangelical appeal in all the work of the church. The report as finally adopted contains these important paragraphs:

THE PROPOSED PROGRAM

I. General Preparation:

All church leaders and all Christian people should be led to think and pray and work in terms of the whole church as Christ sees it.

1. The denominational agencies should prepare and issue literature which completely outlines their evangelistic program and should see that it is placed in the hands of every pastor and his officers.

2. In the local church the plans should include: (a) A personal preparation on the part of the pastor himself; (b) A preparation by the pastor of a definite evangelistic program for the entire congregation for the year; (c) A presentation of the plan to the officers and people in order to secure their hearty enlistment in carrying it out.

II. The Program for the Local Church:

1. The preparation of a complete constituency list, comprising the names of all in the community whom the church should seek to win.

2. The selection and training of church members for various forms of personal evangelistic service.

3. Special sermons on evangelism, to inform the people as to the real meaning of evangelism and to quicken their spiritual life.

4. The assignment of names from the constituency list to personal workers, with provision for regular reports by them.

5. A definite evangelistic objective to be placed before every organization in the local church.

6. Special responsibility to be placed by the church upon the young people for work to be carried on under their own leaders.

7. Such instruction of Sunday school teachers as will enable them to find the evangelistic note in the lessons.

8. The full use of the evangelistic possibilities in catechetical or communicant classes.

9. The conservation of church membership, and building up of Christian discipleship.

10. A period of intensive evangelistic work as a climax to the year.

III. Interdenominational Co-operation:

1. In every community where there is a federation or council of the churches, the evangelistic agencies of the denominations should lead their own churches into co-operation in a simultaneous program of evangelism. The impression of oneness thus produced is itself an element of evangelistic value. In communities where a pre-Easter program is agreed upon, all the denominational agencies should join in supporting it.

A program for this fall was unanimously adopted and each denominational secretary pledged his commission to promote it in the churches of his body, and the city federation secretaries pledged themselves to promote it in the various cities represented. This general program was drafted by a committee of which Dr. Burton was chairman. There are four items of this fall program:

I. Parish Study. September and early October.
II. Fellowship Visitation. Early October.
III. Church Rally Sunday. Oct. 11.
IV. Autumn Ingathering. Nov. 1.

Honorary Degrees

Additions to lists published July 23 and Aug. 20

D.D.

FIFIELD, REV. L. WENDELL, Sioux Falls, S. D.—Yankton.

GIFFEN, REV. THOMAS T., Fresno, Cal.—Pacific School of Religion.

JAMISON, REV. H. W., Newell, S. D.—Yankton.

TOLSOM, PROF. GEORGE T., Berkeley, Cal.—Pacific School of Religion.

WIRT, LOYAL L., Berkeley, Cal.—Pacific School of Religion.

LL.D

WILLIS, PROF. HUGH, University of Indiana—Yankton.

WOODBURN, PRES. E. C., Spearfish, S. D.—Yankton.

Howard University Advances

Reorganization and Remarkable Progress

HOWARD UNIVERSITY in Washington, D. C., has made remarkable progress during the last few years. A further advance, through reorganization, goes into effect with the opening of the college year this fall.

Congregationalists have had a special interest in Howard University from the beginning. It was started in a prayer meeting in the First Congregational Church, Washington, and it bears the name of its founder, General Oliver O. Howard, a Congregationalist, who sought to give an opportunity for higher education to the Negro at the same time that General Armstrong was establishing Hampton Institute to train the Negro in manual crafts and in agriculture. The purpose of both was to provide the education needed to develop opportunity and leadership among the colored people who had just been freed from slavery.

While the American Missionary Association, representing the Congregationalists, has been carrying on its notable work of education for the colored people in the Southern states. Howard University has done its great work at the gateway of the South in the nation's capital.

It has enjoyed substantial, although never enough, financial help through appropriations from Congress; which, incidentally, has involved having the watchful eye of the Government ever over the University, to be sure that it was properly conducted. It has stood the test, also the tests involved in measuring up to the standards of the best white colleges in important departments, including those of medicine, law, and liberal arts. Its theological school and departments of music, domestic science, business, teacher training, and physical training, have rendered distinctive and notable service. Howard University always has been definitely Christian, but interdenominational, and never sectarian.

THE LEADERSHIP

The president, Dr. J. Stanley Durkee, is a distinguished Congregational minister, and another eminent Congregational minister, Dean Charles R. Brown, of Yale Divinity School, is chairman of the board of trustees. The trustee board is a strong one, including Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard, Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones of the Phelps Stokes Fund, Gen. John H. Sherburne, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Dr. Jesse E. Moorland, Justice Stanton J. Peele, Hon. James C. Napier, Rolfe Cobleigh, and others. Dr. Durkee's right hand man in executive service is Dr. Emmett J. Scott, the competent secretary-treasurer of the University. The faculty represents advanced scholarship and professional distinction. There are 14 who have earned the degree of Ph.D., and 39 that of A.M., nine D.D., three LL.D. Brilliant men such as Just in zoölogy, Brady in chemistry, Coleman in physics, Williams in language, Wesley in history, Miller in sociology, and others give distinction and notable leadership in the Howard faculty.

Since Dr. Durkee became president in 1917 the student body has increased from 1,000 to 2,000, while the secondary schools have been dropped and standards have been raised all along the line. The faculty has increased from 118 to 176, income from $219,199 to $476,000, property value from $1,851,000 to $2,474,000. Teachers' salaries have been greatly increased, in fact $63,000 per year has been added. A new building with dining hall, social center, and domestic science department has been completed at a cost of $201,000. A new gymnasium and stadium are under construction. A new medical building is in prospect; Congress has appro ated $370,000 for it on condition that the t tees raise $130,000 for equipment. Dr. Dur has secured $80,000 of that amount from General Education Board. A campaign $500,000 for medical school endowment brou in $535,000 in cash and pledges. Half a lion is needed to house and finance the theol cal school. About $125,000 in cash and pled has been secured and the prospect of secur the full amount needed is encouraging. grounds have been beautified and extended, the buildings have been made more attract more sanitary, and much improved in equipme

A year ago a budget committee was cho by the board of trustees to give wise and tematic guidance to the University's finan The expansion of the University was runn far ahead of its available resources. There peared to be duplication of work in differ departments and necessary overhead pense. The trustees, upon recommendation the budget committee, voted to have a survey the various schools and departments made an outside expert, and fortunately were able secure an outstanding specialist for such serv Dr. Robert Josselyn Leonard, Director of School of Education in Columbia Universi He made a thorough survey and study of academic departments, which will be follow by a survey of the medical departments.

Dr. Leonard's report included the follow statements:

FINDINGS

The record of Howard University, from establishment to the present, is one of constr tive achievement. During practically ev decade, some important advance has been ma but, in the whole history of the institution, period has been more fruitful or significant t the years since the close of the World W This period may be characterized as "the bui ing of the University." The magnitude of achievements of this period can scarcely be ov estimated.

The purpose of Howard University to be higher educational institution for colored p ple, conducted on a Class A basis, as defined boards and accrediting agencies is sound a practicable. As once stated by Dillard, Ho ard University is the "Capstone of Negro E cation." For the welfare of the colored peo as a whole, there is no educational enterpr in the United States of greater importan The success which Howard University achieved to date is a clear indication that it possible to maintain a real university in t country for the colored people.

There is every evidence that Howard U versity is spending its income wisely and curring no unnecessary obligations. There no institution for colored people that co make a stronger appeal to the American publi and yet, I think it is also fair to say that th is no similar institution about which the peop as a whole, know less. The romantic story Howard is unknown.

Dr. Leonard recommended "that the U versity enter upon an intensive, well-direct program of educational publicity for a peri of four or five years in which no attempt shou be made to raise funds." He emphasized t importance of "as rapid development as fun will permit, of the work of the Schools Medicine (and allied schools, including Heal and Physical Education), Religion, and Educ tion," which are "of such imperative and co pelling importance as to receive first consider tion."

THE REORGANIZATION

The reorganization which Dr. Leonard recom mended included the merger of the Junior C lege and the School of Commerce and Finan the College of Liberal Arts; a College of cation to include the teacher training work tofore done in the School of Education, the rtment of Art, the Department of Home nomics, and the School of Music; a Col- of Applied Science to include engineering, itecture, art, and home economics. The tees adopted these recommendations. The ose suggested of seeking to make the School eligion "one of the strongest schools in the versity," of encouraging the development of School of Music and the School of Law, and rt study of the School of Medicine before ing into the new building, stand approved. sical education has been put upon the same s as other subjects of study. Teachers' sal- advances and a liberal retirement plan have adopted.

new system of teachers' meetings, univer- and student government, are features of new plans adopted.

adopting Dr. Leonard's recommendation a campaign of education, the trustees ap- ted a committee of nine to have charge of nder the leadership of the President. Dr. kee has been enabled to delegate responsibil- for details of administration, so that he may ree to respond to calls for addresses before ch groups, civic organizations, and others who wish to hear the facts regarding the remarkable development of the colored people, their needs, and dangers, and the romantic story of Howard University. Professor Kelly Miller has been chosen from the faculty to render similar service, as he is well fitted to do. Dr. Emmett J. Scott and Alumni Secretary E. B. Smith also are available for addresses.

The new plans are going into effect this fall. They will reduce expenses, and promise considerable advance in educational effectiveness with higher standards.

Necessarily the services of various teachers and others have been discontinued. A few disgruntled opponents of progress have disapproved the policy and program of University development. There have been unscrupulous attempts to make trouble for the administration, and false and grossly garbled reports of developments in the University have been spread rather widely. All such misguided efforts are already discredited. To continue them could only react against the few who are involved in them.

It is significant that, with higher tuition and stiffer requirements, student applications for admission this fall are pouring in beyond all records; also, there are an astonishing number of applications for teaching positions.

Along Our Stream of Freedom

Fisk Folk Foregather

eleased from the tyranny of the South and conventionalities of the East, the Negro erican is coming to his best in the Middle t—in Chicago—in home-building, in busi- enterprise, in political achievement, and hurch development. In this Negro paradise, first annual meeting of the Allied Fisk os met, Aug. 25, in connection with the teenth anniversary gathering of the National lical Association. The Chicago Fisk Club, L. Foster, president, acted as host.

he resiliency of the Fisk spirit was mani- in the surprisingly large number of Fisk ple who gathered, representing alumni, trus- , faculty, former students, and friends. It the largest single gathering of alumni in history of the school, representing clubs n New York, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, ladelphia, Washington, St. Louis, Gary, hville, Birmingham, Chicago, Galveston, other cities, besides individuals from vari- parts of the nation.

he topics discussed were vital, and the dis- sions were short and to the point. Among topics treated were, "The Outlook at Fisk," Rev. P. E. Baker; "Student Activities," by f. Ambrose Caliver; "Trustees and Alumni," W. H. Baldwin; "The Presidency of Fisk," Prof. H. A. Miller; "Alumni Representa- on the Board of Trustees," by Capt. A. C. tte; "The Financial Campaign," by Dr. F. Stewart; "In Memoriam, Mrs. Booker T. shington," by Mrs. Mame S. Josenberger.

n his opening address the writer, as chair- n, attempted to state the things for which Allied Fisk Clubs stand. Among these were ger liberty and more responsibility for the dent representation of the alumni on the rd of trustees, a modern administrator and cator for president, for a revival of the Fisk rit, and for a permanent organization of the ed clubs.

The news from Fisk was all good news. f. Ambrose Caliver, the colored assistant n, who had charge of the affairs at Fisk ring the summer, stated that the summer ses- n was the largest and best in the history of school, that there had been no rules and disorder during the session. The registration for the coming year was very large; in the case of the girls extra capacity had already been required, and the new emphasis on athletics was attracting a large number of boys. Dr. H. Adolphus Miller, the advisor of the administration, felt that the conditions at Fisk had returned to normalcy, and that there were no insurmountable problems ahead, though much care and caution would be required. Capt. Boutte, representing the alumni, made a telling plea for direct representation on the board of trustees by the alumni, as this would deepen their sense of responsibility and enlist their practical co-operation. Dr. F. A. Stewart of Nashville made an effective plea for generosity in the pending campaign to remove the $100,000 deficit requisite to secure the million dollar endowment fund subscribed. In response to his appeal, those present gave $1,000 in cash, and $4,000 in pledges payable Dec. 1. Miss Sophia Boaz, an alumna, an attorney-at-law of Chicago, was made financial secretary of the Greater Fisk Committee, whose duty it will be to visit centers where Fisk people abound, and complete the $25,000 pledged by the alumni to remove the deficit.

The social features of the occasion were not neglected. The club had dinner together between the afternoon and evening sessions, and a social was tendered the allied clubs at the close of the evening session in one of the palatial homes occupied by the colored people in this progressive city. The present officers were re-elected, and Philadelphia was chosen as the next place of meeting a year hence, when it is hoped the new president will be presented. Meanwhile, the institution will be in charge of an Interim Administration Committe, of which L. Hollingsworth Wood of New York is chairman. With the spirit of co-operation on the part of so many constituent forces at Fisk it seems clear that the new day for Greater Fisk is at hand. One of the ways of reviving the Fisk spirit is to place new emphasis on the observance of Jubilee Day, Oct. 6, when the famous singers left the school to put a new song in the heart of the world. Of these singers only two survive, of whom I shall speak in a subsequent installment.

Chicago, Ill. HENRY HUGH PROCTOR.

On Report of Committee of Twelve

II

One of the frequent comments on the proposals of this report as published is the hope, amounting to expectation, that it will bring about a "simplification" of the appeal of the homeland societies, and result in a diminished overhead organization with a consequent reduced expense.

It is worth while to point out at once that no such result is expected by the committee itself in either regard, and to inquire why this is the fact.

First of all, the committee has realized, as very few of the church constituency have the opportunity to do, the magnitude of the work, its great diversity, and the present efficiency and economy with which it is conducted.

Business men, and particularly those concerned with large affairs, recognize that interests combined under a single management should be homogeneous; or at least should have some single bond of union which relates the parts to one another and is strong enough to subordinate those parts in a single purpose.

Does it seem feasible as a business proposition efficiently to merge:

1. A large insurance enterprise, still in some degree an experiment, and involving many technical questions of difficulty on which actuaries and experts are not yet agreed as to statement or solution.

2. An educational program with at least two distinct functions, at present separately organized:

(a) Specialized schools and colleges with full equipment of teachers and buildings; in part self-supporting, in part subsidized.

(b) Publicity and definite study plans for the missionary and moral instruction of all our churches and Sunday schools. The two lines do not overlap to any large degree, and the pedagogical and personnel problems are of quite different character.

3. A banking, trust company, mortgage business dealing with real estate securities in every state, requiring a high degree of technical skill and knowledge, both in its agents and its supervision. Questions of vital importance as to relative necessities, amounts of advisable expense, validity of titles, departures from ordinary rules of safety, constantly require decision and adjustment.

4. The more purely missionary enterprise; the initiation of a Sunday school before the development is anything more than a vision of the pioneers; the nursing and fostering of the weak purpose of the little group without an adequate leadership; the guiding of the increasing consciousness until it can take its own share of responsibilities.

5. In each of the lines of activity named above there are varying financial problems of budget, promotion, and investment involved. If all the societies are brought together, these complex questions would be superimposed upon the others indicated. The matters of investment alone involve the constant supervision of some sixteen millions of dollars, and now employ the specialized services, given without cost, of more than a score of laymen, in addition to the officers who utilize their skill and execute their decisions.

These five distinct and essentially different lines are clearly evident as we examine our present denominational work. Is there any such powerful unifying force, common to all, as will subordinate them into a single unit?

Can any board of directors be found who can efficiently manage such diverse interests, turning attention within the hour from one to another with clear knowledge and assured judgment?

Is it not certain that such an attempt will inevitably tend to confusion and friction, and result in practical delegation of decisions and powers to a bureaucracy, so necessary and so intrenched as to make our present organization look exceedingly simple by contrast?

The proposed solution of our problems is no real solution at all! Why not ask our committee, or a successor, to study them for other two years, and during that time see the benefit of the experience of other denominations who may meanwhile have had valu lessons from which we should profit?

ENQUIRING LAYMA

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council in October

Agrees with Committee of Twelve

Should there be but one Home Board?

Yes.

I favor the proposition of uniting the Missionary Herald and the American Missionary into a monthly edition of The Congregationalist. If we had one magazine, missions would then seem, as they should, the work of the church instead of a thing aside, or added on, in which a few exceptional people are interested. Another advantage is that it would be an easier matter to secure subscriptions for one magazine, and many good things would have a reading that under our present arrangement do not.

If the women are to "get under the task of the whole church" their approach should be not from without but from within. Why make any sex discrimination at all since we are all citizens together in the Kingdom of God? I am not a "woman's rights" advocate, but am puzzled that there should be such an issue as woman representation in Council or on boards. My mind and heart are neither masculine nor feminine.

I am in hearty agreement with the latest report of the Committee of Twelve, which reads: "We express the hope that ultimately there will be in each state a single organization of women in co-operation with the state conference for the furtherance of the entire missionary program of the denomination. This organization might well follow the course already laid out and effectively traveled by the women's missionary organizations, which has been largely educational and promotional.

"Interest in missions" would, I feel, receive a mighty impulse by the mere act of our coming together.

MRS. HENRY FRANCIS SMITH.

West Medford, Mass.

A Possible Irreparable Mistake

The proposed merger of our three denominational publications seems to me a move in the wrong direction. The names, The Congregationalist, Missionary Herald, and American Missionary, are great business assets. Each is the result of slow growth through many years. They are deep-bedded in our thought and in our hearts. They are the embodiment of priceless sacrifices and sufferings. One cannot mention the American Missionary without thinking of those heroic figures: General O. O. Howard, the one-armed hero of the Civil War; General Armstrong, executive of rare ability, whose name is enshrined at Hampton; and of men like Dr. Cravath, Dr. DeForest, and Secretary Charles J. Ryder, who gave their lives in glorious service for their fellowmen. While the name of the Missionary Herald recalls the deeds and fame of such a host of our "immortals" that here is not space to begin a list of their imperishable names.

Now it is proposed to scrap these great assets in the interest of economy and to secure a wider reading of one publication. After much observation of merger attempts, I fully believe that it will not work out successfully. Our people are not sheep who can be easily driven. The giving up of these less expensive and greatly loved publications will lose the major part of their subscribers, while adding a small number of names to The Congregationalist family. The attempt to replace them by certain issues of a magazine form of The Congregationalist may hold a few more. But I believe the losses will greatly outweigh the gains. If it were the other way around and the three could be fused into a dollar publication, the numbers desired might be obtained, if we could have a worthwhile sheet at that price. But in these times that is a practical impossibility. We would either have an unworthy publication at the low figure in the effort to secure numbers, or a worth-while publication at a higher price with the loss of the major part of the subscribers to the Missionary Herald and the American Missionary. Each of our three publications is improving in appearance and quality. Is it not the part of wisdom to keep them as they are and strive to make them better? Ought not all ministers to bring their great worth to the attention of church members? I say do this and subsidize them so far as necessary from our denominational budget. What they give us is the finest kind of advertising and worth far more to the Congregational body than the sum of money involved.

Then a few years hence, when the ministerial and relief funds are in good shape, a fund could easily be raised which would fully care for the present deficit and leave the three publications to go on their way, the honor and delight of our denomination. But, if theorists handle the situation, too late they may get newspaper experience and the denomination sustain irreparable loss.

Mattapan, Mass. FRANK H. KASSON.

President Woolley Is Nominated

I would nominate for the office of Moderator of the National Council President Mary E. Woolley, LL.D., Litt.D., of Mount Holyoke College. It is full time we elected a woman to fill this, the highest office in the gift of our denomination. Three years ago the Baptists elected Mrs. Montgomery of Rochester, N. Y., to fill a similar office.

Then, too, it is the time of Massachusetts. No one from that great Congregational state has filled that office for thirty-three years.

Northfield, Vt. CHARLES C. CREEGAN.

Favors General Mergers

I want to register my most hearty approval to any and all plans which tend toward merging all our publications into one (The Congregationalist) and all our societies likewise into one.

The general trend has been for some time to centralize, and the only criticism is that it moves too slow. Could we not in some way really do more and talk less?

From the published rosters in The Congregationalist there is shown fifteen societies and commissions, not counting minor departments. In them are listed some over fifty different officers, eliminating names that appear twice. I judge this means a very heavy expense for not only salaries, traveling expenses, hotel bills, etc., but also office hire, office secretar stenographers, clerks, and office maintena There must be considerable duplication of fort and expense which could be eliminated consolidation, and I believe without serious riment, as while some losses might appear the surface, there would be gains to more t offset.

To use a term I have never liked in refer to Christian work of the church, I say by means "sell" every one of the separate socie and organizations to the National Council, in such a way that it will be impossible new ones to spring up. This plan, if adopt would enable us as churches to progress affairs in a systematic and modern business and would entirely do away with the frequ criticisms we now have of too much admi tration expense.

Concord, N. H. JOSEPH BENTON

A Progressive Stand

Should the Presbyterians and Congregati alists unite?

Yes.

What should Congregationalists say on p lic questions? For example, social reforms, ter-racial, international questions?

They have taken a progressive stand, should continue to do so.

How can the energies of our laymen be m largely utilized?

By cutting out theology.

What should be the relation of the woma organizations to the general organizations of church, locally, state-wide, and nationally?

Same as at present.

Should there be but one Board of Fore Missions?

Yes.

Should there be but one Home Board?

Yes.

Should the Foundation for Education merged with the Education Society?

Yes.

Is there any reason why the Annuity Fu and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not administered by the same organization?

No.

Shall we lose interest in missions if we less the number of specific objects in the Apportio ment by merging some of the societies?

No.

Should the "Missionary Herald" and t "American Missionary" be united into one ma azine, or become a monthly edition of "T Congregationalist"?

Yes.

Are we over-emphasizing the State Confe ence in our present organization?

No.

Should each society approach the local churc and the individual Congregationalist in the i terest of its own receipts, or should all comm the major portion of their cultivation of incom to a common agency working in co-operatio with the State Conference?

All depends upon the efficiency of the variou State Conferences.

Babson Park, Mass. ROGER W. BABSON.

Northfield's General Conference

Inspiring Meeting of Christian Workers

By George L. Cassidy

NCE more the Northfield General Conference for Christian Workers has added after a session that was, perhaps, one he most valuable of all the forty-three held e the first call was sent out by Dwight L. ody, the evangelist, 45 years ago. From the meeting in the Northfield Auditorium Saty evening, Aug. 1, until the final gathering Sunday evening, Aug. 16, the atmosphere he conference was one of earnest seeking r Christian truth.

oth in opening the first meeting of the ses- and in closing the last, William R. Moody, of the late Dwight L. Moody, who has been rman of the conferences for over a quarter a century, reaffirmed the principles which e ever been as a star to guide the leaders at thfield. These principles, as Mr. Moody exsed them, are a common loyalty to Jesus ist, to his deity, to his sacrificial death, to his resurrection. Thus, standing firmly he tsrength of the Northfield tradition, the gates and speakers, although representing, n the years before, all denominations and ing points of view, allowed no differences loud their vision in the search for closer wship with God and greater power to do work.

t the first meeting of the session, Rev. es Reid, M.A., minister of St. Andrew's sbyterian Church, Eastbourne, England, conred to be one of the ablest expositors of the ptures preaching in the British Isles to- delivered a sermon that proved to be the ce and explanation of the subsequent course he conference. Mr. Reid took as his text hrase from one of Christ's own prayers, r their sakes, I sanctify myself." He pointed that there is no true sanctity unless it be lfish, that a man cannot do good for others ss he is good himself, and that in order to good in a true sense he must do good acly, not for the sake of doing good or of g good as an end in itself, but rather out a real love for God through mankind.

his conception of sanctification immediately gests two needs—the need of learning ough inspiration and prayer the way God ld have us go, and the need of knowing how help others to learn this secret also. The conference, many who were present believe, more particularly supplied the first of these needs in the general meetings held in the Auditorium, in the Bible study hours, and at the services on Round Top Hill; the second in the special ministers' meetings that took place in the Russell Sage Chapel.

Among those who addressed the conference were Rev. John A. Hutton, D.D., pastor of the Westminster Congregational Chapel, London, England; Rev. W. Fearon Halliday, lecturer in theology in Selly Oak Colleges, Birmingham, England; Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, D.D., pastor-elect of Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York City; Melvin E. Trotter, superintendent of the City Mission, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Rev. James Reid, M.A., pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Eastbourne, England; and William Louis Poteat, LL.D., president of Wake Forest College, Wake Forest, N. C.

Hutton and Halliday

Dr. Hutton turned his discourses on the problems of everyday life and upon those larger problems which sometimes make it harder for us to deal with them. To this task, Dr. Hutton brought not only a wealth of experience, a felicity of expression, a keen mind, and deep erudition, but also a camaraderie with his hearers, won through the years that he has been a familiar figure at the General Conference. Once more he showed himself to be a worthy successor to that other man of wisdom, Dr. John H. Jowett, who preceded him in the pastorate at Westminster.

Especially memorable was Dr. Hutton's sermon on the text, "Take thou thy share of hardness," in which he made to live again in the minds and hearts of his audience the sense of fortitude in the love of God that Paul, somehow, struck into the spirits of the members of the early Christian Church in those dark days when hope almost seemed gone.

Mr. Halliday spoke but twice in the auditorium, both times on the interpretation of the character and meaning of Jesus. His other addresses were given before the ministers and at special meetings for women. Mr. Halliday, since his graduation from Trinity College, Dublin, where he won high distinction in philosophy, has come to be considered one of the foremost authorities on the new psychology in England; and for this reason few men could have been better prepared to deal with the subject of his lectures to the ministers—that of Pastoral Psychology."

Beginning by laying a foundation in the elements of psychology, by defining what the science studies and explaining something of the methods it uses, he gave his hearers sufficient understanding of certain established facts and principles to enable them to use their knowledge safely and with real effect in their ministry. Throughout the course he was careful to show how the use of psychology may be made to clear away obstacles in the minds of the doubters so that they be made receptive to Christianity.

Poteat and Fosdick

William Louis Poteat, LL.D., president of Wake Forest College, delivered a series of four addresses before the ministers on "The Layman's Approach to Religion," bringing to his treatment of his subject not only the knowledge that has made him one of the outstanding biologists of this country, but also his experience as an educator, and the insight into religious problems gained from his long study as Brooks Lecturer on science and religion at Hamilton Theological Seminary. Dr. Poteat, after tracing the growth of science and its results upon daily life, defined it as dealing with externals in contradistinction to religion, which deals with internals. Thus, he pointed out that, in his opinion, science and religion, as such, cannot conflict, although the powers given by science must be used always in accord with the will of God.

Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, D.D., delivered three addresses before the ministers on the mornings of Aug. 11, 12, and 13. His subject was "How to Reach the Younger Generation," and, having shown how the materialistic attitude of the age has brought about materialistic philosophies, explained that there are certain misconceptions concerning Christianity that are keeping the younger generation somewhat aloof. One of these, he said, is that Christianity is a religion of repression, whereas, in truth, it is a religion of power and full development. He concluded his lectures with suggestions as to the best methods of dispelling these false ideas.

Among the speakers who addressed the full conference in the auditorium, one who spoke most frequently, with the exception of Mr. Reid, who gave daily discourses upon the Beatitudes, was Melvin E. Trotter, superintendent of the City Mission, Grand Rapids, Mich. Mr. Trotter, who recently returned from a tour of the Holy Land, dealt with the homely yet vital problems which he is so eminently fitted to discuss, bringing to his preaching the same abundance of happy illustration and strength of conviction that has made him so great an instrument for good during his many years of visiting at Northfield.

During the whole length of the session, Northfield presented an active, earnest, and beautiful picture. Everywhere one looked, at the hours when lectures were not being given, one could see groups of delegates standing discussing the words of the speakers or sitting on the greensward or on the verandas, reading. Presently the chimes in Russell Sage Chapel would ring out to tell of the next gathering, and the groups would break up and move toward the place of meeting, whether in the chapel itself, in the Auditorium, or on Round Top Hill.

The number of those who attended the conference varied from 1,000 to 2,500 daily, and it was usual to serve meals on the campus itself to 800 or more persons. On Sundays and frequently for the evening meetings, persons motored from more than 75 miles distant to hear the sermons in the Auditorium. Again, as in past years, thousands of persons carried away from Northfield new peace and new strength, having for a time forgotten their strifes and difficulties in a closer fellowship with God and a renewed apprehension of his Son.

The Chapel and Gould Hall at Northfield

Congregationalists at Chautauqua

Congregationalists from many states gathered at the Golf Club House at Chautauqua, N. Y., to enjoy the banquet held in connection with the annual meeting of the Chautauqua Congregational House Association. Charles C. Creegan, D.D., president, was toastmaster, and among the speakers were President Arthur Bestor of Chautauqua Institution, Miss Anna Gordon, president of the International W. C. T. U., Carl S. Voss, D.D., representing the group of German churches to be received into the fellowship of the National Council, Rev. Raymond G. Clapp, principal of the Schauffler School, Henry M. Tenney, D.D., Miss Maud Bradley, Providence, R. I., Miss Sarah Bement of China, Rev. E. M. Merriam, Rev. C. Rexford Raymond, Greeley, Col., and Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, general secretary of the C. W. H. M. F. Music was under the direction of Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston. A hopeful tone was given to the meeting by the resolution unanimously passed by the board of trustees and approved by those present to undertake the raising of a building fund for a missions house, to cost about $35,000, adequate to house our missionaries and for similar uses. Further to encourage the project, substantial pledges were received from some of the friends present and the invitation to share financially is extended to all friends of our missionaries at home and abroad. Checks may be sent to C. W. Savage, Oberlin, O.

Beautifully situated on Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., is a great educational institution which offers hospitality to more than 50,000 people who gather in its grounds every season to enjoy a fine program of music, lectures, pictures, and dramatics, and to avail themselves of the opportunity for religious education and mission study under leadership pre-eminent in these fields of investigation and study. All prominent Christian denominations are represented on the Chautauqua platform, and most of them have erected and maintained mission houses and accommodate their own missionaries, ministers, and mission workers during the season. Congregationalists were the first to establish denominational headquarters at Chautauqua and own two small cottages, inadequate, making no appeal, but facing the great amphitheater and in the best location on the grounds.

The evolution of the Chautauqua Institution from a popular assembly whose primary objective was the Sunday school, to a great summer university and especially the organization and development of the Chautauqua School of Religion, with its missionary institutes, home and foreign, led to a change in the name of the Congregational organization. Organized August 7, 1878, as the Chautauqua Congregational Sunday School Congress, it is now the Chautauqua Congregational Association. The trustees of the Chautauqua Congregational House have appealed to the denomination for a better building, adequate for the uses of a missions house, through the Woman's Home Missionary Federation and the Promotional Cabinet of the Commission on Missions. Both bodies appointed committees to consider the appeal and report. The committee of the cabinet, including in its membership Dr. E. M. Halliday and Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, both of New York, Mrs. William G. Erb, Buffalo, Dr. Robert G. Armstrong, Wellsville, Mr. Walter Roberts, New York, Mr. Luther, Ohio, Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, New York, chairman, is seeking information as to the opportunity and method of financing.

The following program for the Home Missions Institute was successfully carried out. It was conducted by the Council of Women for Home Missions, Aug. 15-21, with Mrs. John Ferguson, president of the Council, presiding:

Theme: "The Slav in America."

Text Books: Peasant Pioneers (for adults), by Kenneth D. Miller; High Adventure (for intermediates), by Fjeril Hess; Better Americans, No. 3 (for leaders of juniors), by Herbert Wright Gates.

Faculty: Mission Study Course, Mrs. Dan B. Brummitt, Chicago, Ill.; Adult Methods, Mrs. J. M. Stearns, St. Louis, Mo.; Junior Methods, Miss Maude E. Bradley, Providence, R. I.

On the Program: Judge James C. Cropsey the New York Supreme Court; Miss Ag Laut, author and lecturer; Rev. Aaron W. M dox, Superintendent of Lumber Camp Wo Synod of New York, Presbyterian Church the U. S. A.; Dr. G. Clyde Fisher, Americ Museum of Natural History, New York; Channing Tobias, Secretary Colored Work partment, National Council, Y. M. C. A.; R Kenneth D. Miller, Associate Director, Depa ment of City, Immigrant, and Industrial Wo Board of National Missions, Presbyteri Church in the U. S. A.; President Henry Southwick, Emerson College of Oratory, B ton, Mass.; Mrs. Ruth Mougey Worrell, p eant, "The Kingdom of Love," Farm and C nery Migrants: "The Home Land in Song a Worship." Prof. H. Augustine Smith, directe "Alaska." Miss Florence E. Quinlan, Executi Secretary, Council of Women for Home M sions.

English Coal and Trade

Some European Impressions

By B. F. Stanton

Superintendent of Schools, Alliance, Ohio

A GROUP of about 100 men and women from the United States have been studying European problems this summer, under the experienced and able leadership of Sherwood Eddy. Those composing this party were chiefly ministers and educators. They came from Oregon and California, from Texas and Minnesota, and from most of the New England, Central, and Western states. London, Berlin, Prague, Geneva, and Paris were visited. At London the meetings were held in the East End at Toynbee Hall, a famous settlement center known throughout the world. The sojourn here lasted from July 7 to July 23. The group was addressed by distinguished men and women, including Mr. Arthur Greenwood, Dr. Frank Norwood of London Temple, Lord Thompson, Studdert Kennedy, and Mr. Keer, former secretary to Lloyd George, and by many others.

The Coal Problem

We learned that two problems are on the British mind and awaiting solution. These are the industrial situation and the international relations with countries of the Continent, especially Germany. As to the former there is grave concern. The number of unemployed in England is estimated at 1,250,00 with perhaps 300,000 of these in the coal industry. The situation in the mines is becoming acute. We were told of many mines running at a loss. A serious situation is on between the miners and operators which is receiving much attention in the press and in public thought.

Within the past ten years the coal production of the world has decreased but slightly while that of England is estimated to have dropped off by twenty per cent. Many countries in the Southern Hemisphere, such as Africa and Australia, have begun to produce coal in considerable quantities and this has materially affected the markets for English coal.

What is the solution? Two propositions are receiving attention. One would seek to recover the markets for coal by producing it more cheaply. Markets, generally speaking, belong to those producers who can place their products on sale at the lowest price, quality being conceded. If the miners, therefore, can accept a lower wage and other economies can be practical, the markets may be captured by British coal. To this suggestion the miners object on the ground of an inadequate wage if such procedure is followed.

Another suggestion coming from the miners, and shared by many, is the nationalizing of the mines. Some admit that too much coal now being produced, that industry is not co suming the present output. Oil has come be used quite extensively as fuel and, the fore, unless the demand for coal is increas the production must in a measure be curtail How may the demand be increased? Th answer, "By developing cheap power for En lish industries." England has no Niagara harness and thus derive cheap power, but s has coal. Therefore, build great power plan in which English coal is consumed in the d velopment of power. Thus will the dema for coal be increased and the miners will aga have work.

So far as a casual observer could ascertai there is an honest and serious purpose on t part of all classes to find a solution of the problems. And I may add, this is the first a essential step to its solution. A further fa impresssed one, and that was the fine spir shown by the English people. They are n dodging the issue nor trying to sidestep it. th are good sportsmen. If serious times are ahe they will face them resolutely.

International Trade

The other issue is international. The indu trial situation is affected partly by this. T English feel there is no ultimate and perm nent prosperity until Europe is again at wor and prosperous. One meets the idea that slowl but surely Europe is coming back, and the again he catches a note of pessimism and di couragement. The question of markets an trade relations is becoming a complex thin Without an easy flow of products through th channels of trade the greatest prosperity ca hardly come. There is a tendency on the pa of the nations, natural enough, to secure the markets from outside competition by tariff pr visions until it interferes with trade and tend to impair general prosperity. That present con ditions obtain nearly seven years after the wa need not cause us to wonder. I fear there a tendency to forget that such an ordeal as th World War cannot be indulged in without serious aftermath. Such enormous losses i life and prosperity leave their effects. A treat of peace cannot be signed today and the worl be expected to resume its accustomed ways to morrow. Readjustment takes time. That ther should still be poverty and unemployment nee not surprise one. It is a part of the penalty o such an indulgence as the World War.

In Germany there is an appearance of pros

(Continued on page 383)

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Good Citizenship

IC SOCIOLOGY, by EDWARD ALSWORTH (World Book Co. $1.80). This text- in social and civil problems for young cans, by one of America's most eminent gists, the well-known professor of soci- in the University of Wisconsin, needs no of commendation. Its title and the name author are sufficient to indicate its im- ce in its field. Dr. Ross is one of the pen-minded and impartial of social inves- rs. His method in this volume is to ch social and civic problems by examin- e trends in America which have produced problems and the probable effect of pres- ndencies. He seeks to identify the big ms and accords them special treatment. he volume is particularly valuable for the n which it emphasizes and expounds in- nt, public-spirited citizenship as the basal in the solution of social problems and attainment of real progress. Such chap- s Standards of Social Distinction, Willing ence to Law, and Independence are espe- noteworthy for their needed exposition of ideals.

IZENSHIP, by MILTON BENNION (World Co. $1.40). An Introduction to Social s is the sub-title of this volume by the of the School of Education in the Uni- y of Utah. It is a revised and enlarged n of a book first published in 1917. In- d primarily as a text-book, it will be found ble for the ordinary reader. Part I deals The Social Inheritance and Political Prob- Part II with The Responsibilities of Citi- ip, and a third part is devoted to lesson ies.

Biography

HN A. BRASHEAR: THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MAN WHO LOVED THE STARS, edited by LUCIEN SCAIFE (Houghton Mifflin. $4.00). many Americans know of John A. hear? His name certainly has not been usehold word in America, yet he was un- tedly one of the greatest men that this try has produced. Charles M. Schwab de- ed him as "the greatest man I ever knew." hould not consider Mr. Schwab a conspicu- authority upon spiritual worth, but John rashear's achievement speaks for itself, as hese pages, and to those who knew him, imple dignity of a noble character speaks he man apart from his achievement. The of the achievement, and that of the man, make this a notable autobiography and hat we can recommend with confidence to reader. It is the story of a boy whose of the stars, carried over into the soul of mple millwright, made him the world's nost maker of astronomical lenses and in- nents of precision. Dr. Brashear died be- the completion of his autobiography but eft ample materials to supplement his . The narrative of his life is told so estly that but for an added note by an- hand the reader would not know that celebration of "Brashear Day" had been a ure of the Panama-Pacific International osition, and the Governor of Pennsylvania proclaimed him as the state's "most dis- ished citizen." This is the sort of record profoundly strengthens one's faith in his wmen.

these days when ideals of success are associated with so much that is questionable or ignoble it is inspiring to read of a man who, in the midst of the greatest achievement, which brought him the friendship of the great and the learned, preserved the simplicity of moral worth and the high ideals of unselfishness and service. In the quality of his outlook on life and of his relations with his fellowmen, no less than in the purity and beauty of his home and private relationships, Brashear was a man of distinction in his age. His autobiography ought to live in American literature as an evidence of that high ideal which finds its satisfaction in the blending of scientific and mechanical achievement with successful living.

MARION LAWRANCE, by his son, HAROLD G. LAWRANCE (Revell. $4.00).

MY MESSAGE TO SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS, by MARION LAWRANCE (Doran. $2.00 net).

The first of these books is the authoritative biography of the greatest figure in Sunday school work in his generation. The latter is a collection of his 25 greatest addresses. Together one has before him the life story of the man, and his message. The influence of that life and that message will endure.

The late Marion Lawrance was a native of Ohio and began his work as a Sunday school leader there. From the superintendency of his school in Washington Street Congregational Church, Toledo, he was called to state leadership and then to international leadership of the organized Sunday school movement. He devoted his life to this great, constructive task with earnestness and complete devotion to the end. His successor is Dr. Hugh S. Magill, General Secretary of the International Council of Religious Education.

Mr. Lawrance was a man of strong friendships, deep human sympathy, a passion for service, and Christian faith and character which dominated his life. He was an inspiring leader and a wisely constructive one. His addresses are simple, direct, and practical. Every Sunday school worker should read the story of his life, and his message, which comprise a liberal education in modern Sunday school methods and objectives.

PASCAL D'ANGELO: SON OF ITALY (Macmillan. $2.00). "The autobiography of the pick-and-shovel poet" is another interesting and inspiring chapter in the records of literary and spiritual achievement by those immigrants, handicapped by a new environment and the need of acquiring a new and difficult language, who find none the less in America the inspiration and opportunity to triumph over hindrances and win the success of fame and recognition, as well as in some cases, and in that of D'Angelo, the surer and solider success of real accomplishment. We commend this graphic, naïve, delightful story to all "100 per cent. Americans." The real 100-per-centers will read it with joyous, welcoming hearts, and the sham 100-per-centers may by chance get a glimpse of the true worth of a "foreigner."

VONDEL, by A. J. BARNOUW (Scribners. $2.00). How much we lose through the diversity of language is emphasized in this biographical volume in the Great Hollanders series, edited by Edward W. Bok. Mr. Bok truly says that the average American will read in this volume, probably for the first time, of this remarkable Hollander who, he says, was pre-eminent in Dutch literature, and "stood in the realm of letters where Rembrandt stood in the realm of art." "Lucifer," Vondel's dramatic triumph, Mr. Bok characterizes as "one of the greatest tragedies in verse in the literature of the world." Yet Vondel lived in an age—the last decade of the 16th century and more than three-quarters of the 17th—when his work was not only unappreciated, but his life was an amazing struggle for existence. The remarkable nature of Vondel's genius and experiences, added to the fact that so little is known to the English-speaking world concerning him, should give to this excellent biography an interest intensified by an element of novelty and discovery. The author is Queen Wilhelmina Professor at Columbia University.

A Singing Evangelist

GEORGE C. STEBBINS: REMINISCENCES AND GOSPEL HYMN STORIES (Doran. $3.00 net). George C. Stebbins is the sole surviving member of the famous group of evangelists headed by Dwight L. Moody. He tells much of his own life story and significant incidents in the lives of the men whom he knew, and with whom he worked. He was a singer and leader of Gospel singing; he also made some important contributions to the religious music of his day, his compositions including "Jesus Is Calling," "In the Secret of His Presence," "Saved by Grace," "Throw Out the Lifeline," and "I've Found a Friend." He shared in the editorship of the well-known Gospel Hymns, used in the Moody campaigns, with Ira D. Sankey and James McGranahan. These reminiscences include intimate sketches of Mr. Moody, Mr. Sankey, Charles H. Gabriel, Dr. George F. Root, Charles M. Alexander, Dr. George F. Pentecost, Major Daniel W. Whittle, Spurgeon, Drummond, Fanny Crosby, Gen. O. O. Howard, and many other inspiring personalities. Especially noteworthy are those relating to Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey.

Unitarian History and Opinion

THE LIBERAL GOSPEL, as set forth in the writings of WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, edited by CHARLES H. LYTTLE (Beacon Press. $2.00). Many outside of the Unitarian fellowship will welcome this interpretation of Channing, with the collection of extracts from his writings arranged under topical headings. On the whole, however, if one wants to know Channing, or any other man, there is a great deal in favor of going to the original sources. As the sources of the extracts in this anthology are everywhere indicated, Dr. Lyttle's collection may have the effect of leading the reader back to Channing's collected works, an experience amply rewarding for every Christian, as many of us would testify.

OUR UNITARIAN HERITAGE, by EARL MORSE WILBUR (Beacon Press. $2.00). The president of the Pacific Unitarian School for the Ministry, in this volume of nearly 500 pages, while presenting "an introduction to the history of the Unitarian Movement" intended primarily for young people of sixteen or seventeen years, in reality has written a history of Unitarianism which will be found invaluable for every student of that phase of faith and experience regardless of the extent of his previous knowledge of the subject. President Wilbur says that Unitarians who best understand their movement attach much less importance today to Unitarian theistic doctrine "than to certain fundamental principles of religion, centering around freedom and reason." The defect of the present volume is that these principles are considered too exclusively as expressions of Unitarianism. A history of the progress of freedom and reason in religion would have to take under its survey a much wider field than that covered in a distinctive history of Unitarianism. However, one would not in any way minimize the place of Unitarianism and of Unitarians in the struggle for freedom of mind and conscience, and a history that sets forth the distinctive facts of Unitarian history and development will be welcomed by all who see in the expression of honest conviction the true manifestation of the religious spirit.

A Christian Endeavor Textbook

PROGRESSIVE ENDEAVOR, by AMOS R. WELLS (United Society of Christian Endeavor). This is a manual of Christian Endeavor principles with just enough "citation of methods to make clear how the principles work out in experience." The author's statement that "the principles of Christian Endeavor are in exact harmony with all the discoveries of psychology and the laws of pedagogy," seems convincing. This book is intended for pastors, students, Christian workers, and the Endeavorers themselves. It is written in the terse, direct form of questions and answers, and it is thoroughgoing and comprehensive. Some of the many "hows" of Christian Endeavor are these: How it develops self-expression, breadth of vision, fidelity, financial ability, denominational loyalty, fellowship, devotional life, leadership, ability to speak and pray in public, the evangelistic spirit, ability to use the Bible, musical and social ability, and capacity for large affairs. The adaptability of Christian Endeavor to different types of churches and for different and changing conditions is emphasized and explained. This book will help to answer the questions and criticisms of those who do not approve of Christian Endeavor, and will help to make more effective the efforts of those who are engaged in Christian Endeavor work. It is a companion volume to the methods textbook, Expert Endeavor, also by Professor Wells, who is the well-known editor of the Christian Endeavor World, and author of much other Christian Endeavor literature, and he writes with authority.

Miscellaneous

THE FUN AND PHILOSOPHY OF SAFED THE SAGE, by WILLIAM E. BARTON (Pilgrim Press. $1.25). This is the fifth series of Safed's Parables. The book contains some parables that have not appeared in the regular series. See editorial paragraph for further notice.

THE AMERICAN STATES, DURING AND AFTER THE REVOLUTION, 1775-1789, by ALLAN NEVINS (Macmillan. $4.00). We wish that all books that emanate from Roman Catholic sources were as worthy of commendation as this excellent volume, published in the Knights of Columbus Historical Series. A substantial volume of nearly 750 pages, it presents in well-written and attractive form those backgrounds of state history which are exceedingly important in relation to the Republic which the states later formed. The period was one in which political unity developed out of much controversy and diversity of opinion, and no little distrust and conflict. Mr. Nevins' work is based upon wide and thorough reading of the best sources of history for the various colonies and also on a large measure of direct research. He has approached his task conscientiously and has performed it in a commendably tolerant and irenical spirit. The volume will prove very helpful for those who wish to gain an adequate view of the whole movement that issued in American independence, and the conditions under which that movement had its growth.

THE PILGRIMAGE OF HENRY JAMES, by VAN WYCK BROOKS (Dutton. $2.50). A careful, penetrating analysis of one of the most remarkable pilgrims and pilgrimages of modern times, and the story of resulting disillusionment. No contrast is greater than that between the wholesome Americanism of William James and the would-be exotic genius of his equally famous brother. As a matter of fact Henry James was never a true exotic. He never freed himself from the American scene, and despite his expatriation it is as an American writer that he will go down to fame. Mr. Brooks portrays the tragedy that attended his success. He speaks of Henry James as at last, "baffled, inflexible, out of touch with crude actuali and forced to live in a world of his own cr tion," "a symbol of a lost cause, a great, most legendary figure in the world of art."

SCHOOL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN PEOP by CHARLES L. ROBBINS (World Book $1.72). A history following the topical meth intended particularly for upper gramm grades and junior high schools. It appeals us as an exceedingly fine text book, keepi American affairs in the foreground, but e phasizing a world point of view, and confini itself to the facts in discussing wars, and oth episodes, where school histories are apt to ploit and distort the incidents in behalf of fa ideas of patriotism. The illustrations excellent.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Review of the Quarter's Lessons
The Power of the Gospel

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for September 27

In reviewing the quarter's lessons, as in contemplating the lessons of the coming quarter, too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the study of the lessons with careful reference to the map, and with effort to secure all information that throws light upon the places visited by Paul, and upon the conditions in the early church as established in these places. It is only in this way that one can get adequate glimpses into the personal aspect of Paul's ministry and into the nature and details of early church organization. Frequently in these matters the Bible is its own best interpreter. It is surprising how much light is often thrown upon any individual passage when one reads in connection with it all the Biblical references to a place mentioned. Paul's ministry at Philippi, for instance, should be examined in relation to the study of the Epistles to the Philippians, and with reference to every mention of Philippi in Scriptures. The same is true of Thessalonica and of Corinth and of Ephesus and of the places mentioned in the lessons of the coming quarter. In addition to this, every mention of a personal name or particular topic or problem should be followed up with a good Bible index. The use of a Concordance may be found very valuable in revealing a wider discussion of the matter under comment.

It will be found very instructive and helpful as well to get some adequate historical and descriptive note regarding the places Paul visited and the general situation, type of population, government, etc., at the time of Paul's life. Such help can easily be found in an average Bible Dictionary or in some good Life of St. Paul. An excellent Life of Paul for ordinary use in such a way is that, recently reviewed in The Congregationalist, by C. T. Wood, entitled The Life, Letters, and Religion of St. Paul. This book, published by T. and T. Clark in Edinburgh, has been issued in America by Scribners, and may be ordered from the Pilgrim Press Book Store. Any good life of Paul, however, is apt to present such information. The reader would find it helpful to consult a general encyclopedia for reference to Athens, Corinth, Ephesus, Rome, and other outstanding centers of Paul's ministry.

The general theme of last quarter's lessons, the power of the Gospel, is not confined to the lessons of that particular quarter. In fact t end of the quarter marks no break in the co nection of these studies. It is instructive realize how much the story of the ea church, especially in its planting and grow in Europe, is directly the story of the Apos Paul. His companions, of course, are i cluded in his undertaking, and Paul hims has indicated how largely he depended up the loyalty and help of others, of Barnabas fi of all, and later of Silas and Timothy.

The Christian Church in its history bea witness to the power of Christian individualis In these days when the social aspects of orga ization are being everywhere emphasized, is worth while to grasp this fact. Paul, course, laid the supreme emphasis upon t social aspect of the Gospel. He would no dou have declared that what he himself had a complished was the privilege of every Chr tian, for he regarded his work as that of weak man who had found strength only in t surrendering of himself to the power of G (2 Cor. 12: 8-10). Probably Paul was n quite right in this judgment for he had a nat ral endowment vouchsafed to few men. sheer physical constitution he must have be a man of iron to stand his constant journeyin and his difficult experiences. But broadly spea ing Paul was right in his contention that f every man there is possible a career of pow and glory if he will surrender his life to t power of the Gospel and become an instr ment, or medium, of the expression of th power among men. We miss entirely the re effect of the teachings of these lessons on t power of the Gospel unless we individualize well as socialize the meaning. Paul himself h given us very fine glimpses into the nature the early church; the type of people in whoi it had its growth, and through whom its powe was achieved.

The church is the one great democratic in stitution of history preceding all modern ex periments in democracy. In an age when mo ern ideals of freedom and democracy were al most unknown, the church manifested the rich ness of its life and the power of its ideals i the building up, out of relationships in whic lowly people, even slaves, were associated wit others of intellect and rank, of a democracy o spiritual communion in worship and service The careful study of the growth of the churc under the power of the Gospel must surely b one of the most necessary and effective way of seeking to attain and express the power o the Gospel in the modern church.

UR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

The Blind Spot

of the Invalid Parish correspondents of "unwanted advice and the remedies riends importune us to try." It is some- very hard for an individual to pursue the that is wise, because his advisers are so nt. A bundle of muscles whose pastime ng urges strenuous physical exercise upon ho remembers that a little overdoing in tter of exercise sent him to bed for weeks, metimes for months, at a stretch. An- person, not knowing at all the nature of lment, advises electricity, or a new kind tor with some odd name, or hot baths, or ouches, or a patent medicine, or the giving doctors and medicines entirely. One men- lls the invalid he sleeps too much, and get up and stir around; another urges a g Southern climate.

physical eye is not the only part of most that has a blind spot. The blind spot in nd is far more serious. It keeps us from when to speak and when to withhold. ps us from perceiving the sensitive places er people. It leads us to offend when we ersuaded ourselves that we are trying to It spoils friendships, it makes us ob- s to strangers, it embitters family rela- ips.

a rule a person is not conscious that he blind spot, physically, until he loses the f one eye. Then he discovers that when s to read, for instance, part of the word e unseen unless he moves his eye to a nt point of view. He reads the word then he shifts his eye and finds that he have read blight. It would be well for f us if we should discover, in like man- nat sometimes what we think is light in aracter or habit is really a blight. The of advice may be a light, and it may be t. The person who comes with the com- t assurance of vigorous health, and makes hand amateur diagnosis based on his own s, is likely to hurt more than he helps. e other hand, where should we be if we t learn from other people's experience? eeker for health must listen eagerly to , and be ready to act on it frankly, at the time keeping his independence of judg- and not being afraid to act contrary to inion of all men if that seems right. Seek- isdom wherever it can be had, he must thing that seems likely, no matter what may think, to make his life most useful ost wholesome.

vever much he may be dependent upon people for help in practical ways, as well knowledge he himself is not possessed of, still his important business to think for f, decide for himself, work for himself, of himself a personality that will be something in the world. Not every one aint pictures or be a creator of music, here is one kind of artistry that is laid each mother's son and daughter of us. the making of a beautiful and winsome ality. For some of us that endeavor calls elong hard and painful toil. We have so uglinesses to conquer. But what greater can you do for the world about you than singly, day by day and year by year, pre- o it some revelation of the beauty and al power that human personality can at- e? If you would do this, however, you pay attention to your blind spots.

Closet and Altar

FORGIVING OTHERS

Forgive and ye shall be forgiven.—Luke 6:37.

Forgiveness is hard to take, it is also hard to give. To forgive others is good and great, but what if forgiveness would be unwise! What if forgiveness would serve only as a point of departure on a new course of wickedness. Thus the problem of forgiveness is a hard one and we have here a new vision of the truth of the saying, "Who can forgive sins save God only?"—James Iverach.

It is not for the elder brother, and for the ninety and nine just persons who can think of repentance and forgiveness in an entirely disinterested manner; no, nor is it even for the students of natural law in the spiritual world, who know that things are what they are, and that the consequences of them will be what they will be, to bring their measuring lines in their hand, and prescribe beforehand to love—the only infinite we know—what it shall, or shall not, do in the way of restoring the soul.—James Denney.

Together came two souls at Heaven's Gate;
Strangers to each in their transfigured state.

Before them stood the servant of the Lord—
A shinging Angel with his flaming sword.

Then to one trembling spirit of the dead
The guardian Angel of the portal said:

"Dost thou thine earthly enemies forgive?"
"Aye," came the answer. Quoth the Angel,
"Live."

Then said the Angel to the other one:
"Unto this man great evil hast thou done,

"For him be it what fate is thine to say;
As he shall judge, so shall it be this day."

In silence stood he there, and none may tell,
What dreams were his of torture and of Hell,

But when at last he dared uplift his eyes
Wide swung the Gate and there was Paradise!

Frank Demster Sherman.

They forgive with parentheses, they forgive with great big ifs following the reluctant words. . . . Forgiveness should be the delight of Christian men.—Joseph Parker.

It does not look well for us to keep count of the offenses done against us by our brethren. There is something of ill nature in scoring up the injuries we forgive, as if we would allow ourselves to be revenged when the measure is full. God keeps an account, because he is the judge and vengeance is his; but we must not, lest we be found stepping into his throne. It is necessary to the preservation of peace to pass by injuries, without reckoning how often: to forgive and forget. God mutliplies his pardons, and so should we.—Matthew Henry.

O Lord, because being compassed with infirmities we oftentimes sin and ask pardon, help us to forgive as we would be forgiven; neither mentioning old offenses committed against us, nor dwelling upon them in thought, nor being influenced by them in heart: but loving our brother freely as thou freely lovest us. Amen.

Christina G. Rossetti.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Christian Friendliness to South America

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic for September 27-October 3

BY HELEN F. SMITH*

Scripture Reading: "And the people who sat in darkness saw a great light."—Matthew 4: 16, 17.

Important Questions

North and South America have always been friendly nations. Has it always been a friendship separated from material gain? Has it been disinterested and based on the highest welfare of both lands? Have oil wells in Mexico counted more than Mexican souls?

These and many similar questions are up for discussion. The world needs those who will study these problems and help to create a real friendship with Latin America. Because "through the history of the conquest and discovery of the Americas, there run the fire, courage, and idealism of youth," we commend this task to young people.

1. Have an "intelligence test," asking such questions as:

(a) Where is Latin America located? Most people would say that South America is directly south of North America. Is it?

(b) Why is it called "Latin" America?

(c) Name the twenty republics.

2. Ask the group to draw a map of the whole country from memory, locating three principal cities, three principal rivers, and the great mountain range.

South America's Gifts to the World

Prepare a product map to show how, in material things, Latin America contributes to the world. Stretch a ribbon from Caracas to the outer edge of the map where a piece of sweet chocolate could be fastened; another, labeled "nitrate," from Chile, to a picture of a garden, showing that nitrate for fertilizer comes from this section; show that coffee comes from Brazil.

A Brief History of Latin America:

1. The discovery and exploitation of South America.

2. The ancient civilization of the Aztecs in Mexico and the Incas of Peru. Bring out the fact that conquest has resulted in a very submissive race of Indians today.

3. The races and structure of social organization and the gap between original Indian groups and the upper "intelligentsia" or educated class. (See Chapter II of New Days in Latin America and Chapter VI of Looking Ahead with Latin America.)

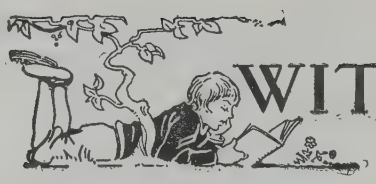
4. Educational progress since the first university was founded in Lima, Peru, in 1551, eighty-five years before Harvard College existed and 150 years before Yale University received a charter. A survey of educational institutions should follow. (See Chapter IV: New Days in Latin America.)

5. The religious situation. What has been accomplished by the Roman Catholic Church,—what is still to be done? Show that the task of the Evangelical Church is not to supplant this church, but to co-operate, bringing the light of Christ's redeeming love to those who are in great darkness. This need can be effectively brought out if one of the girls will impersonate the "Story of South America" as published by the Lutheran Board.

References:

New Days in Latin America, Webster E. Browning
Looking Ahead with Latin America, Stanley High
Makers of South America, Margarette Daniels
South America Today, S. G. Inman
Survey Graphic, May, 1924

*Associate Secretary, Woman's Board of Missions



WITH THE CHILDREN

Short Fuse

By Winifred Davidson

When Rex—"Chief"—and Alan decided to take Charley Creigh with them into the Alta Sequa Gap, they wondered how close they had come to spoiling their own good time.

"What you might call a save-me-firster, Charley is," one of the boys had said once. "Charley always thinks before he leaps."

"That's a little better than leaping first if you find out afterwards there was something wrong with that particular leap," Rex had laughed. "I imagine Charley's all right. We'll try him out on this trip."

"If he doesn't like what we want to do, he can do some other thing." This from Alan, who enjoyed his own reputation of being a bit foolhardy. "We're out for fun. Let's not forget this is our grand old playing time."

The boys were waiting for Charley before their early morning start.

"Here he comes now," said Rex. "Come on. Let's not waste another minute."

The three boys climbed into the "back country" stage that was waiting at the old-fashioned station, and rode as far as Aguirre's Gate, a large, fenced-in ranch which was but a small part of one of the old Spanish grants in Southern California. Here they obtained permission of the overseer to cross the lower pasturage and were soon puffing up Alta Sequa, a high hill—a mountain, really—closely wooded with live oaks.

"Don't camp too close to the works up there," the overseer warned them when they told him where they were going. "The first of the blasting was done on this side a week or so ago. The new dam will start on the far side of Alta Sequa. There wouldn't be any camping there after this year."

"What's the danger?" Charley lingered to ask.

"None, probably," said the overseer. "Only, you better not get too close to the edge of the precipice. There might be loose earth or loose boulders. You can't tell what dislodging has been done by those dynamite blasts."

"We'll be all right. Come on, Charley," called Alan.

From Alta Sequa's top the boys had a wonderful view of the gap where the dam was to be constructed; and another wide vista of the valley and lower ranges beyond it, over towards the city and looking away to the Pacific.

They pitched camp under two wide-spreading oaks, made a scientific-looking earthen stove, and swung their bean-pot above the coals.

"This is going to be great," Alan said, as they looked around on their comfortable "living room." "Plenty of light and air."

"What shall we do first?" asked Rex.

"I propose that we inspect the new dam," Alan said. "We'll never have another chance to see from the ground up how a big dam like this one is built."

"We can go down the valley half a mile or so and strike a safe trail at a lower level. See?" He pointed to a thin, yellow line that crossed the canyon and divided the sage and mesquite as though it had been turned with a plow point.

The boys were out of their blankets before the sun rose next day. It was Charley's day to cook and wash dishes. The others were pleased to find him already dressed and waiting before a glowing fire for the moment when he should put on the bacon and eggs for breakfast.

"We'll certainly get in a good hike today," they were saying.

"Looks to me as though we were going to have the best camp we've ever had," said Rex, as they shouldered their light packs and started for the valley trail. "We won't hurry, Charley. You whistle when you're starting and we'll wait for you to catch up."

"Be along in no time," said Charley, busy with plates and pans.

"Give me one or two matches," said Alan. "We might need them."

Charley handed over three matches, reluctantly. It was the rule that the cook looked after the firewood and matches, and Charley had found but one small box. They must be most economical of these little necessities.

"Oh, I'll give them back when you catch up," laughed Alan.

About half an hour later Charley ran down the valley trail with lunches in a light pack on his back. He whistled every few minutes, but it was not until he was well on his way toward the other side of the gap, almost opposite the place where the camp lay, that he had an answering whistle. He began to run as he came in sight of the other boys. They were down close to the works, where heaps of broken rock testified to the dynamite blasts that had torn away the side of the hill.

Charley had come to a beautiful little wooded shelf, over which a tiny mountain stream trickled from below a mighty rock which extended like a wall and roof at the back.

"Here's a place for lunch," he decided, and unstrapped his pack.

Hanging it on a branch of the nearest tree, he walked out to get another good sight of the boys. He whistled, but they gave no sign that they had heard him.

"That's funny!" he thought. "They must have seen me. I wonder why they didn't come along up?"

He picked his way down among the shattered fragments of granite, but could see nothing of his friends.

"I wonder if they've—" he began. But no, Mr. Johnson had said not to go too near the works, and of course they wouldn't start their first day getting into trouble.

As he stood looking around, he saw the other boys slowly rounding a shoulder of a projecting hill above him. He went back to the stream and shouldered his pack, starting on the rough ascent to the top.

"It certainly is queer the way they're acting," he thought. "I wonder if they want to do something—and don't want me in on it."

He couldn't imagine that and hurried as fast as he could climb. They were on the edge of the precipice opposite their own camp, forty feet above the trail they had followed a few moments before. They had a small box on the ground and were examining it. Alan struck a match and held it to a long string that led away from it.

"Alan! Dynamite!" shouted Charley, wondering that they didn't know what they were handling.

The other boys laughed.

"Looks like it," said Alan, slowly. "Are you afraid?"

Charley stared. Knowing what dyna looked like—what a time fuse was—he thinking rapidly.

"Where did you get that?" he asked, scious of the terrific danger.

"Don't be fussy. It just looks like the stuff. It's no good. It was thrown awa the workmen," explained Rex.

"You're certainly white," chuckled glancing at Charley.

He had cut away the string and was ing it nearer the box. Suddenly Cha swooped.

"Is any one down there—at the works? demanded.

"Nobody. Not a soul been on the job days," said Alan. "Why? Going to tell taken this plaything?"

Charley had grabbed the "plaything" was running. He was aware of shouts of a behind him, of the others following.

"Go back!" he shouted. "Out of the w

And he tossed the box across the gap all the force he could manage, in order to it clear to the bottom where the other blas had been done. In another second a roar s the hills. Charley, losing his balance as swayed at the edge, fell forward and r along the rock wall.

It was an hour afterwards that the o boys found him, not far from the little str that he had rested beside earlier. When had dragged him to a comfortable resting p and had splashed his face with the icy wa his first words were:

"Hello. Everything all—"

"Everything all right, Charley. That just as soon as you are. I didn't realize— think you're—"

"I'm all here," laughed Charley. "What I do with that lunch?"

(All rights reserved)

A Toast to Boys

By Anna Riggs

Here's to the boy with eyes of blue!
Sturdy and strong, honest and true;
Willing to work, ready to play,
Fond of study, his mother's stay.
Here's to the boy with eyes of blue!

Here's to the boy with eyes of brown!
He's the most popular boy in town;
Happy-go-lucky, without a care
To wringle his brow, or gray his hair.
Here's to the boy with eyes of brown!

Here's to the boy with eyes of gray!
Sober and careworn before his day;
Deep in thought and slow of speech,
A brave, true heart, but hard to reach.
Here's to the boy with eyes of gray!

Here's to the boy with eyes of black!
Brimful of fun, of mischief no lack.
One never knows what next he will do,
Something surprising, original, new.
Here's to the boy with eyes of black!

"Troublesome comforts" always are you,
Whether your eyes be brown or blue.
If gray or black, if dull or bright,
What matters it, if your heart be white?
Here's to all boys who love the right!

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

The Young People's Conference
As Illustrated by the Blair Gathering

the Young People's Conference recently t Blair Academy, Blairstown, N. J., under uspices of the New York State Committee eligious Education, is to be taken as a ample of this new type of work with our egational boys and girls, the denominas to be congratulated. It is a most hope-gn when the churches of New York State nduce and finance the gathering of 385 people in the midst of summer vacations, dy the Bible, world service, and church ds, and to join in a ten-day course of such
The Blair Conference had 202 delegates ed and attending, representing Eastern outhern New York State, while at Cook my, Montour Falls, N. Y., 185 were in lance, the number being limited by the modations of the Academy. At Blair, tes from 18 New Jersey churches were n attendance. Now there are conferences onferences of young people. Some had not be held. They are divisive in ine, bad in discipline, and come to be cond by the young people as a good chance ve a cheap vacation at the expense, in t least, of the home church. Classes and gs are a part of the penalty you pay for od time and if they can be avoided, so the better. By way of contrast, Blair ook Academy Conferences were the oppo-f this. Hence the success. Of course it is gree of preliminary preparation which dees in great measure this success. Organontrol of the students for the whole period ir stay, a thoroughly efficient faculty, with able curriculum and a conscientiously ed devotional program for Sunday and services, these with opportunity for a of evening meetings of compelling in-are factors which must be completely ed before the date of opening. The young e, all of high school age, can be depended to follow such leadership; in fact they gladly.

was in these matters that the New York rences excelled. By the time a delegate d, her room and room-mate were assigned, ounselor chosen, her dining room table and designated, her classes determined, and citation and study hours fixed. As much y as possible is given the students in choice ese matters, but the question is settled they come.

great deal of this systematizing is due to isdom of the chairman of the state come, Rev. J. H. Condit, and the state super-dent of home missions, Dr. W. H. Rolwho, in the last five years, have perfected eneral plan. The actual work must be by the officers of each conference.

e counselor system is a plan of friendly ol which maintains during the conference.
man counselor is appointed for each ten and a man for each ten boys. A houser has charge of the women counselors and se-father has charge of the men. This is lice system but an older friend control helps in maintaining the morale of the ence and having a good time in the meanwhile. An athletic director for boys and one for girls look out for the games, outings, hikes, etc., and a musical director leads in sing-songs and the music of the formal gatherings. A trained nurse is also in attendance throughout the conference. So much for the organization mechanics of the thing, save to say that while the conference officers plan to aid in making the coming of each delegate as convenient as possible, the real responsibility of the conference for the delegate starts as the delegate leaves the train at the place of meeting. The conference day is a scheduled activity and the delegates, all high school students, are accustomed to such demands as it makes. Each student has an hour of chapel, two hours of recitation, and a study hour, taking up the whole morning from breakfast to dinner with intervening periods for exercise. After dinner a rest hour rigidly enforced completes the routine—the delegate being free from then until supper hour. After supper the sunset service—usually outdoors—was followed within half an hour by a meeting in the chapel, sometimes an entertainment again of more serious contact. Retiring bell rings at 9.30 and lights out bell at 10 P.M. While there is nothing of the police work type about the way these regulations are enforced, there is no disregarding of them. In both conferences the young people almost universally helped to keep the standard of orderliness. Dr. J. C. Sharp, the headmaster of Blair Academy, who was in his residence on the grounds throughout the conference, said that he had not one word of complaint regarding any boy or girl of the whole company, and moreover that there had been nothing but praise from the people of the academy and village over the way our young people deported themselves.

They were a superb group of picked representatives of our Congregational boys and girls and maintained the standards expected because they were helped to do so in a friendly way. Rules were few but ideals were constantly emphasized through the counselor body. Not one serious infraction of order occurred through the whole period. Rev. Roy L. Minich of Christ Church, Woodhaven, N. Y., was the dean and the result was due in great degree to his far-sighted and steady management.

The work done in the classes was serious and thoughtful. The Bible Study Department was in the capable hands of Rev. Stanley U. North of Walton, N. Y. He had six assistants, each instructor having two recitation hours a day, as Bible study was requested for the whole student body. The Gospel of Luke was the basis of their study. In the World Service or Missions Department, Rev. H. S. Leiper of the A. M. A. was in charge with four assistants. Pilgrim Ideals Incorporated and Who Is My Neighbor were the books studied. Rev. G. R. Andrews of the Congregational Education Society had a third-year course in "Methods of Church Work." A most valuable course in "Values of the Old Testament" was given in a series of devotional chapel talks by Dr. T. M. Shipherd of Scarsdale, N. Y. At the first Sunday morning service Dr. Huget of Brooklyn preached a sermon which will long be remembered. The dean, Mr. Minich, gave a strong message on the last Sunday morning. The sunset meeting was addressed each evening by various members of the faculty with the exception of the last meeting, possibly the best, which was in the hands of the young people themselves. Miss Hazel Brownson of the Home Missionary Society, Miss Helen F. Smith of the Woman's Board, Rev. E. H. Smith of the American Board, Rev. H. S. Leiper of the A. M. A., Rev. G. R. Andrews of the Education Society, and Dr. W. H. Rollins of the New York State Conference were in attendance as representatives of the work of the denomination. Rev. J. H. Condit, chairman of the state committee of religious education, made an over-night visit and spoke helpfully at one of the sunset meetings. Rev. J. H. Edwards of Montana, in a camp-fire address, gave a stimulating account of Congregational work in that great state. This was the program stated and provided but there was an informal program of hikes, rides, personal conferences, and earnest talks and group prayer meetings which will be reported by the young people themselves, and the report will never be completed. This is the happiness of it. This thing results in a new spiritual impetus in the lives of our young people. The evidence is in from all quarters—two young girls who went home from last year's conference and held the Sunday school and C. E. work to a higher spiritual level all through the winter; one boy who left his electrical engineering course and has decided to enter the ministry; a girl who saw a new chance in the mission field and gave herself to its call. These are the straws which show the stream. The value of them is, as we realize, that they are spontaneous expressions and are aftermath. There is less emotionalism in these conferences than in the average state conference. There is no public appeal to any program of work in the whole session. Instruction, information, education—these are three approaches stressed. Inspiration rightly developed comes from these three, but as an individual product.

THE CLASS IN "PREPARATION FOR TEACHING"
Washington Young People's Conference, Seabeck, 1925

The last service was a Communion service in charge of Rev. S. U. North of Walton, N. Y., and Rev. E. M. Macklin of Jamaica, with chosen representatives from the young people acting as deacons. It was a reverent, dignified, spiritual Communion, wonderfully led, and will be the crowning moment of the days in the minds of all the young people who saw straight during this fellowship. We oldsters felt as Dr. Huget expressed it: "There is nothing bigger in the present program of the Kingdom than the movement which this thing represents." It must be kept sane and natural in methods and definite in aim. J. S.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

A gentleman who has accumulated a fortune and removed from a four-room cottage to a twenty-room mansion was recently heard to remark that he saw no reason for improving the church. "The building was good enough thirty years ago," said he, "and why isn't it good enough today?"

Idaho Youth Union Conference

For the second year the Idaho Youth Union Conference met on the banks of the Payette River at Smith's Ferry. Arrangements were similar to those of last year. The conference is primarily an out-of-door gathering, nearly everyone sleeping in tents and the dining room being a tent.

Through the kindness of Rev. F. J. Estabrook of Denver the conference now owns a tent large enough for its dining room. Permanent equipment, in the way of stoves and kitchen dishes, was added this year, also.

The faculty, headed by Dr. Estabrook, dean, included Dr. Benjamin Robinson of Chicago Seminary, Miss Anna Estelle May of the Education Society, Dr. George Hinman of the A. M. A., Supt. Harrison of Portland, Mr. A. E. Alvord of South Africa, and Rev. Mr. Peng of Peking, China, as well as several local men.

Both the adult and the young people's groups held by Dr. Robinson seemed to be especially interesting—rather noteworthy when we think of the idea which most church folks have of theological professors. If all professors of New Testament can grip their classes as Dr. Robinson can it will be necessary for folks to reconstruct their opinions of the drawing power of men in the chairs of our seminaries. When a group will get up an hour early, an hour when there is almost frost in the air, and will sit out under the open sky to listen to a final lecture which they would have missed had they not rolled out at this hour, it is a real tribute to the teaching power of the class leader.

Idaho Youth Union Conference is deeply grateful to the various individuals and societies who helped us this year, but we are especially grateful to Dr. Robinson and to Chicago Seminary for the interesting experiment they are working out together.

And for next year—we look forward to more of the great mountains, the clear rivers, the wonderful pines, and the God-inspired men women our great church sends out to he in this new land to a greater vision of tian service. C. S.

Our Santa Barbara Church

"How is our church faring in Santa Barb That is a question many are earnestly aski the way across this great country. There few cities so beloved by travelers from all There is the interest of the glorified Sp tradition. There is the quiet and re beauty. There is the even and comfor tenor of the climate. And there are also churches.

There is regret to find that the injur buildings is rather greater than earlier mated. I will not say greater than first ported," for that could hardly be possible there are some buildings passed over as n jured, which are now found to have strained and warped, that will require con able funds to make them secure. There few homes, indeed, that have not suffered loss. Of course, most of them are star and not greatly damaged, but they have the chimney, or been jarred on the founda or at least some valued treasure ruined. the strain upon business men to restore efficiency is great, and the people are ill to bear much increase in taxation. Thus welcome the relief that comes under the le ship of the California Development As

Notice

Meetings of the National Council

Conventioners are urged to make reservations on our personally conducted 12 day tour to Washington.

De Luxe Motor Coaches will leave Boston October 19th returning on October 30th.

Sightseeing trips in Philadelphia and New York included

6 full days in Washington

All places of national interest will be visited, including special trip to Mt. Vernon and the Arlington Cemetery.

Return trip over newly completed Storm King Highway, Bear Mountain Bridge, Hudson River, Berkshires and Mohawk Trail.

$94.50 covers everything;

Hotels, meals, transportation, and all side trips.

The ideal and most economical way to attend the Convention.

GREEN'S TOURS

LYNN, MASS.

Tel. Lynn 4249 2280

REV. JOHN A. HUTTON, D.D.

Successor to Dr. Jowett as Pastor of Westminster Chapel, London, England will write articles for The Expositor this year. He is the author of "That The Ministry Be Not Blamed," "There They Crucified Him," and other books.

Send your subscription to The Expositor now so you may read his first article in the October issue.

The Expositor, 710 Caxton Building, Cleveland, Ohio
Subscription 1 year $3.00 4 Mos. $1.00

COMMUNION SUPPLIES We supply every essential for the Communion service. Trays, Glasses, Covers, Plates.

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston, 156 5th Ave. New York, 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

NO NEED TO WORR

over church finances. Use the plan hun dreds of churches are using with great suc cess. Money easily raised by selling ou

CHRISTIAN SERVICE CALENDAR

for 1926. Thirteen sacred ar pictures in beautiful offset col ors. Scripture verse for even day in the year. So attractive to see is to buy. No limit t sales. Terms to churches ver liberal. Any active society ca readily sell four to five hun dred. Write to-day for specia circular fully explaining how

The Standard Publishing Company
Dept. 42 8th & Cutter Sts., Cincinnati, O

PLEASANT WORK-LARGE PROFIT

An Instant Success

Hymns of the Christian Life

Edited by Milton S. Littlefield, D.D.

Published February 1st, 1925. Over 12,00 copies sold. Price $135.00 per hundre

Examination copy on request

A. S. BARNES AND COMPANY

1855 7 W. 45th St., New York 19

A Book Read Daily by Millions

The Bible—we carry it in 90 different languages

Send for Catalog or call at the

Massachusetts Bible Society

41 Bromfield St., Boston

Home Study of the Bible

10,000 MEN AND WOMEN from all walks of life now studying the Bible under competent guidance. 16 COURSES available. New course, "JESUS' WAY OF LIVING." Modern Bible study broadens vision—deepens wisdom. Begin now. Descriptive literature free. ALL COURSES, 75c each 5 or more to one address 60c each

The American Institute of Sacred Literature
The University of Chicago Dept. 469, Chicago, Ill.

for assistance in restoring schools and public utilities.

the other hand, the visitor is greatly d at the rapid clearing away of débris, the rehabilitation everywhere at work. workmen have flocked to the city at the of high wages, and construction goes y forward. There are plans for the widen- f State Street, by the introduction of es over the sidewalks, and some approach niformity of architecture along Spanish There is a valiant courage that merits ance. Every well-wisher of Santa Bar- is eager that it shall be restored, with shes and infirmities corrected, and in a y which befits its choice setting in Nature. to the churches, the havoc there was The Methodist building has been razed ground and there is similar loss to the rians. The whole auditorium of the lid new Presbyterian Church is con- d. Only the side walls and roof of the ful Episcopal Church can be retained. Baptists were but little injured. At our egational Church, aside from breaking of ws in the kitchen, and a slight breakage e organ, the interior was not damaged. e exterior, however, some of the stone fell, and the whole walls of plaster l be done over. There is need for this toward $4,000; and a debt of $2,000 to be lifted. As the membership is not and not more than equal to the expense al maintenance, and as they have suffered in personal and public losses, the extra is beyond them. They rejoice greatly, in the assistance that has come from alifornia churches. So far the amount is an approach, and gifts from friends near ar would bring real encouragement. In their more than half century this congregation has made large contributions to the city and to society, and are eminently worthy of the generous friendship of the Congregational fellowship in their hour of trial.

During the summer the churches have united in a great open-air meeting in the park; well attended and highly appreciated. Thus misfortune leads Christians of various dissimilarities to sit down beside each other. Since about the first of August, the Congregationalists have been able to resume activities in their own building. C. F.

An Unusual Association Meeting

These things make the meeting of the Middle Georgia Association with the Fredonia Church unusual. The attendance was large at every session and in some the spacious auditorium was crowded. The people represented the strong type of rural life not impoverished by the claims of the city on its brightest young people, though this process of sifting out the stronger young people has begun because of the small returns the farms now make to the farmers' capital and toil. The program was strong in its presentation of the claims of the denomination on the local church. The ordination of Mr. C. C. Hamilton, pastor of the La Grange Church, and of Mr. Curtis Matthews, of First Church, Columbus, was significant, as no such service had been held in the meetings of the association. Both candidates are graduates of Atlanta Theological Seminary. It was fitting that Dean A. F. Sherrill, teacher of the young men, should make the ordaining prayer. Supt. Lewis H. Keller, president-elect of Atlanta Seminary, delivered the charge to the candidates and Supt. McQuarrie gave the right hand of fellowship. The meeting was a school in denominational ideals and methods, and stewardship was the central feature of the E. M. C. discussion. L. H. K.

From East to West

MAINE

South Berwick Interests

After a two months' vacation, Rev. Alexander Sloan returns from Intervale much improved in health. The new, modern ten-room Central School, near First Church, will be ready for occupancy Sept. 14. Mr. Jotham Sewall and his sister, Miss Jane Sewall, prominent local Congregationalists, contributed $25,000 toward the total cost, making possible a most attractive assembly hall and an adequate plant.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Activities at New Ipswich

New Ipswich, Rev. W. G. Berkeley, pastor, has during the summer painted the exterior of the church building and made other repairs to the amount of $400. In connection with the 175th anniversary celebration of the town, Aug. 16 was observed as Old Home Sunday, with the pastor preaching on "The History of New Ipswich in Relation to the Sacred." Many former residents of the town were present at the service. Among other summer activities was a children's concert at the morning service on Aug. 30.

MASSACHUSETTS

Returns to New York State

Rev. H. E. Titus, for two years pastor at Hanover Center, has resigned to take effect Sept. 28. He will remove to his former home

Special Announcement

The Washington Evening Star has most generously offered to send the paper daily from October 19th to October 29th inclusive (the Congregational National Council Numbers) eleven days, postpaid to any address in the U. S. for forty cents. These daily papers will give the story of the National Council meeting day by day; many of the main addresses and details of the business and of the discussions, all written by the best reporters of their staff. There will be splendid stories of all our missionary work and many illustrations.

Pastors and laymen who desire to know of the meeting have here a splendid opportunity to see the Council in action. Every pastor ought to have the paper and to secure a good list especially of his official men and women. Put this subscription blank in the hands of some active member and secure a list of your people. Send the list with check direct to the Washington Star, Washington, D. C. In no case send to the Council office.

----CUT HERE----

TO THE WASHINGTON STAR
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Gentlemen:—

Inclosed find my check (or Money Order) for $.....for which kindly send "The Star" to the following from October 19th to October 29th at 40c per subscription as per arrangement with the National Council of Congregational Churches.

List sent by .....Address .....

(Let all names and addresses be written with care.)

Name Address

If more space is needed use an additional sheet of paper.

field, accepting an appointment under the Methodist Church in Genesee Conference, New York. During his pastorate attendance has materially increased in both church and school, and 25 have been received into church membership. Plans for the new parish house are rapidly maturing. His departure, made necess for family reasons, is much regretted by entire community.

AN UNUSUAL SERVICE

Practically every State in the Union is now being served by graduates of

The Chicago Theological Seminary

A similar service has been rendered to foreign fields. Our martyr missionaries lie buried in Turkey and in China. Our men laid down their lives in France. Great schools and colleges throughout the world have been founded and administered by our graduates.

The Chicago Theological Seminary is worthy of your Support!

OZORA S. DAVIS, President 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

THE NORTHFIELD East Northfield, Mass.
If You Wonder Where to Winter
we suggest HERE. Homelike, cosy, hospitable. No coal or servant problems. Remarkable splendor of foliage in Sept. and Oct. Good food. Write for Illustrated Booklet.
Ambert G. Moody, Mgr.
F. W. Kellogg, Asst. Mgr.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

PASTORATE WANTED

Minister desires opportunity. Education: university and seminary graduate. Experience: six years pastor of institutional church; two and a half years in general pastorate. Interest: especially interested in helping your people. Preaching: practical. Address "M. B. N.," Congregationalist.

SUPPLY PASTOR

Open for supply preaching, in and about Oberlin, Cleveland, and northern Ohio. Rev. Willis P. Hume, Oberlin, Ohio.

LITERARY

Speakers, Writers—Material prepared on special subjects. Expert service. Authors Research Bureau, 500 Fifth Ave., New York.

POSITION WANTED

Position as Director of Church Music within fifteen miles of Boston, in a church where music is regarded as part of the worship, and where there is material for a choir of thirty to fifty members, also where such a choir is supported by the church people. Do you know the possibilities of a young people's choir? "W. L.," Congregationalist.

Experienced teacher wants position as tutor of young children in private family. New England preferred. Best of references. Box 17, South Sudbury, Mass.

TEACHERS WANTED

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS

Fine personal stationery—200 sheets, 100 envelopes, with your name and address neatly printed, only $1.00. The McLean Press, 37 So. Loring St., Lowell, Mass.

Rooms To Let in private home, Beachside, Vineyard Haven, Mass. Good beds, modern improvements, broad veranda, harbor view. Rates very reasonable for September and October. Finest table board in immediate vicinity. Best of references. Mrs. Emma W. Chase, Vineyard Haven, Mass.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Earn $25 weekly, spare time, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary. Copyright book free. Press Syndicate, 1228 St. Louis, Mo.

Mail Order Printing. Ask for quotations. 500 envelopes and 500 letterheads or statements or billheads, $5.00. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton, "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

MINISTERS—Have you books you no longer need? If so, why not try an ad in our classified columns in an effort to dispose of them? Some other pastor may want to purchase them.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Henry J. Lee to Leave Woburn

Rev. Henry J. Lee, pastor of First Chu Woburn, has received and accepted a call the pastorate of First Church, Wauwat Wis. Subject to approval of council will begin his work Oct. 1 next. W watosa is a sub of Milwaukee, rap growing and almost tirely residential. church recently ere a new house of wor with parish house joining. Facilities available for a t oughly modern and quate program to m the need of the community.

REV. H. J. LEE

As successor to Dr. Stephen A. Norton, Lee has efficiently served the Woburn Chu He leaves for the Middle West with the wishes of the congregation. Regret at the parture of the Lees is accompanied by joy the splendid opportunity presented by the W watosa field.

Bequest for Reading Church

By the will of Mrs. Emily M. Palmer church at Reading, of which Rev. Payson Pierce is minister, will receive three lega one of $500 for the Woman's League, a s of $200 for the Friendly Guild, and a thir $1,000 for the church itself.

Marblehead Meeting House a Century Ol

North Church, Marblehead, has recently services in commemoration of the erection, years ago, of their present house of wors The first grant of land in Marblehead was m on Oct. 14, 1638, to one William Walton, was then preaching without ordination. I therefore, probable that this old church, th not regularly organized, with a settled and dained pastor administering the rites of bap and Communion until 1684, really dates bac 1638.

The church has had three edifices in nearly 300 years. The fish which serves a weather vane on the steeple of the present bu ing is the only portion of the second struc that was saved when that edifice was de ished in 1825.

The order used for the centennial celebra in July was exactly the same as that used the dedication 100 years ago, the original ing been photographed and reproduced. reproduction was printed on the anniver program. To be consistent with the old us have successfully conquered childhood's dreaded affliction—whooping cough aided by ROCHE'S EMBROCATION.

Children of Three Generations

Rubbed on the chest it brings speedy relief by loosening the phlegm.

Always have ROCHE'S handy for emergencies. It is just as effective for croup, bronchitis and colds on the chest. All Druggists or

E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc., New York
W. Edward & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION
Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

n was used, but the music was led by a l. The same hymns and anthems were hich were sung at the dedication. The r, Dr. Harris G. Hale, preached an his- sermon. Former pastors of North Church Rev. John W. Barnett, Rev. Nicholas r Pyl, and Rev. Leslie C. Greeley.

NEW YORK

rsary of Aquebogue Church

175th anniversary of the inception of the nt which resulted in the organization Old Steeple Church of Aquebogue, Long was observed Sunday morning, Aug. 30, uditorium of this historic church. About ere in attendance, the church being l to the doors.

historical sermon was preached by Dr. E. Craven, author of a history of Mat- where he was pastor of the Presbyterian for nearly a quarter of a century. Mes- f greeting were read from Rev. W. H. pastor of Sound Avenue Congregational and from Rev. C. C. Cornwell, pastor erhead Congregational. These churches ghters of Aquebogue and united for the of the day.

irks were made by two former pastors, . B. Hutchinson, pastor of Patterson erian Church for 40 years. Dr. Hutch- ntered the ministry at the Aquebogue There was also a short address by A. Stonelake, pastor of the church 25 go. Letters of greeting were read from red Brown and Rev. E. Lyman Hood. tter is now professor of ethics and phy in the University of Hawaii. Both rmer pastors of Aquebogue.

program committee consisted of the pas- v. E. A. Northrop, Mrs. C. T. Reeve, ss Nellie Young.

FLORIDA

mmers in a Mission Church

Nat G. Long, a senior in the Yale Divin- ool, spent his second summer with the Church, near South Jacksonville. It beautiful and inspiring ministry in a d community, not reached by any other It was mainly a ministry to young giving them higher ideals for life. At se of his work the young people pre- Mr. Long a solid gold watch chain. His vill be continued through the year by era Lindgren, a social service worker.

WISCONSIN

Stone Laying at Fontana

corner stone of the new building for the nity Church, Fontana, was laid Aug. 16.). C. Grauer made the historical address. hurch was organized as a community but with a Congregational constitution nfession and order. The site for the was given by Mr. Willis E. Herrick, a of First Church, Oak Park, Ill.

n Association Meets at Merrill

Northwest Swedish Congregational As- n met this year in Merrill, June 20-25. Swedish ministers were present, and six h churches were represented. The serv- ere well attended and full of spiritual

MINNESOTA

Elmdale Anniversary

h Elmdale (Slovak), celebrated the 10th rsary of the dedication of its house of) on June 14. Three services were held day, and on Monday there was a special with a noon dinner in the church. Rev. Moncol of Cleveland, Rev. E. Wrbitsky er Lake, Rev. C. J. Trcka of St. Paul, and several of the neighboring pastors were present. Rev. Adolf Yukl is the present pastor.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Activities at Stevens

Mr. Wesley Spink, student summer pastor at Stevens, organized a troop of Boy Scouts, which meets weekly at the North Riverside Community Playground for tennis, horseshoe, croquet, and baseball. An overnight trip to the Scout Camp at Sioux City was greatly enjoyed. Meals were cooked out in the open, and there was swimming and hiking in the woods.

Prayer meetings this summer have taken the form of discussions on Paul, Job, Mary Magdalene, and other Bible characters.

The Sunday school picnic, held at Riverside Park, Sioux City, July 14, was a tremendous success. There were over 100 present, and everyone had a good time. An athletic program included all and gave suitable prizes to the winners. The ladies' aid furnished the ice cream. The attendance at Sunday school has kept up well during the hot weather. An indexed leather Bible has been promised to every child who attends every Sunday during the year.

NORTH DAKOTA

Vacation Bible Schools at Garrison and Wing

Miss Rose E. Hollstein conducted daily vacation Bible schools at Garrison and Wing in

THE BOOK OF THE HOUR IN RELIGION

WHAT AND WHY IS MAN?

By RICHARD LA RUE SWAIN

Author of "What and Where Is God?"

Contents: Who Made God? How Did God Make the Human Body? How is the Soul Made? Why Did God Make Man at All? Why Were We Not Born in Heaven? Does God Cause Earthquakes and Cyclones? Where Did Sin Come From? Did Man "Fall Upward"? Why Did Jesus Die? Why Do We Pray? For What Do We Live? Probable price, $1.75

Peabody, Francis G.
Author of "Jesus Christ and the Social Question"
THE CHURCH OF THE SPIRIT
Are you tired of newspaper religion? Of verbal platform battlings over its pros and cons? Here is a book to make the quarrelsome in the churches ashamed. It does not ask its readers to feed on husks. $2.00

Merrill, William Pierson
LIBERAL CHRISTIANITY
Dr. Merrill's method is to draw a comparison between Liberal Christianity and two types at the opposite extremes of Christian faith, the Authoritarian and the Humanitarian; and then, to institute a similar comparison between Liberal Christianity and the teaching of Christ and of the Apostle Paul. $1.75

Robinson, Benjamin W.
THE GOSPEL OF JOHN
"This is one of the best commentaries on the Gospel of John that we have seen. It is very fascinating and can be most helpful in a devotional study of this wonderful Gospel."—Wisconsin Christian Advocate. $2.25

Sperry, Willard L.
REALITY IN WORSHIP
Reality in Worship lays out and uses a new avenue of approach to its theme. Dean Sperry digs in the sub-soil of his subject and sets himself the task of answering the question, "What is supposed to go on in us and to happen to us when we are at church?" Probable price, $2.50

Dawson, Marshall
NINETEENTH CENTURY EVOLUTION AND AFTER $1.50

Coulter, John M. and Merle C.
WHERE EVOLUTION AND RELIGION MEET $1.00
Two extra-good books for church people on evolution. Why put in "for church people"? Because the authors are men of sound personal religion and sound science. This double qualification equips them to mediate between the scientists who are talkative, but ignorant, of real religion, and church spokesmen who are talkative, but ignorant, of real science.

Vincent, Leon H.
JOHN HEYL VINCENT: A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH
Bishop John H. Vincent was a stalwart American. Here is a biography worthy of his amazingly dynamic career as schoolmaster, circuit rider, city missionary, theological student, parish minister, editor, leader of institutes, the advocate of reform in Sunday School methods, his connection with the Chautauqua Reading Circle, his work as a bishop, first in the United States and then in Europe, etc., etc., etc. $3.50

Jefferson, Charles E.
CARDINAL IDEAS OF ISAIAH
"Why should we study the problems of a little nation so insignificant as Judah? The answer to that question is that it is not necessary to have a great nation if your purpose is to study human nature. Just a little nation of a few hundred thousand will do as well, if not better. When a chemist wants to learn about water, he does not need the Atlantic Ocean." Probable price, $1.75

Fowler, Henry Thatcher
THE HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT
This volume deals with the rise and spread of the Christian Church in the first century A.D.: the origin of its earliest writings; and a summary view of their final collection in the New Testament. Probable price, $2.50

Streeter, Canon B. H.
THE FOUR GOSPELS—A Study in Origins
"It will remain for many years the classic treatment of the Gospels in English. There is nothing comparable to it in fullness of detail, thoroughness of method, or—by no means least—charm of style." The layman can understand it. (600 odd pages.) $3.50

Klausner, Joseph
JESUS OF NAZARETH: HIS TIMES, HIS LIFE, AND HIS TEACHING
Though Jesus was a Jew, his followers are not Jews. The present book is an attempt to solve this "great contradiction." It does not seek to ascertain the superiority of Judaism to Christianity nor the superiority of Christianity to Judaism, but simply how Judaism differs and remains distinct from Christianity or Christianity from Judaism. (450 pages.) $4.50

Bell, W. Cosby
SHARING IN CREATION
Sharing in Creation takes the stand that if Christianity needs to make itself at home in the modern world, the same people that tell us so should be willing to own up that the modern world needs even more desperately to make itself at home in Christianity. Probable price, $2.00

Underwood, A. C.
CONVERSION: CHRISTIAN AND NON-CHRISTIAN
"The book breaks new ground or at least lays the furrows in another direction. It will form an indispensable reference book for those studying conversion from the angle of psychology."—Southwestern Evangel. $2.00

Kittel, Dr. R.
THE RELIGION OF THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL
Here at last is "something really new on the Old Testament." Seen through the spectacles that Dr. Kittel provides, many Old Testament characters and narratives assume a quite different complexion. Probable price, $1.75

DO NOT OVERLOOK THESE TIMELY VOLUMES

Fosdick: "The Modern Use of the Bible"	$1.60
Graves: "What Did Jesus Teach?"	$1.00
Emerton: "Unitarian Thought"	$1.00
Hannah: "Christian Monasticism"	$2.50
Gwynne: "Divorce in America, Under State and Church"	$2.00
Blau: "The Wonder of Life"	$2.00
Browne: "Stranger Than Fiction"	$2.50
Burton: "In Pulpit and Parish"	$1.75
Bosworth: "The Life and Teaching of Jesus"	$2.50

At your Bookstore, or from 60 Fifth Avenue THE MACMILLAN COMPANY New York, N. Y.
Atlanta Boston Chicago Dallas San Francisco

July. Each school was carried on for three weeks. One of the chief features was the modeling of salt and flour maps of the Holy Land. In addition, there was handwork, Bible drills, verse finding, memory work, and songs.

WYOMING

Union Seminary Students as Summer Supplies

A daily vacation Bible school was held at Shoshone for three weeks, beginning July 29, with training in singing, dramatics, first aid, etc. There was a half hour study each day on the life of Christ, a ten-minute talk on one of the most important phases of a child's Christian life, and a fifteen-minute story. Mr. James N. Armstrong, of Union Seminary, served the church this summer under the commission of the Home Missionary Society. The people are hoping to secure a permanent pastor this fall.

Lander's annual Sunday school picnic was held on July 21, automobiles carrying the people to the southern end of the Camp Grounds. Volley ball, baseball, races, and swimming were among the day's amusements. Prizes were awarded for the races.

Mr. Daniel Bliss, student summer pastor from Union Seminary, has been giving a series of travel talks on Sunday evenings. In order that the talk on the Holy Land might be more vivid, Mr. Bliss wore the costume of a modern inhabitant of Palestine.

Wheatland's Union Services

Union Sunday evening services have been held in turn during the summer in the Methodist, Christian, and Congregational Churches of Wheatland. Mr. A. Gladstone Finnie, of Union Seminary, New York City, served the Congregational Church during the summer months.

CALIFORNIA

Farewell to Missionaries

An inspiring luncheon meeting was held at First Church, San Francisco, on Aug. 21, in farewell to the missionaries who were going out to their posts. Addresses were given by Miss Isabelle McCausland of Kobe College, Japan, Rev. John S. Porter of Prague, Dr. Watts O. Pye of Fenchow, China, and Rev. Emory D. Alvord of Southern Rhodesia, Africa. There were 150 present at this meeting, many of whom came from outside the Bay district.

OREGON

Returns to Former Field

Rev. H. C. Stover, after a successful ministry of four years as pastor of the Federated Church, Freewater (Presbyterian-Congregationalist), returns to his former field, Central Church, Salem, beginning work Sept. 1. During his pastorate at Freewater a handsome church building has been erected, costing with pipe organ about $28,000. He returns to Salem in response to a unanimous call at a salary much in advance of anything Central Church has hitherto paid.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ALDERSON, J., Eagle Butte, S. D., to Athol and Frankfort. Accepts.
CARLSON, E. O., Dayton, Ia., to Swedish, Ottumwa.
COOLEY, T. S., Absarokee, Mont., to Hampden, Me. At work.
DAWSON, M. W., to Mission, S. D. Accepts.
DICKINSON, E. H., to Telluride, Col. Accepts.
FINDLAY, J. F., Cherokee, Ia., to be dean of men, Grinnell College, Grinnell, Ia. Accepts.
FRITZ, R. A., Des Moines, Ia., to student work, Iowa City. Accepts.
HOLDEN, R. B., Badger, S. D., to Lake Preston. At work.
LYERLY, J. N., Gilman, Ia., to Osage. Began Sept. 15.
RATCLIFFE, T. H., Clark, S. D., to Mobridge. To begin Oct. 1.
RAUGUST, J. J., Endicott, Wash., to German, Fairfax, S. D.
RINGE, FREDERIC, Northland College, Ashland, Wis., to Rio and Wyocena. Accepts and plans to attend the University of Wisconsin.
SHELDON, A. M., to Friona, Texas. At work.
STARK, C. W., Earlville, Ia., to Belmond. Accepts.
WAGNER, J. P., Crete, Neb., to Minden, Ia. Accepts.
WALSH, J. T., Victor, Ia., to Genoa Bluff. Accepts.
WOODCOCK, A. C., Deep River, Ia., to Farnhamville. Accepts.
WRIGHT, BYRON, Chicago Seminary, to Greenville and Harmony, Ia. Accepts.
ZIEKE, PAUL, Indianola, Ia., to Miles. Accepts.

Ordination

REDFOX, EUGENE, o., Buffalo, Cherry Creek, S. July 12. Sermon by Rev. W. B. Pinkey other parts by Rev. Messrs. T. I. Moccasin Rudolf Hertz.

Resignations

BAYNE, R. T., Pilgrim, Superior, Wis., to en in newspaper work. At work.
FLDRIDGE, A. T., Hartwick, Ia.
EVANS, THOMAS, Alexander, Ia.
HARRISON, H. B., Mobridge, S. D., to take financial work with Chicago Seminary.
JANDESEK, E. C., Vining, Ia.
JOHNSON, THEODORE, Swedish, Ottumwa, Ia.
KILBOURN, A. S., Eddyville, Ia., to accept ca professorship at Talladega College.
LLOYD, W. R., Marion, Ia.
TITUS, H. E., Hanover Center, Mass., to ac appointment under the Methodist Church Genesee Conference, N. Y.
TUGGLE, C. M., Orchard and Colwell, Ia.

Accessions

	Conf.
ALABAMA
Christian Hill
Hackleburg Group	20
New Hope	9
CALIFORNIA
Long Beach, First	3
Los Angeles, First
Mesa
FLORIDA
Dorcas	2
New Effort	7
GEORGIA
Columbus
NORTH DAKOTA
Nekoma	18
UTAH
Bountiful
Sandy

CHURCH PEWS
FOR SALE

Pews of the Swampscott Congregational Church—solid hard wood seat and back in good condition. Seating capacity 250. Must be disposed of at once.

Address J. H. WELCH
153 Elmwood Road, Swampscott, Mass.

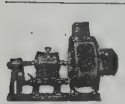
THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

BALOPTICONS

are used in thousands of schools churches and hospitals. This line of lanterns, for slides and opaque objects—for projection in daylight as well as in the dark—is the most complete in the world.
Write for Catalog
Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 706 St. Paul St., Rochester, N.Y.

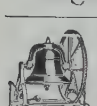
Individual Cups

Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free.
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio.



ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS



McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

Record Books
For the Pastor, the Treasurer, the Clerk, the Church School Superintendent, the Secretary.
ASK FOR CATALOGUES
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

Oberlin Graduate School of Theology

Scholarly and practical training for the ministry, directors of religious education missionary and Christian Association service. Interdenominational faculty and student body. All the cultural advantages of Oberlin College and its complete equipment. Unusual opportunities for women. Scholarships and financial help available.

Degrees A.M., B.D., and S.T.M.
Correspond with Dean Thomas W. Graham
Council Hall, Oberlin, Ohio

Bangor Theological Seminary

The 110th year opens Sept 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunities for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by stude
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, C

SEA PINES School of Personality for Girls
THOMAS BICKFORD, Founder
Outdoor life. Training in self-discovery and self-direc Stimulating ideas of health, responsibility. Christian fluence. One hundred acres, pine groves, seashore. Col Preparatory, Cultural, Secretarial and Athletic courses. Crafts. Dramatics. Music. Corrective Gymnastics. Rec tion Camp July and August. Summer Courses and Cou orship Training for older girls and young women.
Miss Faith Bickford, Miss Addie Bickford, Director Box V, Brewster, Mass.

The Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
Recommends teachers to colleges, public private schools in all parts of the coun Advises parents about schools.

Personals

ERT, REV. G. D., of Flushing, N. Y., and Mrs. gbert, are en voyage to China, where Dr. Eg- rt will officiate at the marriage of their ughter, Miss Carolyn, to Prof. R. C. Failer, Peking, Sept. 26. Miss Egbert is an alumna Smith and holds a Master's degree from lumbia. She is at present instructor in ble at Yenching College of the University of king.

NGTON, REV. FREDERICK, former pastor of ainerd, Minn., and now of Moorhead, is the w chaplain of the American Legion of Min- sota. The sixth and ninth districts advanced e candidacy of Mr. Errington at the con- ntion and so popular did he become that he s virtually unopposed in the election. Mr. rington was a popular member of the post in ainerd and gave of his time freely and un- ntedly in civic as well as Legion matters. is in demand throughout the state as a eaker and has the happy faculty of expressing thoughts clearly and graphically.

IN, REV. ROBERT, completed seven years of vice as minister of First Church, Denver, . On Sunday, Aug. 2, while the last hymn the morning was being sung, Mr. Stephen ight, chairman of the board of trustees, lked down the aisle, and after requesting people to be seated, in a brief address ex- ssive of the kindliest appreciation of the nister's services, in the name of the church, presented Mr. Hopkin with a most sub- ntial check. The relations between pastor d people have always been of the most cordial d happy nature, and never were they more than in the beginning of the eighth year this relationship. Mr. and Mrs. Hopkin spending their vacation at home this year, h an occasional motor trip into the moun- ns. Mr. Hopkin delivered the commence- nt address before the summer term graduat- classes of the University of Colorado at lder, on Aug. 29.

NSON, REV. DOROTHY B., who was ordained Grace Church, Holyoke, Mass., last May, ached her first sermon at her home church first Sunday in September. She is the first ained minister to be raised at Grace Church, ere her father, Rev. Edwin B. Robinson, has n minister for 23 years.

Deaths

th notices and obituaries are inserted at a of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum e, sixty cents. Lines average seven words Address Obituary Department, The egationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

MRS. CHRISTINE C. BARNUM

Tuesday, July 7, Mrs. Christine C. Barnum, of Henry S. Barnum, died at her home ooklyn, Ct. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. R. Pratt, whose husband is the pastor of ongregational church at Brooklyn, Ct., and Sadie C. Fish, who has resided in Franklin hip for a number of years. Mrs. Barnum ctive in Christan work until two days be- er death, having attended church on Sun- uly 5, and taught a Bible class as well. She member for many years of the W. C. T. U., ctive also in class choral work of the n. Her late husband, Henry S. Barnum, she married as his third wife in November, onth before his death in December, 1915, was sionary in Turkey to the Armenians for fifty and an editor of several papers in Constanti- She also leaves two grandsons, R. Mere- Pratt, and A. Curtis Pratt.

MISS ANNA M. CUMMINGS

ablegram announcing the death on May 17, of Anna M. Cummings, A.B., principal of enot Seminary, Wellington, South Africa, received by her brother, Rev. George H. ings of Norton, Mass, and was followed recently by letters giving an account of st days.

a Marie Cummings was born in Newport, April 14, 1860, being next to the youngest of Rev. Henry and Mary (Beaman) Cum-

She was graduated at Mt. Holyoke in the class of 1883.

After four years of successful teaching, Miss Cummings accepted in 1887 a position in Huguenot Seminary, succeeding an older sister who had been on the staff for ten years of this Mt. Holyoke of South Africa—a work begun in 1873 by Misses Ferguson and Bliss, at the instance of Rev. Andrew Murray.

Miss Cummings' connection with Huguenot Seminary covered 38 years. Her instruction, especially in Latin, prepared classes for notable success in matriculation of which girl students had not hitherto been deemed capable. In 1910, she succeeded Dr. Bliss as principal of the seminary.

During a furlough in America (1894), Miss Cummings proposed, with Miss Ferguson's approval, to overstay her leave and to endeavor to secure a building exclusively for college work. This period grew into three years, while funds were raised, architect's plans secured and material prepared for shipment. The result was Cummings Hall, so named at the request of its chief donor and accepted in honor of parents who gave three daughters to years of service for Huguenot.

Miss Cummings interested herself in the Student Christian Association, in Missions, and in temperance work. She became superintendent of the Y. W. Branch of the W. C. T. U. in South Africa in 1890 and edited Y's and Otherwise, afterward the official organ of the W. C. T. U. as White Ribbon. For 27 years she administered the so-called Substitute Band for South Africa, started by Evangelist Gibbud, which required an intermediary between donors and workers. A total of £3,390 passed through her hands. About one-third went to Nyasaland and two-thirds to Basutoland.

The success of Miss Cummings, as a teacher, was apparent in the growth and high standing of the school of which she was for years the head. Her unusual executive ability was recognized in membership with Dr. Ferguson and Dr. Bliss on the board of trustees and her special association with the erection of various buildings of the Institution, some secured in times of financial stress.

Returning to South Africa in Feb., 1922, after an absence extended as sick leave, Miss Cummings gave up her work as teacher; but retained general administrative duties. She was the directing force in the successful jubilee observance of the Huguenot Institution held in Oct., 1923. Obliged by the precarious state of her bodily health to seek rest for considerable periods at Plumstead Sanatorium, near Cape Town, she kept constantly in touch with the seminary. By her long experience, clear vision, and unsurpassed judgment, she was an inspiration and guide to those in active charge.

When the frail body could no longer sustain the brave and tireless spirit, she passed with perfect submission and unfaltering faith into the heavenly home.

Funeral services were held in Wellington and tributes in English and Dutch paid her character and life work. Students and faculty from Huguenot Seminary and College and associated schools of Wellington, a thousand in number, followed the body to its last resting place in the cemetery of the Dutch Reformed Church where rest the bodies of Rev. Andrew Murray, Dr. Abbie P. Ferguson, one of the founders, and others associated with the Huguenot Institution.

Miss Cummings is survived by two brothers: Deacon Henry B. Cummings of Strafford, Vt., Rev. George H. Cummings of Norton, Mass.; and by two sisters: both of Cape Province, South Africa, the elder, Mary Elizabeth, wife of Rev. Thomas Gamble, Uitenhage, the younger, Miss Sarah R. Cummings, since 1913 on the Huguenot staff. There are seven nephews and four nieces, two of whom are teachers in Huguenot Seminary.

Christ does not dress up a moral picture, and ask you to observe its beauty. He only tells you how to live; and the most beautiful characters the world has ever seen have been those who received and lived these precepts without once conceiving their beauty.—Horace Bushnell.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE AT ACTUAL COST

For Clergymen and Laymen Who are Preferred Risks
(Ages 18-55)

$10,000 Protection has never cost over $9 annually—Under supervision of Insurance Department of the State of Iowa

$25.00 WEEKLY INDEMNITY
Superior rating in the Insurance Field —Membership exceeds 75,000 from every state in the Union and Canada.

OLDEST OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD
No Agents—No Expensive Overhead—Furnishes accident protection at lowest cost. For application blanks and further information write

IOWA STATE TRAVELING MEN'S ASSOCIATION
H. E. REX, Secy.
Fleming Bldg. Des Moines, Iowa
$2.00 pays in full until next February

Our First Mortgage
REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS
net the investor 7% semi-annual interest, guaranteed as to principal and interest, secured by first mortgages on improved real estate in Central Florida and the West Coast, by one of the oldest and most substantial corporations with 14 years' successful experience in the Florida mortgage field. Write for particulars and booklet.
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

HOOT MON!
Raise funds for your Christian Endeavor, Sunday School, or other Church Societies selling delicious Scotmints. Six flavors—Peppermint, Yeast, Wintergreen, Clove, Cinnamon, and Licorice. Sell for 5c. Everybody has a nickel and everybody likes Scotmints.
NO CAPITAL REQUIRED
We extend you 30 days' credit, ship in any quantities and any assortment of flavors.

	320 Pkgs.	500 Pkgs.	1000 Pkgs.
Sells for	$16.00	$25.00	$50.00
Costs you	9.00	13.50	26.00
YOUR PROFIT	$7.00	$11.50	$24.00

SCOTMINTS CO., Inc., Desk C C-3, Jersey City, N. J.

Clip or Copy and Mail NOW
SCOTMINTS CO., INC.,
Desk CC 3, Jersey City, N. J.

Send .... packages of Scotmints—Following assortment.
....Peppermint ....Licorice
....Yeast ....Cinnamon
....Wintergreen ....Clove

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Church .....
Society .....
Reference .....

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. Henry Smith Leiper,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
George N. White, M.A., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York
Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.
Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Co*Sec'y,* Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chair

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secre and Missionary Education Secre
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and A Education Secre
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secre
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educa Program including Social Service, Missio Education, Student and Young People's W aids Ministerial Students, University Past directs campaign to secure Recruits for Chris Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of denomination for the publication and distribu of The Congregationalist, church school e ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teac magazines, children's and young people's we papers, and books for home and church use, book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Man
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregation
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusett
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illino

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congr tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Tr Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTE 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hur Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PAC 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSION FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIO UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasu Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congr tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIET constituent of the Congregational Home Mis ary Society, represents the churches of Massa setts in their home missionary work. The So solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditi gifts, administers trust funds for churches. F erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Se Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Co bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is establishment and support of Evangelical Con gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bo and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; S Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites tributions for this purpose. Bequests and Ann Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Supe tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasu Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICU constituent of the National Society, solicits tributions, administers Special Trust for Chur and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William English, Treasurer, Congregational House, H ford.

English Coal and Trade

(Continued from page 370)

. The country through which we traveled l thrifty. Berlin appears well. But we old that there is much unemployment and in the great industrial centers it is the marked. Here the need is for markets at prices as will return a fair profit to pro-s. One is more than ever impressed with the fact that no nation is sufficient unto itself. Only by mutual understanding and good will can nations enjoy real and permanent prosperity.

merican Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. ests and Annuities are solicited in order that House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish Missionary Organizations with business offices ainimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 on Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

acon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

he visitation and personal missionary service nnection with our churches. Emergency re-Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribu-and legacies gratefully received and scrupu-administered.

m Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

orated 329 Boston Reorganized 1922

man's Friend Society, Inc.

Society, reorganized 22, now fully rep-s the Congregational hes of New England practical, social and us work among sea-Has finely equipped s at 287 Hanover oston, and at Vine-Haven, and Reading s at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. ociety provides dormitory accommodations, g and recreation rooms, religious services, ables, and games of many kinds, a restau-a canteen, shower baths, postal and bank-cilities. Donations and bequests solicited. butions received on an annuity basis. Pres-Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., . Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore sfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Charles E. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Franklin P. Shumway; Office, 618 Congre-al House.

erican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

only American undenominational interna-and national Society aiding seamen. ntains a Sailors' Home and Institute at est Street, New York City. Libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing New York. LISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). wrecked and destitute seamen aided. PORTED by contributions and legacies. N B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary. RENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 76 Wall St., York, to whom contributions may be sent.

nerican Sunday School Union

elphia, Pa. Founded 1817

ional, Interdenominational. Establishes and ins Union Sunday Schools in the outlying districts of the country. Publishes and tes moral and religious literature. Helps urches of Christ by its pioneer and founda-ork, not duplicated by any other agency. rted by voluntary gifts. Contributions so-Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. butions and communications relative to n any part of the country may be sent to w England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt., 8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Evénts to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Oct. 2, 10.30 A.M. Program will include address by Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, just returned from the Orient, and a commissioning service for Miss Margaret Hammaker, under appointment to India.

State Conferences

ALABAMA (White), Tallassee, Nov.
CONNECTICUT, South Manchester, Nov. 3-4.
GEORGIA (Colored), Thomasville, Nov. 18-22.
IDAHO, BOISE, Sept. 29-30, Oct. 1.
KENTUCKY, Evarts, Sept. 26-27.
SOUTH CAROLINA, Columbia, Nov.
TENNESSEE (White), Daisy, Sept. 21-23.
UTAH, Salt Lake City, Oct.
WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.
WISCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

RISIBLES

Sam—"What am you doin' now?"

Bo—"I'se an exporter."

Sam—"An exporter?"

Bo—"Yaas, the Pullman Company jus' fired me."—Black and Blue Jay.

Little Janie—"Mother, if baby was to swallow the goldfish, would he be able to swim like one?"

Mother—"Oh, my heavens, no, child. They'd kill him."

"But they didn't."—Phoenix.

The evening lesson was from the Book of Job and the minister had just read, "Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out," when immediately the church was in total darkness.

"Brethren," said the minister, with scarcely a moment's pause, "in view of the sudden and startling fulfilment of this prophecy, we will spend a few minutes in silent prayer for the electric lighting company."—Boston Transcript.

Sandy McTavish, proprietor of a corner confectionery, was the proud owner of a new cash register. One day, when an old friend came into the shop and bought a five-cent cigar, the customer noted that Sandy pocketed the money instead of putting it into the drawer.

"Why not ring it up?" he asked. "You'll be forgetting it."

"Oh, I'll nae forget it," replied the wary Scot. "Ye ken I keep track in mah head until I get a dollar, an' then I ring it up. It saves the wear-r and tear-r on the machine."—American Legion.

The story is told of an engraver in the Government printing shop at Washington who, at the time the first $20 yellow-back gold certificates were issued, received his salary in those new bills and decided to take a trip to New York.

When paying his hotel bill, he handed the clerk one of the yellow-backs, whereupon the clerk turned it over several times, then refused as politely as he could to accept it, saying that he had never seen such a bill and thought it of no value.

"Why," said the engraver, "of course it's good. I made it myself last week."

"That's what I thought," returned the clerk, as he rang for the house detective.—Boston Globe.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

September 17, 1925

Vol. CX No. 38

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook	355
Editorial—Brains, Work, and Government	356
The Cult of Intolerance—An Editorial Message	358
From Our Western Editor	360
Revelation, by Whitney Montgomery	360
William Tyndal, by Edward Dwight Eaton	361
The Parable of the Home Harbor	362
Underpaid and Overpaid Ministers, by Francis L. Cooper	363
Young People and Church Attendance, by Harry T. Stock	364
A Practical Plan of United Church Action, by Frederick L. Fagley	365
Howard University Advances	366
Along Our Stream of Freedom	367
On Report of Committee of Twelve	367
Vital Questions for Congregationalists	368
Northfield's General Conference	369
Congregationalists at Chautauqua	370
English Coal and Trade, by B. F. Stanton	370
Among the New Books	371
The Congregationalist's Bible Class	372
Our Invalid Parish—The Blind Spot	373
Closet and Altar	373
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic	373
With the Children—Short Fuse, by Winifred Davidson	374
News of the Churches	375

"Dr. Jackson tells some wonderful stories. He must be a great traveler."

"No. But his mind wanders a lot."—Judge.

An Irishman was astonished to receive the following letter from his son in London:

Dear Father:

I am in a deuce of a hole. Kindly send me £10, and oblige,

Your loving son,
PAT.

P.S.—After writing this letter I was so stricken with remorse that I ran after the postman and tried to get it back. I can only pray that it will not reach you."

But who could be more astonished than the son when he received this reply:

Dear Son:

Your prayers are answered. The letter did not reach me.

FATHER.
—Presbyterian Witness.

Our Weekly Story Papers

Have Real Value in Moulding Christian Character.
Make them a part of your church-school equipment.

THE WELLSPRING

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE OF TEEN AGE

This weekly has long been famous for the appeal of its wholesome stories. These stories more than entertain,—they set up new ideals and help build character.

Young people today are thinking for themselves as never before, on the vitally important problems of individual and social life. The stimulating discussion courses and special articles featured in The Wellspring will give them sympathetic guidance.

Single subscription, $1.00 a year
School subscription, 22 cents a quarter, 88 cents a year

BOYLAND

FOR JUNIOR BOYS

Approximately nine to twelve years of age

Each page is crammed full of stories of heroic adventure, of dauntless pioneers, of brave knights and of courageous makers of history. These stories are designed to help junior boys to solve their own problems, but they are in no sense "preachy." There are also articles on wild animals in their native haunts, on "things to make," on radio and electricity, and other themes dear to the heart of every boy.

Single subscription, 75 cents a year
School subscription, 15 cents a quarter, 60 cents a year

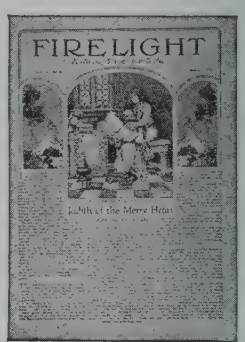
FIRELIGHT



FOR JUNIOR GIRLS

Approximately nine to twelve years of age

Firelight features fascinating stories of boarding-school life, of brave princes and beautiful princesses, and of new friends in foreign lands. These stories depict valor, faithfulness, loyalty, love, and the many other virtues. They are not only entertaining; they are an influence for all that is good. There are also interesting articles on "home-making," camping, athletics, nature study, travel, and biography, as well as fascinating puzzles and games.

Single subscription, 75 cents a year
School subscription, 15 cents a quarter, 60 cents a year

THE MAYFLOWER

FOR BEGINNERS AND PRIMARY CHILDREN

Approximately four to eight years of age

Little children love to pore over these pages, reading the fascinating stories and looking at the charming illustrations. They love the handwork suggestions, solving the puzzles, and playing the new games. Only materials which will tend to create desirable attitudes and motives are selected. Some of the stories are simple enough for the "littlest" child to enjoy, while others are better fitted for the Primary child.

Single subscription, 50 cents a year
School subscription, 10 cents a quarter, 40 cents a year

Send for sample copies

Congregational Publishing Society
(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston
156 Fifth Ave., New York
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 39 September 24, 1925

The Congregational Church in Woodstock, Vermont

Rev. Herbert H. Hines is the pastor

THE VALUE OF HIGHER EDUCATION

By David Starr Jordan

THE BLOW WHICH ANGERS CHINA

By Robert E. Lewis

WHAT GERMANY AND FRANCE ARE THINKING

By B. F. Stanton

A Suggestion For Our Pastors

THE Washington meetings of the Congregational National Council are near at hand. In preparation The Congregationalist will publish a National Council Number on October 8th. That issue will give a survey of all departments of Congregational work, missionary, educational, and otherwise. It will have articles on the attractions of the national capital, the local churches, and the latest word on plans for the Council meetings. This issue will be an ideal one to place in the hands of our church people who do not now take the paper, and need the inspiration and information which it will contain regarding what Congregationalists stand for and what they are doing.

Dr. Charles E. Burton writes:

It has occurred to me that the scheme which Dr. Pierce used in his church (in Washington) of selling The Congregationalist at five cents a copy might be applied very widely just in advance of the meeting of the National Council. Would it not be possible to interest the pastors in ordering a certain number of the Council Number of The Congregationalist to be sold in that fashion with a view to securing new subscriptions? I pass this on for what it is worth.

Cordially yours,

C. E. BURTON.

If this idea appeals to you fill out and mail the attached coupon for as many copies as you feel you can dispose of.

- - - -

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | September 24, 1925 | No. 39

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D.
Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

wo Views of China

HE article by Robert E. Lewis, and the report of an address by President J. Leighton Stuart, in this is-e, present in a striking way the Chinese viewpoint the present crisis in China, and the viewpoint of those ssionaries who assume toward the whole problem of e East an attitude of Christian idealism as distin-ished from what might be described as a Christian-perialistic-Western civilization attitude. Possibly ere is a point where these attitudes meet, though they present extremes of temper and opinion—the extremes an idealism careful for nothing but the interests of e Kingdom of God; and a safe, conservative idealism ore concerned about the preservation of institutions d the maintenance of authority.

It is fair to say that there are those who take a dely different view of recent events from that ex-essed or suggested in the articles which we publish. addition to the reading of many letters and inter-ews at second hand we have had extensive and intimate st-hand interviews with men who have been recently China. Some of these see the menacing aspect of the uation in China in a different light. Without defend-g, or palliating, the actual circumstances that have ought about the present upheaval they see a menace widespread lawlessness and of a general conflagration ich cannot benefit China and which may disrupt all asonable basis of foreign contacts, and at the same ne endanger the lives and properties of foreigners in ina, unless there is firmness and decision in main-ning order. They point out that the demand for extra-territoriality comes at a time when China is incapable of maintaining order and protecting life, and when the withdrawal of a measure of protection by foreign governments might spell disaster. Dr. MacWillie, a physician of Hankow, for the last ten years in private practice, but formerly a missionary of the American Episcopal Church, says that the shooting of seven Chinese in his own city occurred at a time when within a few minutes the British armory, with arms and ammunition, would have been in possession of a mob, and that the sacrifice of these lives was necessary to prevent a much more serious outbreak. He suggests that this typifies the general situation, and he points out that the statement by the faculty of the Canton Christian College, recently published in The Congregationalist, was in error in stating that the Chinese students were fired upon in Shameen (the foreign concession) without provocation, and that two days after the statement was issued the error was corrected and an apology tendered to the British. We have been able only partially to verify this statement.

The Fruits of Imperialism

TWO things seem evident in Chinese affairs, first, that recent events are symptoms of a situation rather than causes, and second, that this situation is largely the direct fruits of imperialism—meaning by this term the conventional policy of a political-commercial-expansionism under the ultimate dominance of a power expressed in military prestige and force. It is this fact that makes Great Britain bear so heavily the brunt of the present reaction, and the intensity of Chinese antagonism. As a matter of fact statistics show that British control of industries is limited, and much less than Japanese control, which precipitated the present crisis in Shanghai. But British general commercial interests are extensive and Britain, for many reasons, symbolizes the imperialistic ideal with its cult of racial superiority, etc. It is an ideal with elements of good as well as of evil. It has produced a strong race of officials and administrators, mostly men of integrity and many of them men of culture. Their rule has been through a strange blending of prestige and sheer force. But the evils of the whole imperialistic ideal have been increasingly evident. The fruits of a policy in which has intermingled so much of selfishness and force are appearing, and the question seems to be whether the best of British imperialism can be preserved with the overthrowing of the worst. Probably the hope of Britain's future in the East, and especially in China, lies in the success with which she can become and express what the unarmed London "bobby" represents in that great city as the symbol of law and order, in contrast to the well-armed American "cop" in cities groaning under the burden of crime. Here is where it seems to us President Stuart sounds the true and hopeful note, and it is especially pleasing to find him speaking so highly of the missionaries of the London Missionary Society, standing loyally, side by side with American missionaries, as real ambassadors of Christ in this time of stress. Law and order have broken down rather badly in Western civilization. It is our failure at home that is most evident in our failure in the East. Christian character and sympathy, eagerness for helpfulness and understanding, not the spirit that demands but the spirit that gives—these are as necessary in West as in East if, out of the present muddle of a force-stricken and selfish world, we are to build a better America and a better Western civilization, as well as a better China.

Dr. Newton's Change of Allegiance

THE decision of Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, after having been formerly connected with the Baptist and Congregational communions, to forsake his more recent allegiance with the Universalists to accept re-ordination as a priest of the Episcopal Church, has occasioned a mild sensation. About three years ago the Editor called on Dr. Newton at his apartment in New York and in the course of an intimate and very delightful conversation sensed a certain spiritual restlessness in Dr. Newton and an uneasiness in his pastoral relationship due entirely to this spiritual experience, and not in any way to external conditions and relationships which were very happy. Dr. Newton seemed to be undergoing an experience of deeply evangelical quickening with a certain longing for an opportunity to come into larger and more direct approach to the masses in need of the Gospel, than was implied in a quiet and cultured pastorate among the well-to-do. We should not have been surprised at the time, or since, to have heard of Dr. Newton abandoning the New York pastorate to return to some such striking opportunity in the Middle West, and we had hopes that if such a day came he might possibly find his place in a return to the Congregational fellowship. It had not occurred to us that Dr. Newton was likely to become an Episcopal rector.

In this new experience, while Dr. Newton goes to a desirable church, at a very substantial salary, the rectorship of a particular church is incidental; as in the case of R. J. Campbell in England it is the forsaking of a "free" type of church fellowship for the "authoritarian" type that is significant. In Dr. Campbell's case the "conversion" implied in many respects an almost fundamental change of viewpoint and conviction, so much so that the City Temple preacher rather vigorously renounced the heresy of his "new theology" days. We shall not look for any such renunciation on Dr. Newton's part of any phase of his former ministry. Probably he regards the decision that has occasioned so much surprise as an outcome of gradual approach and development. In his statement regarding the proposed change he stresses the fact that "after all, there is only one church of Christ," and emphasizes his interest in "our common Christian enterprise."

None the less in Dr. Newton's transfer of outward allegiance there is probably more revelation of an inward crisis, if not of an actual renunciation, than he himself realizes. Liberal men have ceased to see in the historic and spiritual division between "authoritarian" and "free" types of religion a necessary enmity or even rivalry. Men of each type have come to see in the other type an expression of spiritual moods, tempers, and experiences the sincerity and value of which they recognize though they cannot express their own faith and experience in that particular way. Larger spiritual recognitions have developed, and things that were once regarded as hopelessly antagonistic are now thought of as possibly complements of a larger whole, or as opposite poles of the one sphere of truth. But this spiritual synthesis has not made much progress beyond the souls of individuals; it has thus far, though there is much talk done very little to break down barriers or alter historic divisions. There is still a sufficiently marked cleavage between the authoritarian-episcopal type of experience and of religious organization, and the "free" or independent type—so decided a cleavage that Dr. Newton's going over from one to the other is not a superficial or accidental circumstance.

Dr. Newton has been "confirmed" and he is to be "ordained." What becomes of the vital faith of all the years of ministry and of the ordination that has been effective thus far in three different communions? The implication seems to be either that the faith and ordination of former years have been defective, or that the "confirmation" and ordination now required are after all the signs and symbols of a somewhat sectarian organization and environment. Dr. Newton in his ecstatic account of his new experience describes the church which he is entering as "the roomiest church in Christendom." We trust we shall not offend either the good Doctor or our beloved and respected friends in the Episcopal communion if we suggest that its roominess has a very narrow and zealously guarded portal. We are not complaining, but are simply stating the fact. Had the Episcopal communion actually been as roomy as Dr. Newton suggests many of us would still be within its portals. Shall we be deemed ungracious if we reca

r. Robert F. Horton's blunt words in his famous con-ssion, Why I am a Congregationalist? Concerning the aim to be the catholic church, Dr. Horton complained ike both of the Anglican, and of the Roman communion, is too small.

We would not make the mistake of setting over gainst the ideal of Christian catholicity the conception a narrow and futile independency. We entirely agree ith Dr. Newton's statement that "each man should bor where he can do his best work." We should say so that for each man authority, freedom, and catholicity e alike found in the following of his own convictions id visions. We rejoice that Dr. Newton is not dis-edient to what he deems his heavenly vision, and we ish him Godspeed in his new environment and min-try. In view, however, of the way in which Dr. New-n's conversion to Episcopacy has been exploited by e publicity department of the Diocese of Pennsyl-nia it does not seem inappropriate to say that, without sparaging the faith or practice of others, many within e "free" churches are not strangers to the ideal of tholicity upon which Dr. Newton has based his change ecclesiastical allegiance. We shall continue to believe at the vision and practice of the largest catholicity, id the reality of the one communion of saints in Christ, e not necessarily associated with the acceptance and cognition of particular symbols, rituals, and church sciplines or with the professed assent to creeds re-rdless of their grammatical and historical meaning.

Aviation Problems

MAN'S age-long struggle for the mastery of the air goes on apace, but with a bewildering succession of hievements, disappointments, disasters, and contro-rsy. Let no one doubt, however, that aviation is mak-g progress. The world has been thrilled by warfare the air, by long-distance exploits leading up to the merican round-the-world flight, and rose to heights of pectancy when the conquest of the North Polar air as attempted by Amundsen and by MacMillan. But th expeditions ended in disappointment and the mem-ers of Amundsen's party barely escaped with their ves. The gigantic dirigible Shenandoah was wrecked the winds of Ohio, and its commander and thirteen en were killed. Then came the airplane attempt to to Hawaii with another disappointment and rescue a plane crew after desperate days of drifting and des-iring search.

We had an airplane scandal during the war; now, we ave, at least, a big sensation over the whole subject of iation with relation to the War and Navy Depart-ents of our Government. The controversy started at e close of the war, when those most interested in avia-on sought to have that means of national defense rongly organized and generously financed. To do herwise was to allow other nations to get ahead of in aviation for warfare, as they have done.

We have been held back by the policy and influence of rtain officers of the Army and Navy who cling to the d ideas and methods of warfare, and Congressional ap-ropriations have been inadequate. Certain aviation men ish to have a separate Federal department of aviation under experts, instead of having it divided between the Army and Navy and under officials untrained in air navigation.

Col. William Mitchell, former Assistant Air Chief of the Army and now Eighth Corps Air Officer, in Texas, has made a slashing attack upon the Army and Navy Departments, charging "almost treasonable administration" and "criminal negligence," referring to the whole air policy in general and to the Shenandoah disaster in particular. Investigations are being arranged, and evidently the facts will be brought out. If the present policy is wrong we may fairly expect a change of policy.

We trust that the wise and scientific development of aviation will be promoted by the Government. It should be guarded against the prejudice of reactionaries, the excess of zeal of faddists, and against waste of money. We also hope that we may not have too much militarism in our air program.

Surely aviation is making certain older forms of defense less effective and more or less obsolete. While recent disappointments and accidents prove that air navigation is still involved in danger and uncertainty, there is abundant evidence that we are on the eve of a new era in which aircraft will have an important place. Already Europe has regular air routes and schedules of mail and passenger service. In the United States we have our coast to coast air mail in continuous service. Henry Ford has his airplane line which he proposes to expand, and he proposes to place upon the market a low-priced all-metal airplane. Air craft may soon be one of the utilities, which may serve our personal and social, business and religious uses, to a considerable degree, as the automobile now serves us.

In Brief

Speaking of "roominess" in the Church, it is an interesting circumstance that Dr. Joseph Fort Newton goes from a denomination which the Federal Council of Churches excludes to one which has thus far excluded itself from that organization. The roomiest sort of church fellowship and church organization, wherever it may be found, apparently has still plenty of room for "roominess."

* *

Since the formal consummation of Church Union in Canada and the meeting of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, last June, voting in local congregations on the question of union has taken place in two Provinces. Both go overwhelmingly pro-union, in Manitoba 478 voting concurrence and 11 non-concurrence, and in New Brunswick 161 for and 22 against. The latest summary, given by Dr. Herbert E. Thomas in Zion's Herald, shows a total for the Dominion of 8,783 congregations in the United Church, as against 719 that have voted non-concurrence. Of the 719 opposed to union nine are Congregational and 710 were formerly connected with the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Referring to the convening of local presbyteries and conferences in completing the organization of the United Church, Dr. Thomas says:

In no solitary instance has any sectarian feeling manifested itself and in all cases members of the former church bodies have vied with one another in the bestowment of honors.

An Epoch of Evangelism

In Relation to Mood, Temperament, and Background

FOR American Congregationalists the career of W. J. Dawson is a matter of interest, not untouched with a sense of tragic disappointment. Dr. Dawson at one period touched our life at a vital point. His address as fraternal delegate from English Congregationalists at the National Council meeting in Des Moines reached the crest of a wave of reaction in our churches from cold and critical processes and from a somewhat futile conservatism toward a broader, deeper, and saner movement of evangelism than had as yet been fostered. Out of the Des Moines experience came a movement in which Dr. Dawson was welcomed as a conspicuous leader. It was in many respects a notable movement and in sporadic ways its purpose and effect have been continued in our fellowship. Dr. Dawson's leadership was not only conspicuous, but able. His addresses were of a high order, and he contributed to the movement a book that sounded a clarion call. The Evangelistic Note was marked by a passion that, once having been felt or expressed, might have been expected to continue as the dominant passion in life and death. But Dr. Dawson's disappearance from this field of leadership in evangelism was as sudden as his rise. His association with American Congregationalism almost entirely ceased and from an activity in America associated with struggle and conquest he passed to what seemed the very safe and tranquil harbor of a wealthy suburban Presbyterian church. So complete seemed Dr. Dawson's abdication of a place of conspicuous leadership that during recent struggles over faith and freedom within the Presbyterian body one would hardly have known that the former eminent Congregationalist was a member of that denomination, or had any part in its life and counsels.

The explanation of much of this is found in Dr. Dawson's recent autobiographic volume, The Autobiography of a Mind (Century Co. $2.00), particularly in the closing pages of the book. Dr. Dawson does not discuss in detail his evangelistic experiences in this country but he does deal with great frankness with the contrast which we have suggested between this period of opportunity and activity, and the subsequent phases of his life in America. The recession from the place of leadership in which he had apparently been amazed to find himself as a result of his visit to the National Council was due in some degree to physical causes, but also in large measure to temperamental and cultural influences. Dr. Dawson found the intense activity and travel of a campaigner very exhausting. "In the end," he says, "Nature sent in her bill, as she usually does, and I paid for my physical indiscretions by a severe surgical operation, leaving the hospital, to continue my endless journeys, with a half-healed wound." The cultural considerations are as frankly stated. Dr. Dawson did not consider himself "altogether fitted for the rôle of the propagandist." His statement is very striking, and worth quoting for its light upon an experience shared with our churches:

My general purpose may be described as an effort to reconcile culture with the simpler forms of religious and social zeal, and in certain quarters this purpose was generously recognized. But in many instances it was clear that my audiences expected from me some thing that I could not give them. My method was t placate, to persuade, to win assent by sweet reasonable ness; the method demanded of me implied a large elemen of that noble fanaticism which usually distinguishes th successful propagandist. To put the matter bluntly my affinities were rather with Erasmus than Luther and in dealing with average human nature Erasmus i rarely successful.

Dr. Dawson thinks that while his mission did no altogether fail a large popular success was possibl only "to men of another kind of temperament."

The essential weakness and failure of that particula phase of Congregational evangelism could not be mor accurately diagnosed than in these words, though w should apply them in a way in which Dr. Dawson hardl intends. The weakness seems to us to lie in the assump tion that evangelism—the deepest concern of Churc and Gospel—must inevitably be dominated by what i "expected" and by traditions of "noble fanaticism" an propagandism. One views with sympathy Dr. Dawson' physical affliction at this period, and one recognizes, a he points out, that no man can rise entirely above hi limitations of training and temperament. None th less we refer to this experience because it touches ver closely what continues to be our deepest problem.

Can evangelism effectively express itself in harmon with, and in and through, culture? Can power in reac ing the people for high things be as effectively manifeste by Erasmus as by Luther? We should like to thin of Wyckliffe, of Tyndale, of Wesley, of Beecher, in r lation to that question. Is it not in a breaking of the tr dition that has created a cleavage between culture an evangelism, in a following of reality and not of what i "expected," that the highest culture and the soundes evangelism are most likely to appear? Dr. Dawson analysis of the post-Des Moines epoch in Congregationa evangelism seems to assume too readily the permanenc and inevitability of a chasm which it is still the chie business of Church and Christian ministry to bridg

A more disconcerting passage appears in the begi ning of Dr. Dawson's book, in which he likewise is dea ing with the contrasts of mood and experience at di ferent epochs. He refers to his own development and t the sense of detachment which has produced "a ne power of sober discrimination" and which has enable him "to distinguish between the relative values of th inner and outer life." He writes:

Bank balances, newspaper publicities, the bubb thing called reputation, the pride of possession, th pleasure of being envied and admired or the pain o being surpassed or neglected—all these now seem t me matters of extreme insignificance.

One would not take these words too literally or wit too definitely personal reference, but does Dr. Dawso mean to imply that these things were once matters o extreme significance, or that they are in general and i any dominating way motives in the Christian ministry It is a challenging thought, for there is not a single on of the possible motives enumerated that is not the direc antithesis of the supreme motive of a ministry wholl and truly Christian.

President Stuart on Conditions in China

By the Editor

[Editorial Note—To avoid misunderstand- President Stuart is referred to, as has n customary hitherto in America, as resident of Peking University." It should, vever, be stated that the name of the in- ution which he heads—a missionary in- ution—has recently been changed to "Yen ng University." The Chinese national uni- sity at Peking wished to be known as king University," and the institution best wn by that title in America surrendered name.)

N the afternoon of Sept. 11, President J. Leighton Stuart of Peking University ke in the American Board rooms to a ll company of people on the situation in na. The occasion was informal, but The gregationalist is privileged to make a re- of President Stuart's remarks and of discussion which followed.

resident Stuart left China at the end of . He found at the time of leaving a of discouragement among many mis- aries. Many were deploring their lack influence and some were questioning ther it was worth while to continue. , since coming to this country, Presi- Stuart had found in some quarters a ng of impatience with the Chinese and ndency toward a hasty and somewhat imistic outlook.

resident Stuart feels that there is, in- , a very serious menace in the present ation in China; not, however, so much the Chinese people as with the reac- s among Western people and especially he attitude of America. "For China," he , "the present experience is one of whole- e and natural awakening to national ciousness." There are, of course, ex- es. There is extravagance of statement, there are unreasonable demands as well egrettable acts of violence. These things, l all such awakenings, are more or less itable, but they represent only the froth the surface. The real movements lie er. "We Americans," said Dr. Stuart, sidering our own history and develop- ; ought, above all others, to be sym- etic."

Bolshevist Influence Exaggerated

e explanation of present movements ed by some is that this is an outburst of hevism. "There has in fact," Dr. Stuart "been a movement financed from Mos- but it has been incidental and has been much over-emphasized in the signifi- e attributed to it. It has influenced a small, though perhaps a noisy, number, it has not been so much a definitely munistic movement as an exploitation ievances." The Shanghai affair of May as the occasion for an outburst of ag- ed feeling. Sun Yat Sen, if he had , would undoubtedly have initiated a ution for the same purpose,—that is, he demanding of equality in treaties. effect of the Shanghai affair upon China immediate. There was a unanimous spontaneous reaction. Dr. Stuart stated that in all his years in China he had never known a matter upon which all classes had been so unanimous. As time passed and nothing was done by Western governments towards redress, the Chinese thought and talked more about their underlying grievances, such as unequal treaties, the matter of customs impositions, extra-territoriality, and the special privileges which Christian workers have. As nothing has been done, the Chinese have become more insistent and exacting.

The only solution, Dr. Stuart thinks, is that Chinese demands be met in a reasonable, sympathetic way; otherwise, the situation will become much worse. This is the only practical way out of the difficulty, and commercial interests, if they could but realize it, have everything to gain by reasonable settlement. The course now proposed by commercial interests, involving blockading, bombarding, etc., is futile. "Force," says Dr. Stuart, "is the only thing in China today that has no force." He pointed out that there is now in China no unified government from which to wring concessions. The only power in China is public opinion, and the hope of a better way lies in meeting aroused, wronged, indignant public opinion. The country is under the control of various military chieftains of varying strength and power, a condition which gives no unified government. The situation is pathological and psychological. Serious and full of ugly possibilities as the situation is, the remedy is simple. A little friendliness and sympathy and the Shanghai affair would either never have happened, or the results would have been removed.

America Can Help

The only country which really can help is America. For various reasons other powers have a weakened position in relation to the present crisis. The Chinese attitude toward America is one of eager and almost frightened expectancy, looking for us to live up to our gestures. If our policy of amiable friendliness turns out to amount to nothing, they will turn against us far more rabidly.

Discussing the bearing of all this on Christian work Dr. Stuart said that the really important thing and the thing that offsets all apparent ingratitude is that the Chinese Christians have proven themselves both Chinese and Christian. Dr. Stuart does not know of a single Chinese who has renounced his Christian faith during this crisis. Many do feel very deeply regarding foreign governments and the special privileges accorded foreign missionaries. Dr. Stuart's anxiety is not regarding the Chinese, nor regarding individual missionaries, but regarding our corporate attitude toward the Chinese and toward Christian work in China. He declared that what he had spoken of as a menace has become a superb opportunity, but he feels we are not meeting it in the right way; that there is a tendency to become unduly concerned about lives and property, about whether schools can be opened or not, and about the whole mechanism of missionary activity. The only question, he thinks, that matters is whether we act according to the spirit of Jesus Christ. The situation will depend entirely upon the way that we meet it and especially upon the way in which we meet it in our organized capacities.

He recommends that before the conference called for Oct. 26 it would be a gracious and effective thing if missionary societies voluntarily canceled their special privileges, which, he says, are likely to be canceled anyway. He thinks that in our anxiety to be "faithful stewards" even in the matter of missions, we have appeared to the Chinese to be little other than imperialistic. Our natural concern about property interests suggests that we are primarily capitalists, and that we have to "play safe" to protect our interests. If we could anticipate treaty revision, it would do much more good than yielding only what may be forced upon us. "If we surprised the Chinese," said Dr. Stuart, "by sublime revelations of sacrifice in the places where they expect it least, the effects would be correspondingly great." With the possible exception of the London Missionary Society, Dr. Stuart said, the American Board has been, in the directions in which he suggests action, the most progressive force in China.

The Immediate Outlook

Prof. Howard S. Galt, a member of the faculty of Peking University, in the discussion, expressed thorough sympathy with Dr. Stuart's statement. "The situation," he said, "is one of ages of development, and it is exceedingly complex." He recalled the saying of Dr. Arthur H. Smith who, when asked on one occasion regarding the "bottom facts of China," replied, "There is no bottom and there are no facts."

Asked regarding the effect of the present situation on the opening of schools in China, Dr. Stuart replied that there is no chance of British schools opening this fall, and there may be a tendency to boycott British teachers. The situation at Peking University is in some ways more favorable, and Dr. Stuart described how Peking University had passed through the crisis. Facing a crowd of students stirred to their depths, with Chinese teachers on the staff, who were intensely patriotic, the faculty of the university issued a statement which appeared in the Chinese press on June 3. This statement represented a faculty of Chinese, British, and American members. It was followed by statements by British and American mission groups, and the students were greatly impressed by these statements. During the tense weeks of the upheaval Dr. Stuart said that he had never felt more deeply the nearness of his Chinese colleagues. The thing, he thought, that impressed them was that here were a group really trying to be Christians.

Dr. Stuart concluded the discussion with the statement that he was never more hopeful for the outlook of Christianity.

The Blow Which Angers a Nation

Causes and Issues of the Recent Trouble in China

By Robert E. Lewis
Y. M. C. A., Cleveland, Ohio

MOST of our early information about the situation in China came from foreign sources. China owns no cables and controls no international news service. Letters and documents are now available which state the Chinese side. The national strike against the British and Japanese still controls the mind of the Chinese. It can be dealt with only when the Chinese position is considered and understood. Let us see if we can state it.

Former Minister Trevelyan, now in the British Parliament, authenticates the Chinese charge that at the beginning a Japanese "boss" struck and injured a Chinese girl worker in a Shanghai textile mill. She was twelve years old and had fallen asleep in the midst of her twelve-hour night shift (sic). Her eighteen-year-old sister protested and was slapped in the face by the boss. Chinese workers going to and from their jobs between the night and day shift protested the treatment of these working girls and were discharged. The workers organized a protest strike. The Japanese resumed operations with other laborers. Machinery was injured. Arrests were made. The Japanese ultimately locked out over twenty thousand Chinese workers, many of them in mills not previously disturbed by the dispute.

Chinese workers gathered at a factory gate demanding explanations. The door opened, not to treat with the workers as they had expected, or to explain, but to fire; one workman killed; seven severely wounded; five others wounded but less seriously.

The Japanese murderers were not arrested and the Chinese workers who injured the property were.

The Chinese students in the colleges and high schools protested without avail to the public authorities and finally decided that their only hope of securing justice for their fellow nationals was to appeal to the public. The officials of the international city of Shanghai were deaf to their appeals. Their own officials were without authority to intervene in this great foreign territory. The mixed court, their only hope of succor, had been seized by foreigners some years before and, in spite of protest from the Chinese, joint control of this court had not been restored to them; not only a breach of faith but of treaties.

The Fateful 30th of May

So they decided to go to the public with their case. They were to speak in groups and distribute hand-bills at points along the Nanking Road, the great central artery of traffic in international Shanghai.

In the midst of this appeal to the public some of the students were arrested. They thought this would give them their chance to be heard. Crowds followed and concentrated at the Lauza police station in a high state of tension. After some scuffling between the foreign police and the students and efforts to liberate their comrades, the foreign police upon orders of the British officer fired forty-four shots into the student crowd, killing nine and wounding eleven.

This was the fateful 30th of May. From this day the new unity of China is likely to date.

To aggravate the state of public opinion the "rate payers" who are all foreign Christians, excepting a few Jews and Parsees, declined to attend their own "rate payers" meetings, two of them, and thus the ordinance to begin the regulation of child labor was killed. The Chinese who pay eighty per cent. of the taxes in international Shanghai are completely disfranchised.

"Organization" was their only hope, and they organized. Now there are 180,000 in the Shanghai labor unions. Such a situation is without parallel in the Orient. All students, men and women, and the most powerful native financial organization—the Shanghai Chinese Chamber of Commerce—and the union of retail merchants all supported the new born "non-co-operation movement."

Shanghai is a vast shipping port. The workers and dock hands left. Shanghai is the central tourist center. Hotels were without service. Shanghai is the residence headquarters for foreigners, 21,000 of them having their homes there. Their trusted servants failed to appear. Their offices were deserted. Students having already paid their bills for board and tuition remained in the college halls to the end of the term but absented themselves from classes in order to lead the agitation. The boycott was now applied to the goods of the offending nations, Britain and Japan.

All this hubbub might have been dealt with, even then, by consultation, but the international city of Shanghai seemed to act upon the theory that "the white man can do no wrong." The Chinese appeals to the municipal council for an impartial investigation were of no avail. Finally the ministers of the foreign powers of the capital, Peking, instituted their own inquiry and as a result called upon Shanghai to make amends. Shanghai was declared to be in the wrong. But Shanghai refused. Instead of making restitution, troops had been pouring in and Shanghai was fortified. Volunteers constantly patrolled, though during these first weeks not a foreign life had been taken. Machine guns and bigger guns from the assembled warships were ranged along the Whangpoo River and dominated the city.

The Chinese, like the Anglo-Saxon, has an innate sense of justice, but foreigners have flouted China for years, one wrong having been inflicted after another. Last of all, the Washington agreements of 1921-22, upon which the Chinese had built high hopes of readjustment and better relations, were still inoperative. The French this time were in the wrong.

All this sense of injustice came to a head as if by magic. The protests spread to distant places and became national. China awakened to the realization that she could not depend upon the moral fiber of the West. This was a terrible awakening. Individuals had known it before. Now the masses believed it. Their demands led to riots, even in the westernmost province of Szechuen. A great parade was held in Peking which is not a "foreign" colony or "settlement," and at Canton in the far South. Everywhere they demanded justice and the righting of China's wrongs suffered at the hands of the Christians!

As the non-co-operative movement goes on co-ordinating the mind of millions of orientals for the first time into a national unit, we must realize that China is not on trial, but foreigners.

Chinese Demands

Out of it all came definite statements of purpose. The Chinese demand a fair investigation, a fixing of responsibility, and reparations. They make other general demands:

To oppose foreign oppression.
To struggle for the national independence and liberty of China.
To abrogate all unequal treaties.
To restore to China all territory leased as "settlements."
To secure the withdrawal of foreign troops.
To fight industrial imperialism.

To them soldiers and force are now used to compel the Chinese to work under an unheard of industrial system as bad as that which the British overturned nearly a hundred years ago at the beginning of the industrial era. They call the use of force by foreigners to back up the indefensible industrial conditions and to refuse justice and a rule of law, "industrial imperialism." To "fight industrial imperialism" has now become one of the slogans of the struggle which is dislocating the commerce of the Orient and already has cost the trading nations more in loss of business, vastly more, than a reasonable atonement for these wrongs would have brought in fines and penalties.

In the midst of the wild demands of an inflamed public mind the calm voice of the real Chinese mediators are reassuring. One of the most influential of them is Dr. David Yui, national secretary of the Y. M. C. A. The Chinese have such confidence in him that they sent him as the national people's representative to the Washington Conference. His letters to the Municipal Council of Shanghai on June 5 and June 10, and to the public on June 21 are couched in restrained terms. He makes no charges but incessantly demands a joint investigation. But Shanghai refused it and in refusing allowed the flame to spread everywhere.

The National Associated Chinese Chambers of Commerce, to use their words, "are now determined, unless the municipal authorities of Shanghai change their policy, to sever economic relations with those nations which are held responsible for the killing and wounding of the students and laborers in Shanghai, and to sacrifice all our material interests for the righteous cause of securing justice and fair treatment for our compatriots." The student strike leaders said an interview that the "movement is not nti-foreign in general, nor Bolshevik, as ey allege, but it is orderly non-co-operation ith the British and Japanese, the only ethod we know. We will strive to the end. -We are a peace-loving people, but we have defend ourselves. America and China are e two great republics on each side of the acific. We have been claiming to be iends.—We wonder why your marines are ere and in our colleges. We strongly pro- st this occupation of our schools.—We ant you to stand for justice and for your vn policy."

As the non-co-operative movement spreads China, students are brought into difficult elations with their foreign professors. A eautifully delicate but nevertheless per- ctly transparent plan has been followed t many interior points. "They request an ssembly" with the foreigners at which both des "shall sincerely and cordially make orrection of the facts relative to this great ot in Shanghai." If the foreigners "will- lly support their mother country, we shall gard them as forerunners of Western im- erial aggression in China. Hence all hinese shall withdraw from their co-operat- g positions with them."

Here we get the sting of moral judgment. If the foreigners refuse to stand for right- ousness" the Chinese will refuse to co- perate with them. If they admit that the ction of the Shanghai police "was offensive (1) Christian principles, (2) humanity, 3) international morality, they must then ot only show signs of sympathy with the hinese but must try to offend might and efend right."

The method is to put foreigners on notice f these proposals, but if "there is no sign f response nor any definite expression of pinion, all Chinese students, teachers, ervants, and other employees must imme- iately declare non-co-operation."

So the vast Orient proceeds upon its way f appraising and deflating Western civili- ation.

In support of the Chinese contention, I cannot help quoting from Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. "I venture to say if the foreign interests in China will respect the rights of the Chinese people and deal with them in justice; if they would even give them the rights and respect the rights as they were defined at the Disarmament Conference, there would be no trouble in China with foreign powers."

Parables of Safed the Sage

A Parable of Originality

There came to me one who said, I fain would know the secret of thine Originality.

And I bowed low, and let him prattle on, and contradicted him not; for if any man think me to possess any good quality, why should I grieve him by telling him of his Mistake?

And I said unto him, The secret of mine Originality is a secret so far as I am concerned, and if I possess Originality and that by a secret, then would I continue to keep it secret.

And he pressed me that I should tell him the secret of mine Originality.

And I said, It is a Charm, which I carry in my Vest Pocket.

And he said, Wilt thou let me see it?

And I said, It is a Charm of Great Potency, and I wear it on one end of my Watch Chain.

And he asked me if I kept it in a Locket, or whether it were something like Radium, and I told him Nay.

And after a time I produced my Charm whereby I achieve Originality.

And I showed him the end of my watch-chain that hath a watch, that I may be reminded of the flight of time, and then I showed him what I wear upon the other end, which is the secret of my Originality.

Yea, I showed him a small pair of Shears.

And he said, I understand not.

And I said, Hear, O man, the one great definition of Originality.

And he said, Speak, for I am listening.

And I said, Originality consisteth in remembering what thou dost read, and forgetting where thou hast read it.

And he said unto me, That is a Fine Definition. Where didst thou read it?

And I said, I have forgotten; therefore is that definition Original.

And it grieved me a little that he should have taken me so completely at my word. For that Definition is really Original with me, and I read it nowhere, save when I had written it myself.

But I am a Philosopher, and I know that the true symbol of Originality as well as the means to its attainment is that which I wear on my watch-chain, even a pair of Scissors. For he that thinketh that anything he thinketh hath been thought by him first, lo, some other man thought it a thousand years ago; and no man knoweth from whom the ancients found it.

God's Arrow

By Eloise Dean

The forest closes 'round my questioning feet.
I cannot see one step beyond yon tree;
The trail is lost, but God will surely meet
My every need. He always cares for me.

Undaunted, on, with singing feet I go;
For, close beside the very spots that mark
Perplexity for me, He waits, I know.
With Him, I need not fear unknown or dark.

I may not hear His voice nor feel Him near,
But, pausing where the trail is lost today,
One long, unhurried moment,—I shall hear
A singing arrow, shot to point the way.

I do not hesitate to express the conviction that attendance by young men at Sunday school or other regular religious work, with its refining atmosphere, is signally preventive against crime and worthy of careful study by those who are dismayed by the increase of crime on the part of the young men of America.—Justice Lewis L. Fawcett, New York Supreme Court.

The Power of Man's Spirit

By Grace T. Davis

I see the things that people do,
The things they move, the things they make.
I hear the things that people say,
The waves of air that rise and break.

But other forces vaster far
Are pulsing like a darting star,
Invisible, unheard, profound,
Through all the spirit realm around.

Loves, blessings, prayers, are flashing swift—
Man's greatest, vastest, sweetest gift.
On all things near they shed their grace,
And change to heaven this lowly place.

They never cease; they never die;
To realms remote we never see,
With flight unending onward fly,
Through all the ages that shall be.

I see the things that people do,
The things they move, the things they make.
But there are powers we cannot scan,
The God-like, mystic force of man.

Chicago, Illinois

The Value of Higher Education

Trend and Purpose of the University Today

By David Starr Jordan
Stanford University

THE value of higher education is more felt in America today than ever before anywhere, in all the world's history. This condition is, no doubt, largely due to the recognition of the practical usefulness of knowledge towards "getting on" in life. The university now gives not only intellectual training, but also training adapted to the actual needs of actual men. The old traditional college course of Latin, Greek, higher mathematics, with a smattering of history and literature, and a final wash of safe and sane philosophy, harmless because nowhere touching reality, has passed away. It satisfied a few "Roman-minded or Greek-minded men," and not many others.

The American university of today rests on a different principle. It tries to give each student what he needs, he being preferably himself the judge. He may make mistakes as to choice, as he may in much more weighty matters, marriage for example, but he can judge more wisely than can a consensus of educational experts who have never seen him, and know nothing of his aspirations. Besides, the very fact of choice is of itself a large factor in education. Prescribed courses of study are like ready made clothing, fitting no one except the man who does not care.

Among the defects current in our system is the giving of "information instead of contact," the use of standardization instead of inspiration, the neglect of the vital necessity of right-living as a necessity in "usefulness in life."

As to the first of these, the student should not be stuffed with mere information, imperfectly understood, soon forgotten, often not worth remembering. The goal of higher education should be intellectual freedom, and all real freedom has its rise in a free mind. It should inspire the student to think for himself. It should help him to gather his own information when needed and to enable him to test for himself the sources of fact. It should teach him that sound thinking does not lie in conservatism, nor is liberal thought the basis of the latest economic, social, or literary fantasy. Neither hoary age nor red novelty should turn him from his path. Only the weakminded can be rounded up to the creed of a church, the platform of a party, or the notion of a cult. Only the belated college or the unbalanced one will ever try to accomplish this.

The evil of standardization in the suppression of individuality has several different sources. Among them are inertia, the spirit of order, and the conservatism of student bodies. The swarm of students is now so great that they must often be handled in bunches rather than treated as individuals. It is easier to give out information to masses, than to inspire the use of the mind in each disciple. To think for himself and to enjoy the process, is the best result of higher education. Moreover, the spirit of order is strong with most teachers and dealing with most varying of human elements, it is easy to assume that all units are alike and that each can be graded in percentages. The marking system is better fitted for measuring cord wood than culture, but it makes estimates easy.

Finally the student body itself is in many ways ultra-conservative. "This is the way we do it at Yale." "Stanford men respect Stanford traditions."

Moral Training

The matter of moral training is most important as well as most difficult. The attitude of the organized church often places needless obstacles in the way, by insisting that venerable traditions must guard the progress of knowledge. Science is human experience tested and set in order. By this method and by this only all objective knowledge is secured. We can know nothing until we find it out, not merely think it out. Nor again can we derive it from venerable tradition.

"Colleges," says Emerson, "can only serve us where their purpose is not to drill, but to create, to bring every ray of varied genius to their hospitable halls—by their consumed influence to set the heart of the youth in flame." In life there is no substitute for intelligence. There is no high type of morals not built on or braced by intelligence, and it is for the promotion and shaping of intelligence that the university exists.

Though the trend of university education, on the whole, is toward sane and moral life, and though it can have no higher final end, it cannot pursue its result through any systematized machinery. "The rod behind the mirror," once the reliance of German households, has no place in the university. No system of rewards and punishments ever made men good or wise, and none is more futile than that of honors balanced against demerit marks. Enforced attendance at prayers or chapel or, for that matter, at anything else, fails to rouse the spiritual nature, and didactic teaching or paternal scolding are alike ineffective.

As love casts out fear, so enthusiasm casts out vulgarity, which is vice's initial step. The university man should rise above the cheap temptations which beset youth on every side, now tenfold more numerous than before war raised the lid under which society tried to confine vulgarity and folly.

How the University Serves

The university man should rise above all this, all the more securely with each resisted temptation. The foes he must meet are more subtle than those which center in jazz and bootlegging, as varied as his own relations to society. To meet these, the university should be a strong aid. It has about four roads to this end: the contagion of personality, the inspiration of intellect, the arousing of enthusiasm for intensive work, the devotion to helpfulness towards others. As for the first, to turn our youth towards righteousness we must show them how righteousness looks when it is lived; as to the second, a great teacher always leaves a great mark on every student with whom he comes into real contact; as to the third, great investigators breed investigators—there is an intellectual heredity among scholars as well as a physical one, as every serious worker recognizes.

In Emerson's words again: "Free should the scholar be—free and brave." Give him a message to speak to other men, and when he leaves your care you need fear for him neither the world nor the flesh nor the devil.

The university can exert a tremendous influence for moral life, but only through the unflinching devotion of its members. And this influence must be exerted spontaneously, even unconsciously, by men alien to all forms of vulgarity and vice, and in thorough sympathy with the best in mind or morals in the idealism of youth.

Send Your Pastor to the National Council at Washington

If your minister can afford it and you will let him off he will go to the National Council Meeting in Washington in October at his own charges because he knows how valuable such a trip would be for him in his work.

If he is not financially fixed so as to afford such a trip, can the church afford not to send him in view of the return such a trip would bring to the life of the church? Of course not every church can afford to send its pastor, especially those at a distance, and it might not be desirable to have all our pastors from their posts at the same time. But how about your church?

What good would it do him to go? Well, it would give to him, if he is the right kind of a man, as he surely is, a new grip on himself. The wide contacts, the new surroundings, the inspirational meetings, mean refreshing which every minister needs if he is to pour out, week after week, streams of refreshing to his people.

It would mean new vision for his work through contact with others personally. It would mean new courage for him to brush up against many others who are in a similar situation to himself. It would mean new ideas for the guidance of his own church as he saw what others were doing. It would mean fresh passion for his preaching for him to see and hear the inspiring men who will appear at Washington.

The returns, therefore, to the church would be far and away more than the cost of such a trip even from a distance.

And it may be that what is said here about the minister would apply to his wife, also.

A word to the wise is sufficient.

Charles Emerson Burton,
Secretary, The National Council.

Impressions of Europe

What Germany and France Are Thinking

By B. F. Stanton
Superintendent of Schools, Alliance, Ohio

F any American has lapsed into the belief that "the war is over and everything is ppy in Europe," let me venture to disillun him at the very start. The "war is er" but Europe is still weltering in a rass of poverty, uncertainty, and suspin. Industrially and internationally things e not happy. There is evident a disposin to find some solution and that is a peful sign.

The American Seminar led by Sherwood ldy, which went to Europe in the early mmer, is just now returning to the States. a previous article reference was made to e purposes of our pilgrimage. The last nference was completed in Paris, Aug. 21, nereupon the party broke up, some remain- a little longer in Europe and some imediately returning home. Our first study as made in London where we were adessed by a number of the leading students d thinkers of England. The impression we rried away from London is that England suffering a severe industrial depression d does not see the immediate outcome. Her irit is resolute and does not yield to the rkness of the hour. In international afirs England wants to carry her load and eet her full responsibility for peace and osperity.

In Berlin we remained about a week. Ridg from Hamburg to the capital city one as impressed with the prosperous appearnce of the country. The crops were good. omes and farms were in good condition. owns and cities presented no unusual evience of depression. To one who had never en Berlin before the impression was very vorable. Wide streets, well kept, massive nd substantial buildings, the appearance of ne people, all combined to create a favorble impression. Everywhere were statues nd monuments. Sometimes these were rely ornamental; often they were monuents to her great. One felt that by marble nd bronze Germany had decreed that the eeds and valor of her great should be contantly before each succeeding generation. In ne presence of these, however, one could ardly avoid the feeling that something of er former glory has departed.

What Germany Is Thinking

Our conferences were addressed by such nen as Dr. Richter, Dr. Arnold Wolfers, Dr. imons of the Supreme Court, Dr. Luther, he present Chancellor, and many others. A eception was given our group at which we net Ambassador Schurmann, another where ve met Chancellor Luther, and a small group f our party was received by President Hinenburg.

More important, however, than monuments nd receptions is the question of what Gerany is thinking. Answering this, I may ay first she is thinking seriously of her industrial situation. She alleges much povrty. On the surface of things one does not ee much evidence of this in Berlin. However, we were advised that large numbers are idle,—the largest estimate I was given was one-half million. Where large numbers are out of employment there is sure to be poverty. I was taken into hovels of direst poverty. In one the effects of undernourishment in the children were very apparent. Germany is conscious of her industrial efficiency. Like England her great need is markets. If she cannot export she cannot import. If she cannot sell her goods, she cannot pay her debts. Her food products will not feed her population adequately,—she must import to live properly. To do this she must export, for it is an accepted principle of economics that imports are paid for in the long run by some form of exports.

Germany, too, is thinking internationally. We found some disposition to admit war guilt. Probably all the nations lately belligerent would effect more speedily a happier relationship if they could lay aside the question of war guilt and proceed with facts of adjustment. To discuss the question of who is primarily guilty of starting the war may be an interesting academic question, but it will not heal the wound nor relieve the distress of today. Germany wants peace. She wants "peace with honor." She does not like the Treaty of Versailles. She questions her ability to meet its terms. She believes she is the heart of Europe and must, therefore, take a leading place in international affairs.

Field Marshall Hindenburg is President. He belongs to the Nationalist party,—the Chancellor, however, and Foreign Secretary belong to the Populist party, so that it may be said the government is not altogether Nationalist. Again, should the Nationalist and Populist parties unite they would not command a majority of the Reichstag. The Socialists represent numerically the largest party in the Reichstag with 130 members—they represent a large element in the balance of power. When in 1918 and 1919 Bolshevism threatened Germany, it was the Socialist party combining with the Conservative elements which prevented it. At present there are six parties in the Reichstag. Divided as they are on vital issues, it will require some unusual issue to unite them. Hence it may be said Germany is waiting. She must promote harmony within and confidence without.

Geneva and Paris

A week at Geneva, the "Capital of the World," gave us a "close-up" of some of the outstanding features of the League of Nations. America was referred to as "our beloved absentee." We were convinced by what we saw and by the speeches we heard that the League is a real going concern.

At Paris we were given the French point of view of the present situation. One felt the suspicion of Germany that lingers in many minds. Some fear another war. Under the Arc de Triomphe is buried an unknown French soldier. By his grave is constantly burning a flame,—night and day it is kept going, symbolizing the undying spirit of devotion and sacrifice of the French soldier. One cannot wonder at the intensity of French feeling. One day by motor we rode 250 miles through the devastated area of France. We visited our own American cemetery where more than two thousand white crosses mark the graves of our dead. Beside our American cemetery we passed some fifteen others, French, English, Italian, and German, where thousands upon thousands sleep and "dream of battlefields no more." We saw towns and cities which lay a mass of ruins in the autumn of 1918, now in many cases largely rebuilt. We visited Rheims, where, out of 13,000 houses, fifteen were left intact. We saw the Cathedral, once a marvel of architectural beauty, mutilated by enemy shells. We saw forests of specter-like trees—denuded, dead under the devastating barrage of war. All this and more we saw seven years after it happened. Much has been rebuilt. But those millions of dead can never be restored. In France, in England, in America, in almost every land, homes mourn their loss. And in every land there is a feeling that "never again shall this thing occur." And so France mourns. She fears. She seems suspicious. When security by pact is mentioned, she remembers the invasion of Belgium. She is not unfriendly to the League but seems to doubt its power. She wants peace but feels she must find security in her army. Her spirit is invincible.

And so we board the Mauretania and turn homeward. We return to America feeling that Europe is suffering from nervous collapse. One should remind himself that it is too much to expect settled conditions after a war of such dimensions in a period of seven years. After the Napoleonic Wars, political conditions were not stable for a generation. It took eight years to fix the Treaty of Westphalia. Let us, therefore, not expect too much from the Treaty of Versailles within the short time which has elapsed since it was made.

We come back to America grateful for America and proud of her achievements and traditions. But we could devoutly wish that among the fifty-five national flags displayed at the League of Nations, the Stars and Stripes had been there. We could profoundly wish that America, with her moral leadership and power, were officially present in the deliberations of the nations. America is needed in world affairs. Let her assume her full responsibility.

Illumination

By Jean H. Brown

A rift in the clouds,
And then—
Darkness again.
But that golden gleam of light,
Across the blackened night,
Showed the groper far below,
The way to go.

Making the Ministry Self-Respecting

Congregationalists making great progress in Annuity Fund and Board of Ministerial Relief

By Frederick L. Fagley

A GROWTH of $1,232,000 in assets in two years will be shown by the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers in the biennial report of this board to the National Council of the Congregational Churches, which meets in Washington, D. C., in October.

The total assets of this fund are now well over five million dollars. The income from this fund, together with other contributions from the churches and individuals, is to be used to put the ministry on a self-respecting basis. Dr. Charles S. Mills, the secretary of the boards, well says, "It is manifestly unethical to use the lifetime service of a man giving his life to the extension of the Kingdom of God and to leave this servant of the churches with age unguarded. The provision of adequate care of the aged, infirm, or disabled ministers and their dependent widows and children is a primary social and ethical obligation. The aim of these boards is that the ministry may be set free from the deep anxiety of sudden illness or incapacity or the want of old age, that our ministers may be men of spiritual vision, seers of God, that the people may live and not perish, and that the mighty movements of our times may live and progress."

The Ministerial Boards act under two charters and maintain two departments. One department, the Board of Ministerial Relief, looks after aged or disabled ministers, their widows or dependent children, who are not cared for by the Annuity Fund, and for financial crisis which may come to a minister unexpectedly in the midst of his career. During the last year this board has had receipts of $660,900 and it disbursed $613,965 in relief and other items of expense.

The other department, the Annuity Fund, has charge of the administration of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund which was subscribed by the churches some years ago to establish a real pension system for Congregational ministers. This fund now amounts to more than $5,000,000, and additions by gifts and legacies are increasing the fund continually.

The Annuity Fund is not a charity but a mutual insurance plan, as each clergyman is expected to contribute at least six per cent. of his annual salary to the fund. In many cases the churches or organizations served pay one-half of the annual dues. The amount paid by the clergyman, together with his share of the income from the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, constitutes his reserve. It is expected that the income on retirement for each minister at the age of sixty-five will about equal one-half of his annual salary. This will be true where a minister enters the fund at thirty years of age and continues his connection until sixty-five, and the payment to men entering later in life will be in proportion to their years of membership in the fund and to the amount of annual payments made.

Significance of the Work to Pastors and Churches

The inauguration of this plan for stabilizing the ministry has contributed much to the feeling of security on the part of ministers. It has directly affected the morale of pastors throughout the country. It brings to the ministry a dignity and stability which it has hitherto lacked. It counts directly in recruiting strong young men by exalting the significance of the ministry's vocation and the place it holds in public esteem.

It has been of great value to churches also. The question many conscientious churches have had to face has been, "What will we do with our pastor when he is worn out?" Now the opportunity is offered churches to provide insurance against this contingency. By contributing a small sum each year to the fund the church together with the pastor makes sure his retirement pension.

The churches also will forever eradicate the spectacle of a poverty-stricken old minister. Many pastors cannot save for age. The minister is exploited for every good cause and must give largely. His family must maintain themselves in a suitable way. And pastors' salaries are usually computed on the basis of actual necessities. The more faithful a minister is to his calling, the less likelihood that he will amass funds for his age. But this plan, with its easy payments, in part by the church, together with the income from the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, will provide an adequate retiring income for every pastor in the denomination.

Dr. Potter Praises the Work

Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, the Moderator of the National Council, in speaking of the work of this organization, says:

The Congregational Churches from their beginnings in this country have sought to maintain a high standard of intelligence in the preaching ministry of the church. By their own testimony they founded Harvard and Yale in order that their children's children after them might not be left "to an illiterate ministry, when these, our present ministers, lie silent in the dust." The founding and development of colleges and seminaries for the training of ministers has ever been a major part of the work of the churches which own their descent from the brave and far-seeing fathers of the Pilgrim and Puritan colonies.

The work of the Ministerial Boards, both directly and through the several state organizations and funds, in caring for ministers disabled by reason of years of sickness or accident, and the work of the National Board in developing the Annuity Fund, has not been undertaken simply to relieve the sufferings of our colleagues and brethren in the Christian ministry. Its greater purpose has been the maintenance of the standards of the ministry as a profession. This work has sought to give confidence to the youth who undertake the ministry as their lifework and therefore to encourage them to give themselves to the long disciplines needful to prepare for it. It has sought to impress upon the churches the value of a ministry thus adequately trained and the responsibility of the churches for the training of such a ministry and for giving to such a ministry reasonable protection and care when it has accomplished its work.

The raising of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund has been worthy of the far-seeing purposes of the fathers in that it has made possible a reasonable, just, and far-reaching plan for the continued maintenance of high standards in the work of the Christian ministry among our churches.

This is putting intelligence into religion. We recognize, as did our fathers, that religion without intelligence—even the Christian religion—is a dangerous thing. If the Gospel is nobly to serve mankind it must be proclaimed by disciplined men who prepare themselves adequately for their work and who have the sustaining confidence of churches determined to maintain the highest standards of the ministry as a profession. The Ministerial Boards are rendering a great service to the far future in the generous, wise, and scientific leadership they are giving to the churches in the maintenance of these ideals for the Christian ministry.

Journeyings Along the Northern Stretches

"The King's Highway" is the name given in grateful acknowledgment to the road beaten out by Father Serra and his Franciscan Friars, as they journeyed from mission to mission along the coast of California. Beginning at San Diego, it extends beyond San Francisco to Sonoma. "Our Camino Real" we like to choose as designation for the activities of our Pilgrim leaders and churches in Southern California. However, as the King's Highway extends well into the interior of our neighboring conference, so the correspondent was privileged to take his vacation this summer among some of the communities and churches of that far stretching land.

There are to be found the rivers and lakes for the most part of the state; the romantic fields of gold, the national parks of scenic wonder, huge valleys of grain and fruit, and many prosperous cities. In some contrast, Protestantism finds itself in a less hospitable medium than to the South. And Congregationalism has seemed to need a stronger support of fellowship to contend against alien influences. There is a sense of painful loneliness as in lovely city after city no Pilgrim spire rises as witness to the Congregational spirit. In ten years, though the population has increased vastly, our churches are in number considerably fewer, and in membership only a bit larger. Yet there is an arousement to battle more successfully with the difficult situation. And as one measures the fine ability and earnestness of many of the leaders, confidence arises that in the next decade there will be a decided movement forward which will spell out large things for the Kingdom of Christ.

Abundant vitality is widely in evidence. Among the many centers where matters of great interest might be described, I must content myself with mention of four.

On a not-to-be-forgotten Sunday morning we visited First Church, San Francisco. It was a morning of delightful charm; and it was August. Just the day in vacation mid-summer when folks are inclined to seek the open country, and when many churches close their doors, or at least discontinue their Sunday evening meetings. Yet here was commodious First, every seat occupied, the choir space and pulpit platform filled, and lines of people standing in the permitted spaces of the aisles. At an earlier hour, one thousand folks had attended a lecture under the auspices of the men's Bible class—the Judge Wilbur Class, a person who, though absent in Washington, still has a name to conjure with in San Francisco. At the evening hour there would not be room to seat the people. At the midweek meeting, again a similar throng.

In all the great city there is no other instance. Protestantism has a hard time in that city powerful in Roman Catholicism, socialism, great elements of unassimilated foreigners. And Congregationalism has seen numerous churches born to fade away. "First" is the present signal instance of prosperity. In its membership are the nerve and spirit which have maintained it from the early gold days; carried it through the withering publicity of scandal; first raised a new structure above the ruins of earthquake; holds continuity in the shifting tides of population and circumstance. It is the great downtown church, near the Saint Francis and other hotels, with a challenge which would whelm, did it not awaken the spiritual s to surmount it.

s, there is the personality—the minister. ther we will or no, Congregationalism rises lls with him—at least in this West. There r. James L. Gordon. He speaks well: estly, pleasingly, forcefully; but not pararly an orator. There is a good inctual element in his sermon; well argued, ming, candid, and fair; but you would not nguish him as scholarly. He does know and brings him what he needs and some- s wants. He takes us into his confidence, gs comfort to our hurts, wraps the feeling upport and shielding and sympathy round t our incompleteness and loneliness, makes o feel large in the sense of an army with nd the great sufficient God. Thus he knows t people are interested in, and talks about ; and Sunday and Wednesday evenings he ves the questions that quiver in human s, and answers them. A great priest and d, and pastor-teacher, is that Dr. Gor- Thank God for the light that shines from hill at First Church over a great, groping lace.

isit Sacramento. It has developed surpris- in ten years. A busy city of 100,000, with nificent areas of new residences that are ete with the beauty that art and nature convey. Near Fort Sutter, in strategic lo- on, is our church. Its history is long, and rable with civic influence. It bears noble es in its ministers and laity. Yet, it is an ance of loss in power due to hesitation in cy, "whether to sell its old property and e to the residence district?" It should be h stronger. But now there comes the viril- that clear program favors. The minister, . Harley Gill, is winning and capable. On ce lots they are about to build a splendid cture. Even now, as they meet in a Wo- 's Club House, with its insufficient facili- , support is rapidly being drawn. We can to our capital city for a worthy leader- now. In another decade there may be e such churches of power.

n Oakland, we were at Plymouth. The hall ks of Albert Palmer are all over it. And impress, too, of Arthur Arlett, a great man whose contributions of brain and means itle him to a place in the Congregational droll of fame. Here is a plant ample to ister to its great population along Piedmont nue—an auditorium that has not been d, Plymouth Center with all its facilities social, athletic, and educative ministry. re have been hard times to lift the burden lebt. But that is well cared for now, and h Rev. Harry McCready much beloved, and t steady nucleus of the faithful which one lays finds in churches that live, the future htens. Their spirit of courage and devo- is a power of encouragement to all the owship.

word must suffice for that preacher of inal charm—Dr. Oswald McCall—who stirs pride and joy of Berkeley. Just now First rch is bringing its beautiful new building ompletion. Meanwhile evening services were in union with St. John's Presbyterian. re I had the pleasure of listening to Dr. 'all along with the congregations which filled the large edifice. Only those near may know that he came to California, a thodist from Australia, a stranger to us. ring a freer fellowship, he sought preach- in Congregational pulpits. His gifts un- wn, they were soon appreciated when given ression, and he was invited to one of our t influential opportunities. His is a ingely poetic and mystic fragrance of spirit utterance. Wide-reaching, fluent delivery, passion and noble conception—yes. Also, imaginative figures tumbling over one another, great love for beauty, a feeling for God that communicates itself. He is different, rare; a sweet, rich voice, as one above, for the Spirit.

Yucaipa, Cal. CHESTER FERRIS.

On Report of the Committee of Twelve

III

In previous comments we have suggested that the plan now proposed for the homeland societies has not been thoroughly studied and adapted for them, but is a counsel of desperation, accepting a well-considered program presented on behalf of the homogeneous foreign mission group, and assuming that it is equally applicable to the heterogeneous home mission enterprises. A very natural question is raised in this connection: What do the experienced present administrators of these societies think of the plan? How far have they approved and consented?

A natural modesty prevents these brethren from appearing publicly to present destructive criticism, and this is reinforced by certain caustic insinuations of mercenary and selfish motives which have been voiced.

When the Mayor of New York declined to employ "experts" on certain technical problems, and gave his opinion that "the man in the street" was fully qualified to pass upon them, he was called a demagogue, and his own mental capacity was rightly questioned. It does not take any extended inquiry or intimate acquaintance to assure the inquirer that the group of men chosen by the churches to head their work in its various channels are just what they were supposed to be when they were so chosen; able, unselfish, diligent, and self-sacrificing to a high degree; serving the denomination in positions of difficult responsibility at personal loss, and receiving less financial return today than before the World War. They deserve our full confidence and support.

These men were called before the Committee of Twelve and questioned; they were asked to suggest plans for improvement; they were invited to ask questions regarding the completed report. Thus far no results have appeared from any of these interviews, so far as the constituency is informed; no intimate consultations to secure knowledge of details; no reports of the actions of directors and committees; no statement of the questions and debates held. Did the committee receive nothing of value in all this? Or has it simply ignored what was offered, and proceeded to formulate its own theories? Should not these men be called upon publicly for a clear and definite statement of their views—

(a) as to the practicability of the plan for one society;

(b) as to the results each would anticipate in his own field. If some of their detractors object to them as "interested parties," let them say so openly and let us weigh the objectors in the same scale.

Still further: What has the committee to say of the experience of the other denominations who have been trying similar plans? Official statements are not easy to secure, but information is not at all difficult to obtain, and it is all of the same tenor:

Episcopalians—A loss of money and a lessened interest.

Methodists—The rank and file do not respond to a budget; they think in the concrete. The large givers, who brought about the change, do not respond to the smaller number of appeals in the total of the former gifts. The result is a shortening of funds from both sources.

Presbyterians—No perceptible economy, a heavy decrease in giving; not ready yet to analyze and determine relative value of various factors.

These verdicts are the frankly given views of representatives, and presumably do not vary greatly from the information available to the committee. Have they given such experience full weight? Ought we not to take time for more complete study: for more careful consultation with our men of knowledge; and for more lessons from the experience of others, which thus far certainly does not encourage haste. "Festina Lente" was a famous motto of success—I believe it is still one of the best, and ought to be applied!

ENQUIRING LAYMAN.

The Midweek Meeting

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

It is important that Dr. Stimson's article in The Congregationalist of Sept. 3, on "The Congregational Church and the Prayer Meeting" should not be permitted to "flash in the pan." I do not find myself out-distanced by the younger ministers of today in leaving those things that are behind and pressing forward to new things; and I do not believe that the date of my birth accounts for my deep conviction that Dr. Stimson has given a prophetic utterance in his warning to our churches not to abandon the prayer meeting.

There is plenty of room to press forward in the subjects, objects, and range of prayer, testimony and discussion; and certainly the type of prayer meeting characterized by repetitious and unvarying monotony may well be left behind; but something vitalizing and dynamic is lost to the church that so denatures its midweek meeting that it no longer serves in developing and training an inner group of kindled souls ready to set the pace and lead the files of the church as a whole.

There is reason to doubt whether the faithful efforts and worthy aspirations of our National Council's Commission on Evangelism will have large fulfillment in churches that maintain nothing entitled to the name of prayer meeting; and the apportionment and every member canvass have come now to a stage in which we recognize the need not of more mechanism, but of more power. Decreasing the machinery in the hope of increasing relatively the power is likely to be a disappointing expedient.

The promotion now urgently called for is promotion in our church membership of a clear vision as to Jesus' program for the Kingdom of Heaven on earth and a compelling recognition that being a follower of Jesus means having a loyal share in putting over that program.

During nearly thirty years of pastoral experience I found the prayer meeting and its periodical variant, the "missionary concert" which we called the "outlook meeting," a potent agency for developing this clearness of vision and this type of loyalty, and for keeping aglow those inner fires that furnish the impulse and the atmosphere for the evangelism of the mature.

Now as secretary, after observation of many churches and with active concern for the effectiveness of the churches in their local field and in their great common tasks, I recognize the wisdom and timeliness of Dr. Stimson's summons to Congregationalists to apply the pulmotor to the prayer meeting, earnestly hoping that this summons will be widely heeded.

Chicago, Ill. FRANCIS L. HAYES.

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council in October

Dr. Butterfield Declines

Owing to absence from the college, it was only a short time ago that I noticed the letter from Dr. Bradley suggesting my name for consideration as Moderator of the National Council. Much as I appreciate the suggestion, I have been obliged to write Dr. Bradley that it would be quite impossible for me to serve in such a capacity. My present obligations are such that in attempting to act as Moderator I should do grave injustice either to the college with which I am connected or to the National Council, and probably to both.

KENYON L. BUTTERFIELD.

East Lansing, Mich.

For the A. M. A.

Every protest I read against merging the American Missionary Association with the Education Society, the Home Missionary Society, or any other society to cause it to lose its identity, gladdens my heart. The American Missionary Association has been very dear to me since I worked under it before and after the close of the Civil War, and saw what it was doing for the poor freedmen all over the Southland. Yes, and what it has continued to do for the Negro all these years. I have often thanked God for the American Missionary Association, and that through it I was permitted to have the most blessed experience of my long life—over ninety years.

No, friends, don't destroy the American Missionary Association for any of us by merging it with some other organization. Let it go on doing its own work, in its own way, and under its own name, and may God's richest blessing continue to rest upon its work through all the coming years.

MRS. EMILY STUART LAWRENCE.

Sabetha, Kan.

For Mergers—Certainly

These questions were answered correctly by Rev. Kerrison Juniper and a Washington, D. C., correspondent in The Congregationalist of Sept. 3. Others in the same issue wrote, "We are opposed to the merger of the work of the A. M. A. with any other board." The Washington correspondent replies to Mr. Brownlee's article in behalf of retaining the A. M. A. "because of the wonderful work it has done," with a quotation from Lowell: "New occasions teach new duties." It is of this particular point I would write.

The A. M. A. was not organized as Congregational. It was organized during the Civil War out of a necessity for special work among the "freedmen," and a general appeal was made to Northern churches for support. After the war the various denominations withdrew from the A. M. A., and finally left that society to the Congregationalists. A Congregationalist of great wealth in Baltimore left large sums to our missionary boards on condition that their names be changed from "American" to "Congregational." The A. M. A. declined an offer of $250,000 on the ground that it received support from other than Congregational sources.

The situation has greatly changed in thirty years, and the logic of the situation now is two great divisions of our work—home and foreign. What would "captains of industry" like Gary say from the standpoint of efficiency and economy to the astonishingly over-organized and expensive methods of doing our part in the work of the Kingdom?

In any case, few indeed are the churches, if there are any, that will do their full duty for home and foreign missions without inspirational leadership in the pulpit. The convenience of pastors in making appeals, and effectiveness in results, would be promoted by some merging of boards. It may be presumed that there is sufficient genius for reorganization in the denomination to produce the necesssary result.

A. T. CLARKE.

West Palm Beach, Fla.

Nominates Roger Babson

Who shall be the next Moderator of the National Council?

Roger Babson.

Should the Presbyterians and Congregationalists unite?

Hardly, just now.

What should Congregationalists say on public questions? For example, social reform, interracial, international questions?

Whatever they honestly think.

Should there be but one Board of Foreign Missions?

Yes.

Should there be but one Home Board?

Yes.

Should the Foundation for Education be merged with the Education Society?

Yes.

Is there any reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not be administered by the same organization?

No.

Shall we lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects in the Apportionment by merging some of the societies?

No.

Should the "Missionary Herald" and the "American Missionary" be united into one magazine?

Yes.

Are we properly emphasizing or over-emphasizing the State Conference in our present organization?

Not over-emphasizing.

Should each society approach the local church and the individual Congregationalist in the interest of its own receipts, or should all commit the major portion of their cultivation of income to a common agency working in cooperation with the State Conference?

The latter.

Los Angeles, Cal. CARL S. PATTON.

Should Not Unite Now

1. Should the Presbyterians and Congregationalists unite?

When the Presbyterians have decided the constitutional question, when they give more evidence of being free in their thinking, like the Congregationalists, then we can discuss it. Personally, I should not want now to unite with the Presbyterians, nor with any body that does not exhibit equal freedom and tolerance with us.

2. Public questions.

In view of the honest, Christian difference of opinion as to specific details, bills, and movements, I think we do well to state the broad, cutting, Christian principles, and at the same time present the facts concerning matters that need correction.

3. As to organization.

To my mind, our somewhat elaborate organization has always been confusing. I should like to see one foreign board, one home board, each with a magazine, a merger of the Foundation of Education with the Education Soci of the Annuity Fund management with of the Ministerial Relief. A general appro rather than an individual approach from e society is preferable. I should like to see e state office handle all the matters in that st that concern the aid of the churches. I with doubt at any move which will increase power of our state superintendents, for I lieve strongly in the independence of our m isters and churches. By no means should th be any discrimination against missionary F damentalist ministers, when they are called aided churches.

Denver, Col. PERCY C. LADD

Favors Mergers

Who shall be the next Moderator of the tional Council?

Dr. Carl S. Patton, Los Angeles, or Willi E. Sweet, Denver.

What about the representation of women the Council and in our missionary associatio

Why bring up the question of sex? Elect m or women because of interest and fitness, because of sex.

Should the Presbyterians and Congregation ists unite?

Not now!

What should Congregationalists say on pub questions? For example, social reform, int racial, international questions?

Whatever they believe to be the Christi attitude.

Should there be but one Board of Fore Missions?

Yes!

Should there be but one Home Board?

Yes!

Should the Foundation for Education merged with the Education Society?

Absolutely!

Is there any reason why the Annuity Fu and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not administered by the same organization?

None that I know of.

Shall we lose interest in missions if we less the number of specific objects in the Appo tionment by merging some of the Societies?

Under the cultivation of the every memb canvass and the duplex envelope they are rea now for fewer specific appeals. A few of t older people have a special fondness for son one work, e.g., American Board or A. M. A. T rank and file give to "benevolences" witho differentiating the individual boards or societi included in that term, "benevolences." The is considerable criticism of the number of s cieties and the apparently unnecessary overhea expense.

Should the "Missionary Herald" and th "American Missionary" be united into one ma azine, or become a monthly edition of "The Co gregationalist," or should all three continue at present?

Combine into one paper with monthly mi sionary number.

Are we properly emphasizing or over-empha sizing the State Conference in our present o ganization?

A little danger of over-emphasis. The ge eral result is wholesome. But a tendency t provincialism. Churches need the wider touc and outlook the national societies give.

Should each society approach the loca church and the individual Congregationalist i the interest of its own receipts, or should a commit the major portion of their cultivatio ncome to a common agency working in co-ration with the State Conference?

argely the cultivation of interest in missions ier than that of a particular board. How-r, concrete information of specific work ac-plished is a great incentive and ought to ised.

anta Ana, Cal. PERRY F. SCHROCK.

Fair Representation for Women

What about the representation of women in Council and in our missionary associations?

Ve are entitled to a fair representation.

What should be the relation of the woman's anizations to the general organization of the rch, locally, state-wide, and nationally?

They should be intimately associated with church in each capacity; in fact, should be integral part.

Should the Presbyterians and Congregation-ts unite?

As soon as it can be brought about.

Should there be but one Board of Foreign sions?

Yes.

Should there be but one Home Board?

Yes.

Should the Foundation for Education be ged with the Education Society?

Yes.

Is there any reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not be administered by the same organization?

None whatever.

Shall we lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects in the Apportionment by merging some of the societies?

No.

Should the "Missionary Herald" and the "American Missionary" be united into one magazine, or become a monthly edition of "The Congregationalist," or should all three continue as at present?

One magazine for home, one magazine for foreign, to be entirely separate from The Congregationalist.

Are we properly emphasizing or over-emphasizing the State Conference in our present organization?

Just right in Minnesota.

Should each society approach the local church and the individual Congregationalist in the interest of its own receipts, or should all commit the major portion of their cultivation of income to a common agency working in co-operation with the State Conference?

Push whole program through the State Conference.

MRS. LOWELL E. JEPSON.
President, Minnesota Branch, W. B. M. I.

Along Our Stream of Freedom

An Evening with an Original Jubilee Singer

n the reconstruction of Fisk University, to ich I referred in a previous installment, it increasingly manifest that her foundations e laid in faith and prayer and song. Under inspiration of Prof. George L. White, the rt songs of the American bondmen were ssed into service to promote the education of ir children. Eleven sons and daughters of freedmen had the privilege of carrying these gs around the world. Of these only two vive—Maggie Porter Cole of Detroit and bel Lewis Imes of Cleveland.

MABEL LEWIS IMES

One rainy evening last summer I stole away m others and found my way to a little cot-e sitting back from the street at 2213 East l St., Cleveland, O., where Mabel Lewis es, near three score and ten, is passing the ening of a life filled with melodious memories. rn in the Crescent City, she was taken to w York at the age of two, not knowing who r parents were. After a few years in a rvent, she went to live with a private fam-, who discovered her musical ability. At the e of thirteen she was called to join the fa-us Jubilee Singers, and traveled with them their wonderful tours in the New World d the Old. Incidents that are familiar gain new touch from her recital.

FAMILIAR INCIDENTS RETOLD

Her eyes glowed as she told of that thrilling perience at McKenzie, Tenn., a railway junc-n not far from Nashville. When some rough-cks saw the group on the platform waiting the train, they proposed to kill Professor hite, the white leader, for taking Negroes on such a mission. As the assailants drew ar, Mr. White told the Singers to sing, "Oh, ink of the Home Over There." Upon this disturbers paused, and the Singers began, Iome, Sweet Home." And when the train y were awaiting pulled in, they sang, "Did et My Lord Deliver Daniel?" With tears in eir eyes they who would have beaten these Singers and killed their leader bade them god-speed on their journey, saying they did not know Negroes could sing like that.

The incident at Beecher's church received a new touch. It is recalled that Plymouth was the first church to welcome the Singers in the North. They were called Beecher's Minstrels, in derision. But that evening the house was packed to overflowing. It was the time of Mr. Beecher's severe ordeal, and when they sang, "Nobody Knows the Trouble I See," he arose and said, "That's true, that's true." Deep answered unto deep. The message of God to the slave comforted the martyr.

The aged singer grew still more animated as she spoke of the evening in Spurgeon's church in London. Mr. Moody was conducting a great revival there. A centenarian, just converted, was exhorting others not to procrastinate as he had. The Singers were stationed at an invisible point in the topmost gallery, and at a given signal sang "The Angels Are Hovering Around." The weird effect was indescribable. Englishmen had never heard such voices before, and no explanation being given, some declared the angels sang that night. They did. That evening Mabel Lewis, born a Roman Catholic, experienced her second birth, and joined the assembly of the twice-born.

BLACKS AT THE WHITE HOUSE

But all the experiences of the Singers were by no means pleasant. I found the aged singer's fingers still bleeding from the thorns amid the roses. In that day it was very difficult in this country to secure hotel accommodations for colored people, although no such difficulty was found abroad, where the Singers were wined and dined by kings and queens, lords and ladies. It is commonly supposed that Booker Washington was the only man of his race to dine at the White House, but not so. Once the Jubilee Singers were turned out of a hotel in Washington, and they were invited to lunch at the White House by President Arthur. It was the privilege of the Singers to sing before two other Presidents of the United States—Grant and Garfield. The latter held that now God was stretching both his hands unto Ethiopia through the singers of these sorrow songs.

THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME

Professor White kept his Singers up to the high-water mark of spirituality. Every day, save when the exigencies of travel prevented, they gathered for devotion. It was in one of these devotional gatherings that Mr. White came one morning after a night of prayer, saying that he had found the name for the Singers. Up to this time they had been known as "Christian Singers." The name that came to him by inspiration was "Jubilee Singers," in commemoration of the year of jubilee of a race. As such they became famous, and their songs were known as "Jubilee Songs." I regard this a much better name than the modern term, "Spirituals," of whose derivation I do not know, but which never strikes me favorably. Call them by their inspired name, "Jubilee Songs." These singers went forth Oct. 6, 1871, and this is recognized at Fisk as "Jubilee Day." This year it is planned to celebrate the day by having present these two living original Jubilee Singers, that the youth of Fisk may be baptized into the Jubilee Spirit.

Mr. Seward, the assistant to Professor White, wrote for these singers a grace to be sung at meals. It is now sung at Fisk and in many schools throughout the South.

Thou art great and thou art good,
And we thank thee for this food;
By thy grace must all be fed;
Give us, Lord, our daily bread.

And, as President Cravath used to say, though the school has passed through hard days, "the jar of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail." May this supply for the higher education of a race ever be divinely replenished.

OLD FAVORITES RESUNG

It was nearing the close of a perfect evening when Mrs. Imes showed me the wonderful scrap-book she kept of the triumphs of her troupe. In it were the signatures of Garfield, Gladstone, Grant, and many other notables in the Old World and the New. Finally, she sang for me the two favorites, "Steal Away to Jesus," and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," the songs with which the Singers always began and closed their concerts. Her voice is still sweet and fresh—and as she sang, the old light came back into her face, and it, too, shone young. She deplored the faster time with which these songs are now sung, thus losing the devotional spirit, which is their very essence. It is to be regretted that the term "Jubilee Singers" was not copyrighted, so as to have prevented the "slaughter of the innocents" of these precious melodies that have been so exploited by irresponsible troupes for material gain.

The finest tradition of these songs extant is that which is conserved by the present quintet of Fisk Jubilee Singers. There is now talk of reorganizing a larger group of these singers to sing as the originals did, that this unusual gift of song may not be lost to the world at a time when it most needs it.

In addition to earning her living by plying her needle, Mrs. Imes is writing her memoirs.

HENRY HUGH PROCTOR.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

The duty of the church is plain. She is to teach spiritual brotherhood. She is to seek to incarnate the principles of Christian democracy in all the realms of man's experience. She is to recognize no rightful cleavage between personal and social religion.—William A. Harper.

Negro Education and Leadership

The Question of Principals

By Fred Leslie Brownlee

Corresponding Secretary, Department of Missions, American Missionary Association

WE are indebted to President Irving Maurer of Beloit College for calling attention, in The Congregationalist of March 12, to a problem destined to become increasingly acute, not only in America but throughout the world. It is a question that all missionaries at home and abroad should face frankly and answer fundamentally. Are we brave enough to apply the test of Christian brotherhood to the limit? The history of the A. M. A. speaks for itself. The facts concerning the present distribution of leadership in its schools reveals an inevitable tendency. The suggested questions I raise are troubling the minds of not a few closest to the actual situations. The American Missionary Association has today twenty-two schools for Negroes in the South, located in ten different states. Eleven of these schools have Negro leaders, and eleven of them have white leaders. Four years ago, there were only eight schools with Negro principals. Since then, three additional institutions have been absorbed by public school systems, in which only Negro principals are employed. Within the past four years, then, six A. M. A. schools have been turned over to Negro leadership.

Another interesting fact is that the A. M. A. employs today 282 Negroes and 239 Caucasians. Alabama heads the list, furnishing 50 workers; Georgia comes second with 48; North Carolina third with 47; and New York fourth with 43. This does not mean that all persons from the Southern states are colored, or that all of those from the Northern states are white. The geographical distributions, however, do indicate racial predominance. To my knowledge, we have no Southern white people employed in any of our Negro schools. We are not averse to them. They practically never apply.

At Talladega College we have a white president, a colored dean, a colored dean of women, and 27 colored workers out of the total of 41. On the average, about one-third of the workers in mixed schools belong to the colored race. The schools with Negro principals have only Negro workers.

The names of the A. M. A. schools are also significant. Only three institutions have the word "industrial" attached to their names. Two of these are in the process of changing their names. The rest of the institutions are named schools, institutes, normal schools, academies, or colleges. We are not averse to industrial education. Industrial departments are found in all of our institutions. We have never confined ourselves, however, to "educational blind alleys." Hampton Institute, representing the association's pioneer educational work under General Armstrong, became one of the greatest, if not the greatest, industrial schools in America. On the other hand, Fisk, Atlanta, and Talladega are colleges of liberal arts of no mean proportions.

So much for interesting facts, figures, and tendencies. What about the specific questions raised by President Maurer? He wants to know what the policy is with regard to the leadership of Negro institutions. There is no settled policy. The best that can be said is that there is a decided tendency, and that this tendency is in the direction of putting Negro leaders in charge of Negro schools. All of the public schools in the South for Negroes, so far as I know, are headed by Negroes, and not a few mission schools now have colored principals. This has come about naturally. It represents no pressure from the white South, and very little agitation on the part of Negroes, at least so far as A. M. A. schools are concerned. It simply means that the leaders have been produced, and that they have been given chances to lead. I am happy to say they are leading very well.

Why Negroes Are Principals

President Maurer desires to know further what is to be the status of white educators who have given their lives to training Negroes in educational work, if this newer policy is followed to its logical conclusion. This is an interesting question, but before attempting to answer it we may well consider a fear which seems to be hidden in it. In fact, Dr. Maurer makes this fear vocal by saying, "Many friends of the Negro race are of the opinion that there would be a great loss if the policy of Negro educators for Negroes should become an absolute fact." Please remember that we are dealing with a tendency rather than a policy, and that this tendency seems to be inevitable under existing conditions. Leaders of the leaders in the group President Maurer contrasts with the Booker T. Washington type do not really desire complete racial segregation in America. They deplore both the conditions and the results of these conditions which inevitably produce segregation even in A. M. A. schools so far as leadership is concerned. Their seeming agitation with reference to the removal of presidents and principals from Negro schools usually is not because of the color of the leader, but rather his caliber. They want the best available leadership, regardless of color. If the A. M. A. has any settled policy in appointing workers, it is precisely on that basis. The numerous utterances of Negroes speak eloquently of high regard for the great pioneer leaders from the North who lived in social isolation, and even in imminent danger, in order that Negroes might have the advantages of education and Christian culture. Nevertheless, without the slightest disrespect for the noble heroes of the past or any reflection on the splendid qualities of some of the white leaders today, they exercise their intelligence in discriminating between good and bad, ability and the lack of ability, and above all between white people who are willing to work for them and those who work with them.

President Maurer's definite question, however, has to do with the coming "status of white educators." Must their status always be that of leaders? Must they always be "it" in order to play the game at all? In the end, may not these very questions prove to be t crux of the whole matter? Dr. Maurer speal of "our finest evidences of inter-racial frien ship and co-operation." Presumably he refe to what the noble white people have done a are doing for and with colored people. Wor escape us to describe how truly fine and real genuine this friendship and co-operation ha been and still are. But is this fellowshi dependent wholly on the white men alwa doing the leading?

Again, President Maurer desires that w approach the problem "from the standpoint the Christian spirit which has been the glo of our educational adventures among Negro during the past 50 years." Some of us, colore and white, wonder if we are not approachi a great testing of this Christian spirit. If t Christian spirit produces friendship and c operation only so long as the white man lead may we not be in danger of misnaming t spirit? According to the story of the man wh fell among thieves on the way to Jericho, was the Samaritan, the outcast, the despise who led to safety and health a member of t powerful and exalted race. Perhaps the Chri tian spirit has something to say to us on ra relations that we are failing to consider. F example, why change all the members of faculty from white to colored just because t new principal of the school happens to belo to the Negro race, particularly if he has bee appointed solely because of his unique quali cations to fill the principalship, regardless his race? What does the Christian spirit sa to this question? This is where the sh pinches just now. The Negroes do not wa to be separated from their white friends. Wh will dare to prove the sincerity of this frien ship by co-operating when it is a Negro wh leads?

After all, does the Christian spirit reall know men as Negro and Caucasian, Jew an Gentile, Greek and barbarian? Did not t Gentile learn how to drive out the Jew, an the barbarian the Greek by imitating t examples set by the Jews and the Greeks Negroes are excellent observers. Should the also be made to think about driving out whi people in order that they may assume pos tions of leadership? This is the twentiet century; and six years after an Armistice wa signed! We should have discovered the ver soul of the Christian spirit. And while th soul may not bid us become color blind, y it asks us, does it not, to free ourselves fro even the gestures of the thought that diffe ences in color must be labeled "superior" an "inferior."

Until we can answer in a fundamental wa the question of race relations, we are not i a position to check satisfactorily what Pres dent Maurer fears is a policy leading to th ultimate elimination of all white workers i Negro schools. The A. M. A. deplores suc separation. The Negroes who know anythin about the history of the A. M. A. deplore also. But, why we should have to talk abou the question troubles the Negro unless he mus assume that for us co-operation is possibl only when the Nordic leads. Is this reall co-operation in the last analysis? In placin workers in A. M. A. schools, the secretary o the Department of Missions welcomes sug gestions.

From My Parsonage Window

By Frances Walkley

A bit of water that reflects the sky,
A mountain peak which lifts my thought on high,
A pine tree, green in sun, in snow and rain,
These are God's hints of how I, too, may gain
Strength for life's tasks, peace through both joy and pain.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Books by Edward Grubb

THORITY IN RELIGION, by EDWARD GRUBB millan. $1.25). The main purpose of this ne is to help young men and women who facing the breakdown of what they have to regard as external and artificial author- to discover that there is none the less an rd authority in religion, real and valid. "A ounded Christian faith," says the author, not dispense with the legitimate authority ther Church or Bible, still less with that of Christ; but none of these are of avail with- he insight that comes of personal and col- e Christian experience." Mr. Grubb is a r of deep insight and fine spirit whose book be found very helpful in the clearness of its sis of the nature and problems of author- nd in its constructive guidance.

AKER THOUGHT AND HISTORY, by EDWARD B (Macmillan). The title of this volume mewhat misleading. It is neither a formal ment of Quaker thought nor a consecutive nt of Quaker history, but is a series of essays covering a considerable variety of es that relate to the general title. George and Christian Theology, The Evangelical ement and the Society of Friends, Creed Life, are among the themes discussed, and are also three papers dealing with aspects piritual healing.

Education in East Africa

DUCATION IN EAST AFRICA, by THOMAS E JONES, PH.D. (Phelps-Stokes Fund, 101 Ave., N. Y. $2.25). This is the report of nmission under the auspices of the Phelps- es Fund, in co-operation with the Interna- l Education Board, which made a study of , Central, and South Africa in 1924. Its ose was "to present the conditions of na- education, with suggestions for their im- ement." The objectives included that of ng the natives through the encouraging ore and better education of the right type, as a result, "to promote, directly and in- tly, friendly interracial relations."

he Education Commission, like the first lar commission of 1920-21, which studied ation in West, South, and Equatorial ca, was headed by Dr. Jones, Educational ctor of the Phelps-Stokes Fund. The other bers included James E. K. Aggrey, a dis- ished native of the Gold Coast; James H. ard, president of the Jeanes and Slater ds; Homer L. Shantz, plant specialist of United States Department of Agriculture; Garfield Williams, educational secretary he Church Missionary Society of England. or Hanns Vischer, secretary and member of British Advisory Committee on Native Edu- on in Tropical Africa, worked with the mission, also C. T. Loram, authority on ve education and member of Native Affairs mission of South Africa. James W. C. gall of Scotland, and George B. Dillard, d as secretaries of the commission.

he countries visited and studied included ya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Nyasaland, Zan- r, Rhodesia, Basutoland, Bechnanaland, ziland, Ruanda, Urundi, Portuguese East ca, and Abyssinia. All phases of the life the people were considered. The recom- dations reflect the experience and wisdom hose best qualified to lead the way. The rt is optimistic, indicates encouraging prog- ress here and there, and is hopeful regarding the future of the African natives and the proper development of their countries. But only a beginning has been made, and the problem is one of great magnitude and many difficulties. The report gives the impression that the European governments, especially Great Britain, are now increasingly seeking to promote the welfare of the natives. The service of Christian missions is the outstanding influence for the advancement of the people. Especially complimentary are the references to the work of the American Board. Its educational and welfare work are highly commended. The report emphasizes the principle of developing types of education adapted to conditions in Africa, relating it naturally to the traditions of the people, developing character, reforming vicious habits and promoting health, wholesome recreation, good homes, desirable industries, and profitable agriculture.

The report is a remarkable volume, well written, well illustrated from photographs, and it is vastly instructive and illuminating. It should prove of far-reaching value in constructive educational guidance and statesmanship.

Astronomy for Old and Young

THE HEAVENS, by J. H. FABRE, translated by DR. E. E. FOURNIER D'ALBE (Lippincott). This book by the eminent French naturalist will be found a boon to average readers who wish to acquaint themselves with the heavenly bodies. The value of its "twenty-five lessons," in as many chapters, is the clearness of Fabre's expositions. He builds upon ordinary, everyday observation a superstructure of extensive astronomical knowledge. He begins with the earth—geometry, surveying the earth, how the earth is weighed, its rotation, centrifugal force, poles, latitude, longitude, etc.—and passes to the illumination of the atmosphere, the study of atmospheric refraction, distances, etc., and thence passes to the study of the moon, eclipses, the sun, the seasons, the solar system, the planets, the comets, the stars, and the nebulae. Its 350 pages are interspersed with many textual and full-page illustrations. Notes of recent astronomical progress have been added by the translation.

THE YOUNG FOLKS' BOOK OF THE HEAVENS, by MARY PROCTOR (Little, Brown. $2.00). What Fabre has done for older readers, Miss Proctor, daughter of the late Richard A. Proctor, has sought to do for younger readers. She describes the wonders of the heavens and how scientists have learned the facts concerning the heavenly bodies. She tells of how men have regarded the stars in ancient times, and she has human interest stories of great astronomers and their work. The illustrations are numerous and many of them very fine. Just the book for boys and girls of from 10 to 15 years and even older.

Problems of the Country Church

A hopeful sign in the church today is the increasing number of ministers who regard the country pastorate, not as a mere probation and practice ground for promotion to a city pulpit, but rather as a field of work equal in importance to any, and with its own peculiar problems and technique. Not only the minister, but the layman needs to understand this, and the Board of Sunday Schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church has recognized this fact in launching its "Rural Life Series." The first two to be published are A CHRISTIAN IN THE COUNTRYSIDE, by RALPH A. FELTON, and THE COUNTRY CHURCH AND ITS PROGRAM, by EARL A. ROADMAN (Methodist Book Concern. 50 cents each).

These texts are designed for use as optional courses in adult classes in the Sunday school and are admirably adapted to that purpose. As the editors have pointed out, they are not substitutes for Bible study, but a means of making the teachings of the Bible vital and practical in the everyday life of the church and the individual. They are interestingly written, abounding in concrete illustrations, with stimulating questions for thought and discussion, and well-chosen references for reading and study. They should prove of great service in the religious training of the country church.

Helps for the Church School

KINDERGARTEN METHOD IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL, by EDNA DEAN BAKER (Abingdon Press. $1.50). Rarely have we read a textbook on method with such perfect delight as we gained from this volume of Miss Baker's. President of the National Kindergarten and Elementary College and one of the leading women in her chosen field in the country, the author is a genuine lover and understanding friend of children. Every kindred spirit will read these pages with now an amused chuckle at some delicious bit of childish whimsey, now a thrill at some revealing glimpse of the inner secrets of a child's soul. But Miss Baker has given us, not only a book that is a joy to read, but a valuable guide to the material and technique of kindergarten work in the church school. None but an experienced teacher could have gone so thoroughly into all the little details that make for success in the handling of children and stated them so clearly that even the inexperienced can appreciate their meaning and value. The five parts of the book deal, respectively, with The Child, Subject Matter Correlated with the Activities of Child Life, Equipment, Administration, and The Teacher. There are stimulating questions for discussion in the training class, and many helpful references to books and lists of pictures and materials. A good index makes the work easy to use for reference purposes. It is one of the best texts on this subject that we have seen.

AT SCHOOL WITH THE GREAT TEACHER, by JEANETTE E. PERKINS (Pilgrim Press. $2.50). This book is different. It is a unified (not "correlated") course of instruction for eight-year-olds for Sunday and week-day work. It was not written in the seclusion of the author's study, with the hope that it might prove adapted to the pupils when done, but is the result of experience in two different types of schools, under skilled supervision, results in each case being carefully noted and discussed in committee before putting the material into form for printing. It is not a ready-made course to be used "as is" by every leader, but rather, a body of source material, so arranged as to be highly suggestive for the manner in which it may be used, yet definitely calling for adaptation to varying conditions.

Best of all, it keeps always in mind, not a prescribed text to be put over, but the actual problems and needs of real children that are to be met. An unusual feature is the inclusion of reports from the experimental schools showing just what the children did and said in response to the teaching, thus illustrating with entire frankness both the strong and weak points.

The book will serve several purposes. Those who are looking for a well-balanced and genuinely related Sunday and week-day course will find it here. The teacher of classes on Sunday or on week-days, as independent units, will find abundant material for stories, worship, and service activities, nor will the vacation school leader find it less helpful. Perhaps its best feature is the way in which it invites the pupils to share in the development of their own course of study and activity. The index increases its practical value as a general reference work.

A Top Notch Teacher, by A. H. McKinney (Wilde Co.). The sub-title describes this volume as "an inspirational handbook for church school teachers, leaders of clubs, and all others interested in religious education." It deals, not with the technical training, but with the personal life of the teacher, the various chapters dealing with such topics as Personality, Faith, Courage, Patience, and other qualities which go to make the character of the successful teacher or leader.

Religious Books

The Origin and Evolution of Religion, by Albert Churchward, M.D., M.R.C.P. (Dutton. $15.00). As the fruits of a lifetime of study this volume is notable, whether or not one accepts in every particular Dr. Churchward's apparent assumption, or conclusion, that similarities in rites and symbols, or any common element, suggest a connection, or a common origin. One cannot, for instance, but be somewhat skeptical when the Christian belief that life and immortality were brought to light in Jesus is identified with "the same revelation accredited to Horus, the anointed, at least 300,000 years before"! And, whatever may be said concerning the persistence of primitive superstitions and practices in the symbolisms and ritualisms of sacerdotal Christianity, one is constantly reminded of Paul's reference to "the simplicity that is in Christ." The uniqueness of Jesus was in the simple directness of his appeal to the inner facts of life and experience. Thoreau remarked in what was more than merely a striking epigram that "if we would understand Christ we must abolish Christianity." Before reducing the Christian religion to a mere cult among cults the erudite author of this work might well have given heed to the element of truth contained in Thoreau's epigram.

Dr. Churchward thinks that "religion cannot advance in evolution without science, and true science will not advance without religion." He foresees a time, however, when in the increased striving and working to know the truth, "all the dogmas that have been introduced into the Christian religion will be swept away and we shall have a higher religion than that which has yet been evolved, and obtain a truer conception of God in all His great manifestations and of a future Spiritual life to be attained by all who believe in Him." If by this the author means an exaltation of spiritual and ethical life above dogma—in fact an emphasis upon the simple content of Christ's teaching which Thoreau indicated—many would share the writer's hope in this as the highest evolution of religion. It would still be necessary to determine, however, just to what extent and in what way dogma is the expression of truly religious life and life the expression of dogma. Many open-minded Christians would find a very different origin for certain phases of Christian dogma from that which Dr. Churchward assigns.

Only erudition equal to that of Dr. Churchward would justify a discussion of his investigations and conclusions in detail, but an average reader, while humbly recognizing the devotion of a lifetime to research, gets the impression that Dr. Churchward's erudition has in some respects warped his judgment and has led him to see continuities and connections between religious elements where the association is not always clear. Also while the author disagrees with Dean Inge in asserting that both Babylonian and Hebrew legends came from Egypt instead of Hebrew legends from Babylonia, as Dean Inge had asserted, he fails to take into account the distinct elements of ethical and spiritual truth, in the Genesis stories, for instance, which give to these documents for many of us a place and significance in the devlopment of religion ideas quite apart from their legendary setting or literary form.

The Gospel and the Modern Mind, by Walter Robert Matthews (Doran. $1.75). Dr. Matthews is dean and professor of the philosophy of religion in King's College, and has also been chaplain to King George V. He visited America last year and the present volume contains a course of sermons preached in St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, recast in essay form. The purpose of the book is "to interest educated men and women who, without being experts in science or philosophy, have adopted what we vaguely call the "modern" view of the world. The author sees rightly that many who feel broadly the truth of the "modern" view are perplexed about religion. He hopes to help these by clear and candid discussion of "some fundamental affirmations of the Gospel in the light of modern thought." It is a popular statement valuable because though readable and understandable it is written by a man of scholarly attainments and adequate religious experience.

Can a Man Be a Christian Today?, by William Louis Poteat (University of North Carolina Press. $1.50). The author is president of Wake Forest College, and the volume constituted the John Calvin McNair Lectures for 1924. President Poteat faces his question more from the standpoint of the possible conflict between religion and science than from that of the social and industrial obstacles in the Christian way. His general standpoint may be judged from the opening sentences of his Conclusion:

If you ask me what is a man of intelligence to do in this scientific period to preserve peace in the family of his ideas, I answer in one word: Consider Jesus. Press through a thousand professional interpreters to him, see him at his gracious ministries, hear his original, unamended word.

Introduction to the Textual Criticism of the New Testament by A. T. Robertson (Doran. $2.50). Professor Robertson is professor of New Testament Interpretation in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., and the writer of many books on the New Testament. Since B. B. Warfield's Introduction to the Textual Criticism of the New Testament—the medium through which many of us obtained our first insight into that entrancing field—has been out of print, Professor Robertson, as a teacher of the subject for many years, has found the lack of an adequate textbook, and he has now himself sought to supply that need. His book is dedicated to the memory of Warfield, of whom he relates the strange incident that he endeavored to persuade Warfield to revise his book but that the latter declined on the ground that his interest had come to be chiefly in the sphere of dogma theology after his removal to Princeton. Professor Robertson was urged by Warfield undertake the revision himself, but he unable to do so, and the present volume is independent attempt to apply the writer's experience in teaching Textual Criticism to utilize results attained since Warfield's w Professor Robertson broadly characterizes own treatment as a presentation of the met of Hort with sufficient fullness for the stud

The New Orthodoxy, by Edward Scrib Ames (University of Chicago Press. $1.50). new revision of a book that we are glad to attaining a second edition. Dr. Ames is r ister of a Disciples Church in the Univer area in Chicago. A new introduction been added to the present edition in which pages are devoted to a very striking series sentence definitions of religion.

Fiction

The Red Lamp, by Mary Roberts Ri hart (Doran. $2.00). All the skill of gifted writer has been employed in weavin story whose mystery is touched at all ti by the occult. If the reader could lay d the book fifty pages before its close, he w probably be eloquent in the praise of its s and plot. The man of mystery, howe and his strange crimes, seem to have ta even Mrs. Rinehart to give to them a sembla of reality. But perhaps after so many p of delightful thrills the reader need not be exacting.

The Strolling Saint, by Rafael Saba (Houghton Mifflin. $2.00). Sabatini has ag with magical fingers opened a page of hist The fortunes of a young lord of Italy, desti by his mother for the priesthood, at a t when Paul III was Pope at Rome and Pope's bastard son held evil sway as tyr and Duke of Parma and Piacenza, are l enscribed. The page, however, is marred by licit love, blood, and murder.

His Wife-in-Law, by Marie Conv Oemler (Century. $2.00), is an exceedin interesting piece of fiction. Mrs. Oemler the happy faculty of giving her stories original touch which, as in some instances originality, does not make them improba Members of a proud old white family of South lay emphasis on aristocracy, forgett that real aristocracy is not a matter of mo and other superficial standards. The love st is tense. The reader admires the strong n who runs away with Mary Middleton w though she loves him, is too hide-bound family conventions and opinions to let her realize the fact. Keen character portrayal subtle humor make this story above average.

Not Under the Law, by Grace Livingst Hill (Lippincott. $2.00). A thoroughly wh some story which would especially appeal the girl in her late teens and early twent Joyce Radway is blessed with originality a forceful personality and she exhibits b these traits to marked degrees, notably in transformation of a little land office into a c home.

Lazarus, by Henri Berand, translated Eric Sutton (Macmillan. $2.00). A return the world after an accident which resulted a total loss of memory for 16 years prese many unusual possibilities as a basis for novel. In this translation from the Fren of Henri Berand, interwoven with all it mea to lose step with time, the author has int duced an unusual element. The victim, former musician, who for 16 years became tailor, is haunted by the illusion that t r exists as a separate personality. It is trange tale, with a stranger ending, that y may find neither convincing nor satisfac-, though the book is both engaging and well ten.

N ZANZIBAR, by RALPH D. PAINE (Hough-Mifflin. $2.00). A breezy sea story of ter-ing adventure, unconventional love, and ir-essible humor. Full of surprises. The es are set in Zanzibar and on the Indian an.

N OCTAVE, by JEFFREY E. JEFFREY (Lit-Brown. $2.00). For eight days everything wrong in the life of a man who asks e of life except to enjoy every comfort and od many luxuries, and to be free from all s and annoyances. The idiosyncrasies of dle life have seldom been more successfully cted than by this author, who has at the e time written a most enjoyable comedy.

Short Stories

HE OLD WOMAN OF THE MOVIES, by ENTE BLASCO IBANEZ (Dutton. $2.50). This ection of short stories takes its name from first, the tale of an old woman of Paris se grandson has been killed in the war. She tes a disturbance when she sees him in a ure of the trenches in the movies. Of the y varied stories that follow, "The Four s of Eve" displays a flippancy that borders the profane, while "The Widow's Loan" eals to a marked degree the well-known stry of the writer.

OINTS OF HONOR, by THOMAS BOYD (Scrib-s. $2.00). In a foreword to this volume the ior says that "the heart of war is to be found ctual combat." The collection of stories that ows reveals the reactions of different men, clinging to some point of honor, when con-ted by the strange vicissitudes of war. The dness and realism of the sketches arise pos-from the author's statement that while are not factional transcriptions neither they inventions but are drawn from actual penings.

The Freshman Girl

HE FRESHMAN GIRL, by KATE W. JAMESON FRANK C. LOCKWOOD (Heath). The pur-e of this excellent book is well expressed the authors' preface. "Our object is to r to freshmen girls a simple, sympathetic, comprehensive manual that shall be a guide hem through the early and trying days of r college life, and shall set before them nd and inspiring ideals of conduct and char-er." They have done just that and done it l. Eminently qualified experts have contrib-l to the book chapters on such subjects as ting Adjusted to the Campus, How to dy, the Social Life of the Campus, the Stu-t's Budget, Good Health, and the Religious e of the College Girl. The writers include sident Mary E. Woolley of Mount Holyoke lege, Dean Nurdin of the University of sconsin, Dean Clark of the University of nois, Dean Conrad of Ohio State University, Dean Briggs of Harvard, formerly of Rad-fe. Every girl should read this book before ng to college.

General

HINESE GINGER, by CATHERINE ATKINSON LER (paper. 50 cents). A book of Recrea-n Programs from China, with instructions "putting on Chinese spectacles."

HE JOURNAL OF LOUIS HEMON, translated WILLIAM ASPENWALL BRADLEY (Macmil-. $2.50). Readers of the notable and de-tful story, Maria Chapdelaine, will be erested in the Journal of its author, record-ing the experiences and impressions during the months spent in Quebec Province when he was gathering materials for his story. Simple experiences are glorified by a very beautiful style, and striking illustrations help to make the text and its backgrounds effective.

AMERICA'S NEED FOR EDUCATION, AND OTHER ADDRESSES, by CALVIN COOLIDGE (Houghton Mifflin. 80 cents). A volume in the Riverside Educational Monographs that needs no word of commendation. One of the addresses has appeared in The Congregationalist. The volume contains (1) A Proclamation: American Education Week, 1924; (2) America's Need for Education; (3) The Needs of Education; (4) Thought, the Master of Things; (5) The Things That Are Unseen; (6) Concerning Teachers' Salaries; (7) Letter to Mr. Allis on the Inauguration of President Olds of Amherst College.

THE KING OF SCHNORRERS, by ISRAEL ZANGWILL (Macmillan. $2.50). A reprint of one of Mr. Zangwill's earlier and notable books. Sixteen stories, grotesques, and fantasies interestingly illustrated by various artists, including the celebrated cartoonist, Phil May.

First Church, Washington, Votes New Building

At a large and enthusiastic business meeting of First Church, Washington, D. C., the evening of Sept. 18, it was voted to build a new church on the present site, corner of G and 10th Sts., N. W. The plan is to have an auditorium seating 2,500. The church will seek to raise $1,250,000, about half a million of which will be for the support of special religious, educational, and social work under the direction of the First Church.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul in Athens

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for October 4
Acts 17: 22-34

Athens has been spoken of as "unquestionably the most beautiful city in Europe, with its magnificent views of sea and mountains, and its unrivaled temples of Pentelican marble." It was the intellectual capital of Achaea, though Corinth surpassed it in political and commercial importance.

At the time that Paul visited the city it was a center of romance and tradition in which the very religion of the place had become a matter largely of speculative and aesthetic interest rather than of deep and intense moral concern. Luke evidently knew Athens very well, and though his words have lost something of their full significance through long and constant association with them, one should appreciate the shrewd thrust and the critical judgment implied in his reference to the Athenians as spending their time "in nothing else but either to tell or to hear some new thing."

It is against this background of merely speculative interest that he places the remarkable sermon of Paul on Mars Hill. The simple dignity with which Paul proclaims the fundamental Christian assumptions concerning the world and life is strangely in contrast with the erudition that discusses at length all manner of new and fantastic things, and at the same time neglects the essential fundamental verities. Paul speaks with great confidence because of the way in which these simple truths had become established in his own life and faith.

Note how natural are the elements of his faith in God as Paul defines it. His assumptions go to the very foundation of all our thinking and being. We see everywhere in life, within the power of man himself, the capacity for making things, and in this power of man himself Paul finds the evidence of creation and a creator. The world did not come by chance any more than houses and temples come by chance. The world was the expression of the vision and activity of a creator. Once this fundamental faith or assumption is acknowledged, how simply and naturally the details of a true religion follow. If God had made the world, and if man comes to him as the Creator of all things, what a large conception such intelligent faith will imply! As Lord of heaven and earth his dwelling place cannot be confined to temples that are made with hands—a reasonable and natural conclusion—and as the giver of life and breath to all he manifestly does not depend upon the effort of men's hands; that such a God should be in images of gold and silver and stone or in anything made by man's hands seems most absurd. If he is the Creator of all things, he must be everywhere, "for in him we live and move and have our being." How else could we think of him? Probably nowhere in all literature, except possibly in the suggestions of the early chapters of Genesis, have we the blending of faith with the natural assumptions concerning the world and its meaning set before us in such a remarkable way.

Nor should we miss in this passage the emphasis upon the Fatherhood of God. God is not only the Creator of the world, he is the Father of his children. Moreover, Paul links this doctrine of the Creator and the Father of all men with the highest manifestation of life in Jesus of Nazareth, and he centers the reality and the permanency of the spiritual in the doctrine of the resurrection. Here it was, apparently, that his exposition failed to reach his hearers, but the doctrine of the resurrection for Paul was the climax of his faith in God and in the permenancy and effectiveness of God's purpose in Christ.

It is doubtful if anywhere such admirable exposition has been packed into so small a space. The record is a tribute to the masterly skill of St. Luke, but Paul himself must have preached with great power and concrete expression. The tent-maker stands vindicated in history against the philosophical and aesthetic dabblers in truth who laughed him to scorn.

If there is one passage that might perhaps be laid at the very heart of the present generation, it is Paul's reference to the responsibility which each generation bears. Referring to what was the past for those who listened to him, he said, "The times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." What does God command of our age? What is our distinctive responsibility? What are the peculiar forms of idolatry which dominate life today? What are the false conceptions of God and of his grace and glory that they perpetuate? How can we save the world from these false conceptions and idolatries? How can we bring men under the power and rule of the simple elemental assumptions of faith? These are the questions that seem worth discussing as we seek to bring this great sermon at Athens into the fullness of its effect upon our own time.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Slovenly Lips

A day or two ago I took up an article which a deafened friend had sent me—an article on lip-reading—supposing that it would concern itself with helpful suggestions for the hard-of-hearing. Its most important suggestion, I was surprised to find, was for those who are not hard of hearing. The very first paragraph began with some much-needed remarks about our American slovenly way of uttering our words.

A certain man of my acquaintance, for instance, is very fond of the word moral. It is one of his pet words. Or perhaps it is his pronunciation that makes it seem to be so often on his lips. For he utters it as if it were spelled morl. And one has but to listen for a few moments to a person who has been taught crispness and clear-cutness and nicety of enunciation, to be made painfully conscious of the muddy, blurry way in which a large part of us Americans give utterance to our thoughts.

The English language can be a very beautiful thing when careful discrimination is made in the sound of the various vowels, and the consonants are given their rightful value, and the words are sounded (not, oh, never with the pretentiousness of a pedant, but) with clearness and precision and beauty of intonation and a certain crispness, and in the forward part of the mouth. But this same speech can be a very ugly thing, and a very hard thing for even fairly good ears to understand, when heavy lips are held unmovable and teeth are kept shut or nearly so, when vowels and consonants are muddied, and when the sentence as a whole is rather gulped in the throat than sent forth by the tongue and lips aided by the teeth.

It is not long since I listened to a public speaker, a young man, who was inflicting just that sort of speech upon his hearers. His ideas were excellent; his carefully chosen words carried his thought forward swiftly and interestingly; he gives promise of being something more than the ordinary sermonizer. But how he does need some one to tell him, at this beginning of his career, that lips are intended for use, and that speech as well as thought should be made easy to follow.

In the article to which I have referred the writer goes on to say: "The ideal of lip-reading, the thing it might be, is the best help yet devised for mitigating both the affliction and the infliction of deafness. But to attain this ideal something more than the education of the deaf is necessary—the hearing, too, have something to learn."

It is not just on account of the hard-of-hearing, however, that people in general have something to learn. A few words found in the Autocrat when I was but a youngster come now to my mind as I write: "To trifle with the vocabulary which is the vehicle of social intercourse is to tamper with the currency of human intelligence. He who would violate the sanctities of his mother tongue would invade the recesses of the paternal till without remorse, and repeat the banquet of Saturn without an indigestion." If it is necessary, for the nation's well-being, to keep the financial currency absolutely free from debasement, much more is it necessary to honor "the currency of human intelligence." And yet how many who feel the greatest concern over that which affects business, debase, every hour of their day, that which is of vital consequence to minds and souls—that is, thought and its expression.

Closet and Altar

THE LAST ENEMY

It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. —I Cor. 15: 43.

"The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Until that time comes death is God's servant and the friend of man. Than we shall be far beyond the power of death. Now it opens the door for all of us into the eternal life with God.—Thomas Bedloe.

In the thought of the coming night Christ crowded the twelve hours of his brief day with ceaseless activities of grace, and in doing so he vanquished death. He made it an ally, not an enemy. And it is such an ally to all who think of it as he did, exalting instead of paralyzing their powers. Death has won its deadliest victory when it makes us think that life is not worth living, but when it so intensifies our earnestness and loyalty to duty it has itself been so far overcome.—James Denney.

A rhyme of good Death's inn!
  My love came to that door;
And she had need of many things,
  The way had been so sore.

My love she lifted up her head,
  "And is there room?" said she;
"There was no room in Bethlehem's inn
  "For Christ who died for me."

But said the keeper of the inn,
  "His name is on the door."
My love then straightway entered there:
  She hath come back no more.

Lizette Woodworth Reese.

As death, rightly considered, is the true purpose of our life, I have since a year or two made myself so thoroughly acquainted with this true and best friend of man that his picture no longer frightens me; it brings much that is reassuring and comforting.—Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

A dying day is in itself a joyful day to the godly; it is their redemption day, when the captives are delivered, when the prisoners are set free.—Thomas Boston.

All other unions are dissoluble: a man may be plucked from his dwelling-house and lands, or they from him, though he have ever so good a title to them; may be removed from his dearest friends, the husband from the wife, if not by other accidents in their lifetime, yet surely by death, the great dissolver of all those unions, and of that straightest one, of the soul with the body, but it can do nothing against this union, but, on the contrary, perfects it.—Robert Leighton.

Almighty and eternal God, who hast sent us into his world to live according to thy laws, look in mercy upon us, we beseech thee, and enable us to do our duty wisely hour by hour. Grant that having served our generation we may be gathered to our fathers with the comfort of a reasonable hope in thee and in perfect charity with all men; so that neither life nor death, nor principalities nor powers, nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other creatures may be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen. Jeremy Taylor.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVO

Are We Good Citizens?

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic f
October 4-10

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: How Can Our Society Benefit Community?—Matthew 5: 13-20. (Consecra Service. Rally Sunday.)

Light from the Bible Passage

Jesus put a high valuation on real Christi Nothing can take their place or do their w They are as essential to the needs of the w of men as salt and light. The former, to of any use, must have its full strength. that has lost its saltiness is useless; Christi that have lost their true Christianity are valueless. A hidden light is no better than light. A Christian that tries to live a secret is of no value to the world. Our Christ life fulfills its highest purpose when it ma the way clearer and more attractive for oth A Christian has no right to take his life eas He cannot meet his Master's approval un he fulfills Jesus' commands. Any conduct ours that appears to take God's will lightl a reflection on Christ. Nothing less than pendicular uprightness will qualify us for zenship in the Kingdom of Heaven.

Leads for the Leader

Think through this twofold question: whom and for what does Christian Endea exist? For itself and its members? What it do for them? For the Church? What sho it be doing for it? For the community? the world?

A few suggestions as to community servi

1. Know it. We know about the rich well-to-do: what about the poor? We kn about the educated: what about the othe We know about the natives: what about aliens? We know about the active and we what about the sick and shut-ins?

2. Be a part of it. We are not in the co munity for what we can get out of it. We to make our contribution to it. Salt has to in the thing it salts.

3. Serve it. Are Endeavorers helping create more respect for the Eighteenth Amer ment? Are they, through Visiting Committe seeking out the newcomers, the lonely, the sh ins? Through Christian Citizenship Comm tees aiding every movement for a higher ty of citizenship? Are they helping to set a high type of amusement and recreation?

Thoughts for Members

Let all the people praise thee,
  Give all thy saving health,
Or vain the laborer's strong right arm
  And vain the merchant's wealth.
Send forth thy light to banish
  The shadows and the shame,
Till all the civic virtues shine
  Around our city's name.

—William George Tarrant.

A great city is that which has the greatest m and women,
If it be but a few ragged huts it is still t greatest city in the whole world.

—Walt Whitman.

A Moment of Prayer

"Give us, O God, the strength to build
  The City that hath stood
Too long a dream, whose laws are love,
  Whose ways are brotherhood,
And where the sun that shineth is God's grace for human good." Amen.

WITH THE CHILDREN

What's in a Name

By Emma Florence Bush

ldah greatly disliked her name, though it had in the family for six generations. She was venth one. She wondered why they could not called her great-great-great-grandmother a y name like Ruth, instead of such a homely as Huldah. Aunt Huldah, who was still g and pretty, spelled hers "Hulda," but then she did not want the name no matter it was spelled. At school, while the other wrote their names on the board, "Ruth, line, Daisy, Barbara, and Rose," it looked mely to see just Huldah Stevens there.

was her eighth birthday and she was going ve a party. Her most intimate six little ls had been invited and that would make in all.

wish I had some pretty dishes," sighed ih. "Ours are just plain ones with a pattern on them like we have every day t, just a different color."

ever mind, you make the table look ," said Mother, "and we will have a table for the dolls and use your doll's ."

her birthday morning, Huldah received a ox by express. It was from Great-Aunt h, who lived sixty miles away.

en Daddy opened the box, there was a which he handed Huldah, who read:

ear little niece:

now you do not like your name, even a six little girls have had the name before Some day when you are older, I hope ill be proud of it; but because I felt the as you do now when I was your age, I nding you something that has belonged ch of the Huldahs, that you may begin derstand what it means to be one of so

Lovingly,
AUNT HULDAH.

dah opened a package marked "Number She found a little housewife with needles, e, and such a funny little pair of scissors A card inside read:

s was the first Huldah's sewing box. She d it with her when she married and left oston Town and went with her husband he Maine woods to live. With these she made her own clothes and those of ildren, while her husband chopped down built the log cabin where they lived, the wild animals that prowled around home, and raised what they ate in the oil.

rage Number Two held a string of gold The card read:

se beads were given to the second Huldah father when she was married. She mar- Judge and with him came back to Bos- own where her mother had lived when is a little girl. But she never forgot her n the Maine woods nor the good mother own name she bore.

rage Number Three was the largest in k. Daddy had to open that while Huldah other stood and watched him. There a dozen plates, and cups and saucers, with a gold band running around the and large pink rosebuds scattered over s is all that is left of the set the third h had when she was married [read the You can use them for your party to- ut be sure and be very careful of them, emember how careful all the Huldahs ave been for so many to be left today.

The next package was a wax doll, black with age, and her trunkful of clothes.

This was the doll brought to the fourth Huldah from Paris by her uncle [read the card]. She made all the clothes herself, and when she grew too old for dolls put her carefully away.

A little old-fashioned sunshade that had belonged to Great-Aunt Huldah herself came next; and the very last package of all was a little old-fashioned dress, and the card read:

Your Aunt Hulda wore this on her eighth birthday, and I thought you would like to wear it, too.

When the little guests arrived they were met by a little hostess wearing Aunt Hulda's birthday dress, and they had their ice cream and cake and cocoa from the third Huldah's dishes.

They all thought it was lovely to be a little girl who could have so many things from other little girls who had had the same name, and after that birthday Huldah never again wished she had any other name than her own.

(All rights reserved)

Robert Stephenson's Sweet Money

By Adelbert F. Caldwell

"I wonder why Robert couldn't do it."

Mrs. Whipple, Robert's aunt, had just received word from Lewis Handy that it would be impossible for him to come that morning to do her chores. So much that needed to be done, too; and she felt that the work could not be put off many days longer.

Only the evening before Robert had asked his aunt if she would not make for him a box of cookies, his contribution to the cave lunch, which several of the boys had planned to have the following Thursday.

"Joel Denman is going to take eggs to boil," explained Robert. "Harold Cantwell and George Newcome are one to take jelly tarts, and the other sandwiches. Then the other boys have agreed to furnish the rest of the things that Carl Thomas has down on his list, and I'm down for cookies."

"Perhaps I can make them," replied Mrs. Whipple. "I'll see."

And well Robert knew that her "I'll see" was as good as a promise.

After going over in her mind what jobs ought to be done, Mrs. Whipple stepped to the back door and called Robert, who was painting a bird house.

"Yes, Aunt Harriet, just a minute," answered Robert; "just as soon as I use the paint on my brush."

"I wonder, Robert, if you couldn't rake up the yard and do the other few things that I had engaged Lewis Handy to do?" asked Mrs. Whipple, as soon as her nephew came into the kitchen. "There are the plants to dig around, the rose bushes to stake up, and several other things I'll think of when you get to them."

"Of course I can do it," said Robert.

"I'll pay you," resumed Mrs. Whipple, "let me see—how much," and she made a brief calculation. "About thirty dollars I think I can give. How would that do?"

"Why, Aunt Harriet," protested Robert, "I don't want any pay, and thirty dollars—"

"In sweet money it wouldn't amount to so much as it would in Uncle Sam's currency," interrupted his aunt.

"Sweet money?" repeated Robert, mysteriously. "I never heard of that kind of money before. But if you say so, I'll take a little of it, but not thirty dollars. Perhaps if I work all day I might take a dollar. I'll let you give me a small amount, just to see what sweet money is like."

"But if you do the work for me, I shall insist on paying the thirty dollars," smiled Mrs. Whipple. "So we'll consider the bargain closed."

"Thirty dollars!" exclaimed Robert to him-

POLITICS IN ANIMAL TOWN
Mr. Bear in a Lively Campaign for His Favorite self, while digging industriously around a peony. "And sweet money; well!"

"I'll pay you for your work next Thursday morning," said Mrs. Whipple, when Robert came in for dinner.

"Any time, Aunt Harriet, will suit me."

However when Robert was back again in the yard he said to himself, "I wish pay day were this afternoon. I want to see some of Aunt Harriet's sweet money."

"You have well earned the thirty dollars," was Mrs. Whipple's satisfied comment, that night at supper. Thursday morning you will receive your basket of money."

"Basket of it!" said Robert incredulously.

"Yes," smiled Mrs. Whipple.

"The sweet money is more mysterious than ever," thought Robert, as he went out to close the shed door.

On Thursday morning, bright and early, long before Robert was awake, Mrs. Whipple was up and busy at work at her sweet-money mint. And by the time her nephew was ready for breakfast there were spread out on the table in the kitchen twenty round, crispy dollars, ten halves, and twenty quarters, all sweet and golden. On each had been stamped before baking its own particular denomination.

"Are these lovely cookies my sweet money?" asked Robert, delightedly, going over to the table where the "coins" were spread out in long, golden rows.

"Don't you like them?" was Mrs. Whipple's smiling reply.

"I should think I do," said Robert, enthusiastically. "Are they for me to take to the cave lunch?"

"Yes."

"The other fellows will have to give me something pretty fine, in exchange for these coins," said Robert, taking one up from the table. "I tell you, Aunt Harriet, I'd like to work again for some more sweet money; and I don't care how much you offer to pay me. I'll take it all —every single cent."

(All rights reserved)

Our Readers' Forum

Why Not Tell It with Pictures?

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Would not the meeting of the National Council in Washington, D. C., in October, be an opportune time to secure half a hundred pictures, more or less, of the Council and its settings in the nation's capital? Why could not an official photographer be employed by the Council to secure these pictures? From the films thus secured several sets of slides could be made later and sent out to the different sections of the country to be used by pastors and delegates in telling the story of the Council meetings. Possibly a motion picture, with the President in it, could be secured; at any rate the photo pictures would be easy to get, and the capital city would lend itself beautifully and effectively to such photography. Then, in the North and in the South, in the East and in the West, on many an occasion in the ensuing biennial, the story of this great gathering at the nation's capital could be told in pictures to help visualize and make more impressive the spoken word. It may be some years before the National Council meets again in Washington, with the President of the United States for its Honorary Moderator. Why not make the most of the coming meeting of the Council in every way possible, and tell the story of its sessions far and near in every way that will give the widest publicity? Yes, why not tell it with pictures?

Seattle, Wash. CLARENCE R. GALE.

The New Schism

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

It seems unfortunate, at the very time when many are working for a reunion of Protestantism, when some churches are trying to federate, or in other ways combine their forces, and when the spirit of sectarianism is everywhere deplored, that there should be new causes of division rising up among us. I refer especially to the controversies between Fundamentalism and Modernism, and between Klan and anti-Klan. I have not identified myself with any of these, and so may perhaps be permitted a word as in a manner an outside but very interested observer; not outside of the church, but outside of the leading factions. We are all Fundamentalists if we can agree as to what things are really fundamental. But here are four new parties; and their causes are being maintained with a great deal of heat and, for the most part, with very little effort to ascertain the truth.

Are we going to divide our churches on these issues and multiply the already existing denominations by four? That is what some seem to be striving to accomplish. If we continue on that principle, we shall soon need a separate church for each individual who has an opinion of his own. We cannot prevent new issues from arising. Let each person be conscientious in forming his opinion and earnest in maintaining it. Where does the harm come in? The harm is done when individuals begin to say, "You cannot belong to my church unless you think as I do on these subjects," or, "Unless you preach as I think we will boycott your church!" There is something of that spirit in many places. Will that save Protestantism? Why, it is playing right into the hands of the opposition, who have always looked forward to this very thing; increasing division and subdivision till there is nothing left. Let us learn the old lesson of respect for honest differences. The "spirit of unity" is of some importance and comes pretty close to being one of the real fundamentals.

Wauregan, Ct. WILLIAM FRYLING.

National Prohibition Criticized

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Fanny Comstock, in The Congregationalist of Sept. 3, suggests an argument for the enforcement of prohibitory laws which she deems shows a parallel in the enforcement of all laws. In this I fail to appreciate her logic. It is true that traffic ordinances are for the protection of society, as all public regulation is or should be. But traffic is not prohibited, nor is the freedom of the individual interfered with in any way.

To get rid of the saloon in politics, the Eighteenth Amendment was forced into the Constitution. This made it incumbent on Congress to enact a law to carry out that mandate. The Volstead Act is not a perfect law, in that it is so drastic that society does not fully approve it. That it infringes constitutional rights of the individual has been fully decided in high courts. There is no parallel between the enforcement of the Volstead Act and the regulation of traffic, for society unanimously approves the latter, only criticizing court leniency toward offenders.

Prohibitory legislation has made it a crime for those from foreign lands who have come here to find homes to follow their custom of using native wines and beers as table beverages, as we do coffee, but the saloon remains, a more demoralizing influence among the young it was under excise legislation. Coffee was considered an intoxicant in an early and while fond of it and a teetotaler in r of wine and beer, I do not hesitate to s as my opinion that coffee and tea are m jurious to the throat and stomach, if to excess, than any light wine or brewed

But the gravest charge against such er ment as we have had is its character. head of the department in whose charge duty to enforce Prohibition, is, and has from its inception, a man to whose im wealth profits from distilling—whisky-r —have been largely contributory, and whose warehouses in Pennsylvania more half the contraband liquor sold official ington is said to have been drawn. To down the line and explain the graft con with the doings of paid officers of the would require too much space, but enforc has been against the poor and not again wealthy bootlegger.

To touch another point: The Eight Amendment takes from the state the ta policing the liquor business, and the Pres powerless to enforce the law, now seeks co-operation in fighting the only offense a federal statutes it feels unable to punish

Dearborn, Mich. W. T. WOODBU

The Brazil Congregationalists

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Readers of my article in The Congregati ist entitled "Congregationalism in Brazil" be interested in some data just received Rev. Antonio Marques of Rio de Janeiro at the Annual Convention of the Congregat Churches of Brazil held recently in Santos, re-elected as president for three years.

At the convention seven men were ord to the ministry, two more churches were mally recognized as belonging to the Cong tional Union, and the work of the Cong tional Churches of Brazil was divided into fields, four in Brazil and one in Portugal. was determined to hold annual regional co tions in each field and the name of the u was changed to Uniao Evangelico Cong cional do Brasil e Portugal.

The convention regretfully determined it could not afford to send a friendly dele to the meeting of our National Council Washington, but hoped to accomplish tha some later time.

New York. FRANK K. SANDER

Onward Christian Worker

(Written for the Cheshire County Christi Endeavor Union by Arthur H. Sargent Gilsum, N. H.)

Onward, Christian workers, to the harvest f
With the life of Jesus in your own reveale Christ's the master workman in this below—
Forward to the reaping see his workers g

Chorus:

Onward, Christian workers, to the harvest f
With the life of Jesus in your own reveale

Hand in hand united, all one body we,
One in high endeavor, by the truth made f
Strong for honest labor, above all pain or l
We scorn the shame and danger, and glory
the cross.

Onward then, young people, join our ha throng,
Blend with ours your voices, in the harv
song.
All our hope and promise unto Christ bring—
Hence, for heavenly wages to work and p and sing.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

From Wisconsin to Oregon

. H. D. Davies, who has just begun the ate of The Dalles, Ore., is a native of sh, Wis., and graduated from the high school there in 1900. He had his college training at Ripon and graduated at Princeton Seminary in 1907. He took his M.A. at Princeton in 1906 and studied at Halle and Basel, 1907-08. He was a graduate student in Semitics and instructor in New Testament Greek at the University of Wisconsin, 1908-12, and taught Hebrew in tah Episcopal Seminary, 1911-12. He the church at Wauwatosa, Wis., 1912- uring his pastorate the church increased in membership and became one of the completely organized in all departments k of the Wisconsin churches. A Colonial was built and dedicated in 1921.

. H. D. Davies

Davies has been interested in the work own community first of all. He has been an of the District Welfare Association, ber of the Milwaukee Advisory Board, rried large responsibility in Milwaukee nity fund campaigns. He has served the nation with a loyalty and with an intelligence that have made him very effective. He has served again and again as a member of the board of the State Conference, has been moderator of the conference, conference preacher, and has given a large amount of work to the young people's movement in the state. The credit for the success of the Green Lake Conferences is probably due more to his leadership than to that of anyone else, and he has for some time been the representative of the State Conference in the control of the Green Lake Bible Institute, where the conferences are held. He is a good preacher, a wise pastor, an optimistic, forward-looking Christian gentleman in all the relationships of life. He will be greatly missed from the Wisconsin work. The church at The Dalles offers a fine opportunity for constructive leadership and it seems providential that Dr. and Mrs. Davies have been secured for its work. They will furnish the right kind of leadership for building constructively in this newer territory.

Dedication at Atlantic Ave., Long Beach

In accordance with the recent aggressive policy of the Southern California Conference in church extension, not to await a formal invitation of residents to form an organization, but rather to answer the need of a field with the churchly service, a large corner, 140 by 140 feet, was secured on Atlantic Ave., Long Beach, something over three years ago. Rev. W. R. Marshall of Bellingham, Wash., was secured to lead the work, and his whole salary at first was paid by the conference. He lived in a large residence on the property which also served for church purposes. The work grew to such an extent that rooms in the Roosevelt School building were utilized.

By heroic sacrifices, the young congregation has provided itself with the first unit of the permanent plant,—a roomy structure to provide for the religious education and social functions. It also contains an auditorium to seat 500, which will suffice for some time. There are also a ladies' parlor, large dining room and kitchen, and full equipment for the church school in departments. It is in the Spanish type of architecture, suitable in appearance, and cost with furnishings $40,000.

July 12 was the day of dedication. At the morning service, Supt. G. F. Kenngott preached the sermon; at the afternoon fellowship service, Rev. H. K. Booth of First Church gave the sermon; at the evening community service Rev. C. F. Aked was the preacher. Near a great school, the church enters with earnest ambition into its large field of service.

A most pleasing recognition to the minister was a banquet and program put on in the church by the local Kiwanis Club, of which he is a member. There were many felicitations. It was found that the Kiwanis in departing had left $350 on the tables.

Planning the Church's Program

First, West Springfield, Mass., is located in a growing community and like all of the enterprises of the town it is taking an upward look. It is one thing, however, to talk about a great future for an organization and it is another thing to make that greatness a reality. The officers and people of First Church have made up their minds that if there is a great future for the church they must work to make it.

During the summer the organizations of the church have been planning their programs. The young people have arranged for a series of vocational meetings to assist the young men and women of high school age in making right life choices. The program follows:

YOUNG PEOPLE'S AND SUNDAY EVENING PROGRAM

(Services at six forty-five o'clock)

To assist the young people of our parish in making right life choices a series of vocational services has been planned. Once a month the young people have arranged to hold an everybody's night, at which illustrated lectures will be given.

Oct. 4—"Get-Together" Night
Oct. 11—"Business," Prof. John A. L. Derby
Oct. 18—Everybody's Night, "Hofmann's Study of the Life of Christ" (Illustrated)
Oct. 25—"Forestry," Mr. Herman C. Walker
Nov. 1—"Physician," Dr. Warren Bostick
Nov. 8—"R. R. Y. M. C. A.," Mr. Lewis T. Erickson
Nov. 15—"Social Service," Mrs. Mary C. Dwinell (other young people's organizations invited)
Nov. 22—Everybody's Night, Thanksgiving Service
Nov. 29—"Lawyer," Mr. Frank Auchter
Dec. 6—"Finance," Mr. J. Malcolm Warren
Dec. 13—"Ministry," Rev. Fred G. Morecombe, Ph.D.
Dec. 20—Everybody's Night, Christmas Sunday
Dec. 27—"Dramatics," Mr. William T. Simpson
Jan. 3—"Music," Mrs. Alice Nichols
Jan. 10—"Y. M. C. A.," Mr. Murray Cate

Fathers and Sons in the Ministry

XXX. The Veazies

Rev. Walter C. Veazie, the elder in this ministerial succession, has spent the major portion of his 40 years in the ministry as pastor at large, evangelist, and general missionary. However, his ministry began and closed in a local pastorate, beginning with the Second Church of Pueblo, Col., where he was ordained in 1884, and closing in 1924 with the church in Winslow, Wash. For 23 years Mr. Veazie was state evangelist and general missionary in Kansas and Colorado, holding meetings wherever the need seemed the greatest.

ev. Walter C. Veazie

Rev. Carl H. Veazie

In 1910 he came into the Pend d'Oreille country in Eastern Washington, where he was joined by his son, Carl H., who had just graduated from Chicago Seminary. Here father and son served the mission stations and churches from Cusick to the Canadian border, at Cusick, Ione, Metaline Falls, and elsewhere. Leaving one in 1923, Mr. Veazie, Sr., as stated, had his last pastorate for a year with the Winslow Church across the Sound from Seattle.

Veteran of the Civil War, business man in Denver, careful student of the Bible, astor, preacher, evangelist, and personal friend of many, Mr. Veazie has exerted a ide and benign influence. He and Mrs. Veazie, his faithful companion and co-worker n all his labors, are now living in Seattle. They are now great-grandparents. A randson, son of Rev. N. O. Bartholomew, of Maplewood, Mo., whose first wife was he oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Veazie, has just been licensed to preach. A econd daughter, Mrs. Peter Retlinger, is the wife of the government forester in enver. A son, Prof. Walter B. Veazie, is at the head of the department of philosophy, University of Colorado. A second son, Rev. Carl H. Veazie, has been pastor the Prospect Church, Seattle, since 1919. Formerly he held pastorates at Corbin ark, Spokane, and at Wallace, Ida.

Jan. 17—"Teaching," Mr. William Cowing
Jan. 24—Everybody's Night, "Making the Alien Kin" (Illustrated)
Jan. 31—"Physical Education," Miss Doris Haynes
Feb. 7—"Y. W. C. A.," Miss Mary L. Cady
Feb. 14—"Religious Education," Rev. Warren T. Powell
Fez. 21—Everybody's Night, "Farm, Field, and Factory in Japan" (Illustrated)
Feb. 28—"Missionary," Rev. H. Arthur Kernen
March 7—Open Night
March 14—"Civil Engineer," Mr. Frederick Steel
March 21—Everybody's Night, A Service of a Lenten Nature
March 28—"Nursing," Mrs. Pearl Casman
April 4—Everybody's Night, Easter, Service of Special Nature

For some time a number of people have been asking to have a Sunday evening service. To meet these requests the young people have planned to hold once a month an everybody's night. These meetings will be of an unusual nature and use will be made of the stereopticon.

One of the most active organizations of the church is the Womans' Guild, which has planned a fair to be held on two nights in October. In September the guild is doing a splendid piece of co-operative work in furnishing the meals for the meeting of the Westfield Baptist Association held at the West Springfield Baptist Church. This will allow the Baptist women to attend the meetings of the association.

The Conquest Circle, a group of young women organized to do handwork for home and foreign service, is planning for a profitable year's work.

The girls of high school age have been organized into a King's Daughter's Circle. They are planning to do work for local organizations and have volunteered to care for children during church services while the parents attend.

The officers of the Men's Club have planned an interesting program as follows:

OUR MEN'S CLUB

This organization plans for one of the best years in its history. The dues for membership are only one dollar a year and every man in the parish is cordially invited to meet with the club on the dates below. At each meeting a supper will be served for which a nominal fee will be charged. Supper at six-thirty o'clock.

Nov. 9—"The Good Old Times"; Speaker, Prof. George W. Miner
Dec. 14—Father and Son Dinner; Speaker, Prof. Eugene C. Foster
Jan. 11—"Evolution"; Prof. Burt B. Farnsworth
Feb. 8—"Out of the Middle Ages into the Muddle Age"; Rev. Claude Allen McKay, D.D.
March 8—"Obedience to Law"; Deputy Commissioner Frank W. Wright
April 12—Open Date
April 21—Possible date for the annual entertainment
May 10—Possible date for the Federated Men's Club Meeting

The active work of the church is beginning a few weeks earlier than last year. The church school started on Sept. 13, and on that same date the opening fall Communion service was held. Rally Day is to be held in the church and church school on Sunday, Oct. 4. morning service the minister is to pre "The Mind of Christ in Church Work." will be special exercises in the church sc

Sunday, Nov. 1, is designated as Inga Sunday. It is hoped a number will uni the church at that time.

Rev. Stanley Cummings

After a successful pastorate of six years in St. Albans, Vt., Mr. Cummings has now accepted a call to First Church, Bennington. Mr. Cummings' first sermon was preached in Routt County, Colorado, at an altitude of nearly 8,000 feet above the sea and to a congregation made up largely of cowboys. He looks back to this experience as one of the most interesting and valuable of his life.

From West to East

WASHINGTON

Mr. Floyd Green Licensed to Preach

At a specially called meeting of the Associations, at Plymouth Church, Aug. 17, Mr. Floyd Green was voted a to preach. Mr. Green has recently finis studies at the University of Washington attending the university he has suppl two years the church at Suquamish. coming year he is to have charge of the connection with the Forks Church and boring fields, and then plans to finish hi aration for the ministry at a theologica nary. His choice of the ministry a promise he gives of usefulness therei gratifying to the brethren who heard hi ments of religious experience and Christ liefs, and who have known of his life an while at the university.

Mr. McClure Goes as Chaplain

The Roberts World Tour Corporati selected Rev. G. V. McClure, pastor Columbia Church, Seattle, to go as c with a company of pilgrims on a wor sailing from Seattle, Sept. 15, on the S. press Thima. The tour will occupy abo months. The Seattle pastor will be panied by his wife and daughter, all of expenses are paid by the touring corp During his absence the Columbia Chur be cared for by Mr. Harry Lee, a licen the Methodist Church, and at present a at the University of Washington. Mr. been supplying our church at Maltby pursuing his studies.

Daily Vacation Bible Schools

The daily vacation Bible school is stay. More of these schools, with lar tendance and better results, were he year in Washington than ever before. the largest and most successful was Plymouth Church, Seattle, where a c teachers with teaching experience charge. The principal was Miss Adelai lock, for years one of the most su teachers of the city public schools. Rudolph Ericson, associate minister, h eral supervision. More than 200 boys a between the ages of six and 17 were in ance. Bible instruction, hero tales, mis stories and the like, were supplemented sons in manual training, swimming, music, art, games, etc.

A similar school was held in Pilgrim Seattle, with Mrs. A. T. Pontius, P director of religious education, in Among other things the pupils here beautiful quilt which they gave to t dren in the Orthopedic Hospital. A with an exhibition of the work done, t parents and friends were invited, clo sessions. Other successful schools of t were conducted at Queen Anne, Seatt Rev. F. R. Morrow in charge; at P Seattle, with the pastor, Rev. C. H. Ve charge, and at Keystone, Seattle, whe and Mrs. J. D. Hudson directed the ac Rev. P. J. Gates, Sunday school field for the conference, conducted four o schools during the summer vacation, a

Oberlin Graduate School of Theology

Scholarly and practical training for the ministry, directors of religious education, missionary and Christian Association service. Interdenominational faculty and student body. All the cultural advantages of Oberlin College and its complete equipment. Unusual opportunities for women. Scholarships and financial help available.

Degrees A.M., B.D., and S.T.M.
Correspond with Dean Thomas W. Graham
Council Hall, Oberlin, Ohio

HARTFORD

W. Douglas Mackenzie
President

Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus
School of Religious Education
Dean, E. H. Knight
Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen

Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for:
1. The Christian ministry.
2. Religious education and social service.
3. The foreign field.

Each school has its independent faculty and its own institutional life, and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of common aim and spirit.

HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION, HARTFORD, Conn.

Bangor Theological Seminary

The 110th year opened Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

EMPHASIZING COLLEGE PREPARATION — SPRINGFIELD
MacDuffie School for Girls
ONE YEAR TUTORING COURSE — MASSACHUSETTS

Post Graduate Course in Music and Household Arts
PRINCIPALS
John MacDuffie Mrs. John MacDuffie

GRINNELL

A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.
Applications for admission in September, 1925, are now being received.
An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.
Address:
Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

e, Beach, Mechias, and Forks. He was ed by his sister, Miss Altha Gates, and Thelma Okajima, a Japanese student at niversity of Washington, who put on a play at Forks for the benefit of the and the town folks. Stereopticon pic- and travelogues in Palestine were fea- of these schools greatly enjoyed. Invari- t the close of the sessions parents and asked for similar schools another year.

End at Seabeck

ee-in-one, week-enders, mostly laymen, s in retreat, and young people in confer- lasting a week, was the order at Seabeck ear. The week-enders, under the direc- f Supt. L. O. Baird, conferred on mat- elative to the State Conference. Reports eard on conditions in different sections state. It is planned to have the laymen a half day and an evening session at nual meeting of the conference in Seattle, ober, when surveys of needs and oppor- s will be presented. The laymen always good time at these annual week-end s, mixing fun with serious matters, and ear were brave enough to challenge the

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

It is one thing to be exposed to a sermon, another thing to take it.

"pulpit pounders" to a game of baseball and beat them. Never mind the score.

Twenty-seven pastors were enrolled for their retreat of a week. Dr. F. J. Van Horn again this year gave the addresses on sermonizing and preaching, using Pres. Ozora Davis' book, The Principles of Preaching, as a text book. The Bible studies were conducted by Rev. C. H. Veazie, using the Gospel of Luke as the basis of the studies and discussions. These addresses and discussions occupied the entire forenoons, while the afternoons were given over to rest and recreation, and the evenings to brotherly conferences around the open fire on pastors' problems. The pastors are finding these mid-summer conferences helpful and worth while.

A story regarding the successful young people's conference, planned and supervised by Sec. Fred Grey, appeared in our issue of Sept. 10. Among the speakers from outside the state were Associate Sec. J. C. Holmes, San Francisco, Rev. Carl Stackman, Denver, of the C. C. B. S., and Prof. Edward A. Steiner, of Grinnell College, who preached the annual sermon Sunday morning. A fine addition to the physical equipment of Seabeck this year is the new and spacious dining room, well lighted by day and night, and with a large, hospitable fireplace giving out warmth and cheer when needed. All missed this year the genial presence of Mr. Laurence J. Colman, owner and host of the encampment, who was kept away by the serious illness of his daughter. The three-in-one program worked so well this year, laymen, pastors, and young people holding simultaneous conferences separately, though worshiping, eating, and playing together, it is likely to be the order permanently. All are finding "Seabeck Week-Ends" a pleasant and profitable way of spending a week in mid-summer. C. R. G.

Winslow Women Meet

The women of the Winslow Church, nestled in cosy Eagle Harbor of Puget Sound, make good use of the mid-summer season by holding their annual meeting at this time. This year it was held at the pleasant home of Mrs. Frank Hyde, with a picnic dinner in connection with the transaction of business and addresses. The addresses were by Mrs. R. S. Osgood and Rev. W. C. Veazie, former workers in this field, who were present as guests. Eighty were present, with Catholic women and Christian Scientists represented in the group. The occasion each year is a community get-together given over to social and missionary ends. Rev. S. H. Upton, pastor at Winslow, who came to the church recently from the Free Methodist fellowship, is doing a fine work in this field.

CALIFORNIA

The Minister as Broadcaster

On Catalina Island at Avalon has been established a broadcasting station, with low wave lengths which sends its messages out very far. The minister at Avalon, Rev. LaRue Watson, has now been given opportunity for wide diffusion of his "fun, philosophy, and inspiration," by a place in the afternoon program Fridays which comes on at five o'clock. Listen in on KFWO.

As one who becomes all things to all men, to win some, Mr. Watson has been initiated into the "aristocracy of this sport fisherman's paradise" by hauling in with rod and reel a black sea bass weighing 251 pounds. Thirty minutes of strenuous fighting, but to subdue a strong man usually requires a harder fight than that.

From this little church on the Island 4,000 church post cards have been sent out by visitors and friends in less than two years. They are putting in a new stock.

Recognition Service at Chino

Growing to independent strength, the Mexican congregation of Chino have organized into a church, with Rev. Bulmaro Alvidrez as pastor. They have previously been a part of the Pomona Valley Mexican church.

A council of recognition convened June 26. A business session in the afternoon found every reason for approval. Out under the trees the women served the guests an interesting Spanish menu, tamales, beans, and coffee, with an American ending—pie. With Rev. E. D. Gaylord of Los Angeles, who had been elected moderator of the council, presiding at the tables, many excellent toasts were given.

In the evening, Supt. Kenngott preached, us-

Notice

Meetings of the National Council

Conventioners are urged to make reservations on our personally conducted 12 day tour to Washington.

De Luxe Motor Coaches will leave Boston October 19th returning on October 30th.

Sightseeing trips in Philadelphia and New York included
6 full days in Washington

All places of national interest will be visited, including special trip to Mt. Vernon and the Arlington Cemetery.

Return trip over newly completed Storm King Highway, Bear Mountain Bridge, Hudson River, Berkshires and Mohawk Trail.

$94.50 covers everything; Hotels, meals, transportation, and all side trips.

The ideal and most economical way to attend the Convention.

GREEN'S TOURS
LYNN, MASS.
Tel. Lynn 4249 2280

REV. JOHN A. HUTTON, D.D.
Successor to Dr. Jowett as Pastor of Westminster Chapel, London, England write articles for The Expositor this year. He is the or of "That The Ministry Be Not Blamed," "There Crucified Him," and other books.
d your subscription to The Expositor now so you may his first article in the October issue.
The Expositor, 710 Caxton Building, Cleveland, Ohio
Subscription 1 year $3.00 4 Mos. $1.00

Important Announcement

Relating to Reduced Railroad Rates to the National Council Meeting at Washington, D. C., October 20th to 28th, 1925

Round-trip tickets to Washington, D C., will be sold at the rate of one and one-half times the single trip rate on the certificate plan under the following conditions:

1. Selling dates and return limit (to reach starting point):

All points in	Selling Dates	Return Limit
The New England Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Central Passenger Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Southeastern Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Southwestern Association, Ark., Kan., La., Mo.	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Oklahoma and Texas	Oct. 16-22	Nov. 5
Transcontinental Association; from Ill., Iowa, Kan., Minn., Mo., Neb., Northern Mich., N. D., S. D.., Wis. and Julesburg, Col.	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
From Col. (except Julesburg), Idaho, Mont., New Mex., Utah, Wyo.	Oct. 16-22	Nov. 5
From Ariz., British Col., Cal., Nev., Ore., Wash.	Oct. 9-15	Nov. 11
Trunk Line Association	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4
Canadian Association Rate applies only to points east of Armstrong and Fort William	Oct. 17-23	Nov. 4

2. Tickets will be good going and returning the same route only.
3. In order to purchase the reduced fare excursion ticket, it is necessary that the applicant present an official identification certificate. These certificates will be furnished all official delegates and Registered "Associate Members" by the National Council Office, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City. If you have not received your certificate, write the National Council Office at once.
4. Tickets must be validated by Railway Agent at Washington, for return trip.
5. The return trip may be begun any time after Oct. 19, but must be completed before midnight of the final return limit.
6. Local Railroad Ticket Agents should be notified at least three days before ticket is purchased as they may not have blanks on hand.
7. Please note carefully that tickets will be sold only on the dates specified, and cannot be purchased except on presentation of certificate issued by the National Council Office. There will be no exception to this rule of the Railroads.
8. The official Certificate for delegates will be mailed to them by the office on receipt of credentials of election and must be preserved by them as duplicates cannot be issued. Additional certificates will be furnished members of families on receipt of registration of such members as "Associate Members."
9. "Associate Members" will receive the certificate on receipt of registration. There must be separate registration for each individual.

For Additional Information write to

National Council of Congregational Churches
287 Fourth Avenue New York City

ing English. Rev. James Eaton addressed the church in Spanish. Rev. Ignacio Lopez of Pomona and Ontario extended the right hand of fellowship to the pastor and officers of the church. Rev. Mr. Wright offered the consecrating prayer. The church goes forward with 45 members.

Honored at Wedding Anniversary

Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Knight of La Jolla have recently come to their 15th wedding anniversary. Three organizations joined in doing them honor; the church of which Mr. Knight is pastor, the useful men's club which he founded, and the Masons in La Jolla of which he is chaplain. Games, music, refreshments, and a mock wedding where the bride was presented with a lovely bouquet of flowers in which was concealed a gift of money for their trip to the National Council at Washington.

The church is being blessed with the largest congregations it has known. The women are divided into neighborhood groups for service. The church school enjoys a new orchestra. At the midweek service the minister is conducting a series of studies on the literature of the Bible.

MONTANA

Yale Divinity Student as Summer Worker

Mr. J. Owen Smith, of Yale Divinity School, has been conducting, with the help of Mrs. Smith, a series of daily vacation Bible schools. At Nye and Dean, the results were gratifying, attendance being practically 100 per cent. Nearly 80 people attended the "community get-together" held at the close of school. At Roscoe, within a radius of five miles, every child within the age limit was enrolled. The total enrollment was 25. This is a rural section, nevertheless approximately 100 were present to witness the final exercises of the school.

Lone Rock Church Organizes

A Congregational Community Church was organized at Lone Rock on Sunday, June 21, by Rev. G. C. Johnson, with the aid of Rev. J. R. Hahn, of Missoula, and Asst. Supt. F. E. Henry. Thirty-three members were taken into the church on confession. The acceptance of church membership was unanimous on the part of every man, woman, and child present at the meeting.

Annual Outing of Floral Park, Butte

The annual outing of the Floral Park Church, Butte, was held at Brown's Gulch, about 20 miles north of Butte, on the last Sunday in June. This rather unusual custom was started in the church some years ago. Automobiles left the church at 9.30, and after they arrived at the appointed place out in the mountains a service of worship was held under the trees. After the service, which was participated in by children as well as adults, dinner was served, each family or group providing its own basket. The committee in charge served coffee and ice cream. In the afternoon the children enjoyed games and contests, and at six o'clock the Christian Endeavor Society held its prayer meeting. Nearly 100 people were present and enjoyed a real fellowship. Rev. L. H. Bent, the pastor, was chairman of the local arrangements committee at the State Christian Endeavor Convention which met in Butte, June 18-21, and also served as director of the Young People's Department at the State Assembly in Billings.

COLORADO

Boy Scout Troop Organized at Telluride

A Boy Scout troop has been organize Telluride and spends three afternoons a drilling, playing ball, hiking, and dammi creek to make a swimming pool. Mr. Edw Haven Dickinson, of Union Seminary, in tion to his work at Telluride, has been ho services Sunday evenings in Pandora, a m mill community, about two miles distant. Dickinson has been requested by the Tell Church to remain with them through winter.

Collbran Has Vacation Bible School

A daily vacation Bible school was cond at Collbran this summer by Mr. Alber Walker of Chicago Seminary, assisted by Zadie A. Cory, a C. S. S. E. S. summer wo and three of the local young women. enrollment reached a total of 73, and the sions were held in the community house, w with its gymnasium and separate classr was admirably adapted to such a program Walker directed two physical education cl The Reo missionary truck performed good ice in bringing many of the children to s sometimes carrying over 20.

Mr. Walker also conducted several vacation schools. At Georgia Mesa, there an enrollment of 25 and an average at ance of 19. A school had never been held before, and the children were most enthu tic. Two girls walked two and a half over the hills on the two hottest days o summer rather than miss the sessions. Molina, the use of the schoolhouse was sec and the enrollment numbered over 30. Walker is the son of Assistant Supt. Jam Walker, and bears a summer commission the Home Missionary Society.

Seibert Actively Carrying On

Mr. J. S. Snyder, of Chicago Seminary, as student pastor at Seibert for the sur under the commission of the Home Missio Society. The annual Sunday school p was held Aug. 2, with about 60 present. T was community singing, music by the quartet, discussion of the Sunday school son, an excellent dinner, and an afternoo games and fun. The ladies' aid is ra money to make some needed repairs on church building, and served a cafeteria su during the Chautauqua, which was well pa ized.

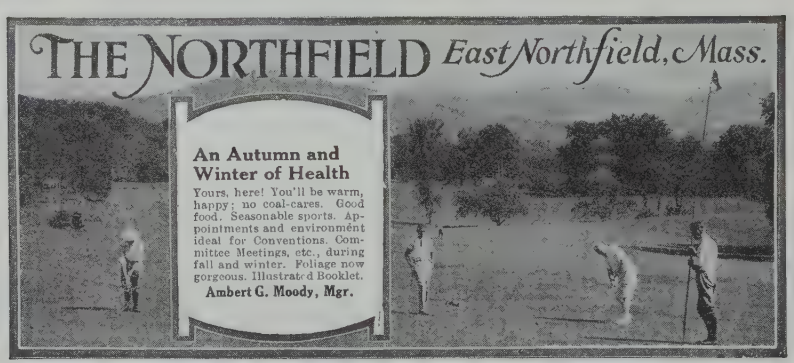
ALABAMA

Improvements to Christian Hill Edifice

A new pulpit and rostrum have added to the attractiveness of the church buildi Christian Hill. A Junior Christian Endeavor Society has been organized with a membe of 15. Revival services held the first wee August resulted in the addition of two members.

New Hope Organizes C. E. Society

The church building of New Hope has painted and provided with three new and several windows. A Junior Christian deavor Society has been organized, with members. About 50 children took part in Children's Day program, Aug. 9. Mr. rence Stanley, of Atlanta Seminary, has



THE NORTHFIELD East Northfield, Mass.
An Autumn and Winter of Health
Yours, here! You'll be warm, happy; no coal-cares. Good food. Seasonable sports. Appointments and environment ideal for Conventions. Committee Meetings, etc., during fall and winter. Foliage now gorgeous. Illustrated Booklet.
Ambert G. Moody, Mgr.

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

HELP WANTED

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton, "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Folding Organ, in good condition, required by pastor of a small rural Congregational church. F. Cecil Hunt, Dunbarton, N. H.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

MISCELLANEOUS

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, home-like rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Earn $25 weekly, spare time, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary. Copyright book free. Press Syndicate, 1228 St. Louis, Mo.

Fine personal stationery—200 sheets, 100 envelopes, with your name and address neatly printed, only $1.00. The McLean Press, 37 So. Loring St., Lowell, Mass.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

IF you have any second-hand church furnishings you wish to dispose of, why not insert a classified advertisement in our paper? Some small church may be in need of them, and be glad to pay a small sum for them.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

BIBLES of every descripti size and price. from your own P lishing Society.

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New Yo 19 S. La Salle St. Chic

g summer service to the above fields, in ion to Wright's Chapel and Blackwoods.

MASSACHUSETTS

Phipps' 60th Wedding Anniversary

er 300 neighbors and friends of Rev. and George G. Phipps assembled in Lincoln Newton Highlands, to do them honor in ration of their 60th wedding anniversary e evening of Sept. 12. The reception was ged by a committee consisting of Seward nes, Leonard Boyd, Howard S. Hiltz, Mrs. lell R. Mick, Charles F. Noble, Sanford hompson and Mrs. Joseph T. Waterhouse. tt C. Lewis served as chief of ushers. In eceiving line with Mr. and Mrs. Phipps Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Woodrow of the on Highlands Congregational Church, and Mrs. Wilbur D. Grose of Cline Metho- Church, Rev. and Mrs. Charles O. Far- f the St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and and Mrs. Wendell R. Mick of Oak Hill. e reception was informal and was a pleas- ocial occasion. The speaking program was duced by Mr. Seward W. Jones, who oted George H. Mellen, who in turn in- ced the other speakers. They included r Edwin O. Childs of Newton, Dr. row, and Rev. Messrs. Farrar, Grose, Mick. All expressed deep appreciation and wishes. A musical program was in charge orge R. Loud, organist of the Old South ch, Boston, who is a nephew of Mr. s. He was at the piano, and a number ecial interest was a song sung by Miss m Bates, words and music being by Mr. s.

Mellen presented to Mr. and Mrs. Phipps h gift of $1,500 to which many had con- ed. Mr. Phipps responded appreciatively. e occasion brought out a remarkable ex- on of good will and affection for Mr. and Phipps, who have lived in Newton High- for 47 years. He was installed there as r April 4, 1878, and retired in January, but he has continued up to the present a remarkable ministry throughout the unity regardless of church affiliation, call- upon the sick and afflicted with comfort heer and help. Mr. Phipps was born in klin, Mass., Dec. 11, 1838, the son of William Phipps, was graduated from Am- in 1862, and from Andover Seminary in He married Miss Kathleen M. Carruth illipston, Mass., Sept. 12, 1865, who grad- from Mt. Holyoke in 1863. He was ned in the Congregational ministry Jan. 868. He was pastor in Wellesley, 1868 78. He preached Sunday afternoons at Hill Union Chapel from 1904 until re- . Mr. Phipps has written many helpful ous poems and paints pleasingly in water s. He is a successful gardener, and his rs find their way to many a home of the and the shut-in.

300 Sings at Yarmouth

most interesting evidence of co-operation of ner guests reached a high register in the unity sings held on Yarmouthport Common ning July 26 at 5.30, and continuing six s. The sponsor was the Village Improve- Society through Mrs. Edric Eldridge of al Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain. rs on the committee in charge were Dr. . Phillips, rector of the Church of the hany, Washington, the local ministers, and representative women. The sings were our long and introduced patriotic songs the more familiar hymns, with invocation benediction. A song leader, cornetist, and sts, a group of Hampton Institute girls, a saxophone orchestra contributed to attendance and popularity. Being non-sectarian, the Catholic priest announced the sings and urged attendance. The success of the experiment was notable. The minister of our own church, Rev. H. J. Wharton, considers it "the most effective thing yet attempted to solve the summer problem of the Cape. I feel sure that it will be more popular and widespread next year."

September Harvests at Manchester-by-the-Sea

In September rich harvests are gathered from orchards and gardens. Is it not a time for spiritual harvests, also, when many young people are leaving home? At the Communion service, Sunday, Sept. 13, First Church, Manchester, received seven new members on confession, all of them graduates from the high school last June. Six were boys, and one a young woman who was valedictorian of her class. Four are going away from home to school—one to Worcester, one to Phillips Andover Academy, one to Tufts College, and one to Bowdoin College. The local church will miss its young people, but feels it is doing a good work when it sends them forth as Christians to gain a higher education.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Memorial at Dunbarton

At Dunbarton, Rev. F. C. Hunt, pastor, the church equipment has been augmented by a beautifully hand-made bulletin board for the exterior of the meeting house. It was presented by Webster Burnham in memory of the late pastor, Rev. A. C. Hunt.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ARNOLD, P. A., Vanderbilt, Mich., to Athens and Leroy. Accepts.

BEITTEL, A. D., to Columbus, Mont.

BISHOP, F. J., from a year in England, to Big Timber, Mont. At work.

BLANCHETT, LOUIS, Litchfield, Mich., to Carsonville and Port Sanilac. Accepts.

BROWN, C. S., Chicago Seminary, to Malta, Ill. At work.

BROWN, F. H., Malta, Ill., to Summer Hill. At work.

BETTER CHURCH MUSIC

The October number of The Expositor will be devoted to Church Music

Articles: "How to Select a Pipe Organ," Harrison M. Wild of Chicago; "Church Music," John Finley Williamson, Director of the Famous Westminster Choir, Dayton, Ohio; "Sunday School Orchestras, How to Improve Them," Gustav Saenger; "The Ancient Te Deum," Dr. William R. Taylor, Rochester, New York.

Dr. John A. Hutton, successor to Dr. Jowett as pastor of Westminster Chapel, London, England, will write for The Expositor this year. Dr. Hutton is author of "That the Ministry Be Not Blamed," "There They Crucified Him," and other books. His first article will appear in the October number.

"South American Missions" will be the theme for Mission Study Classes. The first article on this subject will appear in October, as well as book reviews of books to be used as texts.

Send your subscription to The Expositor—a magazine for ministers only—to begin with the Music Number. It is the first issue of the 27th year of publication.

1 year, $3.00 4 months, $1.00

THE EXPOSITOR, 710 Caxton Building, Cleveland, Ohio

Enclosed you will find $——— for The Expositor to begin with the SPECIAL MUSIC NUMBER IN OCTOBER.

Name .....

City ..... State .....

October 1, 1925

is the date for enrollment for the Fall Quarter.

The Chicago Theological Seminary

offers complete courses and full credits for Ministers, Missionaries, Field Secretaries and other Christian Leaders.

Send for literature and full information.

FRANK G. WARD, Dean 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

Messenger's Scripture
TEXT CALENDARS
Make Money for Your Church—
Your Church can raise from $50 to $500 to meet pledges or raise additional funds. Any live organization in your Church can quickly and easily do it selling Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars. Churches the country over have been doing so for years—so can you. Over 3,500,000 Calendars sold last year.
Plans Endorsed by Ministers
Ministers, church societies and classes everywhere endorse and praise our successful plans as dignified methods of raising money for the Church.
Write your own publishing house today for plans and prices on Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars. For 13 years produced by
MESSENGER PUBLISHING COMPANY - - 5932-44 Wentworth Ave., Chicago, Illinois
1926 NOVEMBER 1926

CHAPLER, R. F. (M. E.), to permanent pastorate, Federated, Chebanse, Ill. At work.
CRANDALL, J. M., Michigan Center, Mich., to Galesburg. Accepts.
DAWE, ALBERT, Three Oaks, Mich., to Kalkaska and Mancelona. Accepts.
ELVIN, JAMES, Dickinson, N. D., to Helena, Mont. At work.
FRAZIER, C. E., Billings Polytechnic, to Alzada, Mont.
HORST, G. C., Oak Lawn, Ill., to St. Joseph, Mich. Accepts.
HULBERT, W. D., Union Seminary, to be minister of education, Bryn Mawr Community, Chicago, Ill. Accepts.
HUNTINGTON, S. R., Garrison, Ia., to Crystal Lake, Ill. At work.
MAYNE, J. C., South Chicago, Ill., to Wyoming. At work.
MELLOTT, I. L., Atkinson, Ill., to Pecatonica. At work.
NICHOLSON, WESLEY, to Litchfield, Mich. Accepts.
POWELL, G. J., retired superintendent, to Ballantine, Mont. Accepts to begin Oct. 1.
REESE, E. A., Chicago Seminary, to Oak Lawn, Ill.
SMITH, I. R. (Disciple), Eureka College, to Gridley, Ill. Accepts.
WEBSTER, D. E., Hartford Seminary, to Savage and Intake, Mont. At work.
WEBSTER, M. H., Oberlin College, to Boradus, Mont. At work.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE AT ACTUAL COST

For Clergymen and Laymen Who are Preferred Risks
(Ages 18-55)

$10,000 Protection has never cost over $9 annually—Under supervision of Insurance Department of the State of Iowa

$25.00 WEEKLY INDEMNITY
Superior rating in the Insurance Field —Membership exceeds 75,000 from every state in the Union and Canada.

OLDEST OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD
No Agents—No Expensive Overhead—Furnishes accident protection at lowest cost. For application blanks and further information write

IOWA STATE TRAVELING MEN'S ASSOCIATION
H. E. REX, Secy.
Fleming Bldg. Des Moines, Iowa
$2.00 pays in full until next February

Our First Mortgage
REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS
net the investor 7% semi-annual interest, guaranteed as to principal and interest, secured by first mortgages on improved real estate in Central Florida and the West Coast, by one of the oldest and most substantial corporations with 14 years' successful experience in the Florida mortgage field. Write for particulars and booklet.
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

The Fisk Teachers' Agencies
120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansas City, Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk & Co.

This "Covered Wagon" is the home of a family in Idaho which is camping under the cottonwood trees for the winter while the father finds work in the nearby town. Many of our pastors are bringing the children of these transients into the Sunday schools for the two or three months they make their residence near the church.

Resignations

CHASE, E. A., Washington St., Beverly, Mass., after 14 years' service.
GODDARD, C. E., Neponset, Ill. To study abroad.
HUYLER, P. E., Foreign, Hilo, T. H.
LEE, C. M., Plymouth, Fond du Lac, Wis.
LEONARD, A. E., First, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.
REVIE, T. M., Streator, Ill. Effective Aug. 31.
YUEN, T. K., Second Chinese, Honolulu, T. H.

Ordinations

BOYLES, C. D., o., Grace, Oakland, Cal., Aug. 25. Sermon by Dr. H. F. Swartz; other parts by Rev. Messrs. J. W. Buckhan, J. V. Jones, C. H. Cleaves, W. J. Speers, W. J. Minchin, E. T. Sherman, and H. L. Miller.

Deaths

Death notices and obituaries are inserted at a cost of fifteen cents per count line. Minimum charge, sixty cents. Lines average seven words each. Address Obituary Department, The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

SMITH—In Brookline, Mass., Aug. 23, Maria C., widow of Thomas P. Smith and eldest daughter of the late Rev. Austin Richards, D.D., formerly of Nashua, N. H., aged 88. She is survived by a son, Sidney R. Smith of Newton, and a daughter, the widow of George H. Emerson of Brookline.

WALLACE—Rev. Mac H., recently died at the home of his son in West Detroit, Mich. He was pastor of the Congregational Church, Plantsville, Ct., chaplain of the American Legion Post there, and served as chaplain abroad during the war.

Events to Come

SUFFOLK SOUTH ASSOCIATION (Mass.), Hyde Park, Wednesday, Oct. 14, 2.30 P.M. Evening service 7.30 P.M.
NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.
WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Oct. 2, 10.30 A.M. Program will include address by Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, just returned from the Orient, and a commissioning service for Miss Margaret Hammaker, under appointment to India.

State Conferences

ALABAMA (White), Tallassee, Nov.
CONNECTICUT, South Manchester, Nov. 3-4.
GEORGIA (Colored), Thomasville, Nov. 18-22.
IDAHO, BOISE, Sept. 29-30, Oct. 1.
KENTUCKY, Evarts, Sept. 26-27.
SOUTH CAROLINA, Columbia, Nov.
UTAH, Salt Lake City, Oct.
WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 6-8.
WISCONSIN, Appleton, Oct. 5-8.

Protestants Through the E of a Romanist

By a Correspondent

Not long since I got a glimpse of Prote through the eyes of a Roman Catholic was a bit of a revelation. You may terested. At a grocery store, after my purchase was wrapped, I asked the pri some article lying on the counter. The price named led me to exclaim. "Price creeping up every day," said the grocer, wages are going down. It is the tariff. ton mill wages have been cut in the past to fifteen dollars a week." Then the ma came excited and added:

Talk about slavery, that is not abolishe Such wages with such prices cannot but ignorance, and poverty and ignorance le crime.

He was reminded that crime is not co to the ignorant nor to the laboring class these days. I asked him if the present m of educating the mind without regard fo spiritual part of man were not responsi a great extent for such conditions—excl the Bible from school curriculums and, it is taught, allowing the truth to be ques until nothing is left as a foundation for ual growth.

The grocer said, "Yes, and you Prote (this was the first intimation that he Romanist) are doing a lot toward it, not in your schools but also in your church

I was astonished, but before I could he continued:

Protestants do not go to church. Th in bed Sunday mornings. Besides this hold but one service on Sunday and none ing the week. Protestants are a lazy set it comes to religion.

"But," I defended, "there are a numb Protestant churches in the city and if you about among them on Sunday mornings would find a good many people in them."

He replied: You will find some, bu ten, you have but one service on Sund your churches, and now in the summer eral denominations combine and hold services, and your churches are not hal then, but you notice the Catholic church

The Irish church holds three services

An Instant Success
Hymns of the Christian Life
Edited by Milton S. Littlefield, D.D.
Published February 1st, 1925. Over 12,0 copies sold. Price $135.00 per hundr
Examination copy on request
A. S. BARNES AND COMPANY
1855 7 W. 45th St., New York

An Old Book in a New Store
just remodelled
Send for Catalog or call at the
Massachusetts Bible Society
41 Bromfield St., Boston

THE PILGRIM HYMNA
"The best hymn book in America"
Sample copy on request
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New Yo 19 S. La Salle St. Chi

ay and the house is packed to the doors ery one of them. The Polish church holds services and at each one the church is full.
French Catholics hold three and at all of every seat is occupied.

e man took a breath and continued:
sides this, your ministers tell lies.
asped and tried to protest, but it was no t long ago I went to the funeral of a g man whom I knew very well. He was mber of a Protestant church but he never to church at all. He always stayed in Sunday mornings. But that minister l at length of his exemplary Christian nd held him up as a shining example of tian living. As a matter of fact, he didn't what religion or Christianity means.

leclared that "not many of our ministers such mistakes." As I walked home, I ht the conversation was worth while as vealed an opinion of the other side and be of use to Protestant workers.

His Mistake

e longed to find the road to fame, ut not a highway bore that name.

e thought to glory there must be level path that he should see;

ut every road to which he came ossessed a terrifying name.

e never thought that fame might lurk ong the dreary path called Work.

e never thought to go and see hat marked the road called Industry.

ecause it seemed so rough and high,
e passed the road to Service by.

t had he taken either way,
e might have come to fame some day.
—Detroit Free Press.

Church
EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS
PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND
CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL
CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

ESTEY
IPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
rattleboro Vermont

CHURCH WINDOWS
AND MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS
AND BRONZE
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
Jacobp Art Glass Company
Dept. 28 2700 St. Vincent Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

EMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

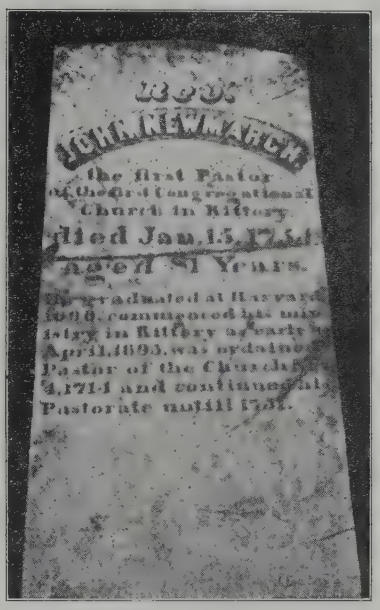
BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
rite to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them.
Write for particulars.

A Grave of Historic Interest

By Ernest Webster Robinson

The fourth church to be organized in the State of Maine, according to The Ecclesiastical History of Maine (a rare volume), was the Congregational Church at Kittery Point in Kit-



OLD STONE AT KITTERY
Marking the resting place of John Newmarch tery. This was as early as 1714, and its first pastor was Rev. John Newmarch. He ministered to this parish for 56 years, a remarkable record. Upon the event of his death he was buried in a small plot of ground, now surrounded by a grove of beech and oak trees, in the rear of the Second M. E. Church. A few other graves with unmarked stones are in close proximity to his grave. His stone, however, has an interesting inscription and is as follows:

Rev.
John Newmarch
the first pastor of the first Congregational Church in Kittery died Jan. 15, 1754
aged 81 years
He graduated at Harvard
1690, commenced his ministry in Kittery as early as April, 1695, was ordained
Pastor of the Church Nov.
4, 1714, and continued his Pastorate untill 1751.

Colonel William Pepperrell and wife, of historic fame, were the leading spirits in the organizing of the church and were regular attendants thereof. It is probable that the Colonel employed Rev. John Newmarch as private tutor to his children. That he cherished a liking for him is evident, as he left him ten pounds by will.

Although the grave of this servant of God is not properly cared for and only an indistinct ridge of earth marks the site of what tradition says to be the Newmarch Garrison, his name is kept alive by the naming of one of Kittery's streets near his grave after the family. A visit to the grave of this minister-of-but-one-parish will be well repaid in interest. Kittery lies at the threshold of Maine. Three minutes on Maine soil will bring visitors to his grave.

Take what you believe and are, and hold it in your hand with a new firmness as you go forward; but as you go, holding it, look on with continual and confident expectation to see it open into something greater and truer.—

Communion

By L. M. Strong

Lord of our common working-days,
Lord of the hours of sweat and grime,
Of little deeds and homely ways,—
In reverence bowed, this solemn time,
My heart for daily, common food would plead,
Thou Bread of Life, broken for human need.

Lord of the great, rapt moments few,
Hours of intense and rare insight,
Days of a vision born anew,
And of the bursting, blinding light,—
Canst thou to me these choicer tokens give,
Thou Wine of Life, spilled that my soul might live!

A Successful Mission Assured with an M&M PORTABLE CHAPEL

Substantial Attractive Economical
Ideal for outlying congregations not ready for large church. When this edifice becomes a reality the M & M Chapel can be erected in a new field or sold to another congregation. Ready-built in sections with windows and doors in place, complete with glass and hardware. Bolted together in a short time by unskilled labor. Superintendent furnished at a nominal fee if desired Have given satisfaction for 25 years. Send for free catalog.
MERSHON & MORLEY CO. 92 Main St., Saginaw, Mich

Church Furniture
Pews Pulpits Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

BALOPTICONS

are used in thousands of schools churches and hospitals. This line of lanterns, for slides and opaque objects—for projection in daylight as well as in the dark—is the most complete in the world.
Write for Catalog
Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 706 St. Paul St., Rochester, N.Y.

Pulpit Gowns
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New York

Organ Builder Tuning Repairs
WILLIAM O. LYNCH
16 Everett Ave. Dorchester, Mass.

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. Henry Smith Leiper,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
George N. White, M.A., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. C... Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chair...

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secr... and Missionary Education Secr...
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Education Secr...
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secr...
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educ... Program including Social Service, Missi... Education, Student and Young People's ... aids Ministerial Students, University Pas... directs campaign to secure Recruits for Chr... Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest o... denomination for the publication and distrib... of The Congregationalist, church school ... ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, tea... magazines, children's and young people's w... papers, and books for home and church use, ... book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Ma...
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregatio...
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachuset...
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illino...

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Con... tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, T... Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INT... 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hu... Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretar...

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PA... 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. ... Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec...

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSIO... FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. ... Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSIO... UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treas... Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Cong... tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIE... constituent of the Congregational Home Mi... ary Society, represents the churches of Mass... setts in their home missionary work. The So... solicits bequests, pays annuities on condit... gifts, administers trust funds for churches. ... erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; ... John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Se... Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Bosto...

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL ... Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, ... bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 C... bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to ... Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF ... TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object i... establishment and support of Evangelical Co... gational Churches and Sunday Schools in B... and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; ... Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; ... Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely ... Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites ... tributions for this purpose. Bequests and An... Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Sup... tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treas... Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICU... constituent of the National Society, solicits ... tributions, administers Special Trust for Chu... and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. ... Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. Willia... English, Treasurer, Congregational House, ... ford.

RISIBLES

ine and frosty morning we were riding ain with a loquacious traveling man, isted on airing his views on all and Pausing for breath, he gazed out of low as we were passing a small country cemetery and then was off again in a riot of words. Some ten minutes later he again glanced from the window as we were abreast of another small graveyard. "Hopping Hen Houses!" he gasped, "that's a mighty long cemetery!"

"Now, Bobby," said his mother sternly, "did you ask Mrs. White for that cooky?"

"No, mother, I didn't. I jes' saw a plate full of cookies in her kitchen and I said, 'You is sure some cook, Mrs. White, if I's any judge.' An' she gimme one to see was I."—Boston Transcript.

A certain young fellow named Fitz,
Falls asleep wherever he sitz;
On the curb he did nap,
With his hat in his lap,
When he woke he had in it six bitz.

"You have been strangely silent of late."

"I have decided," answered Senator Sorghum, "that the people do not like a man to talk continuously. It's better to permit the impression that you are taking time off to do a little thinking."—Washington Evening Star.

A very small boy was trying to lead a big St. Bernard up the road.

"Where are you going to take that dog, my little man?" inquired a passer-by.

"I—I'm going to see where—where he wants to go, first," was the breathless reply.—United Presbyterian.

"Last night at two o'clock in the marnin'," said the Irishman, "whin I was walkin' up and down the flure wid me bare feet on the oilcloth, wid a cryin' child on aich arm, I couldn't help but remember that me father wanted me to be a priest, but I thought I knew better than he did."

Scene: A shoe store in Memphis.

Boss sees a Swedish clerk throw a pair of brand new shoes in waste basket.

Boss—"What's the idea of throwing those shoes away?"

Swedish Clerk—"They bane no gude. I try them on six fellers and they don't fit anyone."

"My sister is awfully lucky," said one little boy to another.

"Why?"

"She went to a party last night where they played a game in which the men had to kiss a girl or pay a forfeit of a box of chocolates."

"Well, how was your sister lucky?"

"She came home with thirteen boxes of chocolates."—Good Hardware.

Maiden Aunt—"And what brought you to town, Henry?"

Henry—"Oh, well, I jus' come to see the sights, and I thought that I'd call on you first."—New York Medley.

"Well," said Farmer Briggs to the artist, "how much will you charge to paint my farmhouse with me standing at the door?"

"Oh, $50," said the artist.

"Done," said the farmer. "Come tomorrow."

In due course the painting was finished. But, alas! the artist forgot to paint in the farmer.

"Yes, I like it," said the farmer; "but where's me—where's me?"

The artist tried to pass off his error with a joke.

"Oh," he said, you've gone inside to get my $50."

"Oh, have I?" was the farmer's reply. "Perhaps I'll be coming out soon, and if I do I'll pay you; in the meantime we'll hang it up and wait."

George was one of those bright young fellows given to the use of slang. At the teatable the other day he required the milk.

"Chase the cow down this way, please," he said.

"Mary," said his mother, "take the cow down to where the calf is bawling."

erican Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches. s and Annuities are solicited in order that se may be freed from mortgage indebted- the Association thus enabled to furnish sionary Organizations with business offices mum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. ward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubreasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

n St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

risitation and personal missionary service tion with our churches. Emergency reation and Fresh Air Work. Contribulegacies gratefully received and scrupuninistered.

Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. ecretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

ted Boston Reorganized 1922

an's Friend Society, Inc.

ciety, reorganized now fully rep- e Congregational of New England ctical, social and work among sea- s finely equipped t 287 Hanover n, and at Vine- en, and Reading Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. ty provides dormitory accommodations, nd recreation rooms, religious services, s, and games of many kinds, a restauanteen, shower baths, postal and bankties. Donations and bequests solicited. ons received on an annuity basis. Pres- Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., omeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore d, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; harles E. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. nklin P. Shumway; Office, 618 Congre- louse.

ican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

ly American undenominational interna- l national Society aiding seamen. ns a Sailors' Home and Institute at s Street, New York City. ibraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing f York. SHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). cked and destitute seamen aided. RTED by contributions and legacies. S. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE EBSTER, D.D., Secretary. E C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 76 Wall St., k, to whom contributions may be sent.

rican Sunday School Union

lia, Pa. Founded 1817

l, Interdenominational. Establishes and Union Sunday Schools in the outlying tricts of the country. Publishes and moral and religious literature. Helps es of Christ by its pioneer and founda-, not duplicated by any other agency. by voluntary gifts. Contributions soanuities arranged for. Legacies received. ions and communications relative to ny part of the country may be sent to England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

September 24, 1925

Vol. CX No. 39

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 387
Editorial—Dr. Newton's Change of Allegiance 388
Aviation Problems
An Epoch of Evangelism—An Editorial Message 390
President Stuart on Conditions in China, by the Editor 391
The Blow Which Angers a Nation, by Robert E. Lewis 392
A Parable of Originality 393
God's Arrow, by Eloise Dean 393
The Power of Man's Spirit, by Grace T. Davis 393
The Value of Higher Education, by David Starr Jordan 394
Send Your Pastor to the National Council at Washington 394
Impressions of Europe, by B. F. Stanton 395
Illumination, by Jean H. Brown 395
Making the Ministry Self-Respecting, by Frederick L. Fagley 396
Our "Camino Real"—Journeyings Along the Northern Stretches 396
On Report of the Committee of Twelve 397
The Midweek Meeting 397
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 398
Along Our Stream of Freedom—An Evening with an Original Jubilee Singer 399
Negro Education and Leadership, by Fred Leslie Brownlee 400
From My Parsonage Window, by Frances Walkley 400
Among the New Books 401
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 403
Our Invalid Parish—Slovenly Lips 404
Closet and Altar 404
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 404
With the Children—Robert Stephenson's Sweet Money, by Adelbert F. Caldwell—What's in a Name?, by Emma Florence Bush 405
Our Readers' Forum 406
News of the Churches 407

NEW RELIGIOUS BOOKS

The titles listed below are only a few of those which seem to us especially noteworthy among the recent books. The season's output is remarkable for its richness and commanding interest.

WHAT AND WHY IS MAN?

Richard LaRue Swain

Author of "What and Where Is God?"

Contents: Who Made God? How Did God Make the Human Body? Is the Method of Human Propagation Ideal? How Is the Soul Made? Why Did God Make Man at All? Why Were We Not Born in Heaven? Does God Cause Earthquakes and Cyclones? Where Did Sin Come From? Did Man "Fall Upward"? Does Environment Determine Character? Is Conversion Necessary? Why Did Jesus Die? Why Do We Pray? Is There a Hell? Is There a Heaven? For What Do We Live? Ready October. Price to be announced.

CARDINAL IDEAS OF ISAIAH

Charles E. Jefferson

Author of "The Character of Paul," "The Building of the Church," etc.

"Why should we give our thought to a Jew who has been in his grave 2600 years?" "How is the study of Isaiah going to help me?" The answer to these questions is that it is impossible to study the life of the eighth century before Christ without getting instruction which will help us in living our life and doing our work. God has not changed. The laws of God have not been altered. Human nature is the same. No new instinct has been added to our nature within the last 2600 years. We are living in a new world, but the new world is old. $1.75

LIBERAL CHRISTIANITY

William Pierson Merrill

Author of "The Freedom of the Preacher," etc.

Between the Modernists and the Fundamentalists stands a large body of Christians, identified with neither extreme. Some of them are liberal, some conservative; all are evangelical. This book aims to set forth the position of the liberals among these evangelical Christians. $1.50

REALITY IN WORSHIP

Willard L. Sperry

Dean of the Theological School in Harvard University

This book is an exposition of the thesis that the aim of a service in public worship is to render articulate, with the aid of science and art, the simple, wordless, Christian experience of the individuals present. The author divides his book accordingly: first, a rather informal account of what "getting religion" means; and second, an effort to discover and to state clearly certain governing principles to be observed in drafting orders of worship, which can be used by all sorts and conditions of men, in their common worship of God. $2.50

THE WAY AND THE WITNESS

Alfred E. Garvie

Principal of Hackney and New College, London

The book is divided into two parts. In one, the author traces the genesis and growth of the Christian believer. In the other, the manifold witness of the Church in the world is finely dealt with. It is a series of addresses on the wider outlook and functions of the Church of today. $1.25

SERMONS BY BRITISH PREACHERS

Edited by Sir James Marchant

A volume of sermons preached by eminent divines on the other side of the Atlantic. A glance at the names of some of the men whose work is included is sufficient guarantee of the excellence of this collection: James Black, John A. Hutton, Dean W. R. Inge, L. P. Jacks, George H. Morrison, Leyton Richards, Maude Royden, and several equally well-known preachers. $1.75

THE CHURCH'S DEBT TO HERETICS

Rufus M. Jones

Author of "Social Law in the Spiritual World," etc.

An appreciation of our great indebtedness to the heretics. To their courageous witness and sufferings we owe, in part, our spiritual freedom. Dr. Jones here traces, from ancient right on to modern times, their witness to the truth as they understood it. In his own words, the story "is a long, strange one, full of lights and shadows, tragedies and comedies, cruelty and tenderness, but it is a story of human life, and the telling of it will increase faith and heroism, and those realities by which men live." $2.00

JESUS AS OTHERS SAW HIM

Joseph Jacobs

A Jewish View of the Nazarene

The life story of Jesus is here told vividly and dramatically in the form of a series of epistles, giving a contemporary picture of the time, purporting to have been written in the year 54 A.D. to Aglaophonos, Physician of the Greeks at Corinth, from Meshullam Ben Zadok, a Scribe of the Jews at Alexandria. Illumined by a marvelous sweep of imagination, this book bears the stamp of the scholarship and literary genius of one of the most distinguished modern English critics, who was also the leading Jewish literary figure of his day. $2.50

THE MASTER LIFE

W. P. Livingstone

The Story of Jesus for Today

Author of "Mary Slessor of Calabar," etc.

This is pre-eminently a dramatic life of Christ. The author accepts the Bible story in its entirety. There is no quibbling over texts or versions. With fine dramatic skill the story is arranged around those events which naturally abound in human interest. It will make Jesus live anew to that great body of ordinary people who are turning more and more to him as the one spiritual hope of the world. $2.50

THE MOTHER OF JESUS — Her Problems and Her Glory

A. T. Robertson

Author of "The Minister and His Greek New Testament," etc.

Dr. Robertson feels that neither Protestants nor Catholics have given Mary fair treatment, and his effort to awaken a sympathetic understanding of the problems she faced in the glorious part she was called upon to play in the world's crowning event—the incarnation of Jesus Christ. The book necessarily faces the keenest problems of modern criticism, and presents interpretations that will undoubtedly arouse considerable discussion. $1.50

PAUL OF TARSUS

T. R. Glover

Author of "Poets and Puritans," "The Pilgrims," etc.

The author gathers up all that is known of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, tracing the story from his boyhood days in Tarsus with clearness and simplicity, and adding much of his own thinking. An essential volume for all who wish to have the best possible understanding of Paul and his fascinating career. $2.00

AS AT THE FIRST

John A. Hutton

Author of "The Victory Over Victory," "There They Crucified Him," etc.

An intensely vivid and inspiring portrayal of some of the principal figures in the early church, whose conception of loyalty to Christ and his message empowered them for the great work they inaugurated. The reader is given a fresh appreciation of the real meaning of Christianity and will find much food for thought in comparing the Church "at the first" and the Church of today. $1.25

ROMAN CATHOLICISM AND THE KU KLUX KLAN

Charles E. Jefferson, D.D.

The contents of this booklet appeared originally as the final chapter of the author's notable book, "Five Present-Day Controversies." Paper, 25 cents

CHRISTIANITY AND WORLD PROBLEMS

W. E. Orchard

Author of "Foundations of Faith," "The Safest Mind Cure," etc.

A forceful and logical presentation of the spiritual solution of vital world problems. The author states his object in the introduction to the book: "To attempt to show practical-minded persons that our problems arise from the collapse of faith and await for their solution a thoroughgoing application of the Christian religion." $1.75

FINDING GOD IN BOOKS

William L. Stidger

Author of "Symphonic Sermons," "Standing Room Only," etc.

This volume contains fourteen original sermons based on carefully selected books, and reveals the method Dr. Stidger has found so effective in attracting his great congregation, and in presenting the Christian message with gripping reality and convincing power. $1.75

Congregational Publishing Society

(The Pilgrim Press)

14 Beacon St., Boston

19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 40 October 1, 1925

What of Turkey and Missions?

By JAMES L. BARTON

The Stockholm Conference on Life and Work

By THEODORE A. GREENE

Two Indian Stories

By FRANCES MARGARET FOX

For Deeper Life

By KATHARINE LEE BATES

The Andover-Harvard Decision

Next Week—The National Council Number

The Fundamentals of Better Race Relations in America

Similar Ideals
Co-operative Endeavor
Mutual Understanding
Common Loyalty
Reciprocal Helpfulness
Similar Education

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTIAN BROTHERLINESS

Wherever leaders in better race relations meet there you will find the A. M. A.
Only educated men and women can hope to deal largely with such large problems

and

The educated leadership of the Negro race, as well as of other colored races in America, is strongly influenced by the A. M. A.

Major Robert Moton, head of Hampton Institute, founded by the A. M. A. says:

"I doubt very much if there is any school of consequence for Negroes that has not at some time in its history had on its faculty one or more teachers trained in at least in part in some one of the A. M. A. schools."

The task is not yet done. The next decade seems likely to present more difficult problems than have yet been faced. Through the A. M. A. you can share in reaching solutions that shall conform to the Way of Christ.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Doesn't such work deserve your Loyal Co-operation?

Send Checks to Irving C. Gaylord

287 Fourth Avenue New York City

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

ol. CX | October 1, 1925 | No. 40

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D.
Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

he Future of Andover

JNTIL the Trustees have met and have fully considered the possibilties in view of the necessity of ndover withdrawing from affiliation with Harvard, dis-ssion of the future of Andover, or of the use of the ust funds in case the separate re-establishment and eration of the seminary should be found impracticable, ust be somewhat speculative. Among the suggestions at we have heard is that the funds should be ade available for Bangor Seminary. We are au-oritatively informed that such a proposal was actu-ly made to the Trustees from a high quarter be-re the Harvard merger took place. Bangor would em the institution most in need of strengthening should ndover fail to revive its independent life, but there is e question involved, whether Andover trusts could be ilized outside of Massachusetts. Another proposal is at if the seminary should fail to continue its funds ould be available for the establishing, possibly through ch agencies as the Massachusetts Home Missionary ciety, and the Boston City Missionary Society, practical, working training in actual fields for stu-nts in orthodox seminaries. However, many an in-itution that has been speculatively disposed of and rtitioned has shown a surprising power of survival. ne assumption that Andover cannot go on seems pre-ature, but perhaps natural in view of the fact that the filiation with Harvard was entered into, and justified the Trustees, largely on the ground that the funds ailable were no longer sufficient for its maintenance a separate institution. A prominent leader in New England has expressed vigorous criticism of the court's decision at this specific point. Is the annihilation of an institution, he asks, any more in harmony with the purpose of its founders than the departure from certain technical conditions? He thinks the court ought primarily to have been concerned about the continuance of the foundation rather than about the technical terms of the trust.

First Church, Washington, Decides to Build

THE decision of the First Church in Washington, D. C., to go ahead with a new building project seems to be received with general approval. The church does need a new building, and its plant should be adequate for the heavy responsibilities which it has in down-town Washington. Although definite plans were not adopted when the church voted to build, it seems to be understood that the building will be of a type appropriate for a Congregational church located as First Church is, and the details of the plans likely to be adopted will be with a view to service as well as worship. We believe the church has been wise in its decision to remain on the present down-town site rather than go up into another part of the city, as had been suggested. With a modern attractive plant suitably equipped to serve the students, government clerks, and others not settled in permanent Washington homes, as well as the regular constituency of the church, it will be able to render a needed and important service. Without in any way neglecting other Congregational churches which are doing valuable work and need encouragement and co-operation in it, there seems to be a clear responsibility for the fellowship of Congregationalists to co-operate with the First Church to make possible the success of its present program.

Retirement of American Board President

THE annual meeting of the American Board at Washington, held in connection with the National Council, will stand out from the ordinary run of meetings by reason of the number of large questions coming to the front for settlement. We understand that, as a time-saving device, the usual reports will be presented in print, and that the Prudential Committee, through its chairman, Dr. Shepherd Knapp, will present a special report on the policy of the board as affected by the distressing financial situation. The failure of the churches during the past few years to meet the demands of the budget appropriations, even when that budget is limited to the barest maintenance of the work, has created a grave situation on the foreign field. The committee desire to share their responsibility with the corporation and are asking for instructions, the issue being, shall they order drastic cuts in the work to the extent of closing or transferring several of the missions?

The report of the Commission on Missions will raise the question of merging the three Woman's Boards with the American Board, and of combining the Missionary Herald, as the chief publicity agency of the foreign boards, with The Congregationalist and American Missionary. These latter questions alone might well occupy the entire time of the meeting.

To these matters is added the necessity of finding a new president for the board. Dr. Edward Caldwell Moore, we are informed, finds that his duties at Harvard University have reached such proportions that he can no longer render the service the board requires in a time of readjustment at home and abroad. Attempting to serve Harvard both as Professor of Morals and Chairman of the Board of Preachers to the University, the latter being nothing less than the direction of the religious life of the institution, Professor Moore finds little of time and strength remaining for attending meetings of the Prudential Committee and keeping in touch with the multifarious activities of the board. Upon most careful and conscientious consideration, and after twenty-six years of continuous service on the board, first as member of the Prudential Committee and then as President of the Corporation, he asks to be excused from further official responsibility. There appears to be no other alternative than for the board, at its meeting on October 23, to accede to this request.

The service rendered by Professor Moore during these many years has been large and unique. We take the more pleasure in calling attention to this fact because this service, by the nature of the case, has been for the most part performed within the inner circle of administration, quite apart from the observation of the general constituency of the board. His contribution has been that of a well-equipped scholar and thinker in the sphere of world Christianity. The expansion of Christianity over the earth, historically considered, and in the practical bearings of the modern missionary approach, has been a life interest with Professor Moore. We can think of no foreign missionary administrator either in Europe or America who is quite of his type. Professor Jul Richter of the University of Berlin, has acquired p sibly a larger fund of information as to particular fiel but Professor Moore has been able to bring his histori and philosophical insight to bear upon the non-Christ world as a whole. No one can read his monumental wo West and East, dedicated to his colleagues in the Am can Board, being his lectures at Oxford in 1913, or e the condensation of this work in his The Spread Christianity in the Modern World and not realize breadth and soundness of his views. Had he d nothing else than invent the phrase and enforce the i of the Naturalization of Christianity in the Orient, would stand out as the most scholarly exponent of foreign missionary movement as it has developed in day.

By no means the least of Professor Moore's contri tions have been made in connection with his several vi to the foreign field, particularly that to China in 1 in companionship with Sec. J. L. Barton. His outl of the history of the board during the twenty-five ye of his incumbency, read at the meeting of the board 1924, which was published in a separate pamphlet, be a revelation to those who follow the interests of t great organization only in a general way. The proble of these years have been of stupendous significance, President Moore has had a hand in the solution of th all. We trust he may yet find time to use his pen voice in behalf of the cause he has served so long well.

The Andover-Harvard Decision

ON September 19, the Supreme Court of Massachuse unanimously, through Chief Justice Rugg, rende a decision in the Andover-Harvard case, the effect which is to upset the affiliation of Andover and Harv divinity schools, operating during the past three ye as the Theological School in Harvard University, to uphold at all points the questions regarding legality of this arrangement raised by the Visitors Andover. The nature and terms of the Court decis are summarized elsewhere in this issue in a statem by Thomas Weston, one of the Visitors, and their torney. At the time of going to press the Trustees Andover have not met, and Dean Sperry has withh any statement until after their meeting. The probabi is that The Congregationalist will have for next we issue a statement, either from Dean Sperry, or from Trustees.

When this affiliation took place The Congregationa welcomed it with unqualified approval, and this u two grounds. We had a deep conviction concerning need, value, and interest for religion of a strong adequate theological foundation at a great and c manding university center like Harvard; and he saw the blending of Andover Seminary and Harvard Divi School, especially under the leadership of Dean Spe not only a great step toward the healing of an anc and unfortunate dissension, but a momentous step ward in the removal of sectional bias and the establ ment in Harvard of a theological school at once sentially liberal and essentially evangelical. We find reason to depart from that attitude and it is still strong hope that, though Andover is apparently out of it, such a school in Harvard may continue and may find adequate support and strength.

The Congregationalist has not presumed to discuss the legal aspects of the case, nor do we see any value in discussing these aspects now. Frankly, though favorable to the affiliation per se, we have questioned whether the courts would uphold the Trustees' action, in view of what seemed to us the plain intent of the founders of Andover. We were among those who believed that wiser action would have sought definite interpretation of the trusts and foundations by the courts before, rather than after, the merger. The Trustees, however, apparently had confidence in the legal advice which they sought, and one cannot assume that either Trustees or Visitors acted in other than good faith.

The report of the Master, very favorable to the Trustees' contention, gave wide hope that the court decision would not affect the affiliation, but as the Master, Mr. Field, himself pointed out some time ago his findings were only to fact, and did not in any way interpret the legal aspect of the trusts. Many who strongly approved of the affiliation upon general grounds will feel that the decision of the Supreme Court is essentially just and in harmony with the factors upon which it was based. If money is given for a certain definite purpose, and under specific conditions, there must always be grave question of the propriety of using such funds other than as intended, without clear legal authority to do so. At the same time it must be recognized that much of the "sacredness" of such a trust is purely legal. There can be little real holiness in any trust that in its very terms denies and precludes the possibility of growth and progress. One lesson of the present incident is that there ought to be the largest encouragement toward the practice of making gifts and bequests upon a basis that will permit growth and progress and reasonable, legal interpretation of foundations to meet the changes and needs of a new day.

A word should, perhaps, be added concerning the personal good faith of Dean Sperry, and his associates in Andover, throughout these proceedings. We happened to know that Dean Sperry when he began his lectureship in Practical Theology in Andover Seminary in 1917, appeared before the Board of Visitors and expressed dissent from many of the specific statements of the Andover Creed, but did assert his full belief that he stood in the historical succession of orthodox New England Congregationalism. At that time the Visitors expressed their entire satisfaction with this position. It is a great question after all, apart from the legal interpretation of trusts, whether fidelity to the intense religious convictions and movements of the past is found in the formal acceptance of categorical propositions, or in loyalty to what one deems the essence of evangelical religion, in the forms and expressions that make it vital for a new world of truth and vision.

* *

"My wife attends the Baptist church," said a man who was asked regarding his church affiliation. Would any man asked to what club he belonged think of replying, "My wife belongs to the Women's Club"?

Prohibition and Headlines

IN view of the wide-spread effort in many newspapers to make it appear that the Research Department of the Federal Council of Churches has issued a bulletin suggesting that prohibition has been a failure, it would be well if all friends of prohibition should beware of sensational falsifying headlines, and also if they would acquaint themselves with what the Research Department has actually done, the purpose of its investigation, and the whole attitude of the Federal Council of Churches in relation to prohibition. The effort to make it appear that the Federal Council of Churches has compromised in any way with wet propaganda is itself a part of this propaganda of garbled quotation and misrepresentation.

For some unaccountable reason this research bulletin concerning the prohibition situation seems to have been sent to the secular press of the country before the religious press has had an opportunity to examine it. The Congregationalist has received the bulletin only within the last few days. We are examining it very carefully and will have more to say regarding it in next week's issue. We have, however, known of the investigation and of its purpose through conference with Rev. F. E. Johnson before the investigation began.

It seems to us exceedingly important that all friends of prohibition should know the full facts concerning the present situation and the conditions in the matter of the enforcement or non-enforcement of the law. This does not mean, however, that the research pamphlet now issued is necessarily a complete or dependable presentation of these facts. It is a field in which the opinion of the so-called "expert investigator" cannot always be taken at its face value. It is a field also in which the opinion of the social worker, who ought to know at least some of the facts, is often by no means unbiased. Also the value of such an investigation depends largely upon the areas in which it has been made. Certain representations that may be true concerning unusually wet portions of the United States may be found utterly to misrepresent conditions in the country at large. Broadly speaking in this whole matter of the question of the failure or success of prohibition, and research concerning the facts, we should like to say that prior to the enacting of prohibition no research was necessary to know the conditions in connection with the liquor traffic. The results of the traffic, and its effects upon all forms of social life, were obtrusive. One did not need to seek them out. The plain man who sees a great deal of modern life even in areas supposed to be conspicuously wet does not find the fruits and results of the liquor traffic thus obtrusive; in fact unless he goes out of his way to find them he is not apt to see them at all. This in itself seems to us one of the most essential considerations in relation to this whole matter of research and prohibition.

* *

By how much truth is stranger than fiction was recently indicated by three unusual stories in a Canadian paper, all upon one page of the day's issue. In London, Ont., a bird perched on a steel tower at a transformer station, reached out and pecked at a fly on a high-tension cable, thereby shutting off the Hydro-Electric power, and halting street cars, and suspending industrial operations and lighting service for a period of several minutes. In an adjoining column was the story of a western resident, nearing ninety-three years, being chased by a bear and winning out in a remarkable speed test. The nonagenarian having attained a place of safety remarked, "I will be ninety-three years old next November, and I am beginning to feel middle-aged." But the crowning news-miracle was the story, apparently well-authenticated of an Indian en route to a powwow at Banff, Alta who fell over a cliff. His companions, descending a coupl of hundred feet below expecting to find his dead body found him sitting up, bruised and bleeding, beside tawny seven-foot mountain lion upon which he ha landed and which he had killed in his fall. Churc union does not seem to be the only matter in these day in which Canada is attaining notoriety.

Dr. Gordon's Autobiography: My Education and Religion*

GREAT-SOULED, like Dr. Gordon himself, is this story of his life. Its very title is suggestive of the man. It is not My Life, or My Memories, but My Education and Religion. The incidents of life are dominated by its supreme interests and purposes. For Dr. Gordon life has meant, in a remarkably persistent, consistent, indomitable way, the pursuit of the highest, and it is this that, in title, and from cover to cover, not only colors but sheds a glory upon his life-story.

The man of true education and sound religion soon discovers, however, that life itself is his greatest teacher. All interests become centered for him in life and personality, and his spiritual attainment is most conspicuously evidenced in the ability to discern the meaning and significance of life's common scenes and experiences. It is this fact that gives to Dr. Gordon's memoirs a deep charm and a powerful story-interest apart from what every one will recognize as their essential place and importance. He has known what to leave out as well as what to put in, and the result is a volume singularly free from the mere tittle-tattle of reminiscence, and not in any way overloaded with detail, which none the less presents in comparatively small compass and in such a way as to give the impression of a complete and finished whole, the picture of a life in all its significant backgrounds and relationships.

The Scottish Backgrounds

The roots of the man are here. But when Dr. Gordon pictures his early boyhood life and school days in Scotland, the intimacy and frankness of his portrayal, its simple, direct, human quality, make his vivid personal story the record of a phase of Scottish civilization. The environment which has given to the world so many of its conspicuous leaders in thought and action was never more effectually revealed than in these personal memories. Honesty and clearness of vision have combined with reverence and affection to set forth alike the strength and weakness of Scottish family life, in its religious and social environment.

Dr. Gordon's picture of his mother is both touching and enlightening. One realizes the profound debt that he owed to her, and how much of deep personal conviction lay back of a passage in a sermon in behalf of the Y. W. C. A. which Dr. Gordon preached last year. Dr. Gordon said at that time:

I have known many brilliant young women, many unusual young men, whose fathers were commonplace o even below it, but I have never known a distinguishe son or daughter born of a cheap, frivolous, and morall worthless mother.

We hasten to add, however, that Dr. Gordon's fathe was far from commonplace. He stands in Dr. Gordon' pages in strong characterization—a somewhat tragi figure, vigorous, honest, able, but never quite "success ful," a man whose character and independence dom inated his sense of worldly interest, and led him t sacrifice much where a subservient and complaisan spirit would have ensured greater material advantage One understands in these pages by what heredity Dr Gordon acquired his intense independence and his un compromising and fearless spirit. We have found few passages so delightful as that in which with blunt, plain Scottish democracy—the noblest kind on earth when i is really genuine—Dr. Gordon compares his ancestry with that of Queen Victoria, who must, he thinks, have been a most illustrious person, with the "horrible handicap" of her heredity, "to achieve what she achieved and to conduct herself as she conducted herself through out life." Pointing out the ill repute of her father and uncles, and the loveless marriage of which she was born says Dr. Gordon:

> Royal blood, aristocracy! Such expressions are biological blasphemy. If Queen Victoria had only been blessed with such a father and mother as I had, how much happier, and how much greater she would have been!

Dr. Gordon's wholesome, fundamental, essential democracy finds further and very striking expression in the chapter on Feudalism and Democracy. The people who have lost faith in democracy, or who bemoan its "defects," had better read that chapter. It is sound and straight, and even so distinguished a critic of democracy as the late Lord Bryce is given the proper reply:

> Lord Bryce, in his book on "Democracy," [writes Dr. Gordon] has some hard words about this form of government. I do not find in his writings any adequate sense of the abomination that democracy has abolished. Here is the great defect of writers like Bryce. He moved up into the aristocratic fold and looked upon the world from that point of view. The eonian woe of human beings disregarded, their lives afflicted and shamefully treated, should be recalled and considered when one looks at the defects of democracy. The farm servant in my time had no standing; he was no part of the State. The only right he had was the right to toil. He had to accept such treatment as his employer gave him, and his life was that of a beast of burden and nothing but a beast of burden. That was feudalism; that was one of the good

*My Education and Religion, by George A. Gordon (Houghton Mifflin, $4.00).

ld times. Reader, would not you like to go back and live n it, see it, and feel it, not with the few for whom it was conomically profitable, but with the many for whom it as a crushing and an infamous burden?

Religious Ideas and Development

It is this same straight, clear-seeing quality that haracterizes Dr. Gordon's account of his religious de-elopment. The assumptions and presumptions of the-logians and ecclesiastics have not a whit more influence pon him than the assumptions and presumptions of ristocracy. Only truth matters. In the harsh Cal-inism that surrounded his early life he found much nat had little relation either to the dictates of the eart or to the simple religion of Jesus of Nazareth, and e dared to trust his spiritual intuitions against the nan-made systems that ever seek to entrench them-elves with the claim to divine authority.

The religion of my boyhood and youth [he writes] was austere and unlovely, viewed in itself; it appeared grand nd heroic in my father, and in one or two others of y kinsmen; in my mother, especially after her great eligious experience in the mid-forties, it appeared ab-olutely real and supremely beautiful. This was because ne was a Wesleyan by descent, and because her religion xalted and sweetened her whole great endowment as a uman being. The current religion was under the hadow of John Calvin and his Scottish followers; and o me it was meager, blasted, unlovely and indeed in-uman. The version of the national faith that I saw nd pondered was likely enough a poor version; it was ot the sublime figure of Christ upon the cathedral of fe, but a gargoyle. Often did I resolve to have nothing o do with it, preferring life in its integrity and abun-ance to an emaciated and fantastic ghost of it.

Yet he came to perceive that beneath this harshness of cclesiasticism and system were elements of a vital, if tern, faith that had upheld men and women through tern experiences of life. The recognition of this must e placed alongside the passage quoted. Dr. Gordon says:

What was austere and unlovely to a boy becomes mpressive and moving in its somber strength as I view over the expanse of the years. The sense of God was reat in it, and this even then was visibly its transfigur-ng soul, as after a wild and stormy day in Scotland I ave seen the setting sun disclose the glory that had all hrough the dark hours been behind the thick clouds, nd before he disappeared set on fire the whole lurid eavens. If in the religion of my native land there was o much of the flint of the rocks, in its season there ould surely appear the bloom of the heather. In my udgment a Christianity that should combine the passion r righteousness and compassion for poor human beings, gorous ethical idealism and sympathy, the conscious-ess of the perfect God through the sense of humanity, he flint of the rock with the heather over it in per-etual bloom, would be a close approximation to the re-gion of Jesus, the sovereign prophet of man and of the ost High.

The Installation Episode

We have preferred to deal mainly with the back-rounds and development of Dr. Gordon's ministry rather han with its details, though the account of his early astorates and of his forty years at the Old South will e found exceedingly rewarding. As is very fitting Dr. ordon devotes one of the longest chapters to the story his installation. He has rightly perceived that that incident was much more than an event in a life. It was a great turning point in modern Congregationalism, and a significant chapter in the history of the freedom of religious thought and ministry in America. If Dr. Gordon has written of that epoch with modesty it is a great satisfaction that he has also written with much fullness and frankness. But he has likewise written with admirable spirit, and, as it seems to us, with sound judgment. He appreciates the intense sincerity and high motives of the men who opposed his installation, but gently insists that they exalted speculative theology above religion and the deep affirmations of the Gospel. Pointing out that there was no trouble at his installation concerning these great affirmations, Dr. Gordon says regarding the group who opposed the Council's action:

What these good men were concerned about, what stirred their souls with a great and holy fear, was the New England scheme of Divinity. The Gospel of Jesus Christ might be affirmed, but that did not count, because it could not take care of itself; it was impotent without the guardianship of New England Calvinism. Here was the humor of the situation and close by it the fountain of tears.

After some masterly analysis and comment Dr. Gordon concludes this reminiscent and instructive account of the installation incident in this very happy way:

This is perhaps the best way to end this chapter. One may survey the whole, note its high character and serious purpose, recall with honor all the combatants in the struggle, lay to heart many important lessons of that far-away council, rest the entire turbulent mood of the day in respectful and tender recollection and close the interview through memory, not with tears, but with laughter. Three friends went to the Adirondacks for their vacation. One of the three was elected cook for the party. He consented to serve till criticized, and further stipulated that whoever found fault with his cooking should be made to take his place. One day the cook in making apple pie used salt instead of sugar as sweetener. The first member of the party to partake of the pie shouted, "That is the awfulest pie that I ever tasted," and then, recollecting himself, he added swiftly, "but I like it!" I should like my memories of my installing council to be taken in this way. "It was the fiercest council I ever knew, but I have always been fond of it."

Perhaps, also, this is the best place to end this review—except for a gracious reference to Mrs. Gordon to whom as "my incomparable comrade and fellow servant in the Old South Church," Dr. Gordon dedicates his book. It may be recalled that when President Eliot was asked by the Old South regarding the capacities of Dr. Gordon, who was then under thirty, he replied, "Mr. Gordon may grow or he may shrink," adding, "I think he will grow if he should get the right sort of wife." Dr. Gordon in 1890 settled this momentous issue, and established a further bond of association with the Old South, by his marriage to Miss Susan Huntington Manning, oldest daughter of his predecessor. Phillips Brooks performed the ceremony and among the most beautiful things in the book is that great preacher's affectionate letter of congratulation in view of this event.

Here is not only a great, but also a tender and very beautiful autobiography. It will help to make Dr. Gordon as deeply loved as he has been admired and esteemed.

From Our Western Editor

At a meeting of the Illinois Federation of Labor, held a few days ago at Champaign, charges were made that students of the University of Illinois had wild parties at which both men and women students as well as chaperones were present. The university authorities took cognizance of these charges immediately with the result that Dean Babcock, acting president of the university, Dean of Men Thomas Arkle Clark, and Sherriff John Gray of Champaign County all appeared before the federation. Dean Babcock in his address indicated that Illinois University has an enrollment this year of almost ten thousand students. He read a list of those disciplined last year for misbehavior. The list was short and its details testified to the high standards of conduct maintained in the university.

Dean Thomas Clark proved to the satisfaction of the delegates of the federation that the stories of vice at the university had been started by a young fellow, who had never been in college a day in his life, and who had fabricated the story for a yellow newspaper. The dean gave it as his opinion that much blame for the misconduct of students should be placed at the door of the parents. He held that a good many parents set a bad example for their boys in disobedience of fundamental laws of the land, especially in violating the Volstead Act. Sheriff Gray testified that he had conducted more than five hundred raids on gambling and booze joints and had never found a university student in one of these places.

This attack upon the university is one of the kind that is frequently made upon state schools. It is not, however, quite so much in order to denounce these schools as hotbeds of infidelity as it was once. Still there is a lingering suspicion in the minds of a good many people that these schools are far below par in morals and in the religious attitude of the students.

James O'Donnell Bennett, special correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, visited the University of Illinois at the last commencement and gave his impressions of the school to Tribune readers. He puts the situation vividly:

> Well, taxpayers, the big news down here for you is that your university, to which you gave last Wednesday ten and a half million dollars for the coming biennium and which shapes during four of their most impressionable years the lives of ten thousand of your boys and girls, is governed by the fear of the Lord.
>
> And be assured, he is no easy going, middle of the road, modernist deity but a stern and unbending Old Testament Jehovah, whose judgments are occasionally terrific.
>
> Especially in the matter of hootch and running with fast women and cavorting around the countryside in a death distributing automobile.
>
> At a time when our country, more particularly the young people of it, is said to be solely pleasure bent, I call that fact big news. The fact that you can lift out from the Middle West one of the biggest, vitalest, and most buoyant universities in the world and examine it, and say of it: "Here reign decency and decorum. Here can you go just so far and not one inch beyond. If you do, God help you, but he won't." . . .
>
> And yet this place is not cheerless. Least of all is it smug. But it's disciplined. O, yes it is! . . . Here they seem to have beaten hootch, but without beating the boys. This is the current record of the University of Illinois. Out of 7,000 full blooded American boys on its campus you can count on the fingers of one hand the boys who have been expelled for drunkenness during the university year now closing. . . . Two of the lads expelled were drunk at a dance. The rest somewhere else. How have the others been controlled? By the knowledge planted deep in their hearts that drunkenness and drinking parties would cost them privileges more precious to youth than hootch is.
>
> Dean Clark grappled with the automobile trouble. He wrote one of his matchless letters to parents and guardians. He told them the increase in the number of automobiles owned by students was alarming, that ninety-five per cent. of the students were so near the campus that they did not need them, that they were wasters of time and money, encouraged loafing, and that his figures showed that the student with a car was likely to be a poor student. The dean closed his letter with a plea for help, the results were excellent. Many cars went home, many parents wrote back that they wished the university would pass laws forbidding autos altogether. Constantly the urge here in this huge school, to which Illinois gives five and a quarter million each year, is back to simpler ways. The president says that a boy can go through this university on $450 a year. Students say there is too much granite in that estimate and that a fellow will be doing fine if he gets through on $550. Dean Clark estimates that at least one-third of the ten thousand boys and girls in the university are earning by manual toil or by tutoring a large part of the money that carries them through the four years, and that one-half are earning a goodly part.

My own visits to Western universities lead me to believe that Mr. Bennett has not overstressed the outstanding features of the work of these great schools—the University of Illinois is a fair sample of the others. The moral and religious attitude of the students is remarkable. Most of them are either members of a church when they come to the university, or at least are interested in church life. At Champaign they crowd the Sunday services of the churches. They throng meetings at which men such as Harry Emerson Fosdick speak. When Dr. Fosdick visited the university last spring, he talked to seventeen thousand students in three days. A large majority of the professors of Western universities are church members. So far as the West is concerned the church has little to complain of regarding the attitude of the state universities to the work of the church. It is difficult to see how these universities could do more than they are now doing for the religious life of the students, so long as we hold to a complete separation of church and state.

* *

There are many indications that the newspapers of the great West are more and more sympathetic to the things of the moral and spiritual life. The Chicago Daily News has always been a good example of this. about twenty years it has carried each w on Saturday an article by Dr. Gra Taylor, in which he has stressed Christian view of industry. In Dr. Fr Crane's syndicated articles, there have peared many monographs written by Crane, Dr. Henry van Dyke, and others, ting forth distinctively spiritual issues. Chicago Daily News has also shown i very friendly in its editorial columns the church, to the Sunday school and kin movements.

The Chicago Evening Post has a mini for its editorial writer—Mr. S. J. Dun Clark. He is an outstanding leader in g forward movements in the City of Chi and is an eloquent speaker for the ca of righteousness. He is one of the popular speakers at the noon-day evan istic services which the Y. M. C. A. h in Chicago in the loop district during summer. Every Saturday his leading torial in the Post is upon a religious th A little while ago his topic was "Ser and the Spiritual Life," and his texts the article were, "My Father Wor Hitherto and I Work," and "I Do Alw the Things That Please Him." He cl the article with the following, "Non us need wait for a great opportunity o organization to begin serving as Jesus se We can begin at once at the first point of tact with the first person and the first that lies in our path. We can begin by pu into that contact our sense of God, by le it control our tone of voice, our manne greetings, our words, our attitude to our work and our associates, whatev may be and whoever they may be. A go from fellowship with God into the 'W about us,' carrying with us the sens His presence, dominated by the desire 'always the things that please Him,' spir service will become the habit of our spiritual values will unfold in all we d

Last spring, at the time of a meeti the Southwestern Congregational Co ence, the Arizona Gazette of Phoenix, ried a most complimentary editorial cerning the work of the Pilgrims in Am A great many Western newspapers now every day Scripture selections at the of the editorial columns and show in ways an appreciation of the great f mentals of righteousness. Undoub many newspapers have become comme ized and cater to commercial interests to the desire for sensationalism rather to a passion for the presentation of We have some outstanding examples i West of papers whose editorial poli fully fifty per cent. vicious or misle It is very heartening to find such a number of editors, however, who are ing to conduct their paper so that it be a real factor in promoting human we

R. W

Chicago, Illinois.

Blessed is the Sunday school which tains a helpful workers' council at leas a month, for this gives to the workers the grindstone gives to the axe—edge an ish.—Marion Lawrance.

What of Turkey and Missions?

The Day of Opportunity

By James L. Barton

Foreign Secretary of the American Board and Chairman of the Near East Relief

AS one returns from Turkey he is confronted by questions and comments from ıtelligent people showing absolutely adverse ıd mutually exclusive opinions upon that ountry and its future. Few, indeed, who now anything about the Near East, would enture to predict what Turkey is to become, ut after some two months in that part of ıe world I am forced to say that the Govrnment of Turkey seems to me to be more ecure than it did a year ago, and it then eemed stronger than it did the previous ear. Turkey has met several crises in the ıst two years and issued from them with ew courage. This recent trip to Bulgaria, reece, Turkey, and Syria convinces me that ıe Government of Turkey has in it as much ssurance of permanence as has any Balkan tate and more than some.

I was fortunate in reaching Constantiople before all the missionaries there for ıe annual meeting of the mission had reırned to their interior stations. Of these round dozen were taking their vacation by tudying and practicing Turkish under cometent teachers. It was a rare and unexected opportunity to get at the heart of ome of the questions that agitate us in the hurches at home. While it would not be ise to print much that was there learned, can say that if one is looking for some ound reasons for withdrawing from Turkey s a mission field, under no circumstances ıould he inquire of the people I met in onstantinople and other places in Turkey. ne would need to go for his argument to ome of the timid brethren of our churches, ho seem to think that when difficulties rise in a mission field it is better to pull ıt and try to find an easier place.

The Strength of Turkey

As I traveled across Turkey by rail for ıree days and two nights, passing though ties like Ismidt, Eski Shehir, Afion Kara issar, Konia, Adana, and other well-known laces, I got a new conception of the vast rea occupied by Turkey, reaching as it does Russia and Persia on the east, and coverıg the space between the Black and the editerranean Seas, to say nothing of early a day's journey by rail in the Euroean part of Turkey. This area includes the epublic of Turkey, with a constitution and n organized government that is functionıg. Within the country there are in the icinity of seven millions of people, accordıg to a general estimate. The majority of ıese people and the ruling body are Turks, ıt there is a considerable body of Kurds in ıe eastern section of the country bordering n Persia and perhaps three hundred thouınd Armenians and Greeks, most of whom re in Constantinople. Perhaps twenty-five ıousand of these races remain in the inerior.

This Moslem population and the ruling eople of the country present the problems of a single race. They have been the leading Moslem race for centuries, with one of their number as the Caliph of Islam and the keeper of the holy places, and while the Turks have lost standing among outside Mohammedan races from the religious point of view through the expulsion of the Caliph and the abrogation of the Caliphate, they still hold the position of an independent race and government of no small significance. They are today the most independent Mohammedan government in the world.

Surprising Changes

It had been three years since I was in Turkey and the changes which thrust themselves upon the visitor in Constantinople and across the country are startling. These changes exceed those of any that have ever occurred in a Moslem country since the days of Mohammed. In Constantinople itself Turkish women are unveiled. The women's sections on the ferry boats and the street cars have been abolished. One rides on the Bosphorus in the public carriers face to face with Mohammedan women wearing jewels and evidently of the highest rank, with faces absolutely open. These women of Turkey are demanding a degree of liberty, opportunity for education, and a position in the leadership of the country never hitherto demanded by the Mohammedan women of any country.

Intellectually, too, the Turkish race is aroused. The Government has established a school system and is considering laws for compulsory education. Turkey is endeavoring to put itself upon a Western basis in sympathetic relationship with the Western world. It has removed religious authority from the control of the Government and has vested supreme authority in the will of the people. National courts are forbidden the right to deal with religious questions. In the treaties signed at Lausanne and since ratified by England, France, Italy, and Japan, Turkey declares that "all inhabitants of Turkey shall be entitled to free exercise, whether in public or private, of any creed, religion, or belief, the observance of which shall not be incompatible with public order and good morals. Difference of religion, creed, or confession shall not prejudice any Turkish national in matters relating to the enjoyment of civil or political rights."

The fact is that one looks in vain in Turkey today for remnants of the old Ottoman Empire over which the Caliph of Islam ruled. He finds in its place a republic, with a written constitution and a Grand National Assembly elected by the people. He meets educated Turks, many of whom have traveled and studied in Europe and the United States, who are seriously questioning the validity of their Mohammedan faith. A spirit of higher criticism is developing in the minds of the leaders. They are raising the question whether Mohammedanism is the best religion for a nation. There is a strong tendency to throw off many of the practices of Mohammedanism which have grown up from tradition and which are embodied in the Sheriat. In a word, leading Mohammedans in Turkey are becoming intelligently open-minded as they have never been before and are questioning the authority of their traditions. The old stereotyped method of thought and life and the spirit of contentment with things as they are are continually challenged by Turks.

Turkey is on the move. It is facing a new era which is already beginning in every department of its life. It has become a sovereign state for the first time in centuries, and as such it is recognized by the European nations. No longer is it a stagnant state, but the spirit of progress and advance is abroad in the land. Leaders are eager to adopt Western methods of government, education, social service, and sanitation. On the 26th of June this year, Hamdoullah Soubhi Bey, the Minister of Public Instruction in Turkey, said to a group of American educators in Turkey: "Turkey is a nation being born in a day. She is not facing toward the East as is Persia, Tunis, etc. Rather she has turned to the opposite direction, to the West. It is from foreign influence, from your influence, from your books that we have gotten the idea that inspires our present effort. Our faces are toward the West."

Turkey's Desires and Needs

Turkey is eager to win and hold the confidence of the world. Many of her officials are inexperienced in self-government. Many mistakes have been made and undoubtedly many will yet be made in the interpretation of the terms of the treaties and of the application of the laws of Turkey to the citizens of foreign countries, but the officials claim that their purpose is to hold to the letter of the law in its application to all classes of people, both native and foreign. In the workings of the school law altogether more Mohammedan schools have been closed for violation of the law than have Christian schools. The Turks feel the need of many things which we of America can give them. They expressed themselves as eager for help in lines of sanitation, the development of industries, education, and a new social order. At the same time, there are many needs of which the Turkish officials themselves are yet ignorant, but of which they will later become conscious. The conscious needs are many; the unconscious needs are more.

No one will deny, I am sure, that the Turk needs the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the gospel of deliverance from the past, the gospel of brotherhood, friendship, and of service, as few other people need it. The record of the Turk for the last fifty years is a record of need of those principles which his own religion lacks but which the gospel of

For Deeper Life

By Katharine Lee Bates

Dear God our Father, at thy knee confessing
Our sins and follies, close in thine embrace,
Children forgiven, happy in thy blessing,
Deepen our spirits to receive thy grace.

Not for more beauty would our eyes entreat thee,
Flooded with beauty, beauty everywhere;
Only for keener vision that may greet thee
In all thy vestures of the earth and air.

The stars and rainbows are thy wondrous wearing,
Sunlight and shadow moving on the hills;
Holy the meadow where thy feet are faring,
Holy the brooklet that thy laughter fills.

Not for more love our craving hearts implore thee,
But for more power to love until they glow
Like hearths of comfort, eager to restore thee
Hidden in human wretchedness and woe.

In souls most sullen thou art softly dreaming
Of saints and heroes wrought from thy divine,
Pity and patience still the lost redeeming.
Deepen our spirits for a love like thine.

Christ abundantly supplies. The Turkish Government is ready to receive missionaries as missionaries, to permit them to live in the country, to hold property and carry on their work. There is freedom of travel from one part of the country to the other as well as freedom of residence. In all the changes that have taken place in Turkey the door for the entrance and residence in the country of the Christian missionary has not been closed.

What Our Missionaries Have Done

For more than a century the American Board has been carrying on missionary work in Turkey. Missionaries have established their institutions across the country, made their contacts, and while much of the work hitherto carried on has been among the Armenians in the east and among the Greeks and Armenians in the west, nevertheless a large number of missionaries during all this period have used the Turkish language and have been engaged in work for and among Turks. The Bible has been translated into Turkish, printed and widely circulated. Schools, hospitals, and missionary residences have been established in a large number of the interior stations across the country. The missionaries have won a reputation among the Turks for upright dealing and for honesty in word and act. This fact was thoroughly established by the testimony of Turkish officials immediately following the war, when they were eager to have America take the mandate of the country and administer its national affairs. Their knowledge of America and of Americans had been obtained largely from their knowledge of American missionaries. The missionary institutions were becoming increasingly popular among the Turks, and while in the earlier days popular sentiment was against Turks attending missionary schools, that tendency at the outbreak of the war was disappearing and an increasing number of Turks were in attendance upon American missionary institutions.

From Constantinople to the eastern borders of the country, south to Syria and across Asia Minor, American missionaries have established their institutions and won a favorable name among all with whom they came in contact, and in spite of the revolutions of the last few years and the changes of populations, that reputation has not been lost. In the course of the address of the Minister of Public Instruction stated above, Soubhi Bey said: "The Government is a friend of American schools. It wants children to go to these schools to learn English and American culture. We count on your efforts and we count them friendly efforts. . . . It is our desire that our children know America and that they love America. This is a task worthy your time and effort and sacrifice."

The American Board is the only mission board that has been operating during the century in the area above outlined. Now and then there have been sporadic cases of some missionary from some other organization entering the country and undertaking Christian work, but among the great mission boards of the world the American Board alone has held that field, and Turkey has been generally recognized as its exclusive field. Turkey, with all of its populations, has been from the first and is today the field of the American Board.

Missionaries Eager to Press Forward

In my brief visit in Turkey I met personally nearly sixty missionaries of the American Board who are directly connected with the work of that board, either in Turkey itself or among refugees who have recently fled from Turkey and are in Syria and Greece. It is an interesting fact that these missionaries are eager to press forward in their missionary work in Turkey. They believe that the position is strategic, the opportunity unique and the need beyond question. The new missionaries who have recently gone out, have caught the spirit of advance. They are all agreed that the American Board should hold on to its work, should more firmly establish itself in the country and systematically organize its work with a view to the Mohammedans. The Turks now look upon the missionaries as missionaries to them since the Armenians and the Greeks are no long there. At the same time, the mission boar of the world have come to regard the Tu ish field as American Board territory. Whe ever I met leaders of European societies representatives of American societies on one opinion was expressed, namely, th the American Board should continue i work in Turkey.

The Foreign Missions Conference of Nor America and the Committee of Referen and Counsel, both representing the missi boards of North America, passed resolutio urging the American Board to hold on that work, taking the position that the fie is a strategic one so far as the Near Ea and the Mohammedan world are concerne There seems to be a general convictio among missionary societies and church o ganizations that a rare opportunity no confronts the American Board and its mi sionaries in Turkey. It is an opportunit for direct approach to a conspicuous Mo hammedan race that any mission boar would covet. There are no special danger or hardships to be encountered in the contin uation of mission work in Turkey today Property is safe. There is no peril to mis sionary life. The field is an open field.

There are difficulties confronting the work in Turkey, but they are not insuper able. Beginning with the Turks under pres ent conditions is like beginning anew among a people who have had little or no training in the principles of Christianity, while through the circulation of the Bible and literature in the Turkish language there has been a foundation of preparation laid. The educational work will need to begin in its intermediate and high school grades. Only the International College at Smyrna is able to move forward in its educational work of a higher grade. The conditions are somewhat like the primitive days of mission work in other countries, although there are leading men among the Turks who are friendly and co-operative and there are educated leaders among them who can even at this stage take a prominent hand in educational work. Nevertheless, the work, so r as educational institutions are conrned, has received a setback in the deportion of the Armenians and the Greeks, though work is going on in several of the nters with a success beyond anticipation.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE DIFFICULT

No mission board can successfully oper-e in the foreign field if it follows a policy withdrawal when radical changes take ace. In all countries there have been ctuations in the tokens of success. Some riods have been characterized by great vance, while other periods in the same untry have experienced reverses. China a conspicuous example, vivid in the mem-y of this generation. After nearly a cen-ry of planting under great difficulties ere came the Boxer uprising, which emed to indicate that China would have thing of Christian missionaries or the ristian religion, and many of the con-tuents of the American Board urged that e board withdraw from China and take work in countries that were more recepve. The board decided to remain, and the ogress in the work and the development the Christian Church and in the growth Christian education since that period has rpassed in outstanding results all the ars that preceded. The Chinese Church day is a powerful institution. Again, new nditions are confronting mission work in ina, which, though baffling, require a re-wal of the Christian courage of twenty ars ago. The story of the persecutions in adagascar and the phenomenal progress Christianity in Japan in the face of na-nal opposition are but other instances of vine leadership through difficulties to tri-mphant success.

In all the history of modern missions misnaries have never withdrawn from a coun-y because the work was hard and because w difficulties arose. The command of our rd Jesus Christ to preach the Gospel to ery creature was never conditioned upon e ease of approach or the presence of fficulties in the preaching of that Gospel.
ad it been so conditioned the Apostles uld never have gone forth upon their iumphal march of Gospel presentation in e face of difficulties that appeared insupable. They realized, as has the church all ages, that difficulties were but to be ercome, obstacles to be removed, but that fficulties and obstacles were not to stay e progress of the Gospel. In no age has e command of our Lord Christ been intereted to mean his disciples were to preach e Gospel only when it was easy to do so d when difficulties were slight. Mission-ies went into the cannibal islands of the uth Seas preaching the Gospel of Brotherod and, in spite of the seemingly imssible obstacles, they persisted in their sk until these islands have become sentially Christian. And thus has been e triumphal march of the missionaries ross the centuries and through the nations.
nd thus we face the situation in Turkey, hich is a country near at hand, inhabited a people who are our neighbors by any d every interpretation of that word. Our issionaries on the ground with Christian courage face the new conditions. They said to me in Constantinople: "The Turks, constituting the most compact and virile Moslem nation, have established for American missions in the Near East a credit balance of good will and confidence grounded on one hundred years of observation. Now for the first time they welcome close relationships. They are cutting loose from their old moorings, social, political, religious. This plastic period is the time of destiny for them." The missionaries in Turkey and the Christian world and our constituency expect us to prosecute the work which we began and for which we are in a marked degree responsible. Was not the American Board sent into Turkey a century ago for a time like this?

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of the Detour

Of what is hidden under the Hood of an Automobile I am the most ignorant of all the sons of Adam, neither would I willingly learn. But I know a good list of friends of mine who have Automobiles, and I help to keep them Generous by riding with them in their Cars.

Now I rode with one of these friends, and we were Hitting the Turf at a fairly good clip, when we beheld a sign that said, Detour.

And we Detoured.

And that was a rough and rocky road that we had to take and it put us back about the space of One Hour.

And I went to hear a man make a speech, and he was getting on fairly well, when he flagged himself and made a Detour. For he thought of an Illustration, which, however, did not illustrate, and he told it, and wandered about quite a bit before he got back on the Main Traveled Road again.

And then he was stepping on the gas and going on well, when he said, Permit a personal experience. And then he made another Detour. And he wandered farther and farther from the way that was on the Map.

And by that time most of his hearers had forgotten what was the main road, and were yawning and looking at their Watches.

And I said unto him in mine heart, Old fellow, thou hast acquired the Detour habit, and it is a bad one. If thou wishest to get anywhere in thy Discourse, and keep any considerable number of thy congregation following thy smoke, thou wilt need to make a prompt and permanent recovery from the Detour infirmity.

For the children of Israel might have gotten into the Land of Promise in about One Summer, but they made a Detour, and were Forty Years in the Wilderness, and most of them got out of Gas and got Punctures and stayed there.

Wherefore if thou art an Orator or a Prophet, keep in the Main Road. Yea, whatever thy Vocation, beware of the Detour.

The Pastor Says: One man with tact and an ear of corn can decoy a pig into a pen, when a colonel with a regiment can accomplish nothing by direct action.

My Soliloquy at Seventy-Eight

By Jonathan Edwards

Portland, Oregon

Conscious have I been for many years now,
Of constant progress and development
Of mind and soul, and of all my being;
I've strenuously sought the better things,
And strained and travailed for the gifts above;
My spirit thirsts and hungers after Him,
Who is the summit of reality,
And the unchanging fountain of all good,
The satisfier of our deepest needs.
This world becomes more beautiful to me
As God unfolds its glories to my soul,
And stirs within me higher thoughts and aims;
It gives me greater joy to do His will,
And stimulates the impulse of my mind
To imitate my Master and my Lord.
The Spirit spreads God's love within my heart,
And makes our fellowship more genuine
And blessed than all earthly joys afford.
I love to contemplate on Nature's ways,
Its mysteries and its magnificence,
The glories of the heavens, and wonders of the deep,
And rich and varied treasures of the earth.
I love to live, and live to love, my God
And all my fellowmen of every race,
Creed, color, and condition, high and low.
My kinship with my God I realize,
And His indwelling I acutely feel;
And oft my spirit soars to realms above
All earth's disturbances, and mingles with Beloved saints around the throne of God.
I have felicity in music, art,
Profound philosophy, psychology,
And history and sociology,
And choicest fiction and biography,
Inspiring poetry of minds divine.
I get inexplicable ecstasy
From the great and deep and brilliant thoughts
That flow perennial from the superminds,
In classic speech, and song, and dazzling scenes.
It is my highest bliss to meditate,
And pray, and praise, and glorify my God.
And can it be, that all of this shall end
In nothingness, in very few brief years?
When I shall close my eyes in silent sleep,
And all the transitory scenes of earth
Shall disappear from my view in death—
Will all the aspirations of my soul,
The love, joys, hopes, and longings after God
Be lost in waves of air, and be no more?
No, no, it cannot be, for that would not
Be worthy of the God omnipotent,
The author of my deepest soul's desires,
And all the expectations now unsatisfied.
I know that when this body is dissolved,
The spirit that's within me will arise
To be with Him who gave it evermore;
And unalloyed will be my blessedness,
Transcending all my mind can comprehend;
My love will pure be, and sanctified,
And perfect my communion with my God;
I shall be free from sin, and pain, and care,
From sorrow, and from all that interferes
With my progression and my highest bliss,
And my enraptured soul shall ever swim
In oceans of eternal love and peace.

Universal Christian Conference on Life and Wor

I. Preparation and Personnel

By Theodore Ainsworth Greene
Associate Secretary of the American Section

IN the summer of 1919 the International Committee of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches met at The Hague. This was the first meeting of an international character held after the signing of the Armistice, if we except a small gathering of labor leaders. About sixty leaders of the churches were present, representing nearly all the Protestant communions, and most of the countries of Europe. Ten or twelve delegates were present from America.

As a result of these meetings at The Hague, Archbishop Söderblom of Sweden, the Dean of Canterbury, Dr. Charles S. Macfarland of America, Dr. Henry A. Atkinson, and others held an informal meeting to discuss the possibility of bringing the churches of the world together to discuss matters pertaining to "Life and Work," in other words, to consider together what the churches can say and do to aid in the building of a new and better civilization on the ruins of the old. Dr. Lynch, Archbishop Söderblom, and Prof. Eugene Choisy of Geneva undertook to interest the British, American, Scandinavian, and Swiss churches at once in the project.

Accordingly, one hundred delegates assembled in Geneva in August, 1920. A three days' session was held and the present conference began to assume shape. A large International Committee was set up, which was divided into four groups, one for America, one for the British Empire, one for the European Protestant Churches, and the fourth, representing the Eastern Orthodox Church. In August, 1922, this committee met at Helsingborg, Sweden, and the subject matter for discussion at Stockholm in 1925 was planned as follows:

1. The Church's Obligation in View of God's Purpose for the World.
2. The Church and Economic and Industrial Problems.
3. The Church and Social and Moral Problems.
4. The Church and International Relations.
5. The Church and Christian Education.
6. Methods of Co-operative and Federative Efforts by the Christian Communions.

In accordance with these plans, an invitation was extended in the name of this committee to all the evangelical churches of Christendom. I quote its statement of the purpose of the conference verbatim:—

In our deliberations, we do not propose to deal with matters of faith and order, although we are not unmindful of their importance. Our prayer and our hope is that through this conference a new impetus will be given to the various movements and strivings for reunion, but the world's need is so urgent and the demand for common action on the part of all Christians so insistent at this juncture, that we cannot afford to await the fulfillment of that great hope of a reunited Christendom before putting our hearts and our hands into a united effort that God's will may be done on earth as it is in heaven. To this end, we shall consider such concrete questions as industry and property, in relation to the Kingdom of God; what the Church should teach and do to help to create right relations between the different and at times warring classes and groups in the community; how to promote friendship between the nations and lay the only sure foundation upon which permanent international peace can be built. In short, we hope under the guidance of the spirit of God, through the counsel of all, to be able to formulate programs and divine means for making them effective, whereby the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of all peoples will become more completely realized through the churches.

Extensive arrangements were made for the presentation at the conference of reports from the various sections covering the subjects to be discussed.

The Work Begun

On Aug. 9, the International Committee, consisting of approximately esventy-five members together with certain experts in the fields of work under discussion, met in the Lodge Room of the Masonic Building at Stockholm, Sweden. By common consent, Archbishop Söderblom acted as our chairman. It was decided to deal with the last five topics only. Commissions were named and to separate subcommissions was assigned the duty of drafting reports upon the problems presented by "Drink," "Textbooks," and "Race Relations."

The following day, the entire membership of the five commissions and three subcommissions was transported—away from the bustling city of Stockholm—to quiet places of meeting in the country. Some of us were entertained on country estates, others at schools. One commission, the last, held its meetings in the Swedish House Parliament. A program of operations provided for each commission. In alm every case, the chairmen of the commissi were well grounded in the particular f to be discussed, and equipped also wit working, if not a speaking knowledge of official conference languages, French, G man, and English.

It fell to my lot, for example, to act Secretary of Commission IV, on "The Chu and Christian Education." Prof. Willi Adams Brown of Union Seminary was able chairman. His mind had concei the outline of our American Section Rep upon which skeleton Prof. Luther B. Wei of Yale had draped the flesh and sine We set out from Stockholm in a motor ya the Polar, belonging to Dr. Eckstrom, Pr dent of the Telephone Company of Sto holm, and were landed after three hou sail up the lakes at Sigtuna, the anci capital of Sweden. There the whole co mission was housed in a new and beauti school for workers. This particular sch is one of a series of similar foundations Sweden, and bears the name of Sietu stiftelsen. It is under the direction of resident chaplain, Dr. Bjirquist, a lea in educational life in Sweden.

We began work at once, and found full schedule of arrangements for our co fort and convenience. Breakfast was serv at nine o'clock. Prayers followed at t and evening prayers came at the end of t day, just twelve hours later. Both servi were held in the beautiful little Chap which forms the center of the school's li We took turns conducting these devotio

"Three Wise Men from the East" and Archbishop Söderblom

At the left are the "Three"—the Patriarchs of Thyateira, Alexandria, and Nubia; next to them is Archbishop Söderblom. They are shown arriving at the Academy of Music in Stockholm for the opening session of the Conference on Life and Work.

in his own respective language. We ample Swedish hospitality, but our business, of course, was the work of commission.

e can get an inkling of the problem sented in co-ordinating the thought of group, when I call attention to the diversity of opinion suggested by the bership. In addition to the chairman, William Adams Brown, a Presbyterian beral mind and wide experience from York, the personnel of the commission ded Bishop Ostenfeldt of Copenhagen, nark, and Bishop Darlington of Harris- Pennsylvania, Bishop Motoda of Tokio, n, and Dr. Stejskal, the youngest Bishop e new Church of Czechoslovakia, Gideon , Secretary of the Council of Churches China, and Professor Ispir, Secretary ults for Roumania, also Pastor Schoe- r of the Lutheran Church in Poland, Iranej Georgevitch of the Orthodox ch at Belgrade, Dr. Bjurquist of Sweden, ntiate Erick Stänge of Leipzig, Germany, John Manse of the United Free Church Dundee, Scotland, Dr. Graham Hunter, resbyterian in the U. S. A. from Cali- a, and your humble servant, a simple regationalist from Connecticut.

e whole process of achieving unity and rstanding in that group was humbling, ay the least. It looked—for the first days—as if we should only have another ition of the Tower of Babel to report. after hour we labored and "brought nothing"—not even a mouse. On the ing of the third day, however, a joint ne was achieved, into the preparation hich every man present had contributed ggestion, a thought, a word, at least. this outline, Dr. Brown proceeded to plete in his own skillful way the final ded report, assisted in the process by a drafting committee. By the end of the day, Saturday, the document was ready ranslation and printing. Whatever the il may thing of the report—if, indeed, it reads it—this much at least was prag- cally proven to all who shared in any the difficult work of these commissions: possible, wonderfully and miraculously ble, for men of different languages, ferent histories, different minds, and dif- t churches, to get together around a mon table in the name of Christ. Held ther at that table by a common loyalty also possible for men to face their sep- difficulties and arrive at some sort of ement as to their common duty. Truly have demonstrated to our own personal faction the age-old claim of the Church hrist, "In Him all things hold together."

is Conference on Life and Work proves thing else, it will be worth infinitely more he world than all it cost in faith and and charity and trouble!

e experience of our Commission on stian Education, however, is by no s exceptional. The Dean of Worcester, man of the joint commission on "The rch and Economic and Industrial Prob- ," told me—at the end of his labors— there were moments when he very ly despaired of bringing an ordered re- out of the chaos of opinion represented by his group. In addition to the usual difficulties of language and temperament, this commission faced the problem of reconciling the Anglo-American-French ideal of the social character of the Gospel and its application to the whole of life with the central continental idea of the Gospel as an individualistic message intended for the salvation of the elect and dealing only with matters commonly termed "spiritual." It is on easy business, this of unifying minds. One has hardly to name the personnel of this commission—His Magnificence, the Landes-Bishop of Saxony, D. Ihmels, Bishop Billing of Sweden, Miss Constance Smith of Great Britain, Dr. Worth M. Tippy of our own Federal Council, Professor Francis Zilka of Czechoslovakia, M. Le Pasteur, Elie Gounelle of France, Dr. Spiecker of Germany, Professor Cramer of Holland, and others—to glimpse the varied backgrounds represented.

Very much the same was the situation in the Commission on International Relations, over which Bishop Brent, of Buffalo, presided. Around his table sat Stephan, the Metropolite of Sofia, Bulgaria, Prof. Adolph Deissman of Germany, General Superintendent Blau of Poland, M. and Madame J. Jézéquel of France, and Baron Kaas of Hungary. This is also true of the special Subcommission on Race, under the leadership of Prof. Julius Richter of Germany, and including the Bishop of Bombay, Dr. Sidney Gulick of America, Miss Fan of China, Dr. Tsuga of Japan, Pasteur Bournland of Switzerland, and Dr. Ramirez of Spain. And yet, with all these "many minds," there was the unmistakable presence of that "one spirit," necessary for real unity.

Outstanding Personalities

Far more interesting to me than the problems and difficulties of the conference, however, were its outstanding personalities. One was constantly touching shoulders in Stockholm with some of the princes of the Church of Christ, both official and natural.

No account of this world gathering is complete without some reference to Archbishop Söderblom, the Chairman of the European Section and the "Deus ex Machina," who inspired, propelled, directed, and astounded us all with his marvelous understanding of languages and his agility of mind. His memory for names and faces, his practical capacity for arranging and executing programs, his never-failing humor and energy won him a place in the admiration of each single delegate. Bearing a tremendous burden of responsibility, working each night after conference hours well on toward sunrise, always in demand, and yet always the gracious host, his was the outstanding genius of the conference. Men spoke of him as a sort of apostolic and ecclesiastic Theodore Roosevelt. And, it is quite easy to see, the people of Sweden are justly proud of their primate. Presiding in four languages, scorning all interpreters, mingling in the throngs, leading the procession of delegates to meet the King, sitting—as I saw him one Sunday afternoon—on a bench outside the Stockholm Opera House conversing with some very ordinary hangers-on, preaching the final sermon to four thousand worshipers at the great Cathedral in Upsala, he was always the same friendly, active, unostentatious person. For years now, Dr. Söderblom has lived and studied and labored for this conference. His teaching in Paris and Berlin, his recent visit to America, his acquaintance with the leaders of European Protestantism, all helped to make him "the man of destiny" at Stockholm this summer. Quite naturally—as was his right—he was elected to the important post of Chairman of the Continuation Committee.

Though not a linquist to compare with Dr. Söderblom, the Lord Bishop of Winchester, leader of the British Section, proved himself in the mother tongue a past master, and in the chair quite equal to every situation. He was the unanimous choice for chairman of the new executive committee.

Dr. Arthur Judson Brown wielded an effective gavel every third day at the conference. His mind for detail, and his reputation for missionary statesmanship did not desert him, and he kept things moving through all the sessions.

From the Eastern Orthodox Church came His Grace, the Metropolitan of Thyateira, Germanos, like Upsala, gifted with tongues, and sharing the chair as the representative of His Holiness, the Oecumenical Patriarch of Constantinople. Sometimes in the simple black Prince Albert of a Western pulpiteer, and sometimes in the flowing robes, Greek cross, and widow's weeds of his own church, be moved among us, a modest, cautious, and bewhiskered figure.

The German Delegation

From Germany came a strong delegation, in one sense perhaps the strongest in Stockholm, for it included leaders of the first rank in scholarship, politics, ecclesiastical and industrial life. I doubt, however, if any man among them left any more gracious impression than Dr. Walter Simons, President of the Supreme Court, and after the death of Ebert, President-ad-interim of the Republic of Germany. I shall have more to say later of his outstanding address on "Christianity and Crime." It is only necessary here to pay tribute to Dr. Simons' gracious utterances, his genuine understanding and courtesy throughout the Conference, his frank desire to win friends for Germany, which he did on all sides. There, too, was Prof. Adolph Deissman of Berlin, one of the world's foremost New Testament authorities. The profundity of his knowledge and the patient persistence with which he labored could not fail to impress any who were privileged to look behind the scenes. One missed in Dr. Deissman the fire of Dr. Julius Richter, and the imaginative touches of Dr. Simons, but the modesty and sincerity of this careful, scholarly man set a silent example to us all.

Though far smaller in numbers, it was impossible to miss the presence of the French contingent, led by Prof. Wilfred Monod of Paris, and distinguished by the fiery oratory of Pasteur Elie Gounelle of St. Etienne. Dr. Monod has aged since the war. But his spirit is as young as ever it was, and not once but thrice he voiced the sentiments of Protestant France, with a distinction that found no superior in all that host of learned and able men.

Beside the Bishop of Winchester, Dr. A. E. Garvie of the Congregational fold, and Miss Lucy Garden, the Quaker Secretary of the British Section, both pulled strong oars in the conference boat. Dr. Garvie labored with all possible diligence as Secretary of the Commission on the Continuation of the Conference, lapsing into German and even French—when necessary—to bring laggards and dissenters into line. And, all day long and far into the night Miss Lucy Garden, known to many of us on this side of the Atlantic as the executrix of the Birmingham Conference on Politics, Economics, Citizenship, worked over the arrangem daily programs and "rang the bell" the speakers of the conference w justice and indifference to persons, together with her charm and humor for her the genuine gratitude of all.

(To be continued)

Congregationalists' Educational Progress

Reports of the Three Educational Boards for National Council Meeting

By Frederick L. Fagley

WHEN the National Council of Congregational Churches meets at Washington in October, much attention will be given to the educational interests of the denomination. For more than three hundred years the Congregational Churches have been working towards a definite end. This has been defined by one of the early leaders "so to labor that there shall be in government, democracy; and in personal life, true religion." They have held from the time when they founded Yale and Harvard, Williams, Dartmouth, Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Oberlin, Carleton, Grinnell, and some thirty-five other institutions of higher learning, that the educational system is the very mind and soul of the nation. They have held that true education is not mere instruction; it is the cultivation of the whole human nature. It is leading a person step by step until he reaches the highest possibility for himself.

The institutions listed as founded by Congregationalists have been founded not by the denomination acting as such but by inspired Congregational men and women who have been led to this service by the teachings of the church and by the ideals of the fathers.

As a denomination the Congregationalists maintain three boards to foster religious education in the church school and in the week day schools of religion, to assist young men preparing for the ministry and young women preparing for missionary service, and in assisting the missionary colleges throughout the country. These three boards are the Congregational Publishing Society, the Congregational Education Society, and the Congregational Foundation for Education.

When these three boards make their biennial reports to the Council at its meeting in Washington there will be widespread interest in what the leaders will have to say and the plans proposed for the future.

The Publishing Society's Work

The Publishing Society writes, edits, and publishes the educational material for the church schools of the denomination. It maintains a corps of editors and expert writers, and publishes three courses of Sunday school lessons with comments and expositions, an adult class magazine, a monthly magazine for elementary teachers, four weekly magazines for children and young people, and in addition it publishes books of a religious or religious-educational nature. Dr. S. W. Weston, the business manager, will report that this society has a capital of $387,000 and its income from the sale of books and papers about cares for its expenses so that it does not receive any income from the apportionment of missionary contributions.

It is heavily handicapped by increased cost of publishing books and magazines and especially by the deficit on The Congregationalist, which amounts to more than $20,000 per year. It is expected that at the meeting of the National Council at Washington some practical measures will be taken either to increase the income of the Publishing Society or to relieve it of some expenses, so that it may develop its own work of editing and publishing Sunday school material at a reduced price, thus bringing these high grade helps within the reach of the mass of schools.

The Work of the Education Society

The Education Society which operates under the same board as the Publishing Society but which is a distinct corporation, has for its work training church-school teachers throughout the country, promoting the use of the best grade of literature, helping churches to organize their adult departments, giving leadership to the churches in the consideration of the social service programs of the denomination, and co-operating with the Publishing Society in the creation of Sunday school helps.

This society also looks after the religious needs of students in church schools and state universities. The movement to provide adequate religious leadership for young people at colleges and universities has developed rapidly the last few years. At some of the great state universities the Education Society maintains a specially trained worker who gives all his time to work among the Congregational students in residence at the school. In some other institutions where there are not so many Congregational students the Education Society co-operates with other denominations in maintaining a religious center for all the students.

Another important item in the work of the society is the Department of Missionary Education which develops and promotes plans for a united program of missionary education in the churches and church schools. The department furnishes literature, suggestions on material and methods of work and gives advice through correspondence and conference to leaders in our churches all over the country. This program is of the greatest importance to all our Missionary Boards both home and foreign, laying the foundation of intelligent interest for the growing support of their work.

The society has a field force of eight educational experts located in different parts of the country and these men are available for advice and counsel. Dr. Herbert W. Gates, the acting General Secretary, will report receipts for the last year of $158,288.04, and expenditures of $189,137, leaving a deficit of $30,849. A considerable portion of this $30,849 properly belongs to the preceding year. The actual deficit for 1924-25 was $19,527. For a number of years the society has not been able to run its work within its receipts and its accumulated deficit is $45,279. The Council is expected to take some action that will relieve the society of the necessity of doing its work under this serious handicap. The three main departments of the work of the society are Missionary Education in charge of Dr. Herbert W. Gates, the Social Servi partment under Rev. H. C. Herring, a Young People's Department under Rev. T. Stock. These two societies co-oper publishing The Congregationalist, our d national paper, for which Dr. Willia Gilroy is the able editor and Mr. Rolfe leigh, the managing editor.

The Work of the Foundation

The third board maintained by Con tionalists in behalf of education is the gregational Foundation for Education. board was established four years ago a Angeles for the purpose of bringing to th leges founded by Congregationalists th sources of the denomination in fellowshi money.

There are throughout the West and a large number of colleges which are ju much missionary enterprises of the deno tion as are the churches founded by the sionary societies. But for years the de nation has not had an adequate meth bringing these colleges into co-operatio of helping them in any really effective

The Foundation is working toward a eral plan of financing these schools a helping each school to plan its own fina affairs that these schools may be able to r a far larger service to their communities.

Dr. George W. Nash, who has been dent of the Foundation since it was lished, has resigned and a new president not been elected pending the action of the tional Council on the proposal to unite the of the Foundation with the Education So Dr. Nash will report receipts for the year of $66,379, and that this amount has spent in the general work of the Found and in helping twenty-seven institution higher learning throughout the country.

Any one who will read of the early hi of Yale, Harvard, Amherst, all Congrega ally founded, will see that the struggle the small colleges of the West and South the same in kind and in degree as were troubles of these great universities when were young and were located in a country being established.

If these missionary colleges are to grow new Harvards and Yales all over the and there is need for them, great need, must be helped by the older communities by friends of education throughout our churc

Education is a great passion among Co gationalists and so has it been from the of the fathers. From the first, Congregat alists have maintained a uniform policy deep interest in education with a determ tion that educational institutions shall be The denomination has never sought to co any educational institution but to advance best interests in all possible ways.

The task of the church, as the leaders the educational boards of the Congregat naintain, is to put religion into education education into religion. That is, they hold education in itself is neither good nor It becomes one or the other in accord- with its motive and content. The true of education is to establish and maintain deals of liberty, justice, and righteousness. regationalists believe that a heavy re- sibility rests upon the churches. For ican education with all its processes must be Christianized. Our people must be made good as well as knowing, powerful in character as well as rich in material things. Schools are the formative centers of civilization and it rests upon the churches that they be able to send forth young men and women permeated with the spirit and teaching of Jesus. The charter of Old Yale says "that our youth may be fitted for public employment both in the church and civil state."

American Relations with China

The Recent Conference at Baltimore

By George W. Hinman, D.D.

District Secretary, A. M. A., San Francisco, California

BOUT two hundred persons professionally or personally interested in China, prac- y all of them competent to contribute thing distinctive and valuable to the dis- ons of present conditions in China and ica's obligations in view of them, met at s Hopkins University, Sept. 17-20. Ed- C. Carter of the Inquiry, Galen M. Fisher ie Institute of Social and Religious Sur- A. S. Warnshuis of the International Mis- ry Council, and R. E. Diffendorfer of the odist Foreign Board were leaders in the agement and direction of the conference. ie members represented three or four rather act groups, and the differences of their points came out somewhat positively dur- he discussions. There were men connected the diplomatic and consular services of a and America, notably Minister Alfred from the Chinese Legation in Washington, ng educators, Chinese and American, ad- strators of both foreign and home mis- ry interests, editors, journalists, and lec- s, and, very definitely in evidence, very ively concerned about practical considera- as opposed to ideal theories, there was American business man.

o one could say that the conference was inated by the missionary interests. Some he strongest contributions to the program ie gathering were from Leighton Stuart of ng University and Bishop Logan Roots of National Christian Council of China. But articular effort was made to see that the alled "practical" point of view was pre- ed. There were a considerable number who idered relations with China mainly in s of safety for American investments; but inately there were other equally practical ness men who saw that successful busi- must be founded on international justice. ardly any other participant contributed so h, through his genial personality and quiet or, as well as through his intimate mastery ie facts and his close relation to the leaders China, as did President Kuo of Southwest- University, Nanking. He was the recog- d spokesman of the considerable number of ese present. Many of these were the nger students. They distributed a consid- le amount of propaganda material, some of ch was ill-considered. A clear and re- ined statement expressing the desires of ese students in America regarding present litions in China was presented unofficially n attaché of the Chinese Legation.

was notable that Charles R. Crane, former ister to China, and Professor Jeremiah ks, while distinctly practical in their view- nts, showed a vision of the urgency and al significance of the present situation which beyond the range of many. Perhaps the t significant support for the missionary position, the position which interprets American relations with China in terms of justice and service, came from the editors and journalists. Nathaniel Peffer and Villard of the Nation sharply challenged the smug Nordicism which "loved" the Chinese but advocated treating them like children.

The outstanding concrete problems before the conference were naturally what should be done about extra-territoriality, customs revision and customs autonomy, and, in general, the "unequal treaties," to use a phrase which has become current among the Chinese to sum up their whole case. The Shanghai and Canton incidents were scarcely mentioned, so completely had the great question of China's unrestricted sovereignty taken the place of the questions of responsibility and reparation for these clashes. The extent and threatening character of the fire which has started from a careless match in a mass of combustible material before the Louza police station may yet rival the conflagration in Europe after 1914. In spite of this fact the conference manifested a singular reluctance to commit itself even to the very general statements concerning China's demands made by Secretary Kellogg at the meeting of the American Bar Association, and already included in the Nine Power Treaties. Efforts to emphasize the moral significance of our obligations to China, the source of many of the present embarrassing conditions in a fundamental racial attitude, and the selfish and patronizing assumptions back of much of the current discussions were not encouraged on the floor of the conference.

The conference has probably done a great service by strongly stimulating publicity concerning China. The detailed reports of its sessions will provide much essential information to editors and public speakers.

The chief fault of the conference was its willingness to accept an undue emphasis on material conditions, even details, rather than the assertion of principles and human values that must govern in international relations with Oriental nations. The results will be far from satisfactory to either Americans or Chinese because so much attention was given to hair nets and so little to moral attitudes. When one considers the great influence in China itself as well as in forming American public opinion which might have come from a strong response to the high moral notes sounded by President Stuart and Bishop Roots, there is an unavoidable sense of disappointment. Nevertheless the conference did succeed in bringing together a representative cross section of informed public opinion, and in revealing how diversely it is motivated. We must face facts in America as well as in China if we are to secure a satisfactory adjustment of relations.

Three Congregationalists were present at the Conference; Dr. W. E. Strong representing the American Board, Prof. Hodous of the Kennedy School of Missions, Hartford, and Dr. George W. Hinman representing the interests of the A. M. A. for the Chinese here in America.

The Building Project of First Church, Washington

The decision of First Church, Washington, D. C., to go ahead with its proposed purpose to erect an appropriate new church building is attended by rejoicing in the church. As reported in last week's issue of The Congregationalist, the church meeting when action was taken was held Thursday evening, Sept. 17. On Sunday, Sept. 20, the church calendar contained the following statement by the pastor, Dr. Pierce:

First Church Moves Forward

That was a great meeting Thursday night when the die was cast and the decision made as to where we should build our new church.

There were differences of mind but not of heart; divergence of opinion but unanimity of spirit!

Everyone wanted First Church to be the most downtown, accessibly located, democratic-spirited, and public-serving church possible, and the judgment prevailed that even though our property be extremely valuable, the only site for us was right here at Tenth and G Streets!

We now own the land through to Grant Place and have a property 100 by 204 feet; 20,400 square feet within the building lines, bounded by three streets and a wide alley, with light and air on all sides.

This land has a realty value of one million dollars, but its historic value is a billion dollars and its spiritual value for future service is priceless!

This will remain a great Protestant corner marked by catholicity of spirit, freedom of thought, evangelical fervor and consecration of life in loyalty to the leadership of Jesus Christ.

Tens of thousands of students are here in this, the leading educational city of America.

Tens of thousands of young men and women from all over the country are here in the service of the Government.

Tens of thousands of visitors are constantly streaming here from every part of the world.

The growth of the United States assures the continued growth of its Capital, and the future of Washington spells unlimited opportunity. This is our field for service.

$1,250,000 is needed to build an adequate church plant with accommodations for all activities, including an auditorium to seat 1,800, capable of expansion to 2,500 as needed; and to provide partial maintenance for a staff of workers in the branches of young people's work; student leadership; men's work; women's work; religious education, including Bible drama; and pastoral service.

Since less than one-quarter of our congregations are members of this church, and our constituency enrolls no people of large wealth, hardly a merchant or employer, but is made up of government workers, scientists, educators, those in the professions, and thousands of young people, we must appeal to all friends everywhere to have a stake in this great enterprise.

Before we ask others we must sacrifice ourselves.

Think! Pray! Consecrate!

Yours with rejoicing,

JASON NOBLE PIERCE.

A Correction

An article appearing in a recent issue of The Congregationalist under the title "Underpaid and Overpaid Ministers" contained an error which the writer wishes to correct.

The sentence reading "3,750 (ministers) are receiving less than $1,000" should read, "3,750 (ministers) are receiving $1,000 or less."

Another sentence reading "Only a trifle over three per cent., or about 170 Congregational ministers receive $3,000 or over in salary" should read "Only a trifle over eight per cent., or about 470 Congregational ministers receive $3,000 and over in salary."

Vital Questions for Congregationalists
To Come Before the National Council

Mrs. A. J. Lyman for Vice-Moderator

With the nominations for moderator, I desire to place one for vice-moderator, the choice of the Council too often having been left to the impulse of the moment. I nominate Mrs. Albert J. Lyman of New York. Her brilliant success as an educator prior to her marriage to Brooklyn's beloved minister, Dr. A. J. Lyman; her eager and inspiring participation in the work of the South Church; her continuing interest since his death in the larger problems of our denominational life mark her as one who would make it more than an honorary position. With her wide knowledge, broad experience, and fine, strong personality, she could and would render valuable service to our churches in many ways as a vice-moderator for the next two years.

West Roxbury, Mass. EDWIN H. BYINGTON.

Against Periodicals Merger

I am much concerned over the proposal to consolidate the missionary magazines with The Congregationalist. It seems to me that those who advocate the merger look at the matter from the standpoint of the convenience to the pastor and do not fully appreciate what is involved for the societies in the abandonment of the missionary magazines. If they will read and ponder the statement by Mr. Charles S. Olcott in the Missionary Herald for August, I am confident that many will revise their opinion.

This proposal is not new. As a former member of the Prudential Committee, of the Commission on Missions, and of the Committee on The Congregationalist when the denomination purchased it, it has fallen to me to study it repeatedly, and the result has been the deepening conviction that the discontinuance of the Missionary Herald would be disastrous. Every publisher with whom I have discussed it has said, with Dr. Talcott Williams, that "no business firm would dream of dropping a title which has played so important a part in the growth of the institution."

Before we commit ourselves to such a step certain considerations should give us pause:

1. There would be no saving of money. The cost of printing missionary news might be differently distributed, but would not be materially lessened. And in addition the Board would be compelled to print and issue circulars and letters in order to accomplish what the Herald now does, at a total cost for publicity at least twice as great as the present.

2. There would certainly be a loss in gifts and legacies to the Board. No one can sit at the table of the Prudential Committee and hear the testimony which accompanies the gifts from the living and the legacies from the dead and doubt this for a moment. To no other one advertising medium can so large a proportion of the income of the Board be directly traced. Any business man who proposed to cut off his best advertising medium in order to save its expense would be a candidate for bankruptcy. It is impossible to consolidate the Herald with any other publication without destroying its individuality and imperiling its value.

3. We should abandon a position of leadership and commanding influence in missionary journalism, which we now hold. The Herald is far more than a news-letter to the home constituency and a means of communication with missionaries on the field, promoting the morale and increasing the effectiveness of our whole body of workers. It is known the world over for its expert discussions of missionary policies and its inspiring presentation of missionary principles. The prestige of its one hundred and five years of missionary leadership is upheld and increased under its present editorial management by its improved form and increasing influence. In the nature of the case no such prestige would belong to a supplement.

Similar considerations apply to the continuance of the American Missionary, although it has not behind it so many years of honored history.

It is undeniably true that the publishing of our denominational paper should not continue to be a burden carried by one of our societies, but must be assumed by the denomination as a whole, if it cannot be self-supporting. The problem of religious journalism is too complex and difficult to be solved off-hand by a vote of the National Council or the resolutions of a committee. Let us build up the constituency of The Congregationalist and make its place secure, by all legitimate means. But let us not, in the attempt to do this, rashly throw away very real and tangible values for the sake of gains at best uncertain and visionary.

Newton Centre, Mass. EDWARD M. NOYES.

Does Not Approve Merger

Permit me as one of your good friends to say I do not approve of the "Merger," now being talked about. I take your good paper and the American Missionary and Missionary Herald. I cannot see any advantage in having them united. I have liked them separate, and hope they will continue so.

(Miss) MARY A. RIDGWAY.

West Newbury, Mass.

Another View of Merger

As an expression of interest in the matters that are to come before the National Council, I have been surprised and much disturbed by the large and apparently indiscriminating demand for the merger of our missionary societies.

The recognized ills of multiple and competing organizations have been loudly stressed, but I have failed to catch any significant expression of appreciation of the vastness, the vital needs, and the inherent complexity of our task. Many are distressed by confusing details, but no one seems to be inspired by the tremendous scope of the work.

By all means let our administration be as compact as possible, duly adjusted to times and conditions, but do not let us try to escape or conceal the overwhelming opportunities for world service. The alert Christian will always be oppressed by the crying needs of the world, and the lazy Christian irked by them. Those who give must always face the question of where they can give best. No manipulation of organization can escape these fundamental problems. The work is important, the method secondary.

Personally I like to know whether the $5 given goes to swell the endowment of a $1,000,000 college, or makes it possible for an itinerant missionary to organize a Sunday school in the "sticks"; or whether it is an expression of gratitude to a faithful minister, or buys a tractor to teach agriculture in South Africa. In the long run the apportionment has no inspiring power.

My own mind works to at least three divisions of the Home Boards—missions, education, and administration, the latter to include ministerial boards, publications, Council bu etc.

As to publications, it would be a h tragedy to merge the missionary ma with The Congregationalist. The latter to find honorable recognition in the field ligious journalism. The former are medi communication and information, a legi charge against the administration of the of which in their sphere we should be e proud. Perhaps they could be adjusted another.

Texarkana, Ark.—Tex. S. H. Bu

The Andover-Harvard Supr Court Decision
A Statement by Thomas Wes

Attorney for the Visitors

The outstanding feature of the recent sion of the Supreme Judicial Court of M chusetts in the three cases growing out closer affiliation between Andover Theol Seminary and the Harvard Divinity Sch the strong statement by Chief Justice Ru to the sacredness of trust funds. He says

The principles to be followed in de this question are settled. The seminary public charitable trust for the religious cation of those preparing for the Christian istry. The main inquiry is to ascertai purposes of the founders as expressed i instruments signed by them. That p must be gathered from the words of tho struments, interpreted according to the ing there attributed to them, and read i light of the circumstances existing at the they were used. There is no other te guide by which to find the true charact a charity and its scope and its limitations follow any other would in effect make a charity, rather than to execute the one al established. When that purpose is ascert it must be given effect. The charity mu administered accordingly. The law recog the right of the founder of a charity t and define its nature. An owner of erty may give it upon trust to maintain inculcate any doctrine of Christianity promote and extend any particular Chri denomination by the training of ministe preach its tenets. Such a gift constitu charity. The law will uphold and prote The obligation is imposed upon the man of such a charity to adhere strictly to scheme of the founders. Those who adm ter the charity have no right to vary, alte change its plan. They must execute the pose of the founders conformably to its intent. Their ideas of expediency or ge utility in conducting the trust are of no c quence.

The court, in ascertaining the purpose o founders of charitable trusts and in perfor its duty to see that they are not perverted no concern with the degree of public advan likely to flow from the trust as founded, pared with some other more or less analo purpose. We are bound by the declared pose of the founders. It is only when purpose has become impracticable of cution that upon proper proceedings the ch may be directed by the court into anc channel under the doctrine of cy pres. In plying these principles to a charity establi for the training of ministers of religion, n festly not the slightest consideration can given to the present prevalence of the relig creeds or doctrines to be taught or to our beliefs concerning them. The nature of institution as declared by the founders is single end to be sought.

The Master, appointed by the court, to h the facts, found among other things that though there was not now the sharp differ between Unitarian and Orthodox that exi one hundred and twenty-five years ago, t was today a fundamental difference betw them and that the teaching in the new sc created by the affiliation of Andover and Harvard Divinity School was in historical s cession with early Trinitarian Orthodox efs. The court said neither of these matters ere germane to the decision of these cases. ndover was founded as a direct result of the nitarian split and the appointment of a Uni- rian to the Hollis Professorship in Divinity Harvard College. The purpose of Andover as not only to teach Orthodox Evangelical rinitarian doctrines but to teach them in nformity to the Westminster Assembly's horter Catechism and the Andover Creed, nd from these there was never to be any ange or variation. The Chief Justice says s to this:

It may be that in the light of these findings ie founders were unwise, and that it would ave been sounder policy to have made a char- able foundation less hedged about with re- trictions and with freer hand in the managers adapt the charity to changed conditions as ecades come and go. Such considerations ave no relevancy to the questions here to be ecided. We can only interpret and apply the harity as it was founded according to the rms of the gift and the words of the founders. f it has become impracticable to execute the haritable trusts established expressly in writ- ng with respect to the Andover Seminary, that ct does not authorize the trustees to make a ifferent disposition of the charity. The trus- es cannot rightly depart from the trusts es- ablished. The doctrine of cy pres can be dministered only by a court of equity and not y the managers of a charity.

There were decided many technical points s to the rights, powers, and duties of the Visi- ors of Andover. But overshadowing all else s the positive declaration of our highest court hat when a man gives money to trustees for haritable purposes, these purposes as ex- ressed in the instrument of gift must be car- ied out.

National Council Delegates

ARIZONA
Rev. R. R. Shoemaker, New York City
Rev. O. A. Smith, Chicago, Ill.

CALIFORNIA
Rev. C. H. Stevens, Lodi
Rev. H. F. Swartz, Berkeley
Rev. L. L. Wirt, Berkeley

CONNECTICUT
Rev. George B. Hawkes, Warehouse Point
Rev. Roscoe Nelson, Windsor
Rev. Y. O. Waln, Abington
Mrs. Y. O. Waln, Abington

FLORIDA
Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, Jacksonville
Rev. Elisha A. King, Miami Beach

HAWAII
Rev. James Akimo, Kahuku
Rev. Stephen L. Desha, Jr., Hilo
Rev. E. Lyman Hood, Honolulu
Rev. Henry P. Judd, West Asheville, N. C.

IOWA
Rev. James P. Burling, Decorah
Rev. Allen L. Eddy, Webster City
Rev. John A. Hughes, Sibley
Rev. Vinton Lee, Dubuque
Rev. William B. Milne, Clear Lake
Rev. J. Frank Moore, Manchester
Rev. Albert R. Rice, Eldora

KANSAS
Rev. A. E. Jervis, Great Bend

LOUISIANA
Rev. Henderson H. Dunn, New Orleans

MAINE
Rev. H. S. Bradley, Portland

MASSACHUSETTS
Mr. Wm. H. Atkins, South Amherst
Mr. Henry M. Clapp, Westhampton
Rev. H. Arthur Kernen, Westfield
Rev. Alfred L. Struthers, West Brookfield

MICHIGAN
Rev. E. R. Latham, Grand Ledge

MINNESOTA
Rev. Noble S. Elderkin, Duluth
Mrs. C. V. Kennedy, St. Paul
Mrs. E. A. Tupper, Minneapolis
Mr. A. P. Stacy, Minneapolis

MONTANA
Rev. Isaac L. Cory, Laurel
Rev. Miss Rhoda Jane Dickinson, Roundup
Mrs. W. C. Erther, Baker
Rev. Raymond B. Walker, Billings
Rev. T. Thomas Wylie, Sidney

NEW HAMPSHIRE
Rev. E. C. Garfield, Lebanon
Rev. Albert L. Hill, Wilton
Rev. William J. McNeill, Orford
Rev. Oscar Peterson, Pennecook
Rev. Rodney W. Roundy, Laconia

NEW MEXICO
Rev. Frank Hampden Fox, El Paso, Texas

NORTH DAKOTA
Rev. H. R. Harris, New Rockford

OHIO
Rev. Edward J. Converse, Columbus
Rev. Robert Paton, Chardon
Rev. W. A. Warren, Painesville

OKLAHOMA
Rev. J. G. Duling, Tulsa

PENNSYLVANIA
Rev. B. D. Evans, Johnstown
Judge John E. Evans, Ebensburg

RHODE ISLAND
Rev. George J. Bloomfield, Riverside
Rev. M. Raymond Plumb, Edgewood

WASHINGTON
Rev. George N. Edwards, Walla Walla

WISCONSIN
Rev. O. C. Chapin, Phelps
Mr. L. L. Olds, Madison
Dr. John W. Wilson, Appleton

EVANGELICAL PROTESTANT CONFERENCE
Rev. Paul Reikow, Newport, Ky.

National Council Official Call

Pursuant to the requirements of the By-Laws of the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States, official call is hereby issued for the Twenty-First Regular Meeting of the Council, to convene in Washington, D. C., October 20-28, 1925, the hours and places of meeting and the subjects for discussion to be as herein announced.

C. F. CARTER, Chairman, Executive Committee
C. E. BURTON, Secretary, National Council

National Council Committees

PROPOSALS FOR BUSINESS COMMITTEE

Rev. A. W. Palmer, Oak Park, Ill., Chairman
Mrs. H. F. Swartz, Berkeley, Cal.
Mr. William Green, Waterbury, Ct.
Mr. H. M. Pflager, St. Louis, Mo.
Rev. Lloyd Douglas, Akron, O.
Rev. William F. Frazier, Burlington, Vt.
Rev. Henry K. Booth, Long Beach, Cal.
Rev. Charles S. Hager, Albany, N. Y.
Mr. E. N. Warner, Madison, Wis.

PROPOSALS FOR COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS

Rev. Henry L. Bailey, Longmeadow, Mass., Chairman
Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, New York City, Ex-Officio Secretary
Rev. Theodore R. Faville, Madison, Wis.
Rev. Charles C. Merrill, Chicago, Ill.
Mrs. D. Foster Updike, Glen Ridge, N. J.
Rev. William P. Harmon, Ticonderoga, N. Y.
Dr. Edwin G. Warner, New York City
Rev. Warren J. Moulton, Bangor, Me.
Rev. George W. Hinman, San Francisco, Cal.

These nominations will be presented for election at the first session of the Council on Oct. 20.

The Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation

Tentative Program of Annual Meeting, the Mayflower, Washington, D. C., Oct. 19-20, the President, Mrs. C. R. Wilson, presiding

Monday Evening, Oct. 19

7:00 Devotional Service—Mrs. O. E. Maurer
Welcome—Mrs. Sydney R. Jacobs, Southern Vice-President Middle Atlantic Conference
Response—Mrs. Charles R. Wilson
Reception of Women of Evangelical Protestant Conference of Congregational Churches

Reports of Secretaries
General—Mrs. J. J. Pearsall
Middle District—Mrs. D. D. Olmstead
Southeast District—Mrs. F. P. Ensminger
Southeast District—Mrs. Alfred Lawless

Reports of Vice-Presidents
Eastern District—Mrs. C. E. Blake
Middle District—Mrs. J. J. Kolmos
Western District—Mrs. Harold S. Gilbert
Interracial Committee—Mrs. Parker W. Fisher, Mrs. Henry Francis Smith
Prayer—Mrs. Timothy Harrison

Tuesday Morning, Oct. 20

9:00 Devotional Service, led by Mrs. Rex W. Dodge
9:30 Introduction of State Presidents
9:50 Reports of Treasurer; Finance Committee Report of Executive Committee on Merger
10:50 My Reaction and Yours to the Missionary Program of the Church—The Point of View of a Young Business Woman: Miss Ruth H. Bennett, Washington, D. C.
Discussion
11:10 Council of Women for Home Missions—Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Vice-President-at-Large 11:30 Reports of Special Committees:
Schauffler Dormitory
Alice Mather Walker Memorial—Mrs. H. M. Pflager
Chautauqua Congregational House—Mrs. T. A. Dungan
12:00 Report of Nominating Committee—Mrs. D. F. Bradley
Election of Officers
Report of Committee on Resolutions
Prayer—Miss M. L. Woodberry
12:30 Adjournment subject to call of Chairman during period of National Council

Article Not by Dr. Palmer

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

In The Congregationalist for Aug. 27, on page 266, there appears an article, "The Tsudas," by Albert W. Palmer, which must have seemed rather puzzling to any of your readers who know me. I wonder if it is too late to print this letter, or some equivalent note of explanation, making it clear that this article was not written by me but was simply sent in by me?

It is in reality the letter of a 14-year-old girl, written to her grandmother, who is a member of my church. The girl who wrote the letter lives somewhere out in Idaho and it seemed to me that her account of her first contact with a Japanese family was an interesting bit of laboratory experience in race relationships. Our papers are so filled with propaganda calculated to create dislike and suspicion of the Japanese that I sent you this letter hoping that you would think it worth while to publish it as an interesting human document, but with an editorial introductory paragraph giving the facts as just stated and as previously stated in my letter of June 16 when I mailed you the article.

Oak Park, Ill. ALBERT W. PALMER.

The Pastor Says: Pleasure is all very well to wade in, but it is too shallow to swim in, and many a one who has attempted to dive into its waters has crashed to his death on its rocky bottom.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

The Athlete of the Soul

The unhappiness of life and the love of God, or even the thought of God at all: how are these things to be reconciled? My correspondent longed for happiness, as all of us do. Endowed with delicate sensitiveness and a keen love of beauty and a hungry heart, she also had a handicapping personal defect which made her feel it her duty to refuse to marry the man she loved. In spite of her handicap she has been able to do her chosen work with success, but it has been with a gnawing sense of loss and a growing feeling of God's injustice.

"How can I," she says, "believe in the goodness and fatherly care of a God who could allow my life to be wrecked? . . . I lost a life of happiness, and have been handicapped so far as usefulness was concerned. I don't want to leave this world with a heart full of bitterness, but I can't feel that I have been fairly treated. . . . I do not ask, I can never have, any happiness, but I do earnestly desire to have a different feeling toward God—to trust him in spite of my ruined life."

If trust in God is only the easy result of our enjoying what we want here and now, most of the world will have to do without it. But trust in God, for most of us, is instead that heroic action of the soul by which a person lifts himself up above the tyranny of Here-and-Now, and gives himself eagerly to work together with the great Must Be for immortal satisfying ends, being confident that in some way, at last, in a glorious At Last, the Really Good will be his forever.

My correspondent wants to find the peace of trust in God. She can find it as she learns to desire, above all things else, to be shaped by him. "Life has not given me what I wanted," she can say; "what better thing, then, can I find, that shall make me glad for all I have suffered?" And in the search for that better thing, she can find the happiness she has given up hope of. Into an ever deeper, richer, more satisfying happiness she can grow—the joy that comes when renunciation is perfect. It was love's beauty that prompted her great renunciation, and that beauty must not now be spoiled by vain regret and corroding bitterness. It is the gladsomeness of sacrifice that makes its beauty and perfectness.

Another happiness life offers also: the happiness that comes of being determined to make the spirit victorious, no matter what comes. That is no more easy for a soul to accomplish at the first try, than it is for a youth to clear a thirteen-foot bar at his first try. The athlete's beautiful and easy success is the exultant outcome of repeated failure, repeated trying again, slow and gradual improvement.

I was ever a fighter, so—one fight more. It is the athlete of the soul who says that. Our human victory is not won till the spirit has been taught to rise above all the disappointment this world brings, to greet each new fight with at least some show of ardor, and to press forward with a cheer.

Let me change the figure, and ask a question. Which is better: to be resentful because the pearl is hidden in a hard shell that must be dived for, hunted for on the bottom of the sea, and then found only after much opening of many barren shells? or to be highly resolved to find the pearl, whatever the cost in toil and danger?

Closet and Altar

THE GLORY OF SERVICE

But I am among you as he that serveth.
—Luke 22: 27.

We have committed the golden rule to memory; now let us commit it to life.—Edwin Markham.

Choice and service—these were demanded of the Israelites; these are demanded of us—these and these only. Choice and service—in these are the whole of life.—Mark Hopkins.

Let men never plead acquaintance, familiarity, sonship, when God tries them, as this son, what they will do for him, and they refuse to work in his vineyard. It must be the word, written on the scutcheon of every Christian soldier—I Serve.—Thomas Adams.

Is thy cruise of comfort wasting? Rise and share it with another,
And through years of famine it shall serve thee and thy brother.

Love divine will fill thy storehouse, or thy handful still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving; all its wealth is living grain;
Seeds which mildew in the garner, scatter'd fill with gold the plain.

Is thy burden hard and heavy? Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden; God will bear both it and thee.

. . . . .

Is the heart a living power? Self-entwined, its strength sinks low;
It can only live in loving, and by serving love will grow.

Elizabeth Charles.

By enlisting in the service of God, we enter the one profession which is continuous through time and eternity, in which the work done here and now contributes to the work of the great Hereafter, in which nothing is lost or left out, but all our efforts which are made "in Christ" move on, accumulating, in one ever-broadening stream. —F. A. Burroughs.

The only religion that can really do anything for me is the religion that makes me want to do something for you. The missionary enterprise is not the Church's afterthought. It is Christ's forethought. It is not secondary and optional. It is primary and vital. Christ has put it into the very heart of his gospel. We cannot really see him, or know him, or love him, unless we see and know and love his ideal for us—the ideal which is embodied in the law of election to service.—Henry van Dyke.

O my God, make me a good man! O my Father, come what may, make me a simple-minded, honest, humble, and brave Christian! Let me seek no favor but thine, and give my heart to no labor but in thee and for thee! With God, my Savior as my help and guide I may, ere I die, be a blessing to the city in which I dwell, especially to the poor and miserable in it, for whom my heart bleeds.

Norman Macleaod.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVO

Are We Good Stewards?

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic f
October 11-17

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: "They First Gave Their Own Sel —a Stewardship Meditation. II Corinth 8: 1-15.

Light from the Bible Passage

It was a great honor to be a member of of the churches in Macedonia. They had an viable reputation. They did not exist themselves. They did not bemoan their fortune. It rather spurred them to greater terest in others. In one respect, they were richest of Paul's converts. Their wealth in their generosity. Their standard was their limit but beyond it. They did not to be urged; they begged for the chance. secret was in their dedication of themselve the Lord. Giving then became a passion them. They sought to excel in that as in other personal qualities. For a perfect ample of the stewardship of all things had a Christ, who sacrificed his riches others might be enriched. In their practice stewardship, they not only made a good st but a good finish. Nor did they base their ing on what others could do or did do. knew they were responsible for what God given them. They were good stewards of that they were and had.

Leads for Leaders

A steward is one who manages another's pr erty. What qualities must be shown to m the approval of that other one? Who is "other one" for whom we are acting as steward

A good steward is thoughtful—not carele indifferent. He continually keeps in mind H whom he represents. Stewardship is the rec nition and the doing of the will of God.

A good steward is enthusiastic. He enj the privilege of serving another. The pro ise of reward has no power over him. Stewa ship is a passion.

A good steward is systematic. He cannot haphazard and be fair to those whom he serv What is the bearing of this on systema giving?

A good steward is Christ-like. Christ's se lessness is one of his most beautiful traits. used his life, his resources absolutely for othe

Thoughts for Members

"To own is to owe, to live is to give, to lo is to lift."

"A world enslaved by selfishness can nev crown Christ Lord."

Nothing can prevent mankind from sinki beneath the tremendous temptations due modern wealth and power save the creation a strong religious life which shall lead us consecrate our control over nature to the pr cess of bringing in the Kingdom of God.

—Gerald B. Smith.

Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all.

A Moment of Prayer

O Love divine, from the beginning thou ha given us all things: we give thee back thi own. O thou, who didst dedicate, in lovin stewardship, thy boundless resources, receiv we humbly beseech thee, this our consecratio of time and talent, life and possessions, to t glory of thy holy kingdom, through Jes Christ, our Lord. Amen. —Ralph Cushman.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul in Corinth

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for October 11

Acts 18: 1-11

Was it due to the lightness and triviality of e interest in religion in Athens that we hear ttle more of Paul's visit there, and that no cords of any great religious movement seem pertain to that place? Religion apparently n be built permanently only upon intensity interest. Aesthetic and speculative enthusi- m does not constitute a deep and nourishing ound for vital religious thought and activity. hatever may have been the reason for lack any permanent movement at Athens, Paul assed on from there to Corinth, fifty miles estward, and in this place he had one of his ngest ministries, remaining there about a year d a half during this journey, and also spend- g some time there at a later period.

Corinth was not by any means as important Athens from a cultural point of view, but in aul's day it had become a much more impor- nt center in commerce and industry and also political significance. It was a city of very ne architecture and of much emphasis upon t. It was a meeting place of East and West ith a heterogeneous and cosmopolitan popu- tion, and like almost all such centers it had herited the worst of these various elements ith the best. The licentiousness of the city as notorious in the ancient world.

The splendid Temple of Venus crowned the cro-Corinthus, a citadel which rose to a eight of 1,800 feet. But the religion of Corinth as far from being symbolized by the loftiness d beauty of this temple. The city had herited from the Phoenicians the worship of starte with its gross immorality, and later retions had only increased the foulness of orship. The very temple was a center of prac- ces so degrading that the highest conscience the pagan world itself has condemned them, t to speak of the pure idealism of Christian orality and worship.

Here in this city with its busy life and its centious worship, where all parts of the world et, Paul found an unusual opportunity for e preaching of the Gospel, and a profound ance to test its power to redeem. The type people who were drawn into the church Corinth apparently through his ministry is ell indicated by the reading of his Epistles, d by a following of these Epistles with the scussions of the problems that arose in this urch of Corinth. They were the problems hich one might have expected in that sort of ty. People came into the church whose moral nse had not been purified and strengthened, ho failed to see in their true import the im- oral practices of those around them and the ays of life to which they themselves had ap- arently been accustomed. The result was that aul had to rebuke a great deal of immorality entirely out of harmony with Christian con- ience and teaching. Then there were also the roblems which arose in connection with an dolatrous city—the questions regarding the ating of meat offered to idols, the need of hristian liberty in a situation in which there as a profound opportunity for the strong to rve and help the weak.

It is from Paul's visit to Corinth and from ll that he wrote later to these Corinthians at we derive a large part of our knowledge the conditions in the early church. Here in our lesson we have a fine picture of Paul's inaugural work in Corinth. We have an indication of how much Paul depended upon the few convinced and earnest disciples who gathered to the new faith. How many Aquilas and Priscillas in quiet life and influence may have helped the apostle in various communities in the strong and faithful building of the church! Paul's methods also are suggested here. Like Aquila and Priscilla he was a tent-maker, and he abode with them and worked with them. How close and intimate such pastoral contacts must have been! If the average minister could work daily alongside his people, what revelations he might have of them and they of him! Would both church members and ministers stand that test of daily contact as well as Aquila, Priscilla, and Paul evidently stood it? Here also in this lesson we find the clear evidence of Paul's turning to the Gentiles, a fact that meant so much for the spread of the Gospel to the whole of Europe. We have a portrayal of that powerful influence which has ever been in the Christian Church through the adherence of men in high positions who have been honorable and conscientious and who have dared much in the assertion of their discipleship. The conversion of Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, is duplicated again and again in the history of early independency in England. It was here also in Corinth that Paul found the word of encouragement and hope, "Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city." So he continued there a year and six months. What might it not mean for every minister if he could have such vision and such encouragement!

Death of Prof. John Work

Prof. John W. Work, for twenty-five years connected with Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., as teacher of Latin and leader of song, died suddenly on Labor Day as he was about to leave the Southern city for treatment in New York City for an ailment from which he had been suffering for the last few years. His faithful wife, who had been his companion in song, was stooping over him to bid him farewell on his journey as he sat in the train when he suddenly expired in her embrace.

There is something about the Negro melodies that cannot be set down in black and white, as singers of other races will testify. To preserve their genuine flavor they must be handed down from ear to ear. In doing this Prof. George L. White, the trainer of the original Fisk Jubilee Singers, unconsciously injected into these simple melodies a Saxon element. Professor Work's claim was that he ejected this element from the songs and restored the pure Negro tone.

A graduate of Fisk, he caught the spirit of the original singers, and carried forward the tradition of the music they gave the world. His was a tenor of marvelous purity and sweetness, as the multitudes who heard him in person and over the graphophone and radio will testify. But his work will not pass away with him, as he in collaboration with his brother Frederick, who survives him, published a volume entitled Negro-Folk Songs for Mixed Voices, the most authoritative book on this subject.

He was also an original composer as well as compiler, and wrote some beautiful things. Among these is his exquisite lullaby, probably having for its inspiration his own paternal experience with his son who is also studying music. But he will be best remembered by his Gold and Blue, dedicated to his Alma Mater, which is ever sung where Fisk men gather. Of the four stanzas I quote the first and last:

The warm, the genial, the setting sun
Lights up the hills with mellow hue,
Where Fisk, our Alma Mater, stands

Majestic, dear, old Gold and Blue.
To heaven, to country, and to thee,
Our hearts shall first and last be true,
We e'en shall die with loyalty
To heaven, to country, Gold and Blue.

To this sentiment he was true till death.

Brooklyn, N. Y. HENRY HUGH PROCTOR.

Forest-Sheltered House of God

"Were you trying to hide your church that you placed it in this secluded spot?" asked the motoring loiterer of the lady who welcomed her to the little stone structure a bit off a quiet road. A modest placard "Friends Meeting. You are Welcome," had justified the loiterer's entrance. "Well hardly that," was the smiling reply. "We considered building in the near-by village but we felt we wanted to worship in a quiet place. The hum of the world is so constantly in our ears that we need a still retreat away from the turmoil."

"Besides," she added naively, "those who wish to come can readily find us."

It was a tiny building, would not accommodate probaby more than a hundred worshipers but there was an air of subdued beauty and comfort that made for harmony. A fireplace with wood ready for the lighting suggested a home-like atmosphere not usually found in places of worship. The visitor, intent upon the unusualness of the scene, in these days when much is said of the decline of rural churches, inspected the basement and found there all the equipment needful for a community dinner. Evidently provision had been made for the physical as well as the spiritual man.

Meantime the worshipers assembled and there followed a period of silence; silence that one could feel. Through the open window came the sound of the lazy rippling of the brook near-by, the rustling of the leaves, the merry song of the birds. But none of these disturbed or detracted from the restfulness of the occasion, within the little chapel.

After a time a patriarch of four score or more reverently talked to God for us, of our need of him, of the responsibility of each individual in worship. He prayed for worshiping congregations everywhere of whatever faith.

Later he spoke of the various ways of revelation: through the Bible which has been given us, not to teach history or science, but simply how to be good; through science by which one who with open mind studies the various branches will inevitably be led to noble thoughts of God; of the sweet and precious impressions of the Spirit upon one's own inner life if he is willing to wait for them.

Then we had time to think these things through in our own minds and with a simple benediction the congregation was dismissed.

The loiterer passed out with the rest wondering in her heart if a stronger impulse to better living had come to the worshipers in church and cathedral in the midst of perfect architectural detail, where the noble tones of the organ, the trained choir, the eloquent sermon made the conventional Sunday morning service, than was given in this forest sheltered chapel by the side of the road.

THE LOITERER.

WITH THE CHILDREN

Two Indian Stories

By Frances Margaret Fox

How One Boy Fooled an Indian

"Please, Mother, let me go to play with the big boys outside the fort!"

It was little nine-year-old Daniel Dunham who asked this question, and it is no wonder his mother waited a minute before she said:

"Dannie, you may go if you will promise Mother that you won't let the Indians get you. Remember little sister!"

Dannie remembered. Only a few weeks before that, an Indian had caught his six-year-old sister when she was playing in their door-yard and might have run away with her.

The Dunhams were then living in a log house on their pioneer farm. Mrs. Dunham started after that Indian with the first thing she could get her hands on. It was a hoe. He dropped the child and she ran into the house. The Indian then chased Mrs. Dunham. She dashed inside the door, closed it in the Indian's face and shouted, "Bring me that gun!"

There was no one in the cabin but the little children and no one to bring her a gun. The Indian, though, thought the father must be in the house, so he departed swiftly.

When Mr. Dunham came home from his work in the fields, he said to his wife, "We must go and live in the fort with the neighbors!"

Next day they moved. This was in the long-ago time when white men first moved into Tennessee, and this log fort the settlers had built was six miles from the present city of Nashville. It was a sad time of Indian wars.

"I won't let the Indians get me," little Dannie promised his mother that morning.

Mrs. Dunham watched her little boy go through the fort gate and was glad to know that he would have a chance to run and play in the clearing. There was not much room inside the walls of the tiny fort for romping children. She felt that little Dannie was safe with the big boys because they understood the danger of going far from the fort.

Even so, those big boys were careless that lovely morning. They wandered so far from the fort that they were soon out of distance of gunshot. The Indians, watching the woods, waited until they knew that shots from the fort could not reach them, and then began to creep toward the boys. They were so sure they could catch the little fellows and carry them away to grow up with the Indians that they left their guns behind them.

Nearer and nearer crept those Indians until at last up they jumped to snatch their captives. When the boys saw the savages they screamed and ran.

The big boys had longer legs than little Dannie and he was soon left far behind. In the old story,—for this is one of the true stories of Tennessee,—in the old story we are told that little Dannie "ran with the speed of a frightened fawn."

They didn't talk about safety zones in those days, but the big boys were soon within what was really the safety zone around the fort.

A big Indian decided to snatch the little Daniel and run with him. It would be better to adopt a little white boy, anyway, because he would more quickly forget his own people and become in time like a brave Indian.

The Indian, of course, could run faster than Dannie, and at last he overtook the child and caught at his flannel hunting shirt.

It was then that little Dannie played a joke on an Indian. He threw both hands back suddenly, and slipped out of his hunting shirt that was made just like his father's.

Then Dannie ran like the wind, leaving the surprised Indian with a white boy's shirt to take home to his village. The Indian didn't dare go any nearer the fort because he was then within gunshot. He had to go home to his wigwam with a little empty hunting shirt without a live, squirming, screaming boy within it. This was a great disappointment.

Dannie didn't enjoy his race with an Indian when it happened, but he did enjoy telling about it ever afterwards. He knew even then that years and years later it would be a funny story to tell his grandchildren!

(All rights reserved)

Joke on an Indian of Long Ago

The joke really was on the big Indian, but the little pioneer girl whose name was Clarinda didn't feel that way about it the first time she ever saw an Indian face to face. On the morning this happened Clarinda would have told you that there was nothing to joke about in all the Michigan forest. Clarinda was then seven years old, and the "then" was one hundred years ago.

She had come with her father and mother, an uncle and an aunt, all the way from New York to live in the land of wild beasts and Indians. Her father told her that he would buy many acres of forest, cut down the trees, and in time have a beautiful farm instead of the dense woods.

After they reached Michigan, the little Clarinda's father and uncle took their families and all their belongings on board a boat on the Grand River. It was the kind called a pole-boat, because it was moved by poles like a raft. After the two men had poled their boat a long, long way up the river through the dark and gloomy woods, they found a deserted little old log cabin that had once belonged to a fur trader.

"We must call this cabin our home until we can go to Kalamazoo and buy our land," said little Clarinda's father. "Then we will build a double log cabin big enough for our two families to live in and have homes of our own in Michigan."

The two men made the old log cabin as comfortable as they could and provided food for their families to use while they were gone to buy their land. Then they kissed their families good-by and away they trotted on two Indian ponies along an Indian trail to the little village of Kalamazoo. The land office was in Kalamazoo. The men were gone two weeks. There were no white settlers' houses on the way, only Indian wigwams. The only road was an Indian trail. The travelers had to camp in the woods e night and build fires over which to cook deer-meat. These new settlers had a time on their journey. In Kalamazoo bought their land, then home they went their families.

Now it happened that little Clarinda afraid of Indians and wolves. Her mo and her auntie told her they would lock door of the cabin tight and lock the tiny dow so no harm would come to them.

The three went to bed early that first n in the cabin. Mother and Auntie kept promise about locking the door and win They said their prayers, cuddled down, went to sleep. They slept soundly all nig

Little Clarinda was the first to awake the morning. When she opened her she thought she was still dreaming. There the earth floor, rolled up in a blanket, wa huge Indian, fast asleep.

Clarinda turned her head to see if mother was awake. She was. So was auntie. They put their fingers on their to warn the little girl to keep still. Clar kept still. She didn't dare do anything Her mother and her auntie were scared, Clarinda cuddled closer to her mother wondered when the Indian would wake and kill them with his tomahawk. She coul see a tomahawk, but she was sure he had

How that Indian entered the cabin could not tell unless he came down thro the wide chimney! Anyway, there he While the three were watching him with t eyes as round as saucers, the Indian aw

As long as they lived the two women Clarinda never forgot how funny that In looked when he discovered that he was alone in the cabin. His mouth dropped o and the look of astonishment in his big bl eyes! He couldn't speak English and white folks couldn't speak Indian.

The Indian didn't know how the pale-fa happened to be in his cabin but there were, and they looked so frightened it enough to make even an Indian laugh. Indian didn't laugh, though. He looked solemn as an owl as he gazed at the p faces and their belongings in his cabin!

That Indian knew the proper thing to He dressed himself in his blanket, unbo the door and away he went swiftly, like kind, polite Indian that he was.

Perhaps he told the other Indians to k away from his cabin. Perhaps he told th he had visitors. Maybe he said that paleface squaws and a paleface papoose w his guests and that they must not be distur Anyway, not another Indian came near cabin while little Clarinda's father and u were away.

After Clarinda had been happily living the new double log cabin on her father's new wilderness farm a long, long time, laughed about the Indian who shared th cabin that night. After a long, long ti she decided that it really was a joke on h when he discovered a little white child gaz at him in the early dawn, when he thought was alone. She wondered if he sometir told little Indian children in their wigwa about that big joke on him!

(All rights reserved)

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

More About Evolution

VOLUTION AND REDEMPTION, by JOHN DNER (Doran. $1.60). Dr. Gardner, well- wn Congregational minister of Riverside, , has found the psychological moment for a k of this title. The volume presents a es of chapters delivered originally to Dr. dner's congregation. The book, therefore, the advantage of direct statement and pop- appeal. Dr. Gardner belongs to that group Christian leaders who may be said to com- wholesome conservatism of approach and ground with liberality of spirit and open- s of mind and soul. These sermons were pared without thought of publication and it their helpfulness that suggested to a promi- t editor who heard them their publication permanent form. Dr. Gardner's general title sub-headings strike straight into the heart the evolution controversy. The religious ker knows that the real matters of truth olved are not those relating to Biblical liter- ms of interpretation, but the deeper ques- s of the meaning of the facts and experi- es of life itself. The chapter headings are gestive: Evolution and Belief in God, Are Sinners?, What Is Salvation?, Do Men d It?, Is the Atonement a Fact?, Evolution Immortality, etc. These are exactly the ters upon which people want light, and Dr. dner has much help to offer.

HE WAYS OF LIFE, by RICHARD SWANN LL (Harper. $3.00). Dr. Lull is Professor Paleontology in Yale University and Di- tor of the Peabody Museum. In his preface makes direct reference to the present Fun- entalist-Evolutionist controversy and indi- es the purpose of his book, "to restate the of our evidences for the Evolution hypoth- and to make such an exposition of the ire subject as would enable the layman to ge for himself as to the reasonableness of ching this department of science." Few vices for the man who is competent to ren- it could be more important than this at present hour, and Dr. Lull has done well to his years of investigation and teaching, the wealth of material at his command in Peabody Museum, into a volume mostly free m technical language and comprehensible to average reader. Also he has been able to loit the evidence from his own special field paleontology more effectively than that evi- ce is usually presented where evolution is ussed mainly from the standpoint of biology. importance of Dr. Lull's volume will be dily recognized. It is a substantial book of rly four hundred pages with numerous illus- tions and an extensive index.

ooks by James Alex. Robertson

HE HIDDEN ROMANCE OF THE NEW TES- MENT, by JAMES ALEX. ROBERTSON (Doran. 00).

HE SPIRITUAL PILGRIMAGE OF JESUS, by MES ALEX. ROBERTSON (Doran. $2.00).

ONCERNING THE SOUL, by JAMES ALEX. BERTSON (Doran. $2.00).

Dr. Robertson is professor of New Testament nguage, Literature, and Theology in the ited Free Church College, Aberdeen. In the t two of these volumes Professor Robertson within his own distinctive sphere and he brings to bear upon the New Testament story the qualities of scholarship and of spiritual penetration which he so admirably combines. His aim in The Hidden Romance of the New Testament is to relate the New Testament more nearly to the life of our day by giving an intimate picture of "some of the people whose lives and deeds give the documents body and form." He deals in successive chapters with The Man of Arimathaea, The House of the Upper Room, The First Witness for Christian Liberty, The House of Alphai, and various other themes. In The Spiritual Pilgrimage of Jesus (the Bruce Lectures for 1917) Professor Robertson builds his book around its opening assertion that, "the greatest spiritual fact that has ever emerged in the long story of the human race is Jesus of Nazareth's consciousness of God."

Concerning the Soul is a volume of sermons, or addresses, suggesting the main arguments regarding the Christian conception of the soul and its destiny. The chapters deal with such themes as, Is There a Soul?, Whence Comes the Soul?, Whither Goes the Soul?, Do the Souls of the Dead Ever Return?, etc. The exposition is popular in form and language, and the discussions will be found helpful, though one has a feeling that in places the author hardly plumbs the depths of the doubts and difficulties with which many earnest people are confronted.

General Books

THE WINDOWS OF WESTMINSTER, by A GENTLEMAN WITH A DUSTER (Putnam. $2.50). The "Gentleman with a Duster" has made a name for himself in contemporary history. One is not always sure that he writes with discretion and fairness—in fact, in his former volumes, The Mirrors of Downing Street and Painted Windows, he showed the indiscretion and unfairness of saying much concerning public men whom he discussed that was really in the nature of an attack, and that should never have been said under cover of anonymity. However, he has been a gossipy and entertaining writer, and these qualities are in the present volume in which he writes of present-day Conservative leaders in Great Britain. Ten of these, including the present Premier of Great Britain, are discussed and a portrait of each is added. The "Gentleman with a Duster," in discussing Conservatism, writes as a partisan. Socialism has thrown him into a sort of panicky condition, which would seem about as untypical of a good, substantial Englishman as the business of saying nasty things anonymously. At any rate he announces his adherence to Conservatism, though he seems to be more a Liberal with cold feet. It would be a great mistake, however, not to regard this book as important. It throws much light upon present conditions and movements in the social and political life of Great Britain, but the reader would be wise to hold his judgment in reserve upon some matters that are disposed of dogmatically.

FROM COLLEGE GATES, by CAROLINE HAZARD (Houghton Mifflin. $2.00). This collection of thirty-two addresses, dedicated to the 2,161 graduates of Wellesley College, from 1900 to 1911, and delivered for the most part during Miss Hazard's presidency, should find a wide reading constituency. To those who followed Miss Hazard's notable career at Wellesley the addresses will need no commendation, but the volume is of far wider interest than merely to the graduates and friends of Wellesley. The addresses are divided into three groups: Part I, Outside the Gates, delivered on various occasions and in various places; Part II, Through the Gates, three addresses on Alice Freeman Palmer; and Part III, Within the Gates, delivered at Wellesley during Miss Hazard's administration. The addresses in which Miss Hazard discusses the problems and achievements in the field of education of women will be found particularly noteworthy. Among these are addresses on Mary Lyon and the Intellectual Training of Women, Ideals in the Education of Women, College Women and the Church, A Woman's Influence (at the 25th anniversary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society), Some Dangers of Student Life, etc. But every address in the volume is notable.

FIGURES IN MODERN LITERATURE, by J. B. PRIESTLEY (Dodd, Mead. $2.50). In this volume one of the most brilliant of younger English literary men writes entertainingly of nine of his literary contemporaries. He has avoided the Shaw-Wells-Galsworthy-Chesterton group to write of others, some well known, others less known, not all of first importance, but all notable and interesting figures. Messrs. Arnold Bennett, De La Mare, Maurice Hewlett, A. E. Housman, W. W. Jacobs, Robert Lynd, George Saintsbury, George Sontyana, and J. C. Squire constitute the themes of the respective chapters. The studies are characterized by sympathetic interpretation and at the same time by much critical insight and candor. Mr. Priestley's essay on any of the writers of whom he treats will be found a valuable introduction to that particular author's books. The present reviewer, an enthusiastic lover of W. W. Jacobs, has found Mr. Priestley's discussion of that brilliant humorist all that the most ardent admirer could desire. Other chapters, though not so favorable in their comment, are equally penetrating in their insight.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT, edited by JOHN FARRAR (Doran. $2.50). Anonymous essays dealing respectively with thirty conspicuous figures in contemporary American literature. The anonymity hides a score or more of famous American critics who have written the essays. Two of the sketches are said to have been written by the subjects themselves—others, with a touch of humor and bitterness, evidently were not. William Gropper has added page illustrations in portrait caricature.

LEAST KNOWN AMERICA, by A. EUGENE BARTLETT (Revell. $2.50). The author is pastor of the First Congregational Church, Pontiac, Mich. In this volume he has given an account of journeyings through the Southwest, the Northeast, and other less known sections of this continent. In addition to being a well-written and finely illustrated description of the sections visited it has the interest of a personal record. Dr. Bartlett promises all who journey with him through these pages new sights and experiences with sunshine and fair skies.

Any book mentioned in these columns may be obtained through the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, Boston or Chicago.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

From East to West

MAINE

Leaves Orono After Six-Year Pastorate

Eastern Maine has once more contributed to the welfare of Connecticut churches in the transfer of Rev. Clinton W. Wilson from the United Parish Church of Orono to the church at Woodbury, Ct.

For six years Mr. Wilson has served faithfully not only the interests of the university town on the Penobscot but those of Congregationalism in the state at large. As counselor and co-worker, he has been highly valued by his fellow pastors of all the region. A newly federated church presents its peculiar problems; in this case Congregationalists and Universalists had united shortly before Mr. Wilson's coming. Under his leadership the denominational issue was never unpleasantly above the horizon. The people worked together in harmony.

The college-town church usually faces even more serious difficulties in the keeping of the rightful balance between community needs and those of a particular class. Here, too, Mr. Wilson was successful as preacher and pastor and friend. An intellectual and forceful presentation of the gospel and a constant and kindly interest in the student's peculiar problems drew to him and the church a strong section of the faculty and student-body.

During Mr. Wilson's pastorate over 100 members have been received and large audiences have been a notable feature of the work of the church.

The Penobscot Association adopted resolutions in appreciation of Mr. Wilson's work, from which the following extract is taken.

In a parish where townspeople and the faculty and students of the university must combine their church life, Mr. Wilson has done a piece of devoted and constructive work. His preaching and his personal character will live in the character of the many young men and women, whom he drew under the influence of the church, and to whom he ministered in love.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

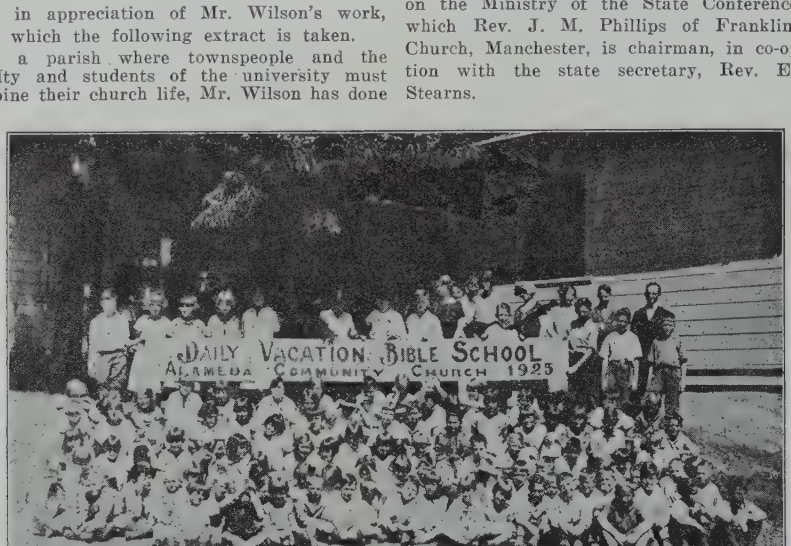
Point Geneva Institute

The fifth annual institute and retreat for Congregational pastors of New Hampshire was held at Point Geneva, Lake Winnepesaukee, Sept. 1 to 4. The program was planned especially for men in the rural field. The same program of lectures, conferences, and recreation periods as in former years was followed. There was a good number present and a fine spirit of fellowship developed.

The leaders were Rev. Raymond C. Brooks, of Pomona College, Claremont, Cal., whose subject was "A Minister's Use of the Bible; Dr. Ambrose W. Vernon, of Dartmouth College, Hanover, formerly of Harvard Church, Brookline, Mass., who took for his topic, "The Minister's Use of Biography"; and Dr. Malcolm Dana, director of rural work for the Congregational churches of the country, who conducted a clinic on rural problems.

All the addresses were thought-provoking and called forth interesting discussions. Dr. Dana's plans for improving rural church conditions were based on several months' study of actual conditions, carried on under the direction of the New Hampshire Congregational Conference and Home Missionary Society, and measures are being taken to put the recommendations into effect in several sections of the state. An account of this experiment will be reserved for a later time.

The program was arranged by the Committee on the Ministry of the State Conference, of which Rev. J. M. Phillips of Franklin St. Church, Manchester, is chairman, in co-operation with the state secretary, Rev. E. R. Stearns.



DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL, ALAMEDA COMMUNITY CHURCH, PORTLAND, OREGON

Conducted for three weeks in July, with an enrollment of 168. Many religious denominations were represented. After the first four days, the attendance was never less than 100. There were classes each day from 9.30 to 11.30, giving one hour to religious education and one hour to manual training and handwork. The children were so enthusiastic and happy that they would have liked to attend an afternoon session as well. Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Gordon, of Council, Ida., assisted the pastor, Rev. H. W. Johnson, helping in a high degree to make the school a success.

Rev. F. E. Brooks Goes to Farmington

The church at Farmington is rejoici the coming of their new pastor, Rev. Brooks of Penfield, N. J. He began hi istry the second Sunday of September. vious pastorates have been at Fairhave Fall River, Mass. Farmington has been out a pastor for some months since the nation of Rev. G. W. Clark.

VERMONT

Rev. Theodore Dixon Ordained at Win

The Old South Church of Windsor, last year restored and made its buildin of the most beautiful in New Englan dained and recognized its new minister, Theodore T. Dixon, on Sept. 17. Mr. was graduated from Wheaton College and ford Seminary. Mrs. Dixon was also a ate of Wheaton and a student at Ha They were married in August, and instal a new parsonage purchased for them Windsor Church and made immediately able with numerous gifts from the org tions of the church. At the ordination Mr. Dixon's father and mother, Mr. and Harry G. Dixon from Trinity Church, set, Mass., and Dr. F. W. Merrick, of a life-long friend of the family.

This church, which has been without ister for over a year, has entered upon era with enthusiasm. Its organization prosperous, its ministry of music is mo tractive, its audiences increasing in nu its Sunday school enlarging and its wor tived by a healthful loyalty. Dr. Potter preached the ordination sermon, voice spirit of the occasion in hearty congratul to both minister and church.

Arrange Sunday Evening Talks at Ch

Speaking from his own pulpit at the o service, after the church had been clos two months for repairs and redecoration O. F. Rockwood of the Chelsea Churc nounced recently that the Sunday E Club would feature a series of address prominent Vermonters.

Among those who have either definite cepted or with whom negotiations are carried on, are: Congressman Ernest W son; Prof. Daniel Bernard Carroll, Po Science Department, University of Ver Edward H. Jones, State Commissioner of culture; Edward Arthur Rockwood, write lecturer; Stanley C. Wilson, chairman house appropriation committee, Vermont lature; Clarence H. Dempsey, State Co sioner of Education; K. R. B. Flint, direc the bureau of municipal affairs of N University; Robert M. Ross, State Co sioner of Forestry; Dr. Paul Moody, pre of Middlebury College; Frank L. Fish, ch the superior judges, and Senator Port Dale.

In his announcement Mr. Rockwood the purpose of these Sunday evening le as educational. It is his desire, throug medium, to bring to the citizens of Chels thoritative information upon those socia litical, educational, and economic proble the state and nation which are of vital tance to all Vermonters.

A unanimous vote of the entire congre ast in favor of the minister's motion that d of thanks be sent to the Methodist h for their kindness in welcoming to their es all members of the Congregational h during the period of repairs. Over) has been spent in repairing, redecorating, epainting Mr. Rockwood's church. The n also included a cordial invitation to all ers of the Methodist Church to attend special Sunday evening addresses. Simivitations were sent to churches of neigh- villages in Orange County.

MASSACHUSETTS

Resumes Work at First, Braintree

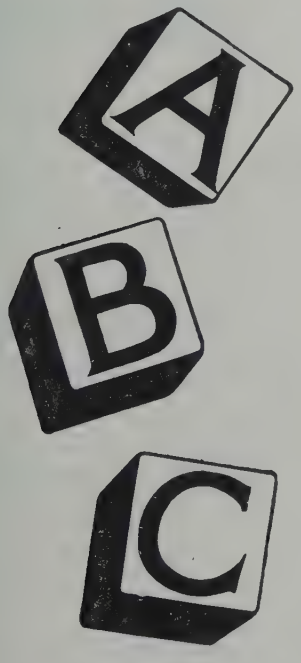
After eight months' absence through illness, Rev. Harry Grimes returned to his Braintree pulpit Sept. 1. His loyal people welcomed him in large numbers. During the year Mr. Grimes' program has been carefully and successfully carried on. Prof. Elmer E. Leslie of Boston University has filled the pulpit with great acceptance and Mrs. Josephine E. Gale has been invaluable as parish and church-school worker. The church and the Pilgrim Association rejoice in the continuance of a happy pastoral relation in this growing suburb.

Greet Pastor and His Bride

On Aug. 8, Rev. K. S. Learey, pastor of Hillcrest Church, Melrose, was married in Findlay, O., to Miss F. Vivian Perkins, a talented musician and teacher of music in the public schools. After a honeymoon in Pennsylvania and Ohio they drove across country to Melrose, camping by the way. They reached Melrose at midnight, Sept. 7. The enthusiastic young minis-

New England's Neighborhood Toll Service

Simple as



If you don't know the number ask your local information operator

Nowadays in New England, calling a distant telephone is as simple as calling a telephone across the street.

"Neighborhood Toll Service," in every detail, follows the familiar routine of a local call.

Signal your own operator.
Give her the number you want.
Hold the line for a completed connection or a report.

This is the fastest, simplest form of toll service known. Yet along both the highways and byways of speech, the miles must still be dealt with by men and women, and machines. You must not expect quite the speed of local calls.

With a few exceptions, we do not undertake at present to give this service to points beyond our own territory.

We do give it between more than a million telephones in five states. It is thoroughly practical, else it would not be offered.

New England Telephone and Telegraph Company

THE MASTER LIFE
The Story of Jesus for Today
W. P. LIVINGSTONE.

A life of Christ unsurpassed in the realism and dramatic power of its vivid story of Jesus' contacts with friends, inquirers and enemies. It makes the Master live again. With Map. Net, $2.50

Paul of Tarsus
T. R. GLOVER, M.A., D.D., LL.D.

An essential volume for all who wish to have the best possible understanding of the great Apostle to the Gentiles. Net, $2.00

The Mother of Jesus: Her Problems and Her Glory
REV. PROF. A. T. ROBERTSON, D.D., LL.D., Litt.D.

A remarkable study of the mother of Jesus, original in its thinking, and full of intense human interest. Net, $1.00

As At The First
REV. JOHN A. HUTTON, D.D.

An intensely realistic portrayal of some of the principal figures in the early Church, and of their conception of loyalty to Christ. Net, $1.25

Finding God in Books
REV. WILLIAM L. STIDGER, D.D.

This new series of "dramatic book sermons" will be gladly welcomed by the great number of ministers who profited by "There Are Sermons in Books." Net, $1.75

Charles M. Sheldon: His Life Story

The delightfully intimate and inspiring autobiography of the author of "In His Steps." Illustrated. Net, $2.50

How To Enjoy the Bible
ANTHONY C. DEANE, M.A., Hon. Canon of Worcester Cathedral.

The scholarly author reveals the undying charm of the Authorized Version, and shows how to read it for utmost enjoyment and inspiration. Net, $1.25

Sermons on Old Testament Characters
C. G. CHAPPELL, D.D.

Illuminating studies of Old Testament men and women by the well-known author of "Sermons on Biblical Characters." Net, $1.60

The Child in the Temple
MARION GERARD GOSSELINK.

Fifty-two exceptionally fine talks to children, covering the entire year, and emphasizing the special days. Net, $1.50

DORAN BOOKS At Your Religious Book Store
GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY
244 Madison Avenue New York

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
TEACHERS' BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING

Containing References, a Concordance and the most authoritative Aids to Bible Study. Printed in Black Face Type. Beautiful Bindings.

Send for Illustrated Catalog

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
391 WINSTON BUILDING PHILADELPHIA

MOTHERS Your Growing Boy or Girl needs the truth about self found in MABEL A. McKEE'S booklet,
"THE HEART OF A ROSE" which will be mailed direct to them for 50 cents postpaid
Solves the problem how to tell it—naturally, helpfully, truly.
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Ave., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

ter took his bride at once to the church, turned on all the lights and startled the community with a church lighted up at midnight. The next morning the young couple found muffins, eggs, butter, and peaches on the verandah of the parsonage, placed there by their thoughtful congregation.

On Thursday, Sept. 10, the church gave Mr. and Mrs. Learey a hearty welcome and reception. F. P. Shumway presented them with $75 in gold. The women gave Mrs. Learey a fine luncheon set, and later the Sunday school followed with a beautiful lamp. Rev. J. O. Paisley and Rev. R. H. Bennett welcomed Mr. Learey and his wife in behalf of the churches of the city. Rev. J. J. Walker brought the felicitations of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society and Rev. T. C. Richards brought the best wishes from Mystic Church, Medford, where Mr. Learey served notably for two years and a half as pastor's assistant. New families are moving into the neighborhood, the attendance at the church services is growing, and everything points to a successful and fruitful pastorate.

An Unusual Remembrance

East Church, Milton, has experienced a remarkable housing development. During most of its history it has been the center of a neighborhood. Within a few years the community has become a thriving residential suburb of Boston. The movement in which the church has shared took on unusual features a short time after the beginning of the present pastorate by Rev. Warren P. Landers. Since March, 1923, one hundred persons have united with its fellowship, fifty-five by letter. Many heads of families have come, often bringing little children for baptism. On Sunday, Sept. 20, Home-Church Day marked these facts. Personal invitations were sent to all the five score, who represented 12 denominations and 13 different states and countries. Mr. Landers preached upon "The Second Hundred," received six into membership, and baptized five children. A large attendance participated in Holy Communion. At the church school there was special recognition in tributes and gift of the 12 faithful years' service of James L. Maclary, retiring superintendent.

Leaves Royalston for Vermont Pastorate

Rev. Clarence Pike resigned the pastorate of Royalston on Aug. 23 to accept a call to Coventry, Vt., to begin Oct. 1.

Mr. Pike's ministry at Royalston began in July, 1915. The town and church celebrated their 150th anniversary the month following with a large attendance and many distinguished speakers. The pastor has been active in all the departments of church work. In particular he has been diligent in preaching and in pastoral calling, looking upon them as the two oars of the boat, both indispensable to its progress.

Since November, 1919, he has also been pastor of the Baptist Church at West Royalston, four miles distant, preaching there Sunday afternoons after his morning service and Sunday school, thus building up the friendly relations between the two churches and sections. He has worked with the young people in their different organizations, the Boy Scouts, the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor Society. Many of them have united with the church.

The church property has been kept in good repair, the parsonage having been recently painted. The church, with its fine steeple, is conspicuous for miles around.

Pastor and church have done their part for the various missionary, public, and benevolent objects which appeal to the churches for assistance and support.

Ordain Pastor and Honor Dr. Emrich

An occasion of double interest brou gether a large number of representati friends of the North and South B churches at the little church of Sou liamstown, Sept. 16.

The primary purpose was to ordai Horace V. Blackford, who for nearly has been carrying on a successful work double missionary field of South Willia and New Ashford. Dr. F. E. Emrich p the sermon.

The second feature of the occasion recognition of the work of Dr. Emrich 50th anniversary of ordination occurred date. Dr. Emrich, who has now mea recovered in health, is spending three in Richmond. During this time, in c

Missionary Education To offer

—absolutely first class travel and hotel accommoda
—every opportunity for sightseeing
—unusual contacts with the life of the countries
—a view of missionary work at first hand
—a maximum of enjoyment for a minimum of expe

Full program includes
Mexico—starting October 12th, duration three w
Around South America—sailing November 7th ration three months
Around the World to Egypt and Palestine— ing December 12th, duration four and a half m

For information, address

MISSIONARY EDUCATION MOVEM
John Cobb Worley, Travel Secretary
150 Fifth Ave., New York 517 Western Mutual Life Bldg., La

NO NEED TO WORR

over church finances. Use the plan h dreds of churches are using with great cess. Money easily raised by selling
CHRISTIAN SERVIC CALENDAR
for 1926. Thirteen sacred pictures in beautiful offset ors. Scripture verse for e day in the year. So attract to see is to buy. No limit sales. Terms to churches liberal. Any active society readily sell four to five h dred. Write to-day for spe circular fully explaining h
The Standard Publishing Compa Dept. 42 8th & Cutter Sts., Cincinna

PLEASANT WORK-LARGE PROF

21 DIVISIONS OF CONTEN
in each of which are beautiful new Su School Songs, successful copyright other publishers, the outstanding h of the church bearing on each sub These are in MAGNIFICAT.

Mr. Superintendent

Buy "Magnificat" for your Sunday School and "musical" troubles are at an end. The " Idea," found only in "Magnificat," the "Orde Worship," complete with music, the 21 departme the orchestration (11 instruments), and the unequ collection of Songs, Hymns, and Special Selecti provide a storehouse of treasures. Send for a re able copy and examine it. $30.00, $35.00, $ $45.00, according to binding.

HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Philadel

REV. JOHN A. HUTTON, D
Successor to Dr. Jowett as Pastor of Westminster Chapel, London, Englan will write articles for The Expositor this year. He author of "That The Ministry Be Not Blamed," " They Crucified Him," and other books.

Send your subscription to The Expositor now so yo read his first article in the October issue.

The Expositor, 710 Caxton Building, Cleveland, Oh
Subscription 1 year $3.00 4 Mos. $1.00

Offering Envelop
For all purposes. Prompt Ser
Ask For Prices

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Bosto 156 5th Ave. New Y 19 S. La Salle St. Ch

Rev. W. M. Crane, the newly appointed ty missionary, he has been making an apostour among all the home missionary ches of the Berkshires. Following the er hour on this anniversary occasion, a number of felicitous speeches were given hose who had been long associated with expressing their great appreciation of his pathetic interest in their work and a deep for him as their big older brother in the stry.

ging News from the Mission Fields

ie associations of the state have united the State Missionary Committee in a coative effort to bring an intimate personal h from our various mission fields to repntative gatherings. The speakers who will ess the meetings are: Dr. J. L. Barton, Dr.
. Patton, Dr. E. W. Riggs, Dr. G. L. Cady, Malcolm Dana, Dr. Hugh Gordon Ross, ittsfield, Dr. S. H. Woodrow, of Newton lands, Mrs. Franklin Warner, president of Woman's Board of Missions, and Mrs.
ry Francis Smith, president of the Massa-etts Woman's Home Missionary Union.
ie meetings will be held as follows: The pshire and Hampshire East Associations hold a joint meeting at Southampton on
6. The Worcester Central Association meet at Plymouth Church, Worcester, on 6.

n Oct. 7 the Berkshire North Association meet at Pittsfield, the Worcester North at lner, and the Middlesex Union at Pepperell.
he Middlesex South Association will meet
Wellesley on Oct. 8, and on the same day
Mendon Association will meet at Franklin, the Franklin Association will meet at burne.

n Oct. 9 the Old Colony Association meets South Dartmouth, the Hampden Association
Chicopee Falls, and the Brookfield Associaat West Brookfield.

n Oct. 13 the Woburn Association meets at st Medford, the Andover Association at huen, and the Suffolk West Association the Central Church in Boston.

he Suffolk North Association is planning to a big meeting with First Church, Cam-ge, on Oct. 14. On that same day the Suf-South Association meets in Hyde Park and Pilgrim Association with the Church of the rimage, Plymouth.

n Oct. 15 the Barnstable Association meets Harwichport, the Essex North Association ts with the Center Church, Haverhill, and Essex South Association with Maple St. rch, Danvers.

CONNECTICUT

erous Gift for Huntington Parsonage

he parsonage at Huntington, a commodious ding of colonial architecture, very old but modern improvements, burned soon after night, Friday night, Aug. 28. The origin he fire is unknown although certain inci-s point to one or two probable explana-
s. Rev. W. B. Denny, the pastor for the two years while studying at Yale, had just gned. His household goods, valuable man-ipts, and most of his library were packed ready for shipment to Boston, where he secured an apartment and moved his family.
loss of all these is a severe one. The par-ge could not be replaced for $10,000 and insured for only $3,000. Nevertheless the ch faces the situation bravely and at once red a suitable residence for the minister may come to serve until the new parsonage uilt.

wo weeks after the fire the church was dened with the offer from Mr. F. A. Russ

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

Recent studies in the fatigue of metals have proved that even steel feels the same need of periodic rest which underlies the fourth commandment.

of $10,000 with which to build a new parsonage. Mr. Russ made the stipulation that his daughter-in-law, Mrs. John A. Russ, chairman of the finance committee, shall direct the expenditure of the money. This may well be the beginning of a new era for this historic church which finds itself facing the need of a settled pastor, in place of a student pastor, to meet and know the new people of the parish.

Pays off Mortgage on Parsonage

For seven years Liberty Hill has been working to pay off the mortgage on the parsonage, a fine old colonial house bought from a retiring owner. It has meant much for this small church to raise the $2,000 required and they secured most of it by suppers, fairs, and sales in which patch work quilts made by the church women figured considerably. The burning of the mortgage was celebrated with a chicken pie dinner at midday, speeches by the pastor and the chairman of the board of trustees, and the reading of a poem by Miss Mary E. Fuller. This is one of the small village churches which is holding its own remarkably and making gains in spite of the inevitable removals.

Anniversary of Swedish Church, Stamford

The Swedish Church, Stamford, celebrated its 20th anniversary Aug. 29-31 and Sept. 1, with a series of programs shared in by the other five Swedish Congregational Churches of Fairfield County. The anniversary address was given by Rev. G. A. Suber, a former pastor, now of Montclair, N. J. The fellowship among the Swedish churches is strong and they cling and new line of SACRED WALL MOTTOS

Messenger's Scripture TEXT CALENDAR

Make Money for Your Church

Any live organization in your Church can quickly and easily raise from $50 to $500 selling Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars and Sacred Wall Mottos. Churches the country over have for years been writing pledges and raising funds for various uses by selling the beautiful Text Calendars. Now we have added an entirely new line of 29 handsome Art Velvet Sacred Wall Mottos which readily sell in virtually every Christian Home.

Plans Endorsed By Ministers

Ministers, church societies and classes everywhere endorse and praise our successful plans as dignified methods of raising money for the Church.

Write your own publishing house today for plans and prices on Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars and Sacred Wall Mottos.

MESSENGER PUBLISHING CO.
5932-44 Wentworth Ave. Chicago, Illinois

Bibles Mass. Bible Society
41 Bromfield St., Boston

An Autobiography of Absorbing Interest

My Education and Religion

By George A. Gordon, D.D.

Few ministers now living have had careers of such picturesque and varied interest or pastorates of such length as Dr. Gordon of the Old South Church, Boston.

This somewhat informal autobiography tells the story of his early life in Scotland, his emigration to this country and his experiences as safe builder, stone mason, painter, theological student, and preacher. It is the inspiring account of an upward struggle that is as stirring to read as a novel and that presents a vivid and moving picture of Dr. Gordon's life, full of humor, of wisdom, and of the rich and vital personality of the writer.

Illustrated, $4.00. At all bookstores.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY

together as churches and groups of churches, having various kinds of group meetings every year.

NEW YORK

Young People's Conferences

This year New York State held the fifth "up state" conference for young people and the second for the "Metropolitan district." One hundred and eighty-six students and a staff of 33 met at Cook Academy, Montour Falls, June 26-July 5. The spirit and work of the conference was fully up to the standards of the previous four years at Wells College and Cook, even though the quarters limited the attendance to 40 less than at Wells. Six of the leaders were present for their fifth consecutive year. Bible, World Service, and Methods were, as usual, the three study subjects, the settled policy being to concentrate on these and omit all elective subjects from study or lecture courses. Rev. Charles Thorp of Holyoke, Mass., led the chapel services with a most suggestive course on John Mark. Unfortunately for all concerned he was unable to complete the course, being called away in the middle of the week for a funeral service. Rev. W. H. Rollins and Rev. A. E. Randell stepped in to fill the gap in excellent manner. Rev. Ivar Hellstrom, as in previous years, directed the Bible study courses, and Miss Mary Jenness those on missions, and Dr. G. L. Cady the one on Congregational history and method (world service). It is exceedingly interesting to note each year that the services leaving the deepest impression on all are the outdoor sunset meetings and the closing Communion service, in which the young people themselves share in administering the service. Rev. C. S. Osgood, of Oswego, was registrar and Rev. H. J. Condit of Ithaca dean.

OHIO

Tallmadge Observes Centennial

The second week of September Tallmadge celebrated the centennial of the dedication, Sept. 8, 1825, of her typical New England church building. A sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Morton. At the Communion and re-dedication services two former pastors, Rev. W. B. Marsh, and Dr. A. E. Thomson, President of Lincoln Ridge Institute, Ky., and two former Tallmadge men, Rev. Calvin Treat of Phoenix, Ariz., and Rev. Homer Carter of Madison, Wis., assisted the minister.

A scholarly address by Prof. E. I. Bosworth of Oberlin, with special choir music, was the evening program. Renovation of the church, the oldest in Ohio still in use, with new colonial windows and shutters, at an expense of $2,300, adds to its beauty.

As part of the celebration a pilgrimage was made two miles south to the site of Rev. David Bacon's cabin in which the church was organized in 1809, a memorial stone having been placed there in 1880. It is now within a park in the suburbs of Akron. A pageant, "Faith of Our Fathers," by Miss Eliza Alling, a member, pictured the history of the church. This was followed by an old fashioned choir concert and historical papers in the evening. Other features of the services were an historical address, "From Sinai to Mt. Zion," by Rev. William Blackmore Marsh, and an organ recital by Mrs. Kate Ashman Hibbard of Akron, with reminiscent addresses by visiting pastors.

MINNESOTA

The Fall Program

The Fall Campaign is being carried on in connection with the eight association meetings coming between Sept. 22 and Oct. 15. Dr. P. T. Watson of China and Principal F. B. Riggs of Santee, Neb., are furnished by the Commission on Missions to represent the Foreign and Homeland Societies and Rev. Erick Bergsman, the Rainy River District Missionary, is representing the State Conference. Mrs. Florence B. Lindstrom is representing the women's organizations, while Rev. E. S. Shaw is the general manager and leader in the discussion of stewardship. Beginning with Sunday, Sept. 20, these speakers are not only attending the association meetings, but are speaking at different churches on Sundays and to groups gathered on week days not filled with association m ings. This is followed up by literature personal work of the organization centerin the associations under the leadership of financial secretary and his co-operating c mittee. A fourfold goal has been set up: fi paying the debt; increase the regular ap tionment receipts; perfect the every mem canvass; secure a wider acceptance of the p ciples and practice of stewardship.

NEBRASKA

Student Pastor at State University

Rev. F. W. Leavitt is the newly appoi Congregational student pastor at the Uni sity of Nebraska. succeeds Rev. W. Riley, now pasto the Federated Chu Columbus, after a terim of more tha year, during w time the work carried on by stu workers.

Rev. F. W. Leavitt

Mr. Leavitt i native of Nebr and spent his hood in Ashland Norfolk, where he ceived his public school education. He is a gr ate of Franklin Academy and Doane Col both Nebraska institutions, also of And Seminary. In addition he has done post-gr ate work at the University of Nebraska an Harvard. Mrs. Leavitt is also a graduat Franklin Academy and Doane College and are descendants of honored Congregati ministers of the state.

Mr. Leavitt's experience includes the cipalship of Franklin Academy, two or pastorates in Nebraska, the last one bein Plymouth Church, Omaha; the pastorat Fountain Park Church, St. Louis, and nings, La. His work has been characterize painstaking efficiency and faithful devoti

Mr. Leavitt began his work Aug. 20 and already thought and worked himself well his task. He is jointly supported by the braska State Conference and the Cong tional Education Society.

MISSOURI

St. Louis Young Man to Enter Ministry

On Sunday, Sept. 6, a farewell service held for Mr. Harold Kaufman at Reber Church, St. Louis, of which Rev. W Bentley is the pastor. Mr. Kaufman left following day to enter Kidder Institute to pare for the ministry.

Mr. Kaufman is 19 years old and has studying along theological lines for five m under the direction of Mr. Bentley, who an instruction class on the Bible and t ogy which meets Tuesday evenings at The next text book to be taken up is Bi Antiquities by Bissell. Mr. Bentley ha ready assisted 13 young men to enter the pel ministry.

WASHINGTON

Rev. N. F. Cole at Kennewick

Rev. N. F. Cole has accepted a ca Kennewick, and began work Sept. 1 aft trial pastorate of four months at the begi of the year. This church has been paste between two and three years, but has been ducted by committees of laymen. Mr. former parish at Ingle Chapel, Ore., ten him and his wife a farewell reception o eve of their removal to Kennewick. This ch for financial reasons is being conducted by men who are carrying forward the Su

Notice

Meetings of the National Council

Conventioners are urged to make reservations on our personally conducted 12 day tour to Washington.

De Luxe Motor Coaches will leave Boston October 19th returning on October 30th.

Sightseeing trips in Philadelphia and New York included
6 full days in Washington

All places of national interest will be visited, including special trip to Mt. Vernon and the Arlington Cemetery.

Return trip over newly completed Storm King Highway, Bear Mountain Bridge, Hudson River, Berkshires and Mohawk Trail.

$94.50 covers everything;
Hotels, meals, transportation, and all side trips.

The ideal and most economical way to attend the Convention.

GREEN'S TOURS
LYNN, MASS.
Tel. Lynn 4249 2280

Our First Mortgage
REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS
net the investor 7% semi-annual interest, guaranteed as to principal and interest, secured by first mortgages on improved real estate in Central Florida and the West Coast, by one of the oldest and most substantial corporations with 14 years' successful experience in the Florida mortgage field. Write for particulars and booklet.
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hospital
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number 1,650
Educational requirement for three-year course, high school diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if courses have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, and uniforms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

l with signal success, especially in the department, which has two large classes, running as high as 46 in attendance.

OREGON

mes Minister of Portland Church

v. James N. Pendleton began work with rose Church, Portland, June 1. An In-diate Christian Endeavor was organized in June, with 12 members. A two weeks' vacation Bible school was conducted this ner, with an enrollment of 30. In July, a hurch picnic was held, and in August a s was put on by the Woman's Association.

HAWAII

ake Special Study at Yale

v. H. P. Judd, one of the secretaries of the iian Board of Missions, sailed on Aug. 29 n extended trip on the American mainland. nd Mrs. Judd, and their two boys, David

Rev. Henry P. Judd

t and Frank, will go to Mrs. Judd's home heville, N. C., where they will spend the nonths. Their address will be 76 Mitchell West Asheville. Mr. Judd will enter Divinity School for the second semester, which he will return to Hawaii. During sence, Rev. J. P. Erdman will act as cor-ding secretary of the board.

esentatives at National Council

egates to the National Council from ii will be Rev. Henry P. Judd, corre-ing secretary of the Hawaiian Board of ons; Hon. Stephen L. Desha, district mag-e, Hilo; Rev. E. Lyman Hood, Ph. D., a ssor in the Honolulu Theological Semi-and Rev. James Akimo, pastor of the h at Kahuku.

pts Call to Mainland

r. Tse Kei Yuen has resigned his pas-of the Second Chinese Congregational h in Honolulu and sailed for San Fran-on Sept. 16. He has accepted the call come pastor of the Chinese Presbyterian h there.

gelism Committee Appointed

Association for the Island of Hawaii t Laupahoehoe, Aug. 15-19. Rev. S. L. was moderator at this meeting. In ad-to regular routine business, a new church dedicated by the association. Song con-were held and a committee on evangelism to the Island was appointed, consisting of Hon. S. L. Desha, Jr., Mr. J. C. Kamakaiwi, Rev. H. N. Smith, Rev. W. K. Kalaiwaa, Rev. T. C. Williams, Rev. J. K. Woodward, Rev. K. Higuchi, Rev. Jose Alba, Rev. Moses Moku, Rev. A. H. Gates, and Mr. Thomas N. Haas.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

Brown, R. S., First, Atlanta, Ga., to Mt. Zion, Cleveland, O. Began Oct. 1.

Coombs, J. R., formerly assistant, First, Meriden, Ct., to assistant pastorate, Second, Waterbury. At work.

Elder, J. E., to Cope, Col. At work.

Gay, A. E. (M. E.), to Lake Odessa, Mich. Accepts.

Gibbs, G. P., Trenton, Neb., to Venango. At work.

Klopp, J. J., Chadron, Neb., to a return pastorate at Stanton where he had previously spent about 25 years. Accepts.

Pike, Clarence, Royalston, Mass., to Coventry, Vt. At work.

Resignations

Blandford, L. D., Union, Waterloo, Ia., to rest during the winter in California.

Hunt, Everett, Colrain, Mass.

Koontz, H. H., Fremont, Neb. To enter business in Iowa.

Ordinations and Installations

Blackford, H. V., o., South Williamstown, Mass., Sept. 16. Sermon by Dr. F. E. Emrich; other parts by Rev. Messrs. S. P. Cook, H. G. Vincent, E. A. McMaster, C. W. Fisher, W. M. Crane, and J. J. Walker.

Dixon, T. T., o., South, Windsor, Vt., Sept. 17. Sermon by Dr. R. H. Potter; other parts by Rev. Messrs. R. I. Rowse, K. D. Beckwith, A. C. Ferrin, G. R. Mott, H. H. Hines, B. E. Marsh, and F. E. Merrick.

Accessions

	Conf.	Total
New York
Mt Vernon, First		4
Vermont
Westminster, West	3	6

BETTER CHURCH MUSIC

The October number of The Expositor will be devoted to Church Music

Articles: "How to Select a Pipe Organ," Harrison M. Wild of Chicago; "Church Music," John Finley Williamson, Director of the Famous Westminster Choir, Dayton, Ohio; "Sunday School Orchestras, How to Improve Them," Gustav Saenger; "The Ancient Te Deum," Dr. William R. Taylor, Rochester, New York.

Dr. John A. Hutton, successor to Dr. Jowett as pastor of Westminster Chapel, London, England, will write for The Expositor this year. Dr. Hutton is author of "That the Ministry Be Not Blamed," "There They Crucified Him," and other books. His first article will appear in the October number.

"South American Missions" will be the theme for Mission Study Classes. The first article on this subject will appear in October, as well as book reviews of books to be used as texts.

Send your subscription to The Expositor—a magazine for ministers only—to begin with the Music Number. It is the first issue of the 27th year of publication.

1 year, $3.00 4 months, $1.00

THE EXPOSITOR, 710 Caxton Building, Cleveland, Ohio

Enclosed you will find $——— for The Expositor to begin with the SPECIAL MUSIC NUMBER IN OCTOBER.

Name .....

City ..... State .....

Three Years Was None Too Long

It took three years for Jesus to prepare twelve men to become the leaders of his church.

It takes three years for

The Chicago Theological Seminary

to train Ministers to carry on that work.

What wonderful memories and experiences are back of such a training.

Write for information about enrollment for the next Quarter.

OZORA S. DAVIS, President 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

HOOT MON!

Raise funds for your Christian Endeavor, Sunday School, or other Church Societies selling delicious Scotmints. Six flavors—Peppermint, Yeast, Wintergreen, Clove, Cinnamon, and Licorice. Sell for 5c. Everybody has a nickel and everybody likes Scotmints.

NO CAPITAL REQUIRED

We extend you 30 days' credit, ship in any quantities and any assortment of flavors.

	320 Pkgs.	500 Pkgs.	1000 Pkgs.
Sells for	$16.00	$25.00	$50.00
Costs you	9.00	13.50	26.00
YOUR PROFIT	$7.00	$11.50	$24.00

SCOTMINTS CO., Inc., Desk C C-4, Jersey City, N. J.

Clip or Copy and Mail NOW

Scotmints Co., Inc.,
Desk CC 4, Jersey City, N. J.

Send .... packages of Scotmints—Following assortment.
....Peppermint ....Licorice
....Yeast ....Cinnamon
....Wintergreen ....Clove

Name .....

Street .....

City .....

Church .....

Society .....

Reference .....

OUR READERS' FORUM

King Louis and the Saracens

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I was much interested in the article by Dr. Newton Marshall Hall, "The Women of Aigues-Mortes," on page 300 of your number of Sept. 3, 1925.

You may think me a captious critic but I regret to call to note two rather flaring errors in Dr. Hall's history. Towards the end of the second paragraph he states, "All that splendid company . . . sailed away and the Saracens cut them to pieces when they reached the Holy Land and captured King Louis himself." The great defeat of King Louis took place in Egypt after the fatal battle of Damietta. The great majority of the losses were sustained there and it was in Egypt that King Louis was made a captive.

The next sentence is worse. "While he was yet a captive . . . the plague broke out . . . and the king, lying on his bed of ashes, died too. . . ." King Louis survived the crusade of which Dr. Hall is writing and died in 1270, in Tunis, quite some distance from the Holy Land.

OSGOOD HARDY.

Eagle Rock, Cal.

Associations in the Year-Book

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Here is a question of Congregational tradition and usage, which is so highly important that it should be considered at the next meeting of the National Council.

It seems to me that the association is the oldest form of organization among the churches, that it predates the state wide organizations or the national organization. Since the Pilgrim Memorial Fund has placed a new emphasis on the records of the ordination and standing of the ministers, the associations have been raised to a new position of importance as an ordaining body among the churches. The records have a great value in determining the standing of the ministers participat the fund. In the transfer of ministers important that the records be kept ac and all dismissals be properly recorde

At the present time the associations no place in the Year-Book. There is n to know the members of a certain a tion save by an extensive correspondenc I am registrar of a small western assoc as I have been, and Mr. Moveeast ca his standing to Smalltown, Ct., there is n for me to know to what association h belong or of whom I can expect a verif of his transfer.

The least that can be done is to set a page on which is listed the names associations by states and the name a dress of each registrar. The best that be done would be to list each associatio the churches, ministers and officers list would suggest a program no further but sure if the delegates will but hesitate ment they can easily recognize the di arising, since the association has ne portance, and that it should have some nition in the Year-Book.

Glendin, Mont. H. ROY PHILL

Give Keturah Credit

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Your pleasant editorial on Safed th will be appreciated by nearly if not al readers. But you have failed to give cr Keturah. In my opinion, her observatio as entertaining and penetrating as th the Sage himself. Indeed I think she i clever than he in her opinions many times Keturah due credit.

JOHN BARNES PE

Montclair, N. J.

The Community Church

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Surely a profitable theme to engage tention of the National Council, if appr place could be found, would be the r of the community church movement denominational life. It is an inescapab vital problem of increasing significance

Many of us rejoiced in the recent of the generous gift of our Church B Society to a union church from which nominational relationship is sought. W justifiably proud of the non-sectarian ness" in our leaders and in our philan All hail!

But there is another side to the story happens to the average church that denominational affiliations or obligation is wholly devoted to the needs of th community? Is it not true that m "community" church with no outside tions, no sense of belonging to a great enterprise (like the A. B. C. F. M.), a loses the very essence of that universal b hood which it hoped to secure by fleein from denominations? Deplore the di and sects as every Christian surely m there really any hope for the future Community churches unless they proc form a new denomination—as perhap have already begun to do!

I would like to mention and submit f

Did You Have Whooping Cough When You Were a Child?

Remember the stuff mother rubbed on your chest that loosened the phlegm and brought relief so quickly.

It's called Roche's Embrocation and is still aiding thousands of little ones throughout the land.

Effective for croup and colds on the chest too

Sold by All Druggists

E. FOUGERA & Co., Inc., New York
W. Edwards & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

POSITION WANTED

Social Worker with five years' experience as church worker desires Sunday position in some church. Specialities: home visiting, Biblical instruction for boys, personal religion classes for adults. "B. C.," Congregationalist.

Position as Director of Church Music within fifteen miles of Boston, in a church where music is regarded as part of the worship, and where there is material for a choir of thirty to fifty members, also where such a choir is supported by the church people. Do you know the possibilities of a young people's choir? "W. L.," Congregationalist.

AGENTS WANTED

Make Big Money selling Christmas Greeting Cards. Men and women agents easily make $10 to $20 a day. We have a magnificent box assortment of 21 hand-colored and engraved cards with envelopes, that sells for $1.00. Cost you 50 cents. Every home buys. Samples free. Exclusive territory. Waltham Art Publishers, Dept. 107, Waltham, Mass.

Agents—Make $10 to $25 daily selling "Life of Bryan." Send 10 cents for complete outfit. Shaw Publishing Co., Berwyn, Ill. (Suburb of Chicago.)

MISCELLANEOUS

Up-to-date theological books in good condition, many as good as new, offered at great reduction. Hastings' Bible Dictionary, 5 vols.; International Theological Library; International Critical Commentary; Expositor's Bible, 20 vols., Armstrong Edition; Students' Old Testament, Kent. Many others, 500 vols. in all. Also sectional book cases. If interested, send for complete list. "B. T.," Congregationalist.

To lease: Florida apartment. Accommodates two congenial people. Private home. References exchanged. Mrs. Drisko, Margaret Place, Pomona, Fla.

MISCELLANEOUS

Cut this advertisement out, and send it with your name and address to Frank M. Sayford Co., Inc., 710 Little Bldg., Boston, Mass., and we will mail you, no charge, samples of our paper products with instruction sheet covering our plan to earn money for your church organization.

Boarders wanted: Very cosey home, having all modern conveniences, for aged couples. Valid recommendations in the beautiful country of East Woodstock, Ct. Mrs. John Aldrich.

Folding Ash Book-rests, $1.00 each postpaid. Comfort for clergymen, students, invalids, readers. H. P. Bartley, Burlington, Vt.

Pews for sale. New style, seating 240. Material finished pine with hardwood trimmings and cushions. Choir railing boxed in same wood and finish. Reason for sale, building used for Community Centre. Address Miss Bertha Estey, Putney, Vt.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton, "Wastleless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Mail Order Printing. Ask for quotations. 500 envelopes and 500 letterheads or statements or billheads, $5.00. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

Fine personal stationery—200 sheets, 100 envelopes, with your name and address neatly printed, only $1.00. The McLean Press, 37 So. Loring St., Lowell, Mass.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

For Sale—New Safety Standard moving picture machine for churches. No booth. Write C. E. Thompson, Box 92, Freeport, Me.

Clear Your Skin With Cuticura

Soap to Cleanse
Ointment to Heal
Absolutely Nothing Better

ration a plan that has been under trial in cago Association. A few years ago I was ted to take lunch with an old friend—and nd myself meeting a committee of a Com- nity church which desired Fellowship with- denominational tags and limitations. In case there were specific reasons (Metho- reasons in fact) which made it essential preserve the "undenominational" character he church—and yet these sensible people ted "fellowship"!

n the impulse of the moment we suggested sociate Membership" in Chicago Congre- onal Association—if that could be brought ut. This was interpreted to mean full e in all local (associational) affairs, an ual gift equal to the amount of our per ia, but no specific agreements or obliga- s for our wider fellowship—such as go the full denominational label.

ur Chicago constitution now makes pro- n for this type of membership and the k Ridge Community Church (union and enominational) has been for three years ored and beloved in Chicago Congrega- al Association. They seem to enjoy our wship and we surely enjoy theirs. Some le may question the wisdom of this ar- gement. We can only say it seems to work to be exactly what a community church is. It does open home life to a lonely or least unattached wanderer, and it also is an avenue to a much larger share in stian ministry around the world. What he sages of Congregationalism think about

C. A. OSBORNE,
Registrar, The Chicago Congregational Association.

Oberlin Graduate School of Theology

Scholarly and practical training for the ministry, directors of religious education, missionary and Christian Association service. Interdenominational faculty and student body. All the cultural advantages of Oberlin College and its complete equipment. Unusual opportunities for women. Scholarships and financial help available.

Degrees A.M., B.D., and S.T.M.
Correspond with Dean Thomas W. Graham
Council Hall, Oberlin, Ohio

Bangor Theological Seminary

e 110th year opened Sept. 23. Thorough ing for ministers and missionaries. Courses ng to degree or diploma. Special opportunity non-college men to gain Seminary equipment prepare for advanced college standing. For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine.

ALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

rch and Training in Five Departments:
1) Pastoral Service.
2) Service in the Foreign Field.
3) Religious Education.
4) Practical Philanthropy.
5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
en on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
grees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students. atalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

Training School at Vineland, New Jersey. Devoted to the interests of those e minds have not developed normally. Schools, shops, farms, ch laboratory. $1,200 per annum. E. R. Johnstone, ctor. C. Emerson Nash, Superintendent, Box 404.

he Pratt Teachers' Agency

70 Fifth Avenue, New York
mmends teachers to colleges, public and ate schools in all parts of the country. Advises parents about schools.

With the Schools and Colleges

Progress at Northland

Northland College at Ashland, Wis., with the opening of the new school year is facing another marked step in the rapid progress that has been made during the past several years. Never before have applications for admission come in so early and although no publicity work or effort has been made to enroll students, the facilities at the school are crowded even beyond the limit. By the middle of August more than ten times as many new registrations had been completed as had come on the first of September last year. Every department is filled to overflowing.

During the summer changes and improvements have been made in the way of office and classroom facilities. One of the faculty houses has been commandeered for caring for overflow of college girls, while private rooms all over the city have been secured to house the college men.

Few faculty changes have been made. W. Bridge Jones and Mrs. Ada Loveland Jones have resigned to pursue further study and engage in concert work in the East. Mr. Stacy Leroy Green, a Northland graduate, after completing further study in Europe and two years of teaching in the Northland School of Music, takes Professor Jones' place as head of the School of Music. Mr. Rossing Sardeson of Minneapolis has been secured to head the department of voice and violin. A course in public school music is also offered. The vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. William H. Walker has been filled by the readjustment of courses, dividing Dr. Walker's work among three of the present faculty members.

Last year marked the largest growth and the most successful year in Northland's history. Fourteen Bachelor's degrees were conferred and the honorary degree of Dr. of Science was conferred upon J. M. Dodd, M.D., who for 17 years has served as president of the Northland board of trustees. Twelve students completed the secondary course, receiving diplomas for admission to college work. Financially, last year was the best year Northland has had. It is the first time since the war started that the current budget was entirely balanced by current receipts.

Work on the building and endowment campaign is going forward steadily but slowly due to the pressure of handling the current expense budget. On Oct. 1, the Wisconsin W. H. M. U. launched their state-wide campaign for the new girls' dormitory. It is expected that ground will be broken for the new building this autumn and that the dormitory will be ready for occupancy with the opening of the school year in the fall of 1926.

All Northland friends are rejoicing at the generous bequest given by the late Victor F. Lawson of Chicago. Mr. Lawson had for a number of years been a generous contributor for current expenses and the depth of his interest in the work Northland is doing was indicated in his will by a bequest of $25,000. It also showed Mr. Lawson's confidence in the permanency of the Northland work and the certainty of the future growth of the college.

Marriage

BRITTEN-SHINN—Miss Fannie E. Shinn, who served as a home missionary in the Dakotas for a number of years and who was ordained as a Congregational minister in 1913, was united in marriage to Mr. E. M. Britten with a Salvation Army marriage service at the Dubuque, Ia., Corps No. 1, Aug. 7. The newly married couple will be attached to the Dubuque Corps for evangelistic service. The service was read by Commandant J. D. Clark of the Salvation Army Corps No. 1.

Events to Come

SUFFOLK WEST ASSOCIATION (Mass.), Central Church, Boston, Oct. 13. Sessions at 3 P.M. and 7 P.M. Addresses by the team of National Council speakers.

SUFFOLK NORTH ASSOCIATION (Mass.), First Church, Cambridge, Oct. 14, afternoon and evening. Theme: "Christian Missions."

SUFFOLK SOUTH ASSOCIATION (Mass.), Hyde Park, Wednesday, Oct. 14, 2.30 P.M. Evening service 7.30 P.M.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Oct. 2, 10.30 A.M. Program will include address by Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, just returned from the Orient, and a commissioning service for Miss Margaret Hammaker, under appointment to India.

Wilson Rolling Partitions

One Room or Many As Occasion Demands

BY the use of Wilson Rolling Partitions large rooms can be quickly transformed into smaller ones for classes, meetings, etc. They are easily operated, and roll out of the way, vertically or horizontally. Can be installed in old as well as new buildings.

Send for 40 page Catalogue No. 11
THE J. G. WILSON CORPORATION
ESTABLISHED 1876
11 East 38th Street New York City
Offices in all principal cities

THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

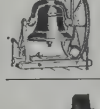
BALOPTICONS

Write for Catalog
are used in thousands of schools churches and hospitals. This line of lanterns, for slides and opaque objects—for projection in daylight as well as in the dark—is the most complete in the world.
Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 706 St. Paul St., Rochester, N.Y.

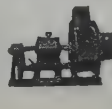
Individual Cups

Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free,
Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio,

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND
220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS



McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED



ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East
Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations
Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service
Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service
Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement
Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work
Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.
G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. Henry Smith Leiper,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
George N. White, M.A., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F.
100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpit supplies and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J. Co
Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Chair

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secre and Missionary Education Secre
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and A Education Secre
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Secre
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Educ Program including Social Service, Missio Education, Student and Young People's W aids Ministerial Students, University Past directs campaign to secure Recruits for Chris Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of denomination for the publication and distribu of The Congregationalist, church school ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, teac magazines, children's and young people's we papers, and books for home and church use, book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business Man
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregation
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Congr tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Tre Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE INTE 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. Hur Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secretary

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE PAC 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. W Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSION FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. H Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSION UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Treasu Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Congr tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIET constituent of the Congregational Home Miss ary Society, represents the churches of Massa setts in their home missionary work. The Soc solicits bequests, pays annuities on conditi gifts, administers trust funds for churches. F erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. Sew Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL Solicits gifts from churches and individuals, bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 Col bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to F. Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object is establishment and support of Evangelical Con gational Churches and Sunday Schools in Bos and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; C. Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Se Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entirely Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites tributions for this purpose. Bequests and Ann Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Supe tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treasu Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICUT constituent of the National Society, solicits tributions, administers Special Trust for Churc and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. William English, Treasurer, Congregational House, Ha ford.

RISIBLES

"But, darling, don't you want to marry a man who is economical?"

"I suppose so; but it's awful being engaged to one."—Flamingo.

American Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches.

Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that the House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish our Missionary Organizations with business offices at minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hubbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

Home visitation and personal missionary service in connection with our churches. Emergency relief. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contributions and legacies gratefully received and scrupulously administered.

William Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

Incorporated 1829 Boston Reorganized 1922

Seaman's Friend Society, Inc.

This Society, reorganized in 1922, now fully represents the Congregational Churches of New England in its practical, social and religious work among seamen. Has finely equipped Shels at 287 Hanover Boston, and at Vine- Haven, and Reading Homs at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. Society provides dormitory accommodations, Bding and recreation rooms, religious services, tables, and games of many kinds, a restaurant, a canteen, shower baths, postal and bank facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. Contributions received on an annuity basis. President, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore Busfield, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles E. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Com., Franklin P. Shumway; Office, 618 Congregational House.

American Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

The only American undenominational international and national Society aiding seamen. Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 76 West Street, New York City. Loan Libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing from New York. PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00). Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided. SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies. JOHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary. CLARENCE C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 76 Wall St., New York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union

Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817

National, Interdenominational. Establishes and maintains Union Sunday Schools in the outlying rural districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundation work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Contributions and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.

W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

"Pardon me, but I think we have some common ancestors," began the young man in the bright green cap.

"No doubt you have," replied Miss Cutting, as she turned her back.—Colorado Dodo.

"J've been corresponding for a year with a girl I've never seen. Today she sent me her picture. It's awful. How on earth will I ever get rid of her?"

"Well, you can always send her one of your pictures."—Brown Jug.

Student in Military Science Class—"Captain, I have neither pencil nor paper."

Captain—"What would you think of a soldier who went to battle without rifle and ammunition?"

"I would think he was an officer, sir."—Denison Flamingo.

The two girls were strolling in a garden at twilight.

"I wonder," said the first, "I wonder if Rollo really loves me."

"Of course he does, dear," said the second. "Why should he make you an exception?"—Daily Express.

A speaker in chapel recently was speaking of the ostrich to illustrate his point and said, "The ostrich sees very little and digests everything."

A freshman girl in the front row whispered audibly, "My, what an ideal husband an ostrich would make."—Sanburr.

Her Very New Ladyship (who is arranging to give a party at a furnished house she has taken)—"And will there be enough silverware, Parker?"

Butler (taken on with the furniture)—"Yes, m' Lady—at the beginning of the evening, anyway."—Punch.

Mary Anne gave notice she was going to be married. Her mistress, perturbed, said:

"Of course, I don't want to put any obstacle in the way of your getting married, but I wish it were possible for you to postpone it until I can get another maid."

"Well, mum," Mary Anne replied, "I 'ardly think I know 'im well enough to arsk 'im to put it off!"—Christian Register.

A bishop was eating dinner with his host before the afternoon service at which he was to speak. He ate little or nothing, explaining that it was not good for a preacher to eat heavily before a sermon. The housewife could not attend the service, as she had to stay at home and prepare supper. When her husband came home, she said, "Well, how was he?" The husband, drawing a sigh, replied:

"He might just as well of 'et."—Boston Globe.

James, aged five, says Everybody's, was eating Sunday dinner at his aunt's house. The first course was turkey soup with macaroni in it. The aunt noticed James was not eating.

"What's the matter, dear?" she asked. "Don't you like turkey soup?"

"Oh, yes," answered the boy, "I like it when mother makes it. She doesn't put the windpipes in like you do."—Methodist Recorder.

"Glad to see you getting in on time these mornings, Mr. Slowe," said the manager.

"Yes, sir, I've got a parrot now."

"A parrot? What for? I advised you to get an alarm clock."

"I did, sir, but after a few mornings I got used to it, and it failed to wake me. So I got a parrot and now when I retire I hang the alarm clock over his cage. It wakes the parrot, and what the bird says would arouse anybody."—Boston Transcript.

Nancy was saying her prayers. "And please," she petitioned, "make Boston the capital of Vermont."

"Why, Nancy!" exclaimed her shocked mother. "What in the world made you say that?"

"I made it that on my examination papers today, and I want to be right."

The Congregationalist

Continuing
The Recorder* and *The Advance

October 1, 1925

Vol. CX No. 40

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street. Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago. and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 419
Editorial—The Andover-Harvard Decision 420
Retirement of American Board President
Prohibition and Headlines
Dr. Gordon's Autobiography—An Editorial Review 422
From Our Western Editor 424
What of Turkey and Missions? by James L. Barton 425
For Deeper Life, by Katharine Lee Bates 426
The Parable of the Detour 427
My Soliloquy at Seventy-Eight, by Jonathan Edwards 427
Universal Conference on Life and Work, by Theodore Ainsworth Greene 428
Congregationalists' Educational Progress 430
American Relations with China, by George W. Hinman 431
The Building Project of First Church, Washington 431
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 432
The Andover-Harvard Supreme Court Decision 432
National Council Delegates 433
National Council Official Call 433
The Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation 433
Our Invalid Parish—The Athlete of the Soul 434
Closet and Altar 434
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 434
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 435
With the Children 436
Among the New Books 437
News of the Churches 438
Our Readers' Forum 444
With the Schools and Colleges 445

Social Service at the National Council

The Pre-Council Conference

Opens October 19, Monday, 2 P.M.

Sessions Monday afternoon, evening, and Tuesday morning

Program

The discussion will center in the proposed Social Creed. The topics and the leaders of discussion follow

Chairman, John Calder

1. Education
2. Industry—Alva W. Taylor, of the "Christian Century"
3. Agriculture—C. J. Galpin, Department of Agriculture
4. Race—George E. Haynes, of the Federal Council
5. International Relations—Jerome Davis, of Yale

Purpose

To prepare the Social Creed for presentation to the Council.

For fellowship in social thinking.

To afford larger opportunity for the discussion of the social ministry of the church.

You are invited

If you are coming to the Council and are interested in this field, come a day earlier. That is all that is necessary.

Social Service Dinner

Monday evening, 6.30—Place to be announced

$1.25 a plate. Send check immediately for plates desired to Social Service Office, 14 Beacon Street, Boston

Short addresses and fellowship

Social Service Section

Tuesday morning, October 27

General Theme

"A Socialized Church"

Addresses by

Mary Anderson, Chief, Woman's Bureau, Department of Labor, "Uncle Sam and the Working Woman."

Father John A. Ryan on "Coal."

Charles Clayton Morrison, Editor Christian Century on "Denominationalism and the Social Conscience."

Albert W. Palmer of Oak Park on "The Socialized Pulpit"

Robert W. Bruère on "The Trend in Industry."

Luncheon for Bishop McConnell

Bishop McConnell will be the guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by the Commission on Social Service, Saturday, October 24. Secure your tickets at Social Service Headquarters at the National Council.

Fall Plans

John Calder, Chairman of the Commission and Hubert C. Herring, Secretary, leave November 1st for a six weeks' trip, meeting with local groups for conference on the Social Program of the Church, and speaking before Congregational clubs, colleges, churches, etc. The itinerary will be finally completed during the Council sessions. All interested should see Mr. Herring at Social Service Headquarters.

Social Service Headquarters The Auditorium

In charge of Women's Committee of Commission

Mrs. L. H. Thayer, Chairman
Anna Estelle May, Secretary

This will be a clearing house for information and literature on social service matters.

There will be literature, but more important, opportunity will be afforded for appointments with experts on the social work of the church, and with specialists in certain types of field.

The following are some who have agreed to give time for such appointments. Arrangements will be made at the Headquarters for conferences.

On the Rural Church
Kenyon L. Butterfield
Malcolm Dana
Mrs. Hilda Ives

The City Church and Social Service—Putting the Men to Work
Orville A. Petty
Albert W. Palmer
James Gordon Gilkey
Chauncey F. Hawkins

Women's Organization and Social Service
Mrs. Lucius H. Thayer
Mrs. Judson L. Cross

The Church and Social Agencies
Anna Estelle May

International Relations
Jerome Davis

Industrial Relations
John Calder

Race Relations
George Haynes
Russell Brown

Congregational Social Service Plans
Hubert C. Herring

Women's Luncheon

Tuesday, October 27th. Tickets may be secured at Social Service Headquarters.

The Social Service Commission

JOHN CALDER, Chairman
JANE ADDAMS
WALTER BURR
PAUL BLANSHARD
KENYON L. BUTTERFIELD
MRS. JUDSON L. CROSS
MALCOLM DANA
WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE
MRS. LUCIUS H. THAYER
JEROME DAVIS
NOBLE S. ELDERKIN
ALEXANDER C. GARNER
MRS. JOSEPH W. GERRITY
MRS. JOHN F. THOMPSON
ERNEST G. GUTHRIE
OSCAR C. HELMING
HENRY P. KENDALL
J. BEVERIDGE LEE
FRANK G. WARD
JAMES MULLENBACH
HARRY E. PEABODY
DWIGHT SANDERSON
JOHN STAPLETON

For further information write Hubert C. Herring

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

The Social Service Department

14 Beacon Street Boston, Mass.

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 41 October 8, 1925

NATIONAL COUNCIL NUMBER

Copyright, Harris and Ewing, Washington, D. C.

At the Gateway of Washington

Looking from the entrance of the Union Station, past the Columbus Memorial Fountain, toward the Capitol. This will be the view which will greet the delegates and visitors to the National Council upon their arrival.

Will Vitalize Congregational Singing

HYMNS for the LIVING AGE

Edited by H. AUGUSTINE SMITH

Director of Fine Arts in Religion, Boston University
Director of Music, Chautauqua, New York

Hymns for the Living Age is Professor Smith's latest and most valuable contribution to church worship. He is a master of congregational song, and this hymn book is like his congregational song methods,—beautiful in poetry and music, warm in religion, practical and forceful.

Professor Smith has had a rare training for his work. He was director of music in the First Congregational Church, Chicago, for seventeen years. He has organized and directed singing in conventions in all parts of the world, and has become an international force for better music in the church.

Important features of this book:

All words are between the staffs, making it possible to read and sing with ease.

The reinforced binding protects the book against the hard, if devout usage of over-zealous members of the choir.

The responsive readings, which mark a new epoch in Biblical literature for public worship are in the front pages where they can be used without throwing the book out of balance.

The index, which is so rarely used, is in the back of the book.

The musical settings constitute a rich and varied feast throughout and are fitted to the text with great care.

The music is within the range of the average voice and creates no unwilling sopranos and bassos.

No section* of the book is over-populated; there are a number of social service hymns, but not at the expense of hymns of devotion.

BLISS M. WIANT, Department of Sacred Music, School of Theology, Peking University, Peking, China, writes: "I am writing to order additional copies of HYMNS FOR THE LIVING AGE. The book has been an increasing source of delight to all of us. The American Board Mission has ordered some upon my recommendation and now the Peking Union Medical College is about to enter a large order for their school and chapel simply because they see how well these books fill our need. It is surely the finest book on the market today."

The price of HYMNS FOR THE LIVING AGE is $1.75. The introductory rate is $1.35 with transportation additional, from New York or Chicago.

A post-card request will bring a copy for your study.

THE CENTURY CO.

353 Fourth Avenue New York City

Congregational Working Forces In Review

As we approach the biennial meeting of the National Council of Congregational Churches, to be held in Washington, D. C., Oct. 19-28, The Congregationalist takes pleasure in presenting this National Council Number in which appears in review the various national societies through which Congregationalists do their co-operative work, also the colleges and seminaries in which Congregationalists are especially interested. Here is an impressive and inspiring exhibit, which shows how Congregationalists continue in the van of Christian Missions, Christian Education, and Christian Service. They challenge our appreciation and our loyal support.

Represented in This Exhibit:

National Council of Congregational Churches
The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions
Woman's Boards of Missions
American Missionary Association
Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief
Congregational Home Missionary Society
Congregational Church Building Society
Congregational Sunday School Extension Society
Congregational Education Society
Congregational Foundation for Education
Congregational Publishing Society
Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation
Congregational Commission on Evangelism
Boston City Missionary Society

Atlanta University
Beloit College
Carleton College
Congregational Training School for Women
Fairmount College
Grinnell College
Howard University
Illinois College
Marietta College
Oberlin College
Ripon College
Washburn College
Whitman College
Yankton College
Bangor Theological Seminary
Chicago Theological Seminary
Hartford Seminary Foundation
Pacific School of Religion
Yale Divinity School

Other Features of this National Council Number

The Attractions of Washington

Congregational Churches of Washington Plans for the National Council Meeting

COMING: Full reports of the Washington Meetings of the National Council — in *The Congregationalist.

The Chicago Theological Seminary of the Future

The Chicago Theological Seminary

"Maker of Ministers"

At the heart of the Great Middle West, in "The Valley of Opportunity"

¶ It is affiliated with the University of Chicago, and offers to its students all the advantages of this world famous Institution.

¶ Chicago is the largest center of theological education in the United States.

¶ Three times more Congregational students were registered in The Chicago Theological Seminary last year than in any other Seminary.

¶ More than 2,000 trained men have been sent out from this Institution to fields of Christian Service.

¶ There never was a time when strong, outstanding leaders were so much needed in Congregational Churches as today.

¶ Congregationalists! This is your Seminary, serving the Churches—training the leaders of tomorrow.

¶ Ministers! Parents! Teachers! Would you like to help? Turn the promising boys and young men in your homes and churches toward the Call of the Ministry. The Seminary stands ready to do its part.

OZORA S. DAVIS, President
5757 University Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | October 8, 1925 | No. 41

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D.
Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

Kennedy's Second Best"

THE Congregationalist is able to make two important announcements regarding plans for the coming year, e of which will cover as well the last month of the esent year.

For a long time there has been insistent and persistent mand from many quarters for a good serial story as a eekly feature. We have hesitated to yield to this de- and, partly for reasons of space, but chiefly because the difficulty of finding a story in every way suitable. last in an unexpected quarter we have found a story at seems as nearly ideal for the purpose as we could ll conceive. Our Managing Editor remarked the other y that for fourteen years he had been looking for such story, admirable in literary style, sound in religious ne, and thoroughly sustained in story interest. We ve found it in John D. Freeman's Kennedy's Second st.

When first submitted to us we recognized its high ality, but it had defects. Dr. Freeman approved our ticism, and at great pains he has re-written much the story, following our suggestions. The result is powerful literary whole in which there is hardly a e that we should wish to change. Next week we shall l something about its author, who in recent years has cupied one of the great historic Nonconformist pul- s in England, and who is well known for his writings, pecially for his first-page leaders in the British eekly. Kennedy's Second Best will appear beginning th the December issues.

Dr. Gordon's Autobiography

A SERIAL story, while it may make deep appeal to some, will not appeal to all, but it is with confidence in interesting our entire constituency that we announce the beginning with the issues of the New Year of the publication of Dr. George A. Gordon's great autobiography, My Education and Religion. Theologically, Dr. Gordon has not appealed alike to all in our fellowship, but we can hardly imagine even the foremost of Dr. Gordon's critics failing to find the human interest in this remarkable life story. It is Dr. Gordon at his mellowest and ripest, and his portrayal of the backgrounds of his boyhood in Scotland is a glorification of the life of the common people comparable in its effect to the world influence of Scotland's greatest poet. We have arranged with the publishers for the privilege of publishing all of the book, or such parts as we feel will most appeal to our readers. It will not be a "serial" in the ordinary sense, but will appear rather as a series of articles, each making its own appeal in literary and spiritual interest.

No Special National Council Train

MANY inquiries have come to The Congregationalist regarding a special National Council train, or special coaches on a regular train, from New England to Washington. It was planned to make such arrangements but the fact that the Social Service Commission is putting on a program on Monday, the day before the regular sessions of the Council begin, and the meeting of other groups on that day, has created much uncertainty regarding the number of delegates who will be going at the same time. This, added to the fact that others appear to be going by automobile, or by special tours, and that the trip by train involves either a night journey with little opportunity for fellowship, or a day journey with arrival at Washington late in the evening, with consequent difficulty in hunting up billets, has led to the abandoning of arrangements for traveling together. Delegates will be likely to meet others Washington-bound by whatever train they go. The displaying of a coat label marked National Council might help towards friendly contact and fellowship en route.

* *

Only a cry from the depths can win the soul a response from the heights.

Where Is the Lord's Table?

A DISPATCH that recently came from Stockholm, welcome in its statement of fact, and in the significance that it bears in relation to the hope of ultimately saving Christendom from an anomalous and deplorable situation, is eloquent none the less in the unconscious irony with which it portrays the lamentable results of historic departure from the simplicity that is in Christ.

It tells of a great Golden Rule dinner, held in Stockholm's leading hotel, during the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work, in which 532 delegates and special guests, representing 37 religions, comprising 200,000,000 Christians in 31 different nations, sat down at a common table in the name of the Near East Relief, and its large humanitarian enterprise.

That in itself is splendid, and it is well if men, divided in creeds, can be at least in any degree united in deeds, or in spirit. But here is the—apparently unconscious and unintended—irony of this dispatch. It says, "for here the leaders of the great world religions who cannot partake of the Lord's Supper because of differing creeds united in communion of the Golden Rule." (Italics ours.)

What a true, yet terrible, indictment! What a humiliating confession! Think of its plain implications. It is an axiom that the whole is greater than its part. Yet here the instincts of a common humanity, the interest in a common cause of feeding and succoring orphans, effected a simple communion around a common table that professed allegiance to Christ in itself could not establish.

Can Christians or Christian churches rest lightly under the indictment of such a terrible implication? Where is the Lord's Table? Is it in the divided church establishments where men, even when they recognize the larger claims and the larger day, have set up the barriers of exclusion? Or is it in that place where men assemble in response to sound instincts and emotions? Is humanitarian sentiment and appeal larger than Christ? It is a more effective bond of communion between men?

Surely such an incident reveals with profound clearness the only way of hope, enlargement, and progress for the Christian Church. It is to make the name and communion of Christ not a narrowing, dividing factor, but the largest spiritual fact and bond in Christendom.

For our own part, no matter what others say or do, we shall regard as the Lord's Table the larger place fellowship and communion. There, we are certain, t Lord is. There is he honored. There is his spirit in t midst.

If Christ be not the largest and strongest bond betwe men, he is not the Lord of Lords and King of Kings, t world's supreme spiritual fact. We may rejoice th men are larger and better than the creeds they profess that diverse elements can be brought into the commu ion of a Golden Rule dinner, where they could not brought together around the "Lord's Table." But a creeds and polities forever to be weaker, poorer, less co prehensive, than the noblest men who profess allegian to them? Creeds ought to be better, larger, than me instead of men being better and larger than their creed We may thank the Golden Rule dinner for showing unmistakably where Christ has established the real tab of communion and fellowship. The adventure wi Christ is destined to bring his followers into a larg world than many of them have yet recognized. Th Christ stands in this larger world waiting for us to f low him must be the conviction of all for whom huma ity and the universe are instinct with his presence.

A "Cathedral" of Christian Service

DISCUSSIONS in The Congregationalist and elsewhe regarding a church of the "cathedral type" at Was ington have, we find, created misunderstandings a misinterpretations that have been somewhat embarra ing to those who have had at heart the project of new First Congregational Church in that city.

Those who have followed intimately the discussio and plans concerning this project from the beginni know that what Dr. Pierce and his associates have mind has been far removed from what is common understood as a "cathedral." The nature of the p posed new church and the type of service it is expect to render were well indicated in an editorial stateme in The Congregationalist of last week. The situation Washington is peculiar in the contrast between the nancial assets available for church organization and t largeness of the opportunity that confronts a chur adequately equipped for service. The mass of people Washington are salaried people of very limited mea Many of them of both sexes are clerks. The whole ty of life is one that tends towards a certain transience a lack of settlement and permanency. Washington a has become one of the great student centers in t country.

Thus, in addition to all the opportunities of a c thronged with visitors and in the downtown section of t capital of the nation, there are in this field enormo opportunities for a church equipped for a broad progr of service. This is what the leaders in this project ha had in mind. They wish, of course, that the architectu of such a structure should be adequate and worthy the nation-wide fellowship of Congregational Church They desire that such a church should in some measu represent us in the capital of the nation, but the she primary consideration is the interest of this emine religious opportunity. It is not a show place or shrine in the ordinary sense that the people of Fi

Church, Washington, have in mind. What they wish to stablish is a worthy shrine in the sense of largeness of ommunion and of breadth of actual service.

The reference to the "cathedral type" of church arose hiefly in contrast with the proposal that some in the Vashington Church had suggested of a building of rofit-producing type, in which a certain portion of the tructure should be given over, either to business offices r to apartments or dormitories. It was somewhat unortunate that the word "cathedral" was used because t helped to convey a wrong impression. Within the First Church itself were many who were opposed to the rection of a profit-producing, business-type of church, nd this objection was very strongly sustained by many ongregational leaders in the country at large who were onsulted in the matter. The result has been that the lea of a profit-producing type of church has been bandoned and the present plans are for a purely ecclesastical structure.

It ought, however, to be understood that the whole roject in ideal and plan is free from anything that would istify the questionings that have been raised in dissions in our columns and elsewhere in relation to the athedral type" of church.

In Brief

If you meet a man or a woman who seems to have ie radiant glow of a big idea, but looks rather anxious out it, you may have sighted a member of the Comittee of Twelve that is planning mergers for missionary cieties and Congregational periodicals.

* *

There is still time to plan to go to Washington to ie National Council. If you are a layman in a church hose pastor has not expected to go, why not move fast, and send him. It will be worth all it costs to the pastor and to the church. Go along with him, too, if possible. The first step is to send your registration fee to the National Council office as an Associate Member. "Do it now!"

* *

Washington will have two great religious conventions at practically the same time. While our National Council is in session the national Y. M. C. A. Council will be in session, to be followed by an International Y. M. C. A. Convention.

* *

Another brutal murder in a payroll holdup and getaway with $10,000 at Cambridge, Mass., emphasizes one of the weaknesses of policing, and helps to spur up the church to its redemptive and preventive work of making good citizens.

* *

While we point with pride to the societies, the missions and the institutions which are Congregational, we are bound to be reminded of the solemn responsibilities that are ours to support them and to do our individual share in carrying forward the great work which is Congregational.

* *

Young "Bob" LaFollette is following in his father's footsteps with amazing speed. His election to the United States Senate to fill out his late father's unexpired term, by an overwhelming majority, proves that, while LaFollette is dead, LaFollette still lives in his son, in the hearts of Wisconsin voters and in the principles which the new youthful senator will continue to advocate. While the progressives rejoice the conservative Republicans find little comfort in the election.

The Witness of a Simple Faith

Our Task and Our Opportunity

WHAT shall we say as we confront the assembly of the Congregational National Council, at the nation's capital, and near the closing days of the first quarter of the Twentieth Century? It is a momentous occasion and much will depend upon the sounding at this gathering of a clear and unwavering note.

What is the supreme task and mission of Congregational churches? What is their peculiar responisbility in relation to that mission at the present hour? We have thought a great deal about this matter. We have viewed it from every angle. We have sought to consider every possible crisis, and every conceivable issue, superficial or profound. And we have come to the overwhelming conviction that the one supreme present responsibility that rests upon us as Congregationalists is to make clear and unmistakable the witness of a simple faith.

If we come away from Washington having given the impression to the country only that the representatives of a great denomination have been in conference, or merely that we are a broad and progressive people, or that we are a competent, alert, and intellectual group, we shall fall far short of our most distinctive witness. Only by profound emphasis upon the freedom and simplicity of Christ-centered faith and experience can we bear adequate witness to our spiritual heritage and to the present phase of Congregational faith and fellowship; and in doing that, if it be possible, we shall give to our age and nation the highest service we have to offer. The witness of a simple faith is the world's supreme need at the present hour.

Freedom and Simplicity

After the Congregational National Council met in Springfield, two years ago, we were hailed from a high quarter as "a public-spirited denomination." It was a notable and worthy tribute, and it was deeply appreciated. None the less, it missed the most distinctive thing about our life, and the thing that alone justifies our boasted independency. In the innermost springs of our being, in the ultimate meaning of our ecclesiastical theory and practice, we are not primarily a public-spirited denomination but a Christ-spirited fellowship.

Moreover, lest this be deemed a mere Pharisaism of that type which, the more insistently it asserts its high profession the more unmistakably demonstrates its very sectarianism, let us make our meaning plain. It would be rash to say that Congregationalists are pre-eminent in zeal; it would, perhaps, be rash to assert that they are pre-eminent in anything. It is safe to say that there are plenty of people in our churches who happen to be there because of a sort of natural drift. The Congregational church in the average community is a broad church—with all that that implies of weakness as well as of strength. But most distinctive in the life of our churches are those who are not there by accident or circumstance, but who are there by choice and design. And among these, again, are those whose place in the Congregational fellowship is determined solely by a response to the spiritual ideals of freedom and simplicity.

The great mass of Congregationalists who have given any real thought to the matter, and, who are not in the Congregational fellowship through accident or circumstance, are there because in a very clear and definite way they accept as literal truth, determining immediate attitude and action, what others may have regarded chiefly as a poetic sentiment or a pious hope. They believe simply and absolutely in the supremacy of the love of God, and of the spiritual authority of Jesus, as expressed in Tennyson's lines:

> Our little systems have their day;
> They have their day and cease to be;
> They are broken lights of Thee,
> And Thou, O Lord, art more than they.

To these, the Congregational way and the Congregational fellowship have something far deeper than a denominational or organizational meaning; this way and fellowship represent the possibility of obtaining and expressing a free and simple religious life that finds alike its validity and its catholicity in Christ himself. And, for these, the denominational and organizational aspects of this life of fellowship in the name, spirit, and purpose of Jesus have interest and value only in so far as they make this free and simple religion effective in larger expression and service. Possibly as Congregationalists we have been weak in failing to appreciate the extent to which even the simplest forms of faith and fellowship require organization for embodiment and expression. It may be that we have tended too much toward a disembodied spiritual life. But our profound witness in the early days, and again in these later times, since Congregationalism has been freed from the dominance of the New England theology, has been upon the simplicity that is in Christ and upon the supremacy of his presence, as constituting the only ultimate and true test of a holy catholic church worthy to bear his name.

The Menace to Simplicity

To many Congregationalists this is all so natural and simple that they do not realize the extent and nature of the forces that are constantly menacing simplicity in religion. On the one hand are the authoritarian or "historic" communions—in their very conception of "communion" excluding those who refuse to pronounce their organizational and creedal shibboleths, no matter how vitally in faith and life those thus excluded may be bound to Christ in love and devotion. On the other hand are the spiritual vagaries and ecclesiastical anarchies that seem to give validity to schemes of elaborate faiths and order, and that dispose men to turn i reaction toward the seemingly safe and beaten paths "authority."

Far deeper and more prevalent than many realiz are these twofold dangers—that Protestantism shall b come symbolized in such blind and sectional movemen as Fundamentalism and Ku Klux-ism, and that, on th other hand, Christian catholicity shall become symbolize in what, no matter what its claims or its prestige, is aft all churchianity rather than Christianity. Is there n in the presence of these menacing forces, that would su stitute exclusive creeds, theories, and disciplines for th all-inclusive principle of divine love, the profound nee of the witness of a simple faith that will declare and dem onstrate in the most unmistakable way that there nothing chaotic or anarchic in the simplest, freest e pressions of Christian life—that it is, indeed, only in th anchorage of Christian life, individual and social, in th simple, elemental verities of the love of God in Chri Jesus that the church can have safety, permanency, an catholicity?

Our Peculiar Responsibility

For the witness of this simple faith we Congregatio alists are not alone responsible. We recognize, gladl that it is the ultimate hope and quest of many withi authoritarian fellowships who, while they retain the place in historic communions would welcome the da when all communions should be brought under the spiri ual dominance of the one communion in Christ. We b lieve that there are many in fellowships widely differe from our own in origin and polity who appreciate th value of our distinctive witness, and who are hoping an praying that we shall not fail in bearing this witness behalf of the new day. We should be blind, also, if w did not perceive that there are many who under vario names, and from various angles, share with us the e plicit witness to freedom and simplicity as inherent the Gospel of Christ, and in the true manifestation fellowship in his name. But this cannot alter the fa that the Congregationalists of America stand in a pecu iar position of opportunity and responsibility. If w fail in the witness of a simple faith nothing can mak good the loss to our own life and to a world torn by di sension and distrust.

Can we make this witness of a simple faith itself simple and articulate, that speaking from the nation capital, the whole nation cannot fail to hear and unde stand? Can we make it clear that we stand for th simple verities of a free and simple faith in Christ Jesu and that this free and simple faith is consistent wi evangelical fervor and intellectual liberty? Can we asse the ultimate relationship of Love and Culture, not on in God, but through the Gospel of His Son in the upli ing of humanity out of sin and ignorance into that li where Love and Culture blend in holiness?

The Pilgrims gave such witness in the cabin of th Mayflower. With the same clearness of vision, and th same determined courage and directness of purpose, it ours, if we will but realize it, to give, to a world th needs it as much now as then, the clear, calm, unwave ing witness of a simple faith.

Washington, the City Beautiful

Attractions that Await the National Council

By C. E. LaVigne

Executive Director, Washington Convention Bureau

F the question were asked now, "What mineral is universally recognized as chief long precious stones," the invisible com-ny of readers everywhere would answer spontaneous chorus, "The Diamond."
Yes, the diamond—most brilliant of all ns. Yet the quality of real brilliancy is t displayed until it has been cut and lished by the lapidary. Then fixed in its st of platinum or green gold, what a sueme jewel! All the world desires the dia-nd—to have and to see.
How like to this beautiful jewel is Washgton, D. C., today—nestling in a setting alluring forestry and parks; clustered th monumental circles; checkered by a ndred thousand stately trees along the cbs; radiant with many sparkling foun-ns; mirrored by a reflecting pool; dignicourses, city and urban, are many and modern; motoring to the mountains and nearby battlefields is over perfect pikes—a region rich in picturesque beauty, history, and romance is within a radius of less than one hundred miles.

The picture is as colorful as the diamond.

Resplendent diplomatic and social life, legations and embassies of impressive architecture, the pinnacle of high government official life, and the major functions and activities of great political and business events inevitably center in Washington, now the universally recognized greatest capital city of the world—the soul of America—the memorial of the past and the promise of the future, expressed in enduring marble and granite, in bronze and copper, in flowers and trees and faithful citizenry. The temptation is well-nigh overmastering to linger on the details of the brilliant municipal gem and the unending sylvan views.

Copyright, Ernest L. Crandall

BEAUTIFUL LANDMARKS OF WASHINGTON

In the distance, at the left, the domes of the National Museum, the Capitol, the Library of Congress. In the center the Washington Monument. At the right the Lincoln Memorial

d by the White House, the United States preme Court, the United States Capitol, e Washington Monument, the Lincoln emorial, the Shrine of the Unknown Dead; orned by fine churches and cathedrals, an spiration both as to edifice and clergy, rep-senting the national church life in practi-lly every known religious denomination. Here are great structures and centers of ucation, of science, of literature, of law, history, and of art; libraries and muse-ms; ornate government buildings in which e national progress is guided; truly pala-l hotels second to none in the world; far-med restaurants and cafes.

Here are substantial business houses and mplete assortment of wares; street railway stems and motor-bus lines cobweb the town; rlor automobiles tour to Arlington Na-nal Cemetery, pilgrimage to the home and mb of Washington at Mount Vernon and other hallowed spots; bridle paths lead e horsemen into sightful places midst wood-nd and vale only a few minutes distant om the business office; clubs and golf

What a gem is Washington, indeed—richly endowed by nature and design, blessed by the Constitutional fathers, and polished by skillful artificers.

As the Mohammedan yearns for that coveted journey to Mecca, so Americans also possess an inherent desire to visit at least once their National Capital—the most beautiful city in the world.

A Convention City

Please turn the pages of your Bibles for a moment to Chapter 2 describing the Acts of the Apostles and find recorded there that "When the day of Pentecost was fully come, the Apostles were all with one accord in one place." Now we are told that a multitude of men out of every nation under heaven came together there with the Apostles and every man heard the speakers speak in his own language. Out of the deliberations of this great meeting the wonderful work of the church was daily increased. These multitudes of individuals, finally departing their several ways, carried with them for broadcast distribution the information and facts which they had heard. The day of Pentecost therefore may in modern terms and without the slightest intent of irreverence be referred to as one of the earliest purposeful successful conventions held in the history of world civilization.

The value of that convention to the cause for which it was sponsored has not been lost through the passing centuries. Today the convention habit is a booming industry—business, social, political, scientific, educational, labor, fraternal, as well as religious—all manner of conventions—about twelve thousand three hundred to be held in this year of our Lord, 1925, with approximately fifteen million Americans attending conventions last year.

And now the National Council of Congregational Churches plans to meet at "The City Beautiful" for a great convention, Oct. 20-28, 1925. The visitor, no doubt, will come to the National Capital, not only in the spirit of recognition of the fact that knowledge is a precious jewel, and that the serious side of conventions brings knowledge, but also with the understanding that Washington is almost unique among the capitals of the world, in that it was planned for the express purpose of becoming the center of the national life of a great people. Rome, London, and Paris became great capitals through circumstances—Washington through design of its very founders. Not an overhead wire, not an unsightly telegraph or trolley pole obstructs the vision, even the electric street cars are operated from underground conduit supplying their power. An old Victoria, driven by a gray-haired colored coachman, a mammy with her pickaninnies, a President of the United States, a dignified general, a resplendent admiral, a silk-hatted Ambassador—they are all passers-by in this wonderful Capital City.

The White House, Capitol and Mall

The White House—there cannot fail to be a certain fascination in visiting a place where every President of the nation, except its first, has lived; where for over a century the nation's policies have been framed; where there gathered some of the most distinguished statesmen, soldiers, and journalists of the world. The visitor to the White House cannot escape the feeling that within its walls he may gaze backward through the vista of the years to the day when the Republic was young and its history yet unlearned. The White House has changed but comparatively little since its early days.

The most impressive building on earth, covering 153,000 square feet of ground, is the Capitol Building. It is in this great structure that the United States Supreme Court interprets the law as to the constitutional rights of nation, state, and individual, and where the Congress of the United States works out the destinies of the nation and makes federal laws for the people's guidance.

Copyright by Harris and Ewing
THE PRESIDENT'S ROOM IN THE CAPITOL

Situated on the brow of a hill amid a parkage of sixty acres and visible from every direction, its beauty and symmetry make an indelible impression upon the beholder.

The Mall—a woodland dotted with some of the most outstanding buildings and attractions of Washington skirts famous Pennsylvania Avenue on the axis of the United States Capitol and Lincoln Memorial to the banks of the Potomac. In this woodland are found the Botanical Gardens, with conservatories containing large collections of rare and beautiful plants from all parts of the world, even unto the Christ thorn bush. Here is the Smithsonian Institution, in the establishment of which the science of meteorology was given birth, fish culture its inception, and the theory of aeronautics its development of practical value to the whole world. Here is the New National Museum of Natural History and other museums spaciously housing exhibits that entertain, instruct, and interest beyond the power of description. Here is the Freer Gallery of Art, with a collection of early works of the original masters unrivalled in America or Europe. Here are the flower gardens of the Agricultural Department, beautiful beds around the main buildings, old and new.

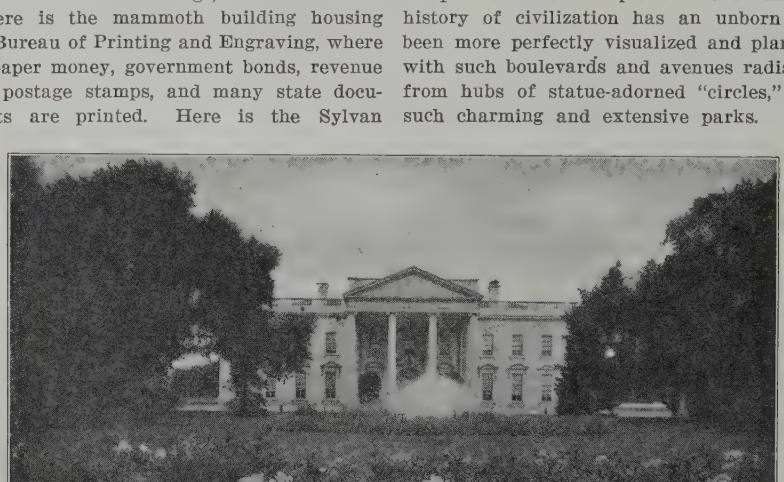
Here is the mammoth building housing the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, where all paper money, government bonds, revenue and postage stamps, and many state documents are printed. Here is the Sylvan Theater for open-air concerts and pageants, the graceful slopes of greensward from the base of Washington Monument forming the auditorium for seats. And here is Washington Monument, tallest work of masonry in the world, the patriarch of obelisks, reaching a height of 555 feet at its apex. Then the memorial to Abraham Lincoln, the impressive approach and setting, the reflecting pool—conceded to be all in all the finest monument ever erected to the memory of a man.

Arlington and Mount Vernon

The placid Potomac ends this axis of the Mall, but across the river into Virginia one sees Arlington National Cemetery, America's military Valhalla, where more than twenty thousand of the nation's sons lie sleeping—generals, admirals, bluejackets, and privates, gathered together awaiting the final reveille. Here is Arlington House, once the residence of General Robert E. Lee, from the wide portico of which is a view of Washington City never to be forgotten. From this view the great round dome of the Capitol, the white-shafted Washington Monument, and the majestic Lincoln Memorial are on a line as straight as an arrow. In Arlington National Cemetery one pauses with great reverence at the tomb of the unknown hero of the great war; we view with admiration the white marble amphitheater, and through the hallowed acres stroll and drive in silent communion with the memory of many great Americans whose deeds of glory and of valor and of sacrifice are again recalled by the serried ranks of markers.

The pilgrimage to Mount Vernon is by boat, by trolley, or by automobile—sweet abiding place—home and tomb of Washington and his wife Martha—every patriotic American's shrine.

It was because of the natural beauty of the topography that l'Enfant and President Washington were able to plan such a city as Washington, even when all was wilderness. Prophetic vision is behind the development of the Capital. Never in the history of civilization has an unborn city been more perfectly visualized and planned, with such boulevards and avenues radiating from hubs of statue-adorned "circles," and such charming and extensive parks.

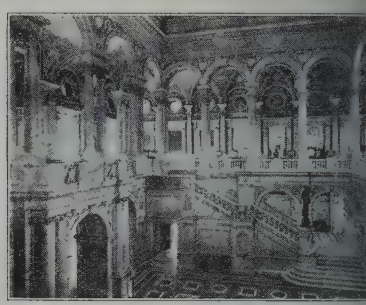


Copyright, Ernest L. Crandall
FRONT VIEW OF THE WHITE HOUSE

Parks and Drives

Consider Rock Creek Park—1,632 a of natural forest, virtually within a sto throw of the business center—11 mile alluring driveway maintained by the Department, and several miles of cr roads within the park and driveways jacent to and circling the edge of the p maintained by the District Governm Through hills and vales and over art bridges, winding hither and thither— automobilist finds enchantment comple almost within an instant transported f panorama of city to nature's most cha ing hinterland. It is all primitive nat This is a happy land for an hour or fo day.

Among the leading scenic places as a p for motoring is National Soldiers' Home the hills three miles north of the Cap Five hundred acres of woodland and tensive farm stretches are ribboned w fine roads, circling miniature lake and posing buildings, tennis court and golf li



Copyright by Harris and Ewing
IN THE CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY

and meadows where graze the finest h of Holstein cattle in America. On t Government estate are comfortably hou more than sixteen hundred men who h served for twenty years in the United Sta Army or who have been disabled by wou or disease, and the magnificent hospi provides medical care for upward of f hundred inmates as maximum capac Vistas of the National Capital from h of Soldiers' Home, and of the Capitol do by day and by night, cannot be duplica elsewhere.

Along the banks of the placid Poto is what is called the "Speedway," a favo drive hugging the banks of the river arou Haynes' Point for several miles, beauti by a retaining wall, a golf course, a bri path, and long stretches of flower beds side the roadway, nurtured and perpetua in season by the expert attention of rep sentatives of the Department of Ag culture. Here the famous cherry blosso spread the perfume of Old Japan in Ap Across the water and in the distance spre the dominions of Virginia and of Maryla Bolling Flying Field contributes life in skies and the Navy Yard is in the pictu where many of the great naval guns made, the real arguments of Peace.

Government Buildings

The visitor must make his or her o choice of Government buildings for sig seeing—there are many of them. Oth places to consider include:

The Weather Bureau, where all foreca

; of weather is worked out and mete-ological conditions are recorded.
The largest printshop in the world, the vernment Printery, with more than five ousand employees.
The testing shop for strength, purity, and andardization of everything worth while the official work of the Bureau of andards.
Drawings and models of inventions, the

Copyright by Harris and Ewing

THE UNITED STATES TREASURY

sults of man's genius, may be seen at the tent Office.
At the Naval Observatory an opportunity given to view the heavens through the 12-ch telescope.
The Army Medical Museum has a most luable collection resulting from scientific dical research of benefit to future genera-ns.
Adjoining Arlington is Fort Myer where r Army's crack cavalry troops, world ned and unequalled in perfection of horsenship, are camped and always subject call.
The home of the Pan-American Union, one the smaller yet among the most beautiful ildings in Washington; the headquarters ilding of the National Red Cross; the rble pile which is headquarters of the ughters of the American Revolution; the rcoran Art Gallery—these adorn another tion near the Ellipse at the foot of Washgton Monument in the vicinity of the hite House.
The half is not yet told. Plan to take ur time when visiting Washington—it ll prove profitable and educational.
Here is a city where the Government alone bburses seventy-five million dollars annu-y in wages to its employees. Here is a nder city to which tourists by the thou-nds come because of its interest and their nse of proprietorship. It is well said that very American is a Washingtonian."
re, in this quiet city, daily transpire events
t will make their impression on the fure, for here every-day history is being itten. One cannot look upon the scenes ere the future destiny of the nation is ing decided without feeling that he has ached the very pulse of our Government d the heart of our nation and felt their ing throbs.
Washington is rapidly growing into a
y of magnificent and imposing churches, tional shrines representative of foreeful
d prevailing religious activity and una-nity over the nation.

THE CALL TO CONGREGATIONALISTS

The Congregationalists are about to erect a great downtown corner edifice to be marked, in the language of Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, the pastor, by catholicity of spirit, freedom of thought, evangelical fervor and consecration of life in loyalty to the leadership of Jesus Christ.

"Tens of thousands of young men and women from all over the country are here in the service of the Government," says Dr. Pierce. "Tens of thousands of visitors are constantly streaming here from every part of the world. The growth of the United States assures the continued growth of its Capital, and the future of Washington spells unlimited opportunity. This is our field for service."

The convention of the National Council of Congregational churches is destined to be an epochal one. Come to quiet Washington, away from the hum of industry and the incidents typical to the rush of a New York subway—to Washington—where young men have time to see visions of beauty and old men to dream dreams in their midst.

Washington's National Council Committees

GENERAL COMMITTEE

Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, Chairman, Rev. George L. Farnham, Rev. Kyle Booth, Rev. Robert W. Brooks, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, Rev. James Brown, Rev. James C. Olden, Pastors; John T. Axton and Evan W. Scott, Chief Chaplains; Mr. Wm. Knowles Cooper, Secretary Y. M. C. A.; Mr. Leonard W. DeGast, Associate Secretary, and the Chairmen of Committees.

MUSIC COMMITTEE

Cleveland Park—Capt. E. W. Scott, 3754 Jocelyn Street, Chevy Chase.
First Church—Mrs. Ruby S. Stahl, Mrs. Tucker.
Ingram—Mrs. Richard J. Jones, 644 A Street S.E.; Charles C. Jacobs, 716 N. Carolina Ave., N.E.
Lincoln Temple—Miss Mary L. Europe, 1008 S Street N.W.
Mt. Pleasant—Mrs. Wayne B. Wheeler, 2605 Adams Mill Road; Norton M. Little (Chairman), 1502 Decatur Street.
People's Church—Miss Alice M. Lewis, 21 P Street N.E.; Maurice Tibbs, 212 Bryant Street N.W.
Plymouth—Mrs. J. C. Olden.

HOUSING AND EQUIPMENT COMMITTEE

Cleveland Park—Prof. Frank Littell, 3704 Porter Street.
First Church—Mr. Roy C. Harbin, 702 Quincy Street N.W.
Ingram—Chas. Beall, 1316 A Street S.E.
Lincoln Temple—W. H. Cowan, 328 U St. N.W.
Mt. Pleasant—Major W. O. Tufts (Chairman), 927 15th Street.
People's Church—Mrs. Maria M. Harris, 615 U Street N.W.
Plymouth—H. R. Adams, 135 P Street N.W.

HOSPITALITY COMMITTEE

Cleveland Park—Capt. F. T. Norcross, 3314 Ross Place; Mrs. John Miller, 3400 Newark Street.
First Church—Mr. and Mrs. Albert Coster.
Ingram—Arthur Robb, 660 Morton Place N.E.; Mrs. C. C. Jacobs, 716 N. Carolina Ave. N.E.
Lincoln Temple—W. A. Baltimore, 208 Elm Street N.W.; Mrs. Bertie B. Lewis, 509 Florida Ave.
Mt. Pleasant—George R. Mansfield, 2067 Park Road N.W.; Mrs. M. Ross Fishburn, 3109 Mt. Pleasant Street.
People's Church—Edward Merritt, 806 First Street N.W.; Mrs. Katie A. Brown, 603 U Street N.W.
Plymouth—Mrs. L. R. Cooper, 925 18th Street N.W.; Mrs. John D. Northrop (Chairman), First Congregational Church; Mr. E. Donald Preston (Vice Chairman), First Congregational Church.

OUTING AND SIGHT-SEEING COMMITTEE

Cleveland Park—Will Stephenson, 2934 Upton Street.
First Church—Mr. Fred A. Woodis, 1501 Kearney St. N.E.
Ingram—Ray L. Smith (Chairman), 1319 Mass. Ave. S.E.
Lincoln Temple—A. L. Hill, 1251 Walter Place S.E.
Mt. Pleasant—Harlan Sanborn, 1754 Kilbourn Place N.W.
People's Church—Arthur French, 1121 Montella Ave. N.E.
Plymouth—John Osborn, 1911 S Street N.W.

COMMITTEE ON WELCOME

Cleveland Park—Don Whitman, 1656 Euclid Street, Apt. 22.
First Church—W. W. Gilbert, 3534 11th St.
Ingram—George Smith, 1314 D Street N.E.
Lincoln Temple—L. G. Cuney, 134 Seaton Pl.
Mt. Pleasant—Mrs. Sidney Jacobs, 1473 Harvard Street N.W.
People's Church—Van B. Matthews, 3115 11th Street N.W.
Plymouth—J. H. Prater, 1718 15th St. N.W.

FINANCE COMMITTEE

Cleveland Park—Charles S. Shreve, 1222 Connecticut Ave.
First Church—Hugh A. Thrift, Union Trust Building.
Ingram—Arthur P. Black, 1328 N. Carolina Ave. N.E.
Lincoln Temple—Z. P. Moore, 2535 Georgia Ave.
Mt. Pleasant—Percy Russell, 15th and K. Sts.
People's Church—Major Edward L. Webster, 208 Elm Street N.W.
Plymouth—James T. Neill, 906 T Street.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

Cleveland Park—Robert Wilson, 2747 Macomb Street.
First Church—Harry D. Smith.
Ingram—George A. Morgan, 424 Fourth St. N.E.
Lincoln Temple—Oliver R. Rogers, 768 Fairmont Street N.W.
Mt. Pleasant—Mrs. G. W. Frizzell, The Northumberland.
People's Church—Charles H. Browne, 1208 5th Street N.W.
Plymouth—James T. Neill, Esq. (Chairman), 906 T Street.

Our Churches at the Capital

Those Who Join in Entertaining the National Council

THE strength of Congregationalism at the Nation's Capital is in spirit rather than in numbers. After sixty years of effort in this rapidly growing city of half a million souls, we have but seven Congregational churches. Four of these are white, three are colored, and together they enroll about four thousand resident members.

REV. JASON NOBLE PIERCE, D.D.
Pastor of First Church. Chairman of Washington Committee for the National Council

Before the Civil War, Washington was an extremely pro-slavery city, dominated by Southern influence. Congregationalists were looked upon as Northern abolitionists, disliked by clergy, bar, and inhabitants generally. In the face of open hospitality the first effort made in 1847 to establish a Congregational church failed within a year; the second effort made in 1852 lasted for six years; and not until 1865, when the results of the Civil War had changed the population and sentiment of the city, did the effort to establish a firm and continuing Congregational church in the Capital prove availing.

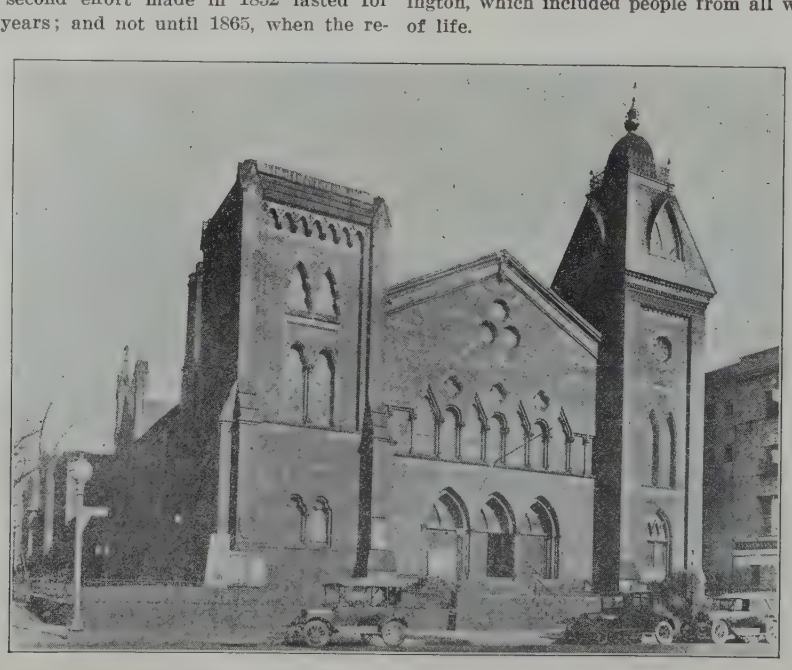
FIRST CHURCH

Just sixty years ago the present First Congregational Church was organized, and within three years it built and occupied its present edifice at Tenth and G Streets, five blocks east of the United States Treasury, one block north of Ford's Theater, where Lincoln was killed, and one block west of the site the French architect, L'enfant, planned for a National American Church, but where the Patent Office was built instead.

The first minister, Dr. Charles Boynton, was made chaplain of the House of Representatives, and the church met in the Hall of Representatives during the construction of their church edifice. To this day many outsiders speak of it as the First "Congressional" Church.

Dr. Jeremiah Rankin wrote the Christian Endeavor Hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," while he was minister. These two men were followed by Drs. S. M. Newman, S. H. Woodrow, J. T. Stocking, J. L. Gordon, and the present pastor, Dr. Jason Noble Pierce.

First Church has been the mother of Congregationalism in this region, and from her Howard University, the largest Negro university in the world, was born. Such men as Generals Oliver O. Howard and Eliphalet Whittlesey, Rev. E. W. Robinson, W. R. Hooper, Dr. William W. Patton, Justice David J. Brewer of the Supreme Court, and Dr. John W. Bischoff, who though blind was more than organist and choir director for 35 years, impressed their spirit within the largest congregations assembled in Washington, which included people from all walks of life.



FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, WASHINGTON

As First Church became a down- church it has grown stronger. Its mem ship has steadily increased and is now a 1300. Its constituency enrolls less chants but more people prominent in entific, educational, and professional w of life than ever before. Most of its m bers are government employees on lim salaries, but the income and missio benevolences of the church have ste risen. Its young people's work has outgrown the church building. Preac missions, Bible pageantry, concerts lectures, a well developed religious ed tion program, and the bringing of lea

REV. WALTER A. MORGAN
Pastor of Mt. Pleasant Church

preachers of America and Britain for th months every summer, have given F Church a unique and broad ministry.

Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, the present m ister, received his B.A. and D.D. degr from Amherst, and his B.D. degree fr Yale. He has been president of the Wa ington Federation of Churches.

Rev. Franklin I. Winter, the assist minister, received his B.A. from Colg and his B.D. from Rochester.

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH

The Mt. Pleasant Church is the outgrow of a movement begun in 1870 by the Chr tian people residing in Mt. Pleasant, w found it impossible, because of the distan and lack of transportation facilities, to tend churches to which they belonged in t city. Services were held at first in t homes and then in the public school roo Out of a nucleus of folk who were interest in the religious life of the community Christian Association was formed, and the numbers grew a small building was q quired. Rev. Charles H. Small was t first pastor and he was succeeded by Re M. Ross Fishburn. Before Dr. Fishburn untimely death the church had grown in its present building and a large and devot membership had been gathered. Dr. Fis was followed by Rev. Frank Goodwin, , and he was followed by Rev. Clarence Vincent, D.D. The Church is one of the ngest of all denominations in the city. membership of over a thousand persons nade up of leading business, scientific, literary men and women of Washington. he northwest section of the city, it at- ts to itself those residential people who re liberty of thought coupled with Chris- warmth. Its missionary budget is ex- ling and its home work is progressing. new workers have been added to the the past summer and the future gives ise of increasing power. The Women's

MOUNT PLEASANT CHURCH

REV. ROBERT W. BROOKS
Pastor of Lincoln Memorial Temple

l of the church is one of the most e and efficient organizations of women e city.

v. Walter A. Morgan, the present pastor, n from the old First Church in Dover, Hampshire. Mr. Morgan is a graduate artmouth College in the class of 1911 and received the M.A. degree in course in 1912. He received his theological training at Bangor Seminary. As one of the younger men of the city he has entered into the life of the churches with enthusiasm. Especially interested in interpreting religion to the minds of the young, he is preacher and lecturer at numerous Northern and Southern colleges. The high quality of the men and women who ally themselves with Mt. Pleasant Church and the chairmanship of the committee on comity and polity of the Washington Federation of Churches and the presidency of the Washington Pastors' Federation show a regard for Mr. Morgan's leadership at Mt. Pleasant.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL TEMPLE

LINCOLN MEMORIAL CONGREGATIONAL TEMPLE

Lincoln Memorial Church grew out of what was known as Lincoln Mission, which was organized by the American Missionary Association, Jan. 1, 1869.

During the winter in 1880 eight members of the First Church of Washington formed a club which became the nucleus of the Lincoln Memorial Church. On March 10, 1881, this church was organized with Rev. S. P. Smith as pastor. Mr. Smith served until June, 1883. Rev. J. M. Shippen supplied the pulpit until the fall of 1883, when Rev. George W. Moore, a graduate of Fisk University and of Oberlin Theological Seminary, began his pastorate which continued until 1892.

From 1892 to 1896 Rev. Eugene Johnson was pastor. Then Rev. A. P. Miller, a graduate of Fisk University, and for some years a missionary to Africa, was pastor from October, 1896, to July, 1901.

On Oct. 1, 1901, Lincoln Memorial and Park Temple were united and became Lincoln Memorial Congregational Temple. Rev. Sterling N. Brown, who was pastor of Park Temple, became permanent pastor of the united church.

On June 11, 1915, Rev. Emory B. Smith was ordained and installed as pastor. Un-

REV. JAMES C. OLDEN
Pastor of Plymouth Church

der Mr. Smith the membership of the church was greatly increased and the title of the property was transferred to the church. After serving the church for eight years Mr. Smith resigned Sept. 9, 1923, to become field agent for Howard University.

The present pastor, Rev. R. W. Brooks, was called to the pastorate November, 1923, and began active service Dec. 31, 1923.

Mr. Brooks was born near Memphis, Tenn., June 7, 1892. His early training was at LeMoyne Normal Institute, Memphis. He received his A.B. degree at Fisk University in 1916. He continued his education at the University of Chicago, receiving his A.M. degree in 1918, and his B.D. degree from the same institution in 1919. While teaching in Memphis, Tenn., in 1920, he supplied the Second Congregational Church for eight months. He was called to the pastorate of Plymouth Church, Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1, of the same year. There he was doing a most splendid work when he was called to Washington.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH

People's Church

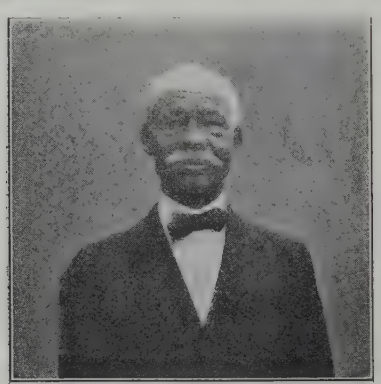
Since the beginning of his pastorate the work of the church has gone forward in a notable way. The membership of the church is well beyond the seven hundred mark. Plans are now being laid for the early beginning of an adequate modern building.

Plymouth Church

The history of Plymouth Church is a small reduplication of the history of the Congregational Church as a whole. A group of forward-looking men and women having grown tired, as they stated it, of the despotism of the bishopric of the A. M. E. Church, decided to form an independent body. So in 1881 sixty-three folks thus minded formed themselves into a body known as "The First Congregational Methodist Church of Washington, D. C." The first meeting of the group was held at the home of Mrs. Hannah Davis on L St., afterward using Salem Baptist Church Sunday



Rev. James Brown, D.D.
Pastor of People's Church

afternoons and later holding most of the services in a Catholic hall.

Very soon the people grew weary of their independent position and sought fellowship with the Congregational Church. Their acting pastor, Mr. William T. Peele, a local preacher in the A. M. E. Church, was ordained in the First Congregational Church in November, 1881, and the church was received into the Congregational family. The following April, when the New Jersey Association met at First Church, the little band which had just before changed its name to Plymouth was received into the membership of this association.

Under Mr. Peele's administration the present site was purchased and the present church building was erected at the corner of Seventeenth and P Sts. Northwest. Valuable assistance was rendered by Howard

Rev. Kyle Booth
Pastor of Ingram Memorial Church

University, the First Church, and Lincoln Temple in the early struggles of this congregation.

During her entire history Plymouth has had only four pastors. She assumed self-support almost from the beginning and the majority of her members know of the several societies as organizations to be helped rather than societies to help her. This is the first and only church to make a thousand dollar annual benevolent contribution to the denomination as far as colored churches are concerned.

Ingram Memorial Church

Rev. Sterling N. Brown, D.D., served this church for eight years, Rev. A. C. Garner, D.D., for 24 years, and Rev. James Clarence Olden, a graduate of Fisk University both in arts and theology, is completing the fourth year of his pastorate with distinction.

People's Church

During the year 1891 several hu Christian people withdrawing from a odist church of this city organized the ent People's Congregational Church. were led by Mr. Charles Young and others, being assisted in the organizati Rev. Dr. S. M. Newman of the First C Rev. Sterling N. Brown, D.D., and Dr.

Cleveland Park Church

Rankin, both of Howard University. the organization of the church Rev. Daly was called as their first pastor. present edifice was erected during 189

Rev. James Brown, D.D., the presen ing pastor who has been serving for four years, is the dean of our cler length of service. He was born Sep 1854 at Frederickstead, St. Croix, I West Indies (Virgin Islands) and att the Government schools of Frederick during early boyhood. For ten yea was a sailor in the merchant marine Danish, American, and British flags, ing all parts of the world. Afterwar spent six years as a student at Tall College, Talladega, Ala., five years of were spent in the theological depar there, graduating in 1889, served as of three different Congregational chu

Rev. George L. Farnham
Pastor of Cleveland Park Church in Alabama covering a period of t four years.

Ingram Memorial Church

The Ingram Memorial Church at Street and Massachusetts Avenue, N holds the distinction of being the firs stitutional church erected in Washing handsome building was the gift of . H. Ingram as a memorial to his Although living in the West, Mr. In- followed the advice of Rev. J. W. ll in making this gift to Washington. Church contributed the site and aided payment of current expenses.

present membership is 425. Rev. Booth, B.A. Mt. Union, B.D. Oberlin, resent minister, came to this pastorate r ago from Plymouth Church, Scran- Pa., and is carrying on a strong work.

CLEVELAND PARK CHURCH

youngest church at the capital is land Park Congregational Church, and Lowell Streets, N. W. Founded 17 largely through the financial sup- of First Church and under the guiding rate of Dr. L. L. Royce, this church become a community enterprise in the est residential part of Washington. r the pastorates of Dr. Royce and Dr. rd D. Eaton, this church met in a ble chapel. The third pastor, Rev. r E. Bigelow, led in the construction e first units of their ultimate building, eautiful parish house and parlors being ous and well designed for growing ser- When Rev. George L. Farnham, B.A. Iowa, B.D. Yale, came to this pastorate a year ago, the church had 123 members, the Sunday school 200. Since then both have doubled in membership, and under the strong ministry and inspiring preaching of Mr. Farnham the church will soon become one of the most influential in the city. Interestingly enough, one third of the congregation is made up of Army and Navy officers.

Copyright by Harris and Ewing

THE BRITISH EMBASSY IN WASHINGTON

In addition to these seven churches in Washington proper, there are two suburban churches which belong to the same Association: that at Capitol Heights, Md., which enjoys the ministry of Rev. Pearse Pinch; and that at Vanderwerken, Va., where Mr. Harvey Goddard, a licentiate preacher and a member of First Church, is carrying forward a useful ministry.

Congregationalism at the Nation's Capital is forward looking, spirited, co-operative, and an increasingly vital influence in religious leadership.

On Reading Dr. Gordon's "My Education and Religion"

By Allen Eastman Cross

The grace of God is on the tower,
When the great sun goes home!
Patient and still, the little stars
Out of the vast deep come.

So looms the soul, aglow for Thee,
Greatly serene and strong,
And lights are rising in our sky
That to Thy realm belong.

Dream not, the glory is complete;
Say not, the day is done;
While through the dark the high tower waits
The splendor of the Sun!

Courage, that dared the fagots' flare,
For freedom and a Name,
The flame of God is on the tower—
Now, smite our souls with flame!

A Prayer for the Meeting of the National Council

By Ozora Stearns Davis

GRACIOUS Heavenly Father, Giver of Wisdom and Guardian of thy people in all generations, hear us as we pray for thy blessing upon the National Council of the Congregational Churches. We thank thee for the Church which is the Body of Christ and the faithful Witness of truth through the long centuries. We confess its frequent lapse and failure and we pray thy patience and pardon for thy people; but we give thee our hearty thanks for the men and women who have united in its fellowship, kindled their faith at its altars, and become the champions of truth in its beneficent activities.

We have and hold thy treasure in earthen vessels, and we are weak and imperfect instruments for the accomplishment of thy holy will on earth. Yet we thank thee for the brave and useful work which thy children have already done and we take hope for the future from what has been wrought by thy help in the past. Help us to undertake great projects because we trust in thee. May our future adventures be as unselfish and heroic as were those of our Pilgrim founders. We pray for the continued enlightenment of thy people. Give them ever higher and holier incentives for their corporate action in the work of the expanding Church.

We thank thee for that growing sense of fellowship which brings us together in our common meetings for counsel and encouragement. Give, we pray thee, wisdom and courage to our representatives as they meet in the National Council at Washington. May our leaders be loyal to the separate interests entrusted to them and also ready to yield to the larger benefit and the common good. Deliver them from all discord as they sit together in the Council. Enrich each one from hours of fellowship in Christ. May the Master himself be vivid and supreme among them.

Help us to explore more widely the ranges of truth. Help us to plan more courageously for the expansion of thy Kingdom. Take graciously into thy care every congregation of thy people. Bless our human labors as we seek to make Jesus the Master of our own lives and of the communities in which we live. Turn the minds of our young men and women to Christian vocations in all needy places around the world. Prosper our plans and provide the resources for the missionary enterprises of our people. Increase the sense of responsibility for the use of every gift on the part of thy children. May the deliberations and decisions of the Council promote these great ends. Keep us from all selfish ambition and fuse our people into new and abiding unity by renewal of loyalty to the Master, whom we love and serve. In his name we pray,

Amen.

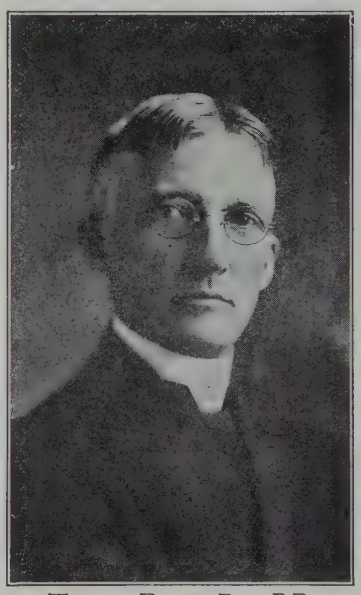
Prominent Figures in the National Council

ROCKWELL HARMON POTTER, D.D.
Moderator of the National Council

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE
Honorary Moderator of the National Council

S. PARKES CADMAN, D.D.
President of the Federal Council of Ch

CHARLES EMERSON BURTON. D.D.
Secretary of the National Council



WILLIAM HORACE DAY, D.D.
Chairman of the Committee of Twelve on Organization

FREDERICK L. FAGLEY, D.D.
Associate Secretary and Publicity Direct the Council

WILLIAM M. JARDINE
Secretary of Agriculture

CURTIS D. WILBUR
Secretary of the Navy

HERBERT HOOVER
Secretary of Commerce

Welcome to Washington

Jason Noble Pierce
Chairman Washington Committee

HURRAH!

For two years we have eagerly awaited our coming, and now you are nearly here. With glad hearts we bid you Welcome Come!

"Home"? Yes, for Washington is your ity. The capital belongs to the whole ountry. It and we are here for your serv- e. If you find our schools overcrowded, ir streets prettily lighted, but poorly il- uminated, just remember that most of us ho live here cannot vote. Welcome to the ity which you govern.

Congregationalists in Washington consti- ute no wealthy aristocracy. They are a brainy democracy working as do most Washingtonians for the Government. We may lack palatial homes, but there's no lack of hospitality in our hearts. If we have no yards, we enjoy the parks,—and the Ball Park where Bucky Harris and his triumphant crew welcome the world.

Welcome to this city of churches. We have all of the denominations represented, and then for good measure there are Northern Baptists and Southern Baptists, Methodists North and Methodists South, and all varieties of Presbyterians. But the churches are one in fraternal spirit, warmly evangelical, united in loyalty to Jesus Christ.

Congress will not be in session while you're here. 'Tis a pity you cannot see your chosen representatives in action!!! Thank God for earnest, Christian men and women in all branches of government.

Welcome to the city beautiful, the city teeming with youth, where the old is giving way to the new, cosmopolitan and American.

What will you do here besides listening and talking and sight-seeing?

Anything for the unity of religion?

Anything for the brotherhood of the world?

Messages from Former Moderators

More Strength to Your Arm"

By Nehemiah Boynton
Moderator 1910–1913

By reason of its very genius Congregationism has always been and is now being urled from change to change unceasingly, s soul wings never furled."

This is the environment of our hope and our hazard as well.

It is true of our fellowship, possibly never ore so, as Cromwell once said to his solers, "We are upon an engagement very fficult."

Even so! There is nothing to fear and erything to inspire! Nothing unusual for !

Independence can be pitiably provincial, t it can be comprehensive! This last for ! Independence can be so cautious as to practically recalcitrant, which means erally, "Kicking back." No overdone rinciple of it for us! Independence can courageous! More of it for us!

The prayer of Paul for the Philippians is sonant with the spirit of courage. "It my prayer that your love may be more d more rich in knowledge and all manner insight, enabling you to have a sense of hat is vital."

Courage is love, enriched in knowledge, enrged in insight, and disciplined by "a nse of what is vital."

More strength to your arm, Congregaonalism! More and still more vitality to ur inherent, historic, Pilgrim, Christnitten spirit.

Must Be Intensely Vital

By Charles R. Brown
Moderator 1913–1915

In these days the church needs to have s head clear, its muscles tense, and its eart warm with love for God and man. here are many people—not all of them icked and foolish people by any means—ho are saying, "Who will show us any od in the modern church?" We cannot ford merely to mark time or to render a erfunctory service. The message, the acon, and the aspiration of the church in the face of these world-wide needs must be intensely vital.

Rare Fellowship in Service

By Henry M. Beardsley
Moderator 1915–1917

We will, in this month of October, hold in Washington City the biennial gathering of our National Council. This will be a great occasion. Representatives of our churches throughout the United States, missionaries from foreign lands and the home land, the lay and secretarial representatives of our great societies, and many others will be there. We will learn what is being done by our fellowship throughout the world; will see what is yet possible to be accomplished beyond what we have accomplished in the past; and will, under God's leadership, plan for the doing of these things in the days next ahead.

There are few associations permitted to us where so little of self-interest and so much of benevolent purpose control all concerned, as is true in these Council meetings. We will have rare fellowship in planning for a noble, useful service. I congratulate all who may be privileged to be present.

The Challenge of the Hour

By William Horace Day
Moderator 1917–1919

We Congregationalists go to our National Council to find our souls, for we have not arrived. To our churches a task has been given. We have been content to hold our own—both in progress as a fellowship of churches and in personal character—

"Change your mind, get a new attitude, a nobler and more adventurous outlook. Your Kingdom opportunity is very near—" That is Christ's challenge to us. We need the open mind in the discussion of forms of organization, to change our minds whether our tendency is to be content with what is and refuse the divine urge to attempt greater things because we do not expect greater things from God, or our temptation is to think lightly of drastic changes and be willing to deal carelessly with Kingdom interests to which many are giving the most arduous and devoted service. No one of us but needs to hear our Lord's challenge.

But this challenge is much more important personally. If we come down to our house from Washington with nothing but specifications for improved organization we will be of the sear and yellow spirit. "We are suffering from inherited religion and need to substitute for it experienced religion," was a wise word spoken at the Conference at Stockholm. That is largely the secret "of our unhappy divisions" in Christendom. It is in no small degree the reason for our failures in service as Christians. We are personally satisfied with the religion which was once delivered to some one else. We are not determined to live by an experience of religion of our own. "Our age is disenchanted of ancient creeds." It is devoted to "ideals that concern this world only." There is poignant longing for something deeper—the most socially minded find that, in spite of beautiful dreams of a new and perfect world as soon as food, raiment, and housing are abundant. Man cannot live by bread alone. Our churches can help such only as its leaders are leaders in a religion that is experienced. Even more the disciples of Christ are among the multitude of Conformists who call themselves by Christ's name and "deviate but slightly from the greed and covetousness which corrupt modern life." The only light that will help them to reality and newness of life is the contagion of an experienced religion. Our great search as we go up together is to find and know the living God.

Education and Unity

By Henry Churchill King
Moderator 1919–1921

Whatever the changes that may come in the mechanism and organization of the denomination at the coming meeting of the National Council, I venture to express two earnest hopes: first, that the denomination may keep and still further develop a strong sense of nation-wide responsibility for Christian higher education—much more than it has ever yet done; and second, that the Council will do all in its power to hasten the union of the Universalists and Congregationalists; for this seems to me one of the most promising possibilities in the direction of greater Christian unity.

The Great Need

By William E. Barton
Moderator 1921–1923

With high head and confident hope the tribes of the Lord who are of the Congregational fellowship go up to the nation's capital for their national gathering. Unvexed by divisive questions of doctrine, and with no troublesome questions save those that belong to their own growth and progress, they are in greater need of clear vision than when sharp issues compel them to take sides, and causes are already defined. Unity of spirit they already have; equipment for service in effective organization is measurably theirs; their great need now is not more or better machinery but more of spiritual power, more of vision and faith and courage to move on.

Parables of Safed the Sage

The Parable of Defective Transmission

I have a friend who hath an Automobile. And I am thankful to the Giver of all good things for having provided so many of my friends with Automobiles. And he came unto me, and said, Come with me and have a little ride.

And I said, I am a slave of the lamp, and I must sit at this old Typewriter and pound out some stuff for the Printer.

And he said, Give the Printer a rest, and thy Readers also. If it tireth thee, what must it do to them? Come and have a ride.

And I went with him. And for a good while we rode very happily. But the Car began to snort and buck like a Broncho, and we stopped and got out.

And I walked around it, and looked wise, while he lifted the hood and explored the Viscera of his Car.

And he said, It hath Defective Transmission, but we can remedy that.

And what he did I know not, but he did something, and we got back in the car, and finished the day's run with joy.

And there came unto me a man who had a Pet Reform, and he sought to interest me in it. And the more he talked the more I knew that however great the need of that Reform, he never could meet it. For between the need and his Proposed Remedy was his own Defective Mental Transmission.

And it was painful to behold him so manifestly sincere, yet so fatally incompetent, sputtering his useless platitudes and hitting on his One Cylinder, and never getting anywhere.

And I had not the heart to rebuke him, for that would have done no good. Neither had I courage to aid him, for I knew that it would be a waste.

And I sighed a great sigh for the Good Causes that languish because the men that are capable care not for them, and they that care have Defective Transmission.

Young People's Week-End in Washington

Young people have an alluring opportunity to visit Washington during the National Council meeting. The plan provides for three days in Washington, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Oct. 23, 24, and 25. On Friday and Saturday the sight-seeing will include the Capitol, Arlington Cemetery, Mount Vernon, Lincoln Memorial, Hall of Science, National Research Council Building, Bureau of Printing and Engraving, National Cathedral, Congressional Library, Washington Monument, and the White House. At each point visited a brief address will be given by a distinguished speaker, including Attorney General Sargent, Dr. E. E. Slosson, Maj.-Gen. J. A. Lejeune, Bishop James E. Freeman, Dr. Rockwell H. Potter, Bishop W. G. McDowell, Secretary C. D. Wilbur and Secretary W. M. Jardine.

The young people will be received at the White House by President and Mrs. Coolidge, and it is expected that a group photograph will be taken there. Chief Chaplain E. W. Scott of the Navy is Chairman of the Young People's Reception Committee and Mrs. Coolidge is Honorary Chairman.

The visiting young people will be recognized as Associate Members of the National Council and admitted to its sessions. The programs for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evening and Sunday afternoon were prepared with them in view, the speakers including Dr. Cadman, Dr. James Gordon Gilkey, Rev. Robbins W. Barstow, and Miss Slattery. Special young people's services will be held on Sunday.

The plan of transportation includes Pullman cars to arrive in Washington early Friday morning, the cars to be occupied nights in Washington to save hotel bills.

Copyright by Harris and Ewing
THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Wherever 25 people start from any one given point a special car will be provided; wherever 125 people start from one point a special train will be provided. For the use of Pullman cars going to and from Washington, and for occupation while in Washington a rate of $12.10 is quoted from Boston, Springfield, Providence, and New London; New Haven, Bridgeport, and Waterbury, $11.34; Hartford, $11.84; Philadelphia, New York, and Pittsburgh, $10.6 Cleveland, $11.12. These constitute t main points it is hoped to cover.

Send $1 registration fee to Rev. Geor Reid Andrews, Congregational Educati Society, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, a get from him full information, immediate

An Answer to "Enquiring Layman" on Report of the Committee of Twelve

I rather think the "Enquiring Layman" h not seen the fifth tentative report of the Co mittee, issued in print as the July and Augu numbers of the Congregational News Lett but rather has based his comments on t mimeographed copy issued immediately af the Committee's conference at Lake Moho in May. With the issuance of that report May the Committee asked for the reaction the country and as means of obtaining th published the report in The Congregationali and held several conferences in New York; o with a large group of secretaries and other re resentatives of the societies, and one in Broa way Tabernacle, at which a large and repr sentative group of trustees, secretaries, sta superintendents, ministers, and laymen we present. At both of these meetings very vi criticisms of the report and many constructi suggestions were made. Reactions on the r port have come in from all over the count

When the Committee of Twelve adjourned May to meet again in October, it appointed c tain of its members to hold these meetings a edit its tentative report. The editing committ issued the tentative report in May exactly drawn up by the Committee. After the Broa way Tabernacle meeting it issued the report the Congregational News Letter, with sever slight corrections such as could be made witho the sanction of the whole committee. This r port was accompanied in the same letter (1) a brief analysis of the report, (2) a seri of questions, (3) a statement of "Consider tions which lead the Committee to Present t Foregoing Report," (4) a "Sketch of t principal changes in Congregational Missiona Organization," and (5) "Experiences of Oth Denominations Bearing on Proposals."

During the summer the members of the Co mittee have been in touch with all elements the denomination, and are conversant with t reactions of the churches to this report. T members have also made many special studi determined upon at Lake Mohonk and as outcome of subsequent conferences. It is n improbable that before it is presented to t National Council the report will be modified several respects, so as to present as thorough worked out a scheme as possible for a tw society organization.

In a very real way the present report is t outcome of a movement begun at the fir meeting of the National Council in 1874 wh a committee was appointed to consider t feasibility of consolidation with a view to e ciency and economy. The present committ has wrestled long and hard with the proble involved, the plan has been thought out a prayed over idea by idea and word by wor The two-society plan has come as the unan mous judgment of the members as to what f the denomination and what is the urgent d mand of the country.

It is the writer's hope to make a long and more explicit statement in the next numb of The Congregationalist when more space w be available.

A LAYMAN OF THE COMMITTEE OF TWELV

Impressions from Our Watch-Towers

From East to West Among Our Churches

Good Fellowship and Progress

By Rockwell Harmon Potter

Moderator of the National Council

One who has had any opportunity to visit ngregational churches and gatherings in ferent parts of the country during the past o years will be grateful first of all for e spirit of cordial good fellowship that ounds among the rank and file of the min-ers and of the lay folk who are bearing e responsibility of the work of the urches. We are happy in being free from eological suspicions and from the ambi-ns of ecclesiastical politics. Our rela-ns with one another are friendly, cordial, l brotherly. For this let us thank God, o has given to us this spirit of good ll toward one another.

As a body of Christian people we are sirous of finding the best way of doing rt part of the total Christian task which providence of God has committed to us. e have differences of opinion as to methods work, for we are descended from the hers who were vigorous in their thinking l who were given a good measure of ividual initiative, but we are cordially ted in our desire to do our work and find the best way of doing it. Given this ire we ought to be able at Washington solve our immediate problems of pro-lure with a fine spirit of co-operative husiasm.

We rejoice in the increase in the total mbership of our churches. This increase not as great as we had hoped that it would but it is sufficient to assure us that the ngelical and evangelistic spirit con-ues among us. Would that it might be-ne universal throughout all our congregations. The number of churches has some-what decreased, but let us remember that is probable that this number ought to decreased still further. In many other ances in our old New England com-unities our churches ought to be united to the best work in the future, and in many sion fields federations or mergers of some e ought to be undertaken with churches other denominations. Fewer churches may mean better work in the immediate future.

Copyright by Harris and Ewing

STATE, WAR, AND NAVY BUILDING

So let us come to the Council without pride or boasting but with gratitude and with hope, in humility and sincerity of purpose to seek the guidance of the Spirit of God for our common work which we believe is part of the great work of the gospel of our Lord for all men.

The Trend of Negro Churches

By Charles Wesley Burton

Assistant Moderator of the National Council

As Assistant Moderator of the National Council it has been my privilege to visit practically all of the larger and some of the smaller Negro churches since the Springfield meeting. To the careful observer there are signs of progress among these churches that are worthy of note.

In the South we find a new movement and growing enthusiasm among the young people of our churches, evidenced by their increasing summer conferences and new interest in missions. In Louisiana a movement destined to become nation-wide has been started by the young people to raise money for a McDowell home in Angola, West Africa, and they are pledging themselves to make an annual sacrificial offering until their goal is achieved. A new and growing spirit of self-help is apparent everywhere, and several of our churches have come to self-support. They are demanding a better trained and more efficient ministry and are paying larger salaries than ever before. Our ministers have caught a new vision of self-improvement and are attending summer conferences, retreats, and even some of our best summer schools.

In the North emphasis is being placed on building up large effective churches in strategic centers. In Boston Clifford Miller is leading his church to a new vision of service and is building up an effective organization; in Springfield Dr. DeBerry is doing the most effective work among all our churches; in New Haven Rev. Mr. Goin has built up a fine organization and created a new spirit and interest in community betterment; in New York Drs. Garner and Proctor are doing a telling piece of work, Dr. Garner having lined up five hundred new members in four years and paid fifty thousand dollars cash for a well-equipped church; in Buffalo S. O. B. Johnson has finally triumphed in securing a fine place of worship for his people, with ample facilities for social service; in Cleveland Director Kingsley has led Mt. Zion into the acquisition of the largest and best equipped church plant in the city; in Chicago Lincoln Memorial has purchased a parsonage and an additional lot for building purposes, and Lincoln Memorial in Los Angeles has come to self-support and purchased a parsonage. So the story runs throughout the nation.

The burning interest of the Negro churches is the McDowell work in Africa. Our churches received him with great enthusiasm during his furlough last year and responded splendidly to his great appeal. These churches are undertaking to build up, man and support the new Galangue Station in Angola, planted by McDowell in 1923. Thus far they have wrought well and the end is not yet.

The Negro churches are greatly concerned about the report and recommendations of the Committee of Twelve! Their delegates to the National Council will go to Washington instructed by all our Southern state conferences to vote for the maintenance of the American Missionary Association at all hazards should action on the Committee's report be called for at the forthcoming meeting. Representatives of our Northern churches seem to favor the reduction of our national missionary societies, even to the extent of merging the A. M. A. with existing or newly created organizations. Some of us have done hard thinking on this whole proposition of proposed mergers and the final proposal of the Committee of Twelve has much in it to be commended. Personally, I think the proposal to have only two societies or boards with the necessary departments, conserving the genius, spirit, and experience already attained by existing societies, would be in the interest of greater efficiency and a quicker realization of the Kingdom of God.

Lincoln Memorial Church, Chicago.

Statistical and Spiritual Gains

By Charles Emerson Burton

Secretary of the National Council

We shall report at Washington splendid gains in the biennium since the last meeting of the National Council. The additions to our churches—138,019—has been equaled only twice in the history of the denomination, and this in recent years. So also the net gain is among the best records of the denomination, meaning that while we have fewer churches these are constantly gaining in strength and power.

The Sunday school enrollment is larger by 6,369 than in any previous year, and 7,811 above the record at Springfield. In finances the gain has been notable. Property values are over $20,000,000 above those reported two years ago. Nearly $5,000,000 more was spent for the carrying on of the work of the church than in the preceding two years. Invested funds show an increase of $2,600,000. Gifts on the apportionment were $381,316 more than in the preceding biennium, thus maintaining the gain since the war time of 150 per cent in benevolences and of 80 per cent in home expenses. The record in per capita giving had reached $25.64 two years ago; it is now $28.08.

But statistics are simply indices of spiritual reality. As I go about among the churches I find a splendid temper and fine development; courage is manifest everywhere; optimism is the prevailing note. The pessimistic voice is seldom heard in our conferences.

There is also a spirit of co-operation abroad. This applies not only to our common endeavors in missionary work but to mutual helpfulness in the total work of the church. The rapid development of the interest of the young people in our summer and week-end conferences is also one of the most hopeful and promising features of our church life.

Then there is a constant growth in the efficiency of our organization in states and cities.

Of course it would be possible to pick out points where we could wish for better things, but the sum total of our life is most heartening.

"Time to Get a Move on" in the Southeast

By Frank R. Shipman

Atlanta Seminary

Southeast Congregationalism is divided into two parts,—Florida and the other states.

At present the Florida churches enlist more interest. Yet today's wonderful boom will break. Still, every Florida acre will remain. The state has been definitely discovered as a comfortable home for shiverers from Minnesota to Maine. So, since the last meeting of the National Council even, the status of Florida Congregational pastors and laymen have distinctly altered. The state is no longer a refuge for invalid or aged ministers, where all a layman is expected to do is to pay a small amount towards an elderly pastor's room and board. All that is changed. Florida is going to be one of the Union's great states. Vigorous pastors are desired for large congregations. The churches are realizing that churches with such a future call for eager devotion.

It would be unfortunate if glowing descriptions in The Congregationalist of a few Florida churches should lead readers to think that Congregational engineers have entered that land as a conquering host. On the contrary, our Home Missionary Society has been able to give relatively little help. Our doings are small compared with those of the Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians. But now is the accepted time and, if we do not act now, we shall soon find that the Amorites and the Israelites have pre-empted all the corner lots, and the other denominations all the church life of the communities. The Southeast would like to use the vernacular to say to the National Council, "It is time to get a move on."

For the rest of the Southeast, listen to this. In the town of Quitman, Ga., a certain pastor (not of our church), ending a recent sermon, called all disbelievers in evolution to rise. The packed house rose en masse with five exceptions,—the superintendent of schools, the high school principal, and three high school teachers. The Dayton trial has brought these two parties face to face with unfortunate suddenness. Additional Fundamentalist sermons are not needed by either party, Modernist sermons are not wanted by either party, but some enlightened Christian sermons would be acceptable to all.

Encouragement for the Middle-West

By Ernest Bourner Allen

Pilgrim Church, Oak Park, Illinois

One's impressions change from time to time, as we correct or broaden our viewpoint. The Congregationalist will serve us all by gathering up the viewpoints of many workers, in widely remote places, so that we may compare them with our own. Let me modestly suggest some present impressions of our Congregational family, which seem to me important: First, there appears to be a reasonable satisfaction among us that our churches are not in a condition of doctrinal controversy but rather are engaged in an earnest endeavor to find the most fruitful forms of organization for carrying on our work for the Kingdom. There is a genuine interest in doctrine and in current discussions of the relations of science and religion but no widespread controversy upon these matters.

Second, there are encouraging signs of a larger sense of responsibility for real evangelism on the part of those who feel themselves to be modernist in outlook and sympathy and of a desire to meet this responsibility. We see that the warmth of our evangelistic passion must match the clarity of our thinking, of which we are proud. And the rank and file of our church people are still concerned about "the Bible, faith in God, and the human soul," as Dr. Maurer has pointed out.

Third, there appears to be an increasing number asking whether the denomination at large knows its own educational situation, both as regards institutions and policy; and whether a sufficient number of leaders are co-operating in the task of meeting it. The implications of the extended survey made previous to the Los Angeles Council, the address there of Moderator King, and the reasons underlying the organization of the Foundation for Education, all need re-examination.

Fourth, there is a rising tide of questioning whether we may be in danger of spending so much time tinkering with our denominational machinery that we do not have enough time left to run the machine, i.e., do our regular work.

Fifth, there seems to me to be a desire for a restatement of the task and method of our missionary service, both at home and abroad, particularly the latter. This m is not critical but enquiring. It has not k pace with the movement of the past years and is looking for light, which t far we have not been able to diffuse.

Sixth, there is a growing number, n isters and laymen, who appear to have fo a working base for their program for care of war, and for the social problems our day, so that there is a greater unity approach to the task of solution.

Growth in the Northeast

By John J. Walker

Massachusetts Home Missionary Societ

In its first homes in America our Con gational fellowship, after 300 years of ing forth for the upbuilding of the na and the evangelizing of the world, still ke its life strong and its work effective. Th are unfavorable influences, social and nomic, which impede many of our churc in this Northeastern area, yet all measur factors indicate a consistent growth of Congregational work.

One of the marks of this growth wh most deserves attention is in the field of ligious education. Not in the larger cen only, but even in many of the smaller, mote rural fields, our churches are adopt more effective programs of training children and youth. Parallel with this mo ment is the widening of the program of s ice to the community welfare. These velopments have called for the re-vamp of old equipment, and the construction new buildings, often at large expense. Pa houses and community centers are multi ing; they are kept open and astir seven d in the work.

The effort for readjustment to the chan conditions of these times has brought m cases of the consolidation of adja churches into larger units. It is cheer to note the development of mutual co dence and good will among the Protest forces in this area. State-wide federati or similar organizations have been es lished and are functioning in most of Northeastern states, local federations crease, and federated churches are unify the work for the Kingdom in many commu ties which in former years have suffe from the struggles of competing churc Not all such problems have been solved, all forces are allied; but the movem toward real unity in effort and action g steadily forward.

Nationalization of the Counc

By Lucius O. Baird

Superintendent of the Washington Sta Conference, Seattle, Washington

The nationalization of the Natio Council is of major interest to the Pac Northwest. So long as the Council d is in October national representation seriously impaired. There is just as m reason for a summer council for West delegates when the meetings are in the E as for a summer date for the Eastern de gates when the Council comes to the Pac Coast, as it did in 1921.

To take every two years the most imp tant three weeks out of fall church work bad judgment. To demand so large an nditure of money when it cannot be ked up with visits to the old home or a nmer vacation or a college reunion is fair to those who attend. The advan-geous summer excursion rates, with their ny privileges, are denied lay delegates l their families. Washington attendants the Council this fall, except those who e clergy rates, must pay twenty dollars more for a ticket, severely restricted in privileges, than would have been paid to attend a meeting between May and September. Board secretaries, superintendents and field workers, who might be moving among the churches and attending conferences, cannot venture far away. National necessity compels many ministers to turn a deaf ear to the protest of conscience at leaving their own work at this important period of the year. The Northwest wants the time of holding the Council changed. Other lines—educational, professional, commercial—choose the slack time in its year for a national gathering. Most of the other large religious bodies do the same. Why does Congregationalism still act as if it were local instead of national?

The National Council Secretary's Report

Dr. Burton Gives an Encouraging Survey

)EV. Charles Emerson Burton, D.D., the Secretary of the National Council of Con-gational Churches, has sent to all delegates officers the report which he will make to National Council when it meets in Wash-on Oct. 19. The Constitution charges the etary with the duty of "presenting at each ed meeting comprehensive and comparative maries for the two years preceding."

Increased Membership

n reporting the membership of the churches, Burton shows that there were more mem-of Congregational churches at the end of 4 than ever before in our history. The num-increased from 857,846 to 878,955, a net n of 21,149 in the two years. The net in-se for 1924 was 17,827, which number has n exceeded but twice in the last thirty rs.

Decreased Number of Churches

he report shows that Congregationalists are king towards fewer and better churches. total number decreased in the two years n 5,826 to 5,680, a net loss in the number hurches of 146. The report indicates that time for the rapid organization of new rches is past. Thirty years ago the Con-ationalists were organizing new churches he rate of more than two hundred per year. example, in the biennium 1894-5, there e 435 new churches organized while in the two years but 70 were organized. On the r hand the last two years witnessed the ing up or merging of 216 churches. This ns that the old frontier which called for rapid building of new churches to meet the needs of new communities is gone and that we are in a period of consolidating churches and of giving way in over-churched communities to other denominations. Where this is done these same denominations ofttimes give way to the Congregational church in some other community thus freeing that field for our church.

In speaking of this trend, Dr. Burton well says:

That with the fewer churches we have stronger ones is obvious when we note the substantial increase in the total membership. This stands out also in the changing proportions of larger and smaller churches. Two years ago we reported nearly 40 per cent of all our churches with a membership of 50 members or less, now it is 31.5 per cent; then approximately 60 per cent showed 100 members or less, now it is 57 per cent, while the number of churches with 1,000 or more has risen from 63 to 74.

The fact that the above explanation is doubtless correct in general ought not to blind our eyes to the other fact that we have in all probability allowed some churches to perish for want of adequate brotherly assistance that ought to have gone on with useful service for years to come. We need to gird ourselves for the necessary service in the needy fields as well as to foster the growth of strong churches.

Ministers from Other Churches

Dr. Burton reports that the number of ministers in full standing at the close of 1924 was 5,613. This is a net loss of over 500 since 1908. While there has been this loss in the number of Congregational ministers the report shows that there were the fewest vacant churches since 1902. We are evidently getting more ministers from other denominations. Over 1,000 persons are reported as serving churches as pastors who are not members of any Congregational association. Some of these are in preparation, a few are laymen, most of them are from other denominations. During the biennium 171 were ordained and the deaths reported were 246 or 75 more than the ordinations. This points to one of the reasons for drafting ministers from other folds.

Ministerial Salaries

The average salary of Congregational ministers has increased in the two years from $1,778 to $1,929, which is an increase of about $150 per minister in the two years covered by this report. The study of the actual salaries received by ministers reveals, however, that much of this increase has gone to the men already receiving fair salaries and that there are large numbers of ministers whose stipend is far below the cost of living. Dr. Burton sums up the matter by saying, "From a study of the actual salaries received by ministers it appears that the fairly successful, trained minister is likely to have a living if not an adequate stipend, but that the salary of the average church is forbidding to self-respecting men of ability."

The State of the Church

In speaking of the general condition of our churches Dr. Burton says:

Wide observation compels one to say that the Congregational Churches of the United States are mighty forces for the extension of the Kingdom of God. In their message is that which changes the lives of individual men by the hundreds of thousands. By their light thousands of communities are leavened with righteousness and made desirable for the abodes of men, women, and children. The ideals of Jesus find their way through our churches into social institutions. Through the individual churches and through the fellowship in which they find expression the force of Christian ideals is brought to bear in the realms of law and order, race relations, and international intercourse. One needs but to be informed to be sure that the church is making good in large degree.

There is courage, hope, and expectation manifest practically everywhere. Of course there are churches and fields where changing populations and conditions mean the deterioration and sometimes death of the churches, and there are other churches where discouragement reigns for other causes. But taken by and large optimism prevails throughout the denomination. This is a positive asset.

The spirit of co-operation is also prevalent. Churches, ministers, people are joining hands for mutual helpfulness and common endeavor. This oneness of spirit is manifest, for ex-

Copyright by Harris and Ewing

The Washington Auditorium

Where all sessions of the National Council will be held. At New York Ave. and 19th Street ample, in the common devotional and evangelistic programs so generally followed. It also issues in what is one of the outstanding developments of modern Congregationalism, the well organized state conferences and effective city organizations in the larger municipal centers.

The Times in Which We Live

The religious thought of America today is in ferment. Men differ intensely on theological questions, even to bitterness and hatred. The fact that faction has not threatened and does not threaten our Congregational fellowship ought not to allow us to ignore the situation. We have a mission along with all like-minded Christians to deliver a vital message for the redemption of men and society at a time when whole sections of the church seem inclined to forsake that message in the pursuit of lifeless dogma.

The more serious is this folly today because we live in an age which challenges the church as never before. Once the church had little competition in the field of thought and life. Today the bursting limits of knowledge and the staggering riches of things which interest men and demand their attention close the ears of men to the voice of the church except it speak with words that ring above the din. That voice must deny no truth and must prove the value of its word above the value of thousands of clamoring interests. The times do not so much oppose the church as demand that it make good.

What of the Kingdom?

There are things which give pause. Strident lawlessness with the too common spirit of abandon which ridicules all tradition is most serious from the fact that it is, as it must be, born of irreverence. Even in church circles men speak lightly of things once thought too sacred for light words. The grip seems often to slip from the ancient sanctions which once compelled men along the road of righteousness. With many there is no longer fear of retribution, no hunger for righteousness, no love of God as a person to be desired.

Yes, there are things which give one pause. But there are more things which give grip to one's faith. God is at work. Man is incurably religious. History is replete with victories of Christ over darkness. More one needs but to peer below the surface to soundness. There may be less sanctimoni ness today than once but there is more s city in the practical affairs of men. There be fewer prayers said, but there are evide that more people are entering the closet in heart for vital contacts with the Father v none but they two are aware. Youth laugh in the face of age, but there is a spir youth movement stirring in our homes schools and churches that promises powe the things of the kingdom.

Moreover, in the life of the church i are to be found signs of rich promise. are not wanting in our statistics. Such s are more obvious to an official who r feel the currents of the life of the chu Not least among the evidences of spiritual and power is the spirit of co-operation in churches of America and of the world. In cities, the states, and in the national org zations the forces of the Christ are eage join hands for the realization of the King of Heaven on earth.

Business Before the Council

Questions up for Action at Washington

By Frederick L. Fagley

Associate Secretary of the National Council

THE National Council was not organized for executive action but for discussion of matters relating to the life and work of the churches and for advice to the various bodies, state conferences, local associations, and the churches at large. But the members of the group that compose the National Council are by virtue of that office official members of the various mission boards, which boards transact a tremendous amount of executive business during the time the group sits as this or that body. In this short article I desire to outline some of the business items that are proposed to be brought before the Council when sitting as the Council.

The delegates and other members who have the Grey Book will find most of these items listed on pages 4 and 5. The information is also given all delegates that on Wednesday morning there will be a roll call of states so that any delegate can introduce any business he desires. These items of business will be referred to the Business Committee for consideration and be reported to the Council at a later business session for action relating thereto.

The Election of Officers

The first item of business that comes before the Council at its opening session is the election of certain officers: The Moderator, who is to preside over the sessions of the meeting and who will deliver the Moderator's Address two years hence, is first elected. Nominations are made from the floor and election usually is by ballot. On invitation of the Nominating Committee informal nominations have been made through the columns of The Congregationalist. These nominations include the following laymen: Ex-Governor Sweet of Colorado, Mr. J. F. Harwood of Appleton, Wis., Mr. Fred B. Smith of New York, Mr. Roger Babson of Wellesley, Mass., and a laywoman, President Mary E. Woolley, of Mount Holyoke College. The following clergymen have been named: Rev. Ozora S. Davis of Chicago, Rev. Dan F. Bradley of Cleveland, Rev. Charles S. Mills of New York, Rev. Carl S. Patton of Los Angeles. The Council then proceeds to elect a first and second Moderator.

New By-Law Proposed

The Executive Committee has reported to the Council a resolution presented to that body calling for the amending of the By-Laws to this effect: That whereas now we elect a Moderator and two assistant Moderators, we shall in the future elect a Moderator and an Associate Moderator on equal standing, one of these to be a layman; and also to elect two assistant Moderators as we do now but with this added provision that one of these shall be a layman.

Other Officers Elected

Later in the meeting the Council, on the nomination of the Nominating Committee, elects a Secretary, a Treasurer, an Executive Committee and the new list of Commissions. On nomination of the Moderator, the Council elects the new half of the Nominating Committee who serve for four years, and on nomination of the Secretary, a list of assistant secretaries who serve through the meeting as scribes, tellers, enrollment clerks, etc.

Other Matters as Reported Through the Executive Committee

During the biennium several matters have been brought before the Executive Committee and some of these are reported to the Council for its consideration and action. Among these items are the following:

1. That the present rate for the per capita, i.e., seven cents per member for the Council and one cent per member for mileage fund, be continued. Out of this fund received from the churches the Council is maintained, the salaries of officers and employees paid, the Year Book published and sent free to all pastors and to all church clerks who request it, the Commissions are financed for the next biennium, including all the expense of the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, the travel of officers, the expense of the meetings, and other items connected with the national work of the denomination.

2. Recognition of Evangelical Protestant Churches of North America, as members of the National Council, and thus adding to our lowship the churches and ministers of group. This is the final action to merging t two bodies. These churches will receiv royal welcome and will add much strength our fellowship, both in Pittsburgh and cinnati where the Evangelical Protest Churches are strong.

3. Payment of Mileage not made to S stitutes. Most of the states contribute to a f to help pay expenses of the delegates. T amounts to quite a sum in each two years. T money is shared by all delegates who are re larly seated from the states joining in this rangement. Sometimes a state delegation will up its vacancies with persons from other sta who may be present and who act for that m ing only, and are accepted as substitutes. T proposal is to limit the mileage fund to delegates or alternates duly seated in th stead. This has been the custom in the p but there has been no ruling to guide committee.

4. Year Book Simplification. It is propo that by eliminating certain columns in Year Book and by combining the information related columns and eliminating in the natio edition the names of clerks, treasurers, a Sunday school superintendents, to reduce Year Book at least one-third in volume s over $3,000 in cost. Such a revision wo allow the printing of the book weeks earli which will increase its value to pastors a churches.

5. Commissions for the Biennium. T Council has had various Commissions at wo during its history. Some of them have be of temporary nature. It was so expect when they were appointed. One Commissio that on "Missions," has been established by-law on a permanent basis. The others ha been appointed from biennium to biennium occasion warranted. A committee appoint by the Executive Committee has made a stu of the needs and has proposed that the "Co mission on Inter-Church Relations," "Inte national Relations," "Social Relations" (ne name of the Social Service Commission), a "Evangelism" be made permanent Commissio h a membership of 18, one-third being ap-nted each biennium.

That the "Commission on Men's Work" (to made up of laymen in major portion) and t on "Recruiting for the Ministry" be con-ued for the next biennium, and that the rk of these two Commissions be separated m that of the Education Society and they ction through the Council office. There is a ling on the part of some that rather than ve two National Council Commissions here, se functions ought to referred to the Edu-ion Society, the men's work to the adult partment, and the recruiting work to the ng people's department. The Council is e to decide this matter as it thinks best. One other matter relates to the disposition the work of Inter-Racial Relations. The cial committee recommends that this be mitted to the Social Relations Commission, ile the International and Inter-Racial Com-ssion recommends that a new Commission Inter-Racial Relations, functioning through National Council office, be set up. This nt the Council will decide.

Business from the Commissions

There are a large number of proposals from various Commissions relating to the admin-ration of their various interests. The Com-ssion on Evangelism asks for the same budget was needed the last two years, namely ,000 per year. The expenses of this Com-ssion amount to approximately $30,000 per r, the balance of the budget being covered the sale of printed material to the churches. is Commission also asks the support of the ncil to the "year-round" program of evan-ism and devotional culture, as outlined by Commission and followed in part by many rches these last years.

The Commission on International Relations poses a thoroughgoing study of methods by ich the churches may help promote the cause a warless world and the establishment of ndly relations among all peoples.

The Commission on Social Service, which ctions through the Social Service Depart-nt of the Education Society, presents a New cial Creed for the study of the churches, outlines its plans for the study of social industrial problems in the churches.

The Commission on Law Enforcement pro-es that the churches give themselves more gely to the advocacy of law obedience and enforcement to the eradication of social ls from among our people and the elevation a higher standard of morality.

The Commission on Interchurch Relations orts the steps so far taken for union with Presbyterians and proposes that this matter continued for study, and that we work iently and seek faithfully for opportunities strengthening the bonds of federation, co-ration, and unity among all Christians.

The Commission on Missions reports that the dy of its special Committee on Reorganiza-n has been before the denomination for sev-l months and will be discussed at length at shington. The best judgment of all Con-gationalists is desired on this matter. The mittee has made a careful study and its ort will be considered on its merits.

n addition the Commission on Missions will that the apportionment be set at $5,000,000 in the past biennium and that every effort made by the Council to encourage the rches to meet this figure. The Commission l present its budget of $150,000 for approval l will ask the group which compose the ncil when in session as the corporate body the various societies to pass an identical olution authorizing this Commission to serve as the official representative of each society in matters of joint promotion.

There are many other matters which will be before the Council on the presentation of individuals and on memorials from state conferences. The meetings of the various societies will have much business to transact so that the delegates who are to be present may count on ten days of arduous labor in which their best judgment will be taxed as they face the common tasks confronting the Congregational fellowship as it tries to make the Will of Christ and His Way of Life real in the lives of all the people.

National Council Arrangements

With Last-Minute Changes in the Program

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has definitely accepted a position on the program to speak before the Council on the first evening, Tuesday, Oct. 20.

It has been found necessary to change the program for Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 26 and 27, placing the program announced for Monday on Tuesday, and that announced for Tuesday on Monday. This was made necessary by the requirement that we vacate the Auditorium on Tuesday afternoon rather than on Monday afternoon as originally planned.

It has been decided to hold all of the meetings in the Auditorium unless otherwise announced in connection with the meetings instead of meeting in the Earle Theater for the forenoon sessions. Tests have shown that business can be conducted comfortably in the Auditorium when a partitioning screen is in place. This accounts for the change.

New York Ave. Presbyterian Church
Which Vice-President Dawes Attends

Definite word cannot be had at the present writing from the British and French Ambassadors, but it is hoped that they will be able to accept the invitation of the Council to speak on Tuesday evening, Oct. 27. A strong program is in reserve in case they are unable to accept.

Rabbi Wise has found it impossible to be with us on the evening of Oct. 22, and Dean Charles R. Brown, who is always more than welcome before a Congregational audience, will speak in his stead.

Dr. Booth of Long Beach, Cal., is ill and cannot appear on the last afternoon. President Herman F. Swartz will speak on the same subject.

In addition to the sectional meetings announced for Monday afternoon, and now to be held on Tuesday forenoon, there will be a Rural Life Institute under the supervision of Dr. Malcolm Dana, Director of Rural Life; and Dr. Charles C. Merrill, Superintendent of Illinois, will conduct a discussion in another sectional meeting on "The Strengthening of Our Ministry."

The evening sessions will not begin regularly until eight o'clock. Inasmuch, however, as many will like to be at the Auditorium earlier, a competent leader will conduct a service of song, with the accompaniment of the magnificent organ.

The morning sessions will be devoted practically without exception to business and discussion. The program announced for the various mornings is elastic and on recommendation of the Business Committee can be modified to accommodate the will of the Council without serious damage to any feature.

Without doubt hearings will be provided for between sessions at which any Congregationalist, without reference to his membership in the Council, may take part in discussions, particularly on the report of the Committee of Twelve on Missionary Organization.

The Commission on Missions will meet in advance of the Council, beginning at 2.00 P.M. on Monday, Oct. 19, in Room 4 of the Auditorium Building.

There are already about 2,000 regular registrations which gives promise that the attendance at the Council will be by far the largest in its history, and the subjects to come before the Council are such as to make it one of the most important of our denominational meetings.

Sharing in the Council

Not more than one-third of one per cent of the Congregationalists of America can attend the National Council Meeting, but one hundred per cent of them can share in it. Secondly, all Congregationalists who take genuine interest in the work of the church can feel the throb of the denomination through many contacts established by the delegates of the churches in Washington.

First of all, Congregationalists should know about the Council. To this end reference should be made to it in the pulpit and in the printed material of the church. The literature of the Council should be circulated. The Congregationalist ought to be in the hands of the people, especially at this time. The Council numbers of the Washington Star, which are especially available, should be widely circulated; in short, pass on the knowledge of our great fellowship to all our people.

In the second place, our feelings as well as our minds may be touched. It is not a cold-blooded matter to belong to a great Christian fellowship with the high ideals of the Gospel of Christ. Jesus' injunction to love one another calls for the stirring of worthy sentiments concerning our common interests and ideals. Every church, therefore, is asked in its public services to pray for the Council. The Council prayer published in The Congregationalist may be used verbatim or its subjects may be followed in common petition. Attention may be called to the fact that the churches all over the land are praying for this gathering. Pastors who find this process helpful may read the passage of Scripture which is suggested for the day, namely, the 122d Psalm, which is to be read at the Council in Washington. Likewise they may sing one of the hymns which will be sung in the Sunday meetings at Washington, namely, "Faith of Our Fathers."

In short, whatever may be done to make the last member of our churches aware of his relationship to a great body of Christ's followers will be helpful to him, to the church, and to the denomination.

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Plunge in All Over

As a further suggestion to my distressed correspondent, from whose letter I quoted a week ago, I have been thinking of our mountain pool.

In the mountain intervale at whose edge my cabin stands, some of us built a swimming pool a few years ago. A college professor, a doctor or two, some other men, some women volunteers also, took pickaxes and spades and spent a good part of their holiday at digging a basin down through tangled roots, gravel, and hard pan. After that, with some assistance from skilled workers, we erected a wooden mold, mixed and poured concrete, knocked out the wood, and in course of some six weeks had a permanent structure. Then we waited with what patience we could command for the concrete to harden, and at last led into our basin a slender stream from the lovely singing brook that comes down icy cold from the mountain.

But this I speedily found. When I went to the pool it gave me little pleasure if I tried to inch in. That made me shiver and catch my breath; it made the goose-flesh rise; instead of exhilarating, it made me feel uncomfortable; I did not enjoy it. But if I stood on the edge at the deeper end, and, far-spent though I was, went in head first, all over at once, in one glorious plunge, I found not only keen enjoyment but also the exhilaration I wanted. It was not then a matter of just enduring the cold water. I found myself strengthened.

It is an illustration of the two ways of dealing with God.

If you are going to God at all for your soul's refreshment and strength, plunge in all over. Be not content with an inch at a time. Give over your mind and soul to utter confidence in the universe, and in the God who is at the heart of the universe. Then you find in your religion the exhilaration it ought to give, the courage and strength for life and all its dealings. The Christian trust, when one gives himself to it heartily, is a liberating thing. It sets the soul free from thraldom to the Here-and-Now. It gives the soul eternity to live in, and the all-enfolding God of infinite love to live with. It exalts daily living into partnership with the eternal God, and gives the soul patience to bide God's time. Not until lately have I begun to appreciate the significance of those ancient words, "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." How can you fear evil, if you are living in partnership with God, as God's co-worker for ends that transcend the Here-and-Now?

It is with us of today as it has been with men and women in all generations of the world's history. Some hard experience comes into life, some new discovery is made by science, some fresh insight illumines the mind, and we find that the horizon of thought is a wider thing than we have imagined it. Then we have to readjust and enlarge our conception of God. The facts of life, we discover, do not harmonize with the idea of God we were holding. This means a period of bewilderment. For a while it seems as if God were lost. But after a time we see that God must be there—that God is there; only he is a vastness and a great adventure that we have to give ourselves to wholeheartedly. Then, plunging in anew and more deeply into that infinite sea of God, we find new confidence, new peace, new joy.

Closet and Altar

DILIGENCE

For he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.—Heb. 11: 6.

Our true concern is not our clearness and certainty, but our sincerity and simplicity, not our perfect practical guidance, but our readiness to put our hand to the task that lies nearest to us, while we wait further direction as God sees good. Not in a view of the whole journey from the beginning to the end, but in taking each step as we see it, in the certainty that God directs it to his own goal do we serve God.—John Oman.

"Diligence" makes faith fruitful. Diligence makes God's gift ours.—Alexander Maclaren.

But the best thing is to lean back upon God, and to go on resolutely putting all the forces of life into the essential work, and thinking not so much of results and rewards as of duties. Those, it has been said, are first in reward who have been first in service; not thinking of reward, hardly ever straightening their backs from toil and passing as humble a judgment on their work as the last and least of their fellow-laborers upon theirs. Such lives must draw, not from the shallow streams of earth, but from the deep fountains that flow out of the throne.—W. Robertson Nicoll.

Thou heir of all things, man,
  Pursue the saints by heavenward track:
  They looked not back;
Run thou, as erst they ran.

Little and great is man:
  Great if he will, or if he will
  A pigmy still;
For what he will he can.

Christina Rossetti.

A good work which has been set on foot with interest and spontaneity enough, but which has begun to drag, and is in danger of coming to nothing, is very demoralizing. It enfeebles the conscience and spoils the temper. It develops irresolution and incapacity and it stands perpetually in the way of anything else that has to be done. Many a bright idea stumbles over it and can get no further. It is not only worldly wisdom but divine wisdom which says: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." If it is the giving of money, the building of a church, the insuring of a life, complete the doing.—Denny.

Men who do their best always do more, though they be haunted by the sense of failure. Be good and true; be patient; be undaunted. Leave your usefulness for God to estimate. He will see to it that you do not live in vain.—G. H. Morrison.

O Lord, we beseech thee mercifully to receive the prayers of thy people who call upon thee; and grant that they may both perceive and know what things they ought to do, and also may have grace and power faithfully to fulfil the same; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Gregorian.

[Assembled by Isaac Ogden Rankin]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVO

What Makes a Good Citizen?

Comment on the Prayer Meeting Topic fo
October 18-24

BY CHARLES ERNEST WHITE

Topic: What is Expected of a Christian C zen?—Micah 6:8; Titus 3: 1-8. (Citizens Day.)

Light from the Bible Passages

Micah sees no difference between the sor people needed for the commonwealth of Is and for the Kingdom of God. One who is l and loving in his attitude toward God i worthy citizen of Israel. Pretence with practice is an abomination. External s without internal spirit do not meet the si tion. The Lord's requirements are simply: acts, love, and kindness, and a life continu conscious of and lived for Him. Six centu and more after Micah, Paul, who was part larly proud of his citizenship in Tarsus, put same truths in different words. Constituted thorities must be respected justly. Kind must govern all acts toward others. Consc of Christ's presence with us day by day continually seeking to reflect him, our c business is to do good unto all whom we possibly reach.

Leads for the Leader

Discuss how we obtain citizenship and privileges it gives. Does an alien who gives something dear to him and takes a solemn of allegiance deserve greater credit than ally given him? What privileges does a zen have that others do not have? Do we a high enough value on them?

Can one be a good citizen without inter Do we concern ourselves about the welfar our town and our country? Do we simply sorb the blessings without thinking?

Can one be a good citizen without sacri It may be of time spent for the good of oth of pleasure, shared or given up that ot may have the more; of money, that others have a better opportunity.

Can one be a good citizen without vot Does the feeling that "my vote will not m any difference" let us out? A failure to is a practical forfeiture of our citizenshi

Thoughts for Members

Not until the spirit of Jesus has captu men can they ever really contribute to the gress of the world.—John Douglas Adam.

Where in life's common ways
  With cheerful feet we go,
When in his steps we tread
  Who trod the way of woe,
Where he is in the heart,
City of God, thou art.

—F. T. Palgrav

Life is what we are alive to. It is length, but breadth. To be alive only to a tite, pleasure, pride, money-making, and to goodness and kindness, purity, and love, tory, poetry, music, flowers, stars, God, eternal hopes, it is to be all but dead.

—Maltbie D. Babcock

A Moment of Prayer

For blessings beyond our ability to meas we thank thee, O God. For those that especially enjoy as citizens are we grate Inspire us to be good members of thy King on the earth. Keep us from narrowness heart and selfishness of purpose, and show how to be worthy representatives of t Amen.

The Officers and Executive Committee of the National Council of Congregational Churches

Cordially invite interested members of any and all of our Congregational churches to attend the

Twenty-first regular meeting of the Council

Washington, D. C., October 20 to 28, 1925

The Membership of the Council is made up of Voting Delegates elected by the Associations and State Conferences; Honorary Members representing the various Mission Boards and other denominational agencies; Corresponding Members, usually guests from other denominations elected by the Council itself; and Associate Members. Any Congregationalist may belong to the class of Associate Members, by enrolling with the Council Office. The enrollment fee is $1.00, which pays for the Grey Book and other printed matter sent to all members. Associate Members receive certificate for reduced railway fare, an official badge of admission, reserved seat at all Auditorium meetings and have the privilege of the floor at hearings.

Some features of this meeting:

Great Addresses by the Honorary Moderator, Calvin Coolidge; Dr. Potter, the Moderator, Dr. Cadman, Rabbi Wise, Bishop McConnell, Chief Justice Taft, Secretary Wilbur, Dr. Robert E. Spear, Missionaries from all lands, prominent officials in Washington, and many of our leading speakers.

Important Business: The proposed merger of Societies, the proposed New Social Creed for the Churches, and plans for expanding the work of the Churches along many lines.

Fascinating City: The people of Washington are planning to give the visitors a pleasant time in the city. Many side trips are available, guides to places of interest, lectures on the city, and many other features incident to a visit to the capital city.

Helpful Worship Fine Music Good Fellowship

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

REV. CHARLES E. BURTON, Secretary — PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE, Honorary Moderator — REV. ROCKWELL H. POTTER, Moderator — REV. FREDERICK L. FAGLEY, Associate Secretary

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Rev. Charles F. Carter, Senator George B. Chamberlain, Mr. A. M. Lyon, Mr. J. F. Harwood, Mr. C. S. Ward, Mr. Lucien T. Warner, Rev. William E. Barton, Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, Judge John H. Perry.

The Future of the American Board

An Official Statement to The Congregational Churches

THE PAST is secure—nothing can rob us or the world of the glorious achievements of this Boar during the 115 years of its history. Let us thank God for that. But how about the FUTURE? Th Future is in OUR hands. The Future is OUR responsibility. Whether this historic Board goe backwards or forwards is for us to say.

The purpose of this statement is to impress upon every Congregationalist the fact that a GRAVE SITU ATION CONFRONTS THE BOARD as we enter upon the work of another year. The issue is sharp an imminent. In the judgment of the Prudential Committee of the Board, we have reached a point wher definite and far-reaching decisions must be made in respect to the future.

Three Lines of Policy Are Open to View:

I. THE PRESENT LINE OF HUMILIATING RETREAT— AN ANNUAL INCOME OF $1,175,371

This sum, available for the regular work of the Board for 1925, is inadequate. It falls short of th actual appropriations by $84,694.50. It involves the danger of a heavy, recurring, annual deficit; i compels a policy of disheartening retrenchment for our missionaries in every part of the world. Wors than that—far worse—it forces the Prudential Committee to consider the closing of certain mission together with a radical reduction of the work in several of our most promising fields. It would appea that we are carrying more work than the churches will enable us to carry. If that is so, some way mus be found to draw in our lines, and that in no uncertain fashion. But let there be no disguising of wha this involves. IT MEANS A POLICY OF RETREAT. It means a broken morale abroad and a humili ating situation at home.

II. THE LINE OF BARE MAINTENANCE— AN ANNUAL INCOME OF $1,325,371

If we are to reach this line, the churches will need to show a gain of $150,000 in 1926. Of this amount $85,000 is required to prevent a recurring deficit, that is to meet the cost of existing work. The balance $65,000, is required in order that the worker and the work may receive a "living wage." The line on which we are now operating is a line of slow starvation. It has reduced the number of missionary appointment 33 per cent in five years; it has failed to build suitable houses for our missionaries; it has made impossibl proper support for their children; it has borne cruelly upon thousands of native pastors and teachers it has slowed down or stopped our presses; it has starved our hospitals, schools, industrial and agricultura institutions. The situation is rapidly nearing the impossible. AN ADDITIONAL $150,000 IS IMPERA- TIVE IF WE ARE TO MAINTAIN OUR MISSIONS ON THE PRESENT SCALE.

III. THE LINE OF GLORIOUS ADVANCE— AN ANNUAL INCOME OF $1,558,550

This implies that the churches will raise the full apportionment of $5,000,000 and that the American Board will receive its full share. It involves a gain from the churches, as compared with 1925, of $383,179.

Consider the glorious possibilities of such an event! The achieving of the apportionment would place us in the atmosphere of a true missionary church, where the Kingdom stands foremost in our thought, the atmosphere of our Lord's last Command. Not that this sum would be adequate. A much larger amount could be used to immediate advantage. But it would mean a new attitude, a new enthusiasm, a new day, eventually a new world. We would leave the low levels of the present, we would no longer consider merely "keeping the Board going"; we would join the hosts of the marching Church. THIS POLICY WOULD MEAN VICTORY ON EVERY FIELD OF THE BOARD.

CONSIDER WHAT WOULD HAPPEN!

The long-deferred work among the Moros of Mindanao would be undertaken—"the best chance the Church of Christ has had among a Mohammedan people for a thousand years."

No longer would Portuguese East Africa appeal in vain for the missionary and all that follows in his train.

The Greek Government would not look in vain for schools of the American Board type. The wonderful openings at Athens and Salonica would be taken up.

Bulgaria would have her Protestant College at Sofia, the Capital, for the training of her leaders in Church and State.

The tribes in West Africa would not stretch out their hands in vain. We should be hearing of "mass movements" in that part of the world.

That extraordinary chance to win the Robber Castes in India, backed as it is by governmental aid, would be ours at last.

Dr. Watts O. Pye and his associates in Shansi would reap those great harvests of souls and be pushing over into Mongolia, a long closed land, but where they are eager for the ministry of the American Board.

Those western states in Mexico, our exclusive field, would no longer wonder why the Congregational people of America care so little for their welfare—Sonora, Sinaloa, Nayarit, Jalisco, and Colima would all be on our happy list. These are a few among many great new things we would attempt.

The vision grips the imagination. It thrills the soul. AND IT IS ENTIRELY FEASIBLE. Shared by all the churches, the financial burden would be light. As one of our Congregational leaders remarked: "The future of the Board is not a financial problem at all. It is a problem of knowledge, of interest, of loyalty to Christ." Some way must be found to present these facts to our churches. This great cause must not be lost in a column of figures. CONGREGATIONALISTS MUST BE MADE TO REALIZE THE GRAVE SITUATION CONFRONTING THEIR FOREIGN WORK.

The people will respond when once they understand. They do not want the Board to retreat; they do not want the Board to stand still. THEY WANT THE BOARD TO ADVANCE.

Will You Help Make That Possible?

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions
THE CONGREGATIONAL HOUSE, 14 BEACON STREET, BOSTON

Safeguarding the Ministry

The Ministerial Boards

THE development of ministerial pensions in the past decade has probably surpassed the growth of any other benevolent work of American Protestant churches. This marks a wakened conscience as to responsibility toward ministers whose years of strength the churches have taken, often at salaries too meager to make possible adequate savings for old age. Christian people have seen enough of ministers past years when they can serve churches acceptably, working as janitors, night watchmen, cobblers, or day laborers in order to get bread for the table.

Until recently the business world outran the church in counting part of its legitimate budget provision for retiring pensions for those whose active years it had consumed. Now the church is seeking vigorously to remedy this neglect.

The older method was to provide for the minister's necessities when he became unable to help himself. The new and better way is to foresee the inevitable need and to enable him to make provision for himself.

Unified Administration

In this day of acute discussion of our organizations and their relation to one another, it is well to keep clearly in mind the methods through which our Ministerial Boards are providing for the ministry. While there are two corporations, the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers and the Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief, the administration is unified under an executive committee of twenty. Thirteen are business men of wide experience. The members are drawn from eight different states. Fifteen are Directors of the Board of Ministerial Relief, nine of whom are also Trustees of the Annuity Fund. The remaining five are members at large. The business affairs of the Corporation for the National Council, which holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, are administered in the same office and the work is adjusted between the Boards in the interests of economy and effectiveness.

The Annuity Fund operates through a thorough-going, scientific plan, built upon the foundation of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, by which the minister, in the years of his strength, is enabled to provide an adequate annuity for age or disability and to safeguard his family in case of his untimely death. It has nearly 2,100 members. Assets, which increase rapidly from year to year, were, Sept. 1, including the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, $7,029,252. It is receiving an average of 150 members a year. It has the highest commendation from the most authoritative sources in the field of pensions.

Provision for Older Men

Of its members 1,421 are under what is known as the Original Plan, now closed to new members, providing a maximum of $500 on the basis of thirty years of service. Of this the minister's dues provide $100 and the churches are providing the balance, partly through the income of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and partly through the apportionment. What the provision of even this modest annuity means to the ministry is best shown by direct word from men who are now receiving it. Excerpts follow.

From one of the most honored leaders in our fellowship, dated Sept. 23, 1925: "I must confess that the check received this morning came like a drop of cold water to a thirsty soul. I had just returned from two months' travel in the interests of our work. It often happens in such a case that there are many inevitable expenses which one cannot charge to travel and this check helps me out. Seriously, as I look to the future and realize that my work must soon cease, I find that I am putting much reliance on this fund to tide me over. It is a blessed fund indeed."

On his seventieth birthday: "This beginning of my old age pension is indeed a great comfort to me, since already I have been living, in part, on borrowed money which I may now begin to repay, with the hope of getting on to an even keel in the not distant future. I have not lived in envy of others whose income has been larger than mine. On entering the ministry as a young man, the thought of money income was the very last thought with me, while my love of the work and the desire to be a faithful minister of Jesus Christ were first. Believe me, I shall not cease to be grateful to through whose foresight, energy, an hearts this fund has come into being, lieve or avert distress, and to warn hearts of those no longer in full harn

From a former state superintendent has been my privilege to plead for th nuity Fund for retired ministers times at our state and local assoc meetings. I little thought then that I s ever be one of its recipients. It certai a case of bread cast upon the wate turning after many days. The days o public speaking, I fear, are over but wish that with my present experie might once more present that work."

From Maine: "It gives one a feeli independence as well as thankfulness the denomination appreciates the work lifetime and that there are compensa material as well as spiritual."

From the Middle West: "Two years I had to give up preaching. A year relinquished janitor work in —— Univ because I was not able to continue it. money is my only income. I thank all vidual givers who have substituted for despair in my soul."

From a widow: "My first check handed me on one of my days in bed. to turn my face to the wall to hide my of thankfulness."

Larger Plans

This provision through the Original is only the beginning. The years sin was instituted have brought larger but when it was inaugurated it was rega as an exceedingly important forward in mastering a problem which had seeme but insoluble. In the construction of the panded Plans in 1917 this Original Plan fortunately at hand to give the utmost

The Pioneer Minister

For him and his successors our Ministerial Boards provide able aid to men in their later years. For em the new plan could not make large provision on account of the short period remaining in their service for the accumulation of payments through the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and the annual dues.

The fruits of the plan now in operation, while already notable, will be greater with every succeeding year and will eventually change the economic status of the ministry by providing thoroughly for age or disability.

One point needs strengthening. Although the proportion of the necessary annual dues asked of the local church, in co-operation with the minister, is far less than in nearly all of the other great denominations, our churches have been slow to participate in the plan. This has kept many men out of membership. While upwards of 500 churches are now on what is known as "The Honor Roll," this is to be contrasted with the statement that 99 per cent of the Episcopal churches pay annually an amount equivalent to 7½ per cent of the rector's salary toward his annuity. Every church should take definite action and do its part in stabilizing and strengthening our ministry.

Unpaid Pledges

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund, while a notable achievement, reporting net collections of $4,830,828, to which a Profit Reserve, from exchange and sale of securities, of $25,954 may be added, still shows $870,310 of unpaid subscriptions, beside $301,779 in cancellations. All of these subscriptions are overdue. The failure in payment costs the Annuity Fund an annual loss in income of more than $40,000. The central office has followed every one of these with painstaking care and must rely upon all friends of the fund, pastors and churches, to co-operate with it in bringing these overdue payments into the treasury.

Ministerial Relief

The noble work of Ministerial Relief is the recourse for all those whose years prevented them from entering the Annuity Fund. In 1924 there were 724 who received regular pensions, beside 55 more receiving emergency checks, the total representing not less than 1,600 persons. The roll mounts from year to year, that of the National Board alone having increased 132 per cent in ten years.

The average grant to a minister in 1924 was $310, to a widow $235. The Directors have attempted to establish a maximum grant of $500 for men who had served not less than thirty years and whose need required it, but funds have been sufficient to put this into operation only for a very few of the veterans. The failure to make a more general increase brings to many a cost that is typified by an application now before the Board from a New England minister. He has spent thirty-seven years in the pastorate on an average salary of $500, much of the time ministering in two churches several miles apart. He asks to have his pension of $300 increased that he may help his three boys who are working their way through school. The second is looking forward to the ministry. The one desire of the father is that they may have training that will fit them for life's work.

The Annuity Fund will eventually carry the burden now borne by the Board of Relief and its provision will be not only more adequate but more satisfactory to the minister, in that it will come as something that belongs to him, not as a pension for which application is to be made. While grants under the Board of Relief are made as a tribute to service and not as charity, some ministers and ministers' wives who have all their lives been lavish givers find it hard to accept pensions in the provision of which they have not borne a part. One, in writing thanks for a recent remittance, speaks of "the distaste which many have for being among the receivers rather than the givers." Another writes: "My husband is very happy in being the means of adding to the family purse through the Ministerial Relief Board. Can you understand and pardon me if I say that I am not happy in receiving this assistance? But please believe me deeply grateful. I have never been a good receiver, and have been independent for so many years that it is hard to accept help now."

Many who have been lifelong givers, when their turn to receive comes, experience along with the comforts which the pension provides a sense of Christian fellowship that is more precious than money. One dear woman voices this: "I wonder if you realize what a wonderful human relationship the Board of Ministerial Relief represents, how far-reaching its contacts. I cannot close without again telling you how much I appreciated the kind thought of me during my recent illness. Your gracious gift from the emergency fund in addition to my quarterly allowance was a godsend, for it helped me to tide over the extra expense incurred during my illness. It came at the most needful moment, and the joy of it is, that we mutually share in the blessing of the gift given in behalf of Another."

Is there any cause more appealing, more beautiful and imperative? The most intimate relation is established between the executives and the host of pensioners, whose constant letters are of the sort written to the nearest of kin. It is a joy and privilege beyond words to have any part in smoothing the way for those who have given their lives for Christ and the church and now in the evening of their days are in want. Eventually the load will be carried by the Annuity Fund but for the present and for some years to come the work of Relief will need constantly enlarged provisions to meet the needs.

In recent years a great source of help has come through the Christmas Fund, which not only increases the annual pension by a Christmas remembrance, averaging approximately $40, but provides also a noble Emergency Fund from which is drawn assistance for the day of sickness or of death. Last year more than $50,000 came in response to the Christmas appeal. It would be impossible to convey in words the comfort thus provided.

A Pension Saves Her Home

Now ninety-four years of age and blind. For forty years she and her husband served on a salary of $500 or less

A Glimpse at the Work

The Church Extension Boards

The Congregational Sunday School Extension Society The Congregational Home Missionary Society
The Congregational Church Building Society

Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary

IN this National Council number of The Congregationalist it is fitting that the benevolent agencies of the denomination should present to the churches, and to the Council delegates, some statement as to what is being done and what needs to be done.

The three societies mentioned above, frequently spoken of as "The Church Extension Boards," constitute a closely-knit group whose work is chiefly concerned with the planting and nurture of churches in the homeland. In carrying out their projects they labor in unity for the accomplishment of their one great task. Starting a Sunday School in a needy community is missionary service; supplying a preacher for the little church which may result from that school is missionary work also; and so is the giving of aid which makes it possible for a church, new or old, which has done its utmost toward erecting a building, to have that building. And all of it is a part of a still larger, world-wide effort; for the work abroad and at home depends, for its continued support, upon keeping the church extension fires burning brightly.

At the biennial meetings of these Societies, to be held Monday, Oct. 26, in connection with the sessions of the National Council at Washington, various workers will present the story of their fields. As a preparation for that program, and particularly for those who will not be present, there is here given a glimpse of what is being attempted. Especial attention is called to the fact that the Home Missionary Society will be celebrating at this meeting its one hundredth year of Christian service.

Some Achievements in Home Missions

Among recent accomplishments in the home missions field may be mentioned the development of our work among the Mexicans at East El Paso, Texas. Here, in a fine new building, a model from the standpoint of architecture, beauty and utility, the growing church has taken on new life under the leadership of Mr. Hernandez. This stands as another bright spot at the gateway through which thousands of Mexicans enter the United States.

No less significant is the completion of the new church building for the Mexicans at Gallup, New Mexico. The regular congregations comfortably fill the new building, making one wonder how for so many months the pastor's home could possibly have served as a meeting place.

Mt. Zion Church, Cleveland, under the leadership of Rev. Harold M. Kingsley, has secured a relocation in an advantageous situation, is rapidly rising to meet its opportunity in the great Jewish Temple, now their permanent home. Well organized, with a broad program, the church has called Rev. A. C. Brown, of Atlanta, Georgia, and starts on a new era in its work.

Less than two years ago a new church was organized in Casper, Wyoming, with a charter membership of over 100 which rapidly reached a total of more than 200. Today the church is squarely facing its financial problem and has raised a budget for its second year of almost $8,000. Congregations crowd the American theater to the number of 800 to 1,000. Rev. A. E. Cooke, pastor, has gained the attention of the entire city. The church is substantially reducing its missionary askings. A strong committee has been appointed to investigate the matter of obtaining a church building.

Timely assistance and wise direction at the beginning has resulted in the erection of a beautiful building at Coral Gables, Florida, with a parsonage across the way, and now the church is self-supporting with a resident minister receiving a good salary—a remarkable achievement in this miracle suburb of Miami.

That the situation in rural America is growing increasingly a problem is recognized by all. An increasing number of rural communities are joining together in a common program, bringing new hope to places that because of isolation and neglect had lost heart. A dual ministry, with needed assistants, automobile, stereopticon, and moving picture equipment, with adequate parish house at the center and a seven-day week program, has revolutionized the religious outlook in more than one place.

MISSOULA (MONT.) UNIVERSITY CHURCH

A church ministering to all of life is the saving ideal. It gives the rural minister a sense of the largeness of his task and opportunity and urges him on to a special training to meet the new approach to an age-old problem.

The Daily Vacation Bible Schools held this summer were more successful than ever before. Where formerly we reached hundreds, we now are reaching thousands of children. Children in country districts were reached who never had attended a Sunday school in their lives, knew nothing whatever of the Bible, and had never learned a Christian song. Seventy-five vacation schools were held in the state of Montana alone.

Here is a community that because of various vicissitudes caused, perhaps, by changing economic conditions, finds itself unable to secure the services of a full time minister. To it a student is sent for the summer. He finds the church discouraged and divided. It does not stand well in the town. Services have been intermittent for many months. The Sunday School is scattered and the Woman's Society has almost gone out of business. Into this situation the young man, untried but invincibly optimistic, enters and begins his work. At the end of three months the church stands high in the esteem of the community. The various churches of the place are working together harmony. Factions within the church disappeared. Financial support has increased beyond all expectation. The Sunday School has been reorganized and is on a firm, working basis. As the young minister leaves for next year of study, he carries with him friendship of the whole community and a thankfulness in his heart that he has called to such a high service. A miracle you say? Such miracles have occurred surprising number of churches this last summer. This year the National Society sent seventy-nine students, almost every one whom performed signal service, many of accomplishing the seemingly impossible.

One of the most appealing pieces of being a combination of distinctly religious leadership and social service, is that performed by Rev. C. A. Smith, of Nogales, Arizona. head of the social service and charitable ganizations of the city, literally hundreds cases of most urgent need come before each year. His work has the backing of the other churches in the city, including Roman Catholic, as well as of business organizations, lodges, and women's clubs. Nogales being a port of entry between the United States and Old Mexico, the service Mr. Smith renders is international in its character.

The growth of the Summer Conferences all parts of the land is to be noted. In the mission fields are not excepted. From Island, Maine, to Frankfort, Michigan; to Worth, Texas; to Placerville in the Hills; to Seabeck and Asilomar on the Pacific Coast, these educational and inspirational gatherings are becoming well known. Many of the states held more than one conference, including Pennsylvania which two, North Dakota two, and South Dakota three. One of the most recently promoted conferences is that which is developing Mormon Lake near Flagstaff, Arizona. A lease has been secured on twenty acres on shore of this lake, which will be under control of the Congregational churches of Southwest. The value of these Conferences proven every year as those who attend, young people and adults, go back to the of their churches inspired with fresh en sm, a new ideal of service, and a broader ion of the work ahead of the church in this y. Directly and indirectly, the Home Mis- nary Society is aiding in this feature of r common work.

In surveying the whole field, certain fea- es naturally stand out more clearly than ers, but our regular work, in helping pay e salaries of missionary pastors, must not overlooked. Failure in this necessary ough less spectacular endeavor would leave ny a community spiritually impoverished.

FRANK LINCOLN MOORE,
Secretary of Missions.

The Grail of Understanding"

It was at the close of the summer of 1925. e members of a large group of Student Sum- r Service young people were sending in their al reports, telling the story of pioneering in y-eight communities and twenty-eight states. om a member of the student body of a tle missionary college in the Middle West ere came this message: "To the heart of ery young person about to begin his serious rk, there comes a feeling that all life is adventure, and each venture his own par- ular fairy tale. Fifty such young people gan their testing this summer, and one of ese was fortunate enough to be sent to the oods of Northern Minnesota. It was her big venture, an adventure in friendship with d and His children, and the goal, the Grail Understanding."

Such a spirit enters into, not only the two ndred and nineteen Congregational College oung People, serving under the "S. S. S." m 1921-1925, but characterizes the general tivities of the Congregational Sunday School tension Society. Direct missionary re- onsibility in three-fourths of the territory the United States, and co-operation along nday School extension lines of need through- t the entire country, takes our workers into igiously uncared for communities, in which ring the past year 108 Mission Sunday hools were organized. Sunday School lesson erature of the best type is provided for edy places. Home groups are cared for in ral localities where regular Sunday School rk is impossible because of the long, hard nters, or distances between homes and from nters. Such service pays large dividends in touch on human lives, by linking up lated families with the Christian life and urch.

The Grail of Understanding is a first con- n of the Sunday School messenger of good lings. In both industrial and rural centers, the midst of thronging city life and in lated districts, large numbers of children d youth are deprived of the normal oppor- nities that make for a well-grounded career. ich a need has a claim upon those who are re fortunately situated. It represents some the unfinished business of the church. This ntier line of great need and strong en- avor challenges and calls for action and n be expanded as rapidly as means are pro- ded.

In all history, there is no chapter more illing than that which tells the story of the ward march of missionary service on the rt of those who have laid foundations strong d sure. There is a romance that clings to Consecration has been matched only by portunity. Missionary zeal and sacrifice ve thrilled. So these present day messengers ing forth on their mission, living with and f others, understand human needs, and dis- ver the power that makes for permanent ength and patient, self-sacrificing service. ith unswerving purpose they lay Christian foundations, and therefore commence with the children. In this way, as one has expressed it, "They are not of the sunset and the recorded yesterdays; they are of the sunrise, and the unlimited tomorrow."

Such investments are part of our Congregational missionary enterprise. They represent the things men live for. In their character-making possibilities they gleam with the light

ONE OF 108 SUNDAY SCHOOLS
Organized in one year which shines upon loving words; they stamp with the impress of living deeds. Says the Honorary Moderator of the National Council, "If this country is to meet successfully the problem confronting it today, there must be first of all greater recognition of the spiritual side of life, and a more widespread acknowledgment of the obligation we owe to use our power and strength for the general welfare, and for the redemption of humanity. The Sunday Schools furnish today the great agency by which spiritual ideals may be made a part of the lives of the younger generation of Americans, and the growth of the schools will mark the spread of these principles."

W. KNIGHTON BLOOM,
Extension Secretary.

The Big Brother

That little lone town of a dozen houses and many miles from the railroad still exists. One day somebody says, "We must have a church as we did back home." From that hour until the bell rings to call people to the dedication the Congregational Church Building Society is the big brother.

On the Pacific Coast in Oregon I see a minister in his shirt sleeves directing others in shingling the roof of a little building which, when finished with our aid, will have a value of but six thousand dollars, and across the continent people are on the roadside waiting to be taken by the auto truck to that modest house of prayer we helped them build under the shadow of Mount Katahdin. Right in the midst of the country is the little church at Bingham, Nebraska. June 17, 1925, it was voted thirteen hundred dollars aid. A wide vista opens up beyond the straggling village flanked by distant bluffs. The place stands alone as far as church influence is concerned in a trade area of four hundred square miles.

"OUT-DOOR KITCHEN"
Nogales, Ariz.

Yes, the little churches like these of which we have spoken are our first care. From the little house, both church and parsonage, there in the cane-brush suburbs of Fort Myers, Florida, north to the six thousand four hundred and forty-three dollar church at Three Lakes, Wisconsin, reclaimed from the cyclone; from the Winslow church on an island in Puget Sound asking for seventeen hundred dollars to the church of thirty-one members at Squantum on Massachusetts Bay asking for a parsonage, hundreds of churches now well established say in a chorus of glad voices, "The Building Society was our big brother in the hour of need."

But our greatest work is in doubling the effectiveness of the ordinary church by helping it to a worthy equipment. There is nothing dramatic or particularly thrilling about it and yet every bit of our work stirs the blood of a man with any imagination, if the five hundred and fifty-one thousand, two hundred and thirty-six dollars we put last year into brick and wood and stone can be seen as it transmutes itself into prayer and praise and deeds of justice and mercy. Could we follow it through the experiences when sorrow becomes gladness and distrust gives way to hope; could we paint the visions and dreams awakened by it; could we compute its influence on home and school and all of life's ambitions, there would be enacted before our eyes a drama whose intensity of meaning never has been put upon the stage.

One hundred and thirty-five churches were aided last year in building houses of worship and thirty-nine in securing parsonages.

In many places our work must pass through years of probation before it seems to justify itself. In only a few cases does it prove to be ill-advised. Every Christian enterprise is at all times under testing and we cannot say which will prosper, this or that. We are trying to make our buildings teach respect for religion and to assist the pastors to preach within them the full gospel as it is in Christ Jesus. We are from first to last a missionary force and not a financial agency. We are doing an all-around work. For instance, with an emphasis which the Congregational denomination has always put on education, the Building Society is giving especial attention to the church in university towns. Illustrations of this could be described at Iowa City, Iowa; Winter Park, Florida; Fargo, North Dakota; Eugene, Oregon; Columbia, Missouri, and other places in the east as well as west.

We put upon page 478 a picture of the church at Missoula, Montana, not because it is as big and commanding as many another undertaking, but because the struggle through which it is going is typical of the Building Society's work everywhere. At Missoula is the State University. "Within two hundred miles of it (a former President said) there is more good stock of the human kind than in any equal area in the United States." For that reason the Building Society has been the big brother to a little church there ready to die, and to the home missionary forces of a state that calls itself "Mighty Montana in the Making." It has made possible a church under intelligent leadership where students who are to help mold the thought of a great region in the northwest will get their idea of what Christ and his gospel mean to the world.

The common idea of the big brother is that he has prospered and that his heart is as big as his pocketbook. To others of the family in a tight place he says with a smile, "Do not worry, I will help you out." The picture is true of the Congregational Church Building Society with only this exception, that its heart is twice as big as its pocketbook.

WILLIAM W. LEETE,
New England Field Secretary.

The Congregational Publishing Society

The Pilgrim Press

Its Ideals and Policy

¶ The Congregational Publishing Society is the source of religious educational literature for the denomination.

¶ Doubtless everyone will agree that there never was a more important and strategic time for the publication of the right kind of religious educational literature than now, when people's minds are troubled by the controversy between Fundamentalist and Liberal, and when our young people are confused by the alleged conflict between science and religion. When earnest people feel that their Bible is being undermined and others, just as sincere, are beginning to think that the Bible has no place in our modern life, the importance of the right kind of religious literature cannot be over-estimated.

¶ It is the aim of the Congregational Publishing Society to keep its publications abreast with modern scientific and religious conclusions, teaching our children and young people so far as possible those things which they will not be obliged to unlearn when they take up their High School and College studies, and at the same time trying to present this truth constructively, not destructively; to build up and not tear down; to take nothing out without putting something better in its place.

¶ It is our constant purpose to build a good foundation of religious truth into the lives of our children, and always to conserve the permanent values of the past. In doing this, we try to minister to all ages and types and conditions—to those who live in city and town and open country; to schools with few teachers and poor equipment, as well as those with a well trained teaching force and adequate facilities.

¶ This service is rendered through our publication department (editorial and business) and book stores at Boston and Chicago, which publish and distribute pupils' and teachers' lesson materials and magazines, weekly story papers for children and young people, and services and books of a general religious and religious educational character.

CHARLES R. BROWN, D.D.
President

ARTHUR J. CROCKETT
Treasurer

WILLIAM HORACE DAY, D.D.
Vice-President

Do You Know

That: One tenth of America is Negro?
One million Orientals live in America?
Our Indians would fill Vermont?
Our Mexican population is increasing?
One and one third million Porto Ricans live under our flag?

Don't You Feel

That: Congregational Christians have wonderful opportunities to show brotherly good will in contacts with these groups all of whom are in America to stay, most of whom are underprivileged, many of whom are suffering deep wrongs?

Don't You Want

The American Missionary Association

to continue to represent you in direct, friendly, co-operative service among these fellow Americans — through its Churches, Schools, Colleges, Hospitals, and over six hundred trained workers?

Experienced, Expert, Eager — the Association seeks your co-operation until the problem of race is solved in the way of the Master.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

287 Fourth Avenue, New York

LAYING SURE FOUNDATIONS

You know the story of the man who built a house—
"and it fell not, for it was founded upon the rock."

The only hope of building a civilization that will stand the strain of divisive passions and selfish interests is through a process of sound Christian Education.

The
Congregational Education Society

Helps our Churches and Church Schools to lay sure foundations and to build upon them.

Develops and discovers the best materials and methods for religious education and makes them available to our churches.

Furnishes practical plans and methods for Young People's work.

Helps to organize, promote, and conduct summer conferences for leadership training. Thirty-five in 1925, with over 4,000 young people enrolled. Think of the power represented for Christian achievement!

Develops a balanced program of Missionary Education which not only enriches and enlivens the educational work of the church, but creates loyal support for our missionary enterprises.

Through its Social Service Department, it furnishes trustworthy information and stimulates thought and discussion about the most important social and industrial issues of the day. Knowledge of the facts, and right action concerning them is essential to a Christian world.

Helps to maintain University Pastors at 35 tax-supported educational institutions who are constantly working to conserve the religious interests of our young people away at college. Here are our best assets.

Aids about 150 young men and young women each year, by means of loans or grants, to continue their studies in preparation for the ministry and other Christian vocations. Some of our leading ministers today owe their start to such aid as this.

Helps to bring to the attention of our young people and students, the great opportunities for the investment of life in Christian service. This is done through addresses, personal interviews, and correspondence.

And These are only Samples of a varied and useful service.

The Society invites your prayerful interest, and your active co-operation through individual gifts, conditional gifts with annuity provisions, or legacies and bequests.

Our Field Secretaries in the various district offices are at your service and will gladly furnish information on all points. Or, you may write to

Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston

The Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom

As Carried on by the Woman's Boards

R more than half a century the Woman's Boards have been carrying on eat international, interracial work of and progress. Brief mention of a of the year's achievements will indi- its scope and character and show how being constantly adapted to the condi- of our modern world.

Some Events of the Year

ree Seniors at the Dondi School for , Angola, West Africa, have taken the st grade Portuguese Government exam- ons and passed with flying colors. They he first African women of that part of country to attempt any government ex- ations, and great was their triumph.

e Woman's Union in Madura, with 600 n members, under the leadership of Eva M. Swift, has opened a pleasant building to all women for rest, recrea- and inspiration, and offers a home to ess or industrial girls. This is a new under the sun in that city of seclusion.

Aleppo, Syria, are concentrated 40,000 gees from 120 Turkish towns and vil- . The Woman's Boards are supporting Bible women who are serving as many he 24,000 women as they can reach. report an "epidemic" of wanting to be ht reading and writing on the part of young girls who never had an opportun- or schooling on account of deportation. encouragement in this rather dreary mpment is the growing friendliness be- n Gregorian and Protestant Armenians. e Indian Government is just complet- a brand new town for the criminal s where Miss Ella Hoxie's work will be finely housed at public expense. The ge that is taking place in these people is ated in the new names: Umedpur, "The of Hope," for the new town; and "Shol- Industrial Settlement" instead of lapur Criminal Tribes Settlement."

be College is on the eve of celebrating ftieth anniversary just as this issue ap- s. Two years ago loyal alumnae raised 00 and purchased a magnificent campus. they have inaugurated a jubilee cam- n in Japan for an endowment fund of ,000. A campaign for new buildings is pushed by the women of the Interior. es it pay to support women's colleges in Orient? Look in at the Peking Congre- nal Church Conference. Who is the ble little clerk of the session? An old hing College girl. Who are the most inent Chinese women delegates? Six hing graduates. "It warms my heart hink that there are Yenching women wing all of their influence and strength trained leadership into working com- -fashion with all the rest of us to meet troublesome questions that confront a today," writes a missionary.

Public and Governmental Recognitions

shisha Girls' School has been greatly red by a visit from the Empress of n, who reverently stood on the plat- form during chapel service and showed great interest in all that she saw and heard as she was shown around the building. She was especially fascinated by the cake-making in the Domestic Science department. Afterwards the school received from the Government a special gift of 600 yen and "two changes of raiment," or rather material for ceremonial garments, one for Dean Matsuda and one for President Ebina.

Word has come that our three women missionaries in Micronesia, now working under the Japanese flag, have each received from the Emperor of Japan a gift of 500 yen, as a mark of appreciation. No conditions are put upon the use of this gift.

Large grants are given by the British Government to schools and hospitals in India, Ceylon, and Africa, the amount being based on the quality of work done. It means much when recognition comes also from such a source as the Red Cross Society of India, which has just given 10,000 rupees (about $3,300) to the Ahmednagar Hospital for Women and Children to provide a sorely needed ward for tubercular patients.

A few years ago any recognition of a Protestant school by the ancient Greek Church would have been unthought of. But three times during the year has the Archbishop of Syra visited our Junior College in Athens to beg our workers to open an American school in his diocese. He is impressed with the character-building quality of our mission institutions.

Both the Greek and the Bulgarian Governments are showing themselves extremely hospitable. Bulgaria has given two desirable sites in its capital city: one for the girls' school, which the Chicago Board is eager to move from Samokov to Sofia; and one for a community center in the heart of the city on which already a building is being erected, the first of its kind in that country. A further contribution made by the Government was of lumber valued at $1,095 from its finest forest.

Community Work

Demonstration centers of Christian neighborliness and good will touch people who could never be reached through school or church.

The new Neighborhood House in the slums of Osaka, in which we are co-operating with the American Board, is the first Christian social settlement in this Japanese city, fifth largest in the world, and is in the midst of the factory district. Ample attention will be given to the children and to the factory girls, to mothers' meetings and club activities. Because all Japanese of youthful years are able to read, a cheerful and well-equipped reading room will be one feature. One of Miss Alice Cary's most helpful assistants is a friendly Bible woman so skilled in neighborliness that already the people have begun to call her "grandma."

Bombay, with its population of 1,250,000 and its many cotton mills, offers a similar challenge. The women have placed two social workers there and are adapting an old mission building for a community center. A small hostel for wage-earners, a workroom for needy women, a day nursery are some features. The medical end is developing rapidly under the care of Dr. Harriet J. Clark and her trained Indian nurse. Is it any wonder it is welcomed in a community where the mortality rate among infants is over eighty-six per cent!

Our workers are awake to the value of reaching young people through recreational activities. The first outdoor playground for children in Constantinople has been started by our Gedik Pasha School in co-operation with the Y. W. C. A. and the American Junior Red Cross. About one hundred and thirty Turkish children use it daily with recreational supervision at times.

Alive to New Methods

The "project method" has been warmly welcomed by our educational missionaries. The Girls' School at Uduppiddi, Ceylon, is emphasizing projects closely connected with the life of the home and the family and is working out interesting experiments which are being watched with deep interest by government inspectors. The Uduvil Girls' School, also in Ceylon, which has just celebrated its centenary, was the first to have an expert in mental tests and physical measurements on its missionary staff and she has trained a Tamil teacher to carry on this service.

While America is just getting familiar with the "family case worker," one has actually gone to Western India as a missionary. Trained in New York's most scientific methods, Miss Elizabeth M. Cairns, a Smith College alumna, is working among the homes of the robber caste people at Sholapur. "You can't help loving the little robbers," she declares. "They are the dearest, dirtiest, keenest, most mischievous and most bewitching little things in India. They have untold possibilities for lives of usefulness."

The district nurse is another professional worker much desired on the mission field. The sending of Miss Ruth Cowles, R.N., to Johannesburg to organize Zulu nurses for medical service among the black miners' families all up and down the Gold Reef is a notable effort in this direction.

A Home Thrust

We have dwelt on inspiring facts and achievements rather than on the unmet challenges, the heart-breaking refusals, the increasing costs of the work, the overwhelming needs for buildings and equipment, new recruits, larger appropriations. Money for women's work now comes chiefly through church apportionments, but no one of the Woman's Boards has received its quota this past year. We look forward with hope to the coming Every Member Canvass, believing that the churches will see that efforts for the world's women and children are a vital part of the overseas program.

Our National Journal

CONGREGATIONALISTS have one national journal for their homes and their churches. It is The Congregationalist. It keeps us informed; unites our fellowship; helps in real religion. It represents our churches and all our mutual interests. It reports the progress of the Christian world; it interprets current events and moral issues from the Christian point of view. It publishes what Christian leade rs are doing and saying. It maintains an open forum for the free discussion of the subjects which interest its readers. It reports the news of the churches, missions, education and social service. It gives comfort and inspiration. It is a force for righteousness.

The Congregationalist helps its readers to carry the Pilgrim spirit into the life of today. While it is the organ of the Congregational churches, it is broadly Christian rather than sectarian. It shows life as it is and helps us to make it what it should be. It stimulates enthusiasm in the work and opportunities of the church. In these confusing days its light and leading bring constant comfort and cheer. It is the best of pastors' assistants. It is the layman's guide and friend. It is the comrade of the young people. It is the mother's and home-maker's helper. It is attractive, interesting, up-to-date, and abundantly worth while.

Special Features

1925-1926

Dr. George A. Gordon's Autobiography

Biographical Sketches of Other Remarkable Lives

"Kennedy's Second Best" — a thrilling serial story — by John Freeman

Great Days in Historic Churches By F. Lauriston Bullard

Significant Sermons by Outstanding Preachers

The Challenge of Youth Around the World

What Europe Is Doing and Thinking

The Stirring Drama of the Orient

Regular Features

The News of Our Churches
The Editorial Outlook
Editorials from Contributing Editors
Our Western Editor's Page
Parables of Safed the Sage
The Congregationalist's Bible Class
Closet and Altar Our Invalid Parish
Christian Endeavor Columns
Reviews of the New Books
Our Readers' Forum
Foreign Correspondence
Dr. Fagley's New York Page
Children's Stories
What the Christian World Is Doing
The Progress of Missions
Pictures Poetry Risibles

Interesting and outstanding writers contribute to "The Congregationalist."

Now is the time to subscribe, to secure full reports of the National Council in Washington and the Holiday and Book Review Numbers

$3.00 per year, $2.75 in Church Clubs, 10 cents per copy

The Congregationalist

14 Beacon St., Boston 10 South La Salle St., Chicago

A Great Adventure in Education

THE Congregational Foundation for Education was established by the National Council in 1921 to meet the challenge of the twentieth century for unified leadership in Christian Education. It will report to the Council in Washington the results of its faithful stewardship and its notable service.

Nearly three centuries ago Congregationalists began to lead the pioneers in founding Christian colleges in America. They blazed a trail across this great continent. Harvard and Yale, Dartmouth and Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Wellesley, Oberlin and Marietta, Grinnell and Colorado, Beloit and Carleton, Pomona and Pacific, Howard and Fisk, Piedmont and Atlanta—are but a few of the many honored names in the grand roster of institutions for which Congregationalists have been responsible. Some of them are now strong and independent financially. Many of them have burdens greater than they can bear without special help.

Their separate efforts to secure necessary funds to carry on their needed work in the course of the years developed unintentional overlapping and striving at cross-purposes. The Great War led to a financial crisis for many schools and colleges.

A competent committee of Congregational educators studied the entire problem. Their recommendations paved the way to the establishment of The Congregational Foundation for Education. A strong board of eighteen trustees was organized with membership equally divided among ministers, educators and laymen. President Henry Churchill King is chairman, and the chief executive—now retiring—has been the president, Dr. George W. Nash, who has served with wisdom and fidelity.

The Foundation has undertaken to relate the college to the church and the church to the college in happy, hopeful reunion, to lead a unified advance in the development of Christian character and training for Christian service, to serve as the General Staff of our Congregational Army of Education.

The achievements of the Foundation have been significant and valuable. They have been limited only by the resources provided for it. There has been urgent need for its services from the beginning, and it is needed urgently today by a score of worthy institutions and by all our churches.

The Foundation has saved and strengthened some of our weaker institutions. It has gathered data regarding the work and needs of institutions of higher learning associated with the Congregational fellowship. It has become an information bureau, to supply the churches with the latest facts obtainable from our colleges, seminaries, academies, and training schools. It has carried its message and co-operative service to the churches. It has recommended college presidents. It has served as college counsel and mediator, as advisor to givers to Christian education, and as guide to good management. It has given Congregationalists a new educational vision, and led the way—as far as Congregationalists have provided means and moral support. The means and the moral support have not measured up to the needs nor the opportunities before us.

Now we of the Pilgrim faith must answer some solemn questions. Shall not Congregationalists remain true to their traditions? Shall we not respond to the call of need and of duty? Shall we not continue to do our part in the great unfinished task of Christian Education?

An answer is expected in the National Council at Washington.

The Congregational Foundation for Education

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois

New Plans for the Boston Book Store

Reference in The Congregationalist has been made from time to time to the serious illness last winter of Rev. Harold B. Hunting, who, at the time of contracting this illness, was manager of the Pilgrim Press Book Store in Boston. Mr. Hunting's illness came at a crucial time in the business and promotional activities of the Congregational Publishing Society, but every effort was made to carry on during his absence. His long delayed return to health had led to his retirement from association with the Book Store, much to the regret of his many friends who found in him not only a genial and brotherly personality but an exceedingly competent and well-informed bookman.

In seeking a successor to Mr. Hunting, effort has been made to establish a new, distinctive, and hopeful link between the book and publishing interests of Congregationalism and the churches and church schools which they exist to serve, by the appointment of a working pastor, Rev. A. L. McKenzie, recently of Walpole, Mass. In addition to the management of the Boston Book Store, and the serving, through the Boston headquarters, of the Congregational constituency east of the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, Mr. McKenzie will assume much responsibility for the general promotion of the Pilgrim Press publications and for assisting churches and church schools in securing the finest possible literature for every need.

Mr. McKenzie comes to his new task from a background of experience in which his organizational and business capacities have had distinctive demonstration. He also at one period had considerable experience in the selling of books. In addition, however, to natural aptitude for business organization and management, he has what is most important of all—an intimate personal knowledge of the actual conditions and needs of church and church school. The value of this cannot be easily over-estimated. It means that in addition to evaluating the material and meeting general needs, Mr. McKenzie, in a consultative and advisory capacity, will be able to help individuals, churches, and church schools, approaching all situations and problems from the standpoint of an experienced working pastor who understands local conditions and problems.

REV. ALEXANDER L. MCKENZIE
Manager of the Pilgrim Press Book Store in Boston

The Walpole pastor comes to the management of the Book Store at a most favorable time. The whole interior arrangements have been recently overhauled and great improvements effected. A fine sign catches the eye of the visitor in Beacon Street, and the windows have been altered so as to permit a more eff display. In addition to the general im ment through a more artistic setting a tractive environment, the actual arrang of books and material has been carefully a plished in such a way as not only to with wise selection and classification, bu to attain effective appeal to the eye in of spiritual, literary, and educational v Visitors to the Book Store have recentl ferred to it as "a new place," and Dean C R. Brown said at a recent meeting o Board of the Congregational Publishing So "I have been coming to the Boston Book for 33 years and this is the finest Book they ever had."

Under Mr. McKenzie's management effort will be made to make the Pilgrim Book Store the first book store in New land. It should, however, be borne in that it is the policy of the Directors of the lishing Society to make this Book Store merely a place for the selling of books the center of a distinctly religious servi the Congregational constituency, and, in to the entire religious field in so far as it be reached. To this end the personnel o staff of the Book Store has been speciall lected with a view to competency in g counsel on all problems in relation to reli literature.

The wise co-operation of the Congregat constituency in these efforts will not strengthen this particular service, but wil sist in making it a larger contribution t general advancement of the Kingdom of C

Mr. McKenzie was born in Wareham, M but grew up in Plymouth where his earl ligious life was in connection with the Ch of the Pilgrims. He was educated in the lic schools in Plymouth, later attended W ton Seminary in Easthampton, and was g ated B.A. from Yale in 1900, and from Divinity School in 1902. While in the co

(Continued on page 488)

The Autumn Ingathering of new members at the November Communi can be made an occasion for a genuine revival of interest throughout the co munity in the work of the church and its particular mission to minister to t souls of men. People who have long kept their church letters in their trun and who have sealed up their interest in religion may be reinterested and new interest kindled in the church when they have been persuaded to get the letters, to unite with the church, and to take a real part in its worship a service. Others who have been waiting for a kindly invitation will respo and thus be led into a larger and richer life. Quickening the spiritual life the community is the great responsibility of the church. Read Dr. Burto New Booklet for Personal Workers. Here you will find many helpf suggestions and much fine material for your use. Samples of this and oth helpful leaflets, plans and programs relating to the evangelistic and devotion work of the church may be had free on request to The Commission o Evangelism and Devotional Life, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York Cit

"It is our privilege as well as our duty to give help to the First Church in Washington by a national gift that shall enable it to continue its service of the nation's life with an adequate plant and equipment in which to meet its present opportunity and accomplish its future task." —Rockwell Harmon Potter.

"Congregational people will not be slow to see that your church is a strategic church; that it represents in a large way, in the capital city of our nation, our Congregational order. I should be greatly surprised if you did not find a quick and large response to your appeal to the denomination." —George A. Gordon.

THE DOWNTOWN CHURCH

at the Nation's Capital

Sixty years ago the First Congregational Church of Washington was organized and built its present edifice at Tenth and G Streets.

In the last decade this downtown church, with the largest membership, benevolences and financial receipts in its history, has faced an ever-enlarging opportunity.

Washington Has

tens of thousands of students, of young men and women, of government employees, of temporary residents and visitors, and

First Church Has

the location, desire and spirit for ministering to these friends from every part of the Union.
Its present edifice is lacking in facilities and is in dangerous disrepair.

Two Things Are Needed

1. An adequate church building with facilities for young people's work, religious education, social service and preaching.

2. A partial maintenance fund to make possible the needed workers.

This deserves broad support because the church members are limited financially, and three-quarters of the constituency is from outside.

First Church makes its own intensive campaign October 12—18. In November it appeals to the City of Washington; then to the denomination.

What Can You Do?

"I know of no opportunity in all our Congregational work at the present time which equals, alike in importance and in prospect, that presented by the First Church of Washington." —J. Percival Huget.

"Under any administration this church holds a unique place in the religious life of the nation. The opportunity it offers for presenting a forward-looking and comprehensive religious message to men from all over the country is unique."—Charles Reynolds Brown.

(Continued from page 486)

and seminary he was connected with the Yale Co-operative Society, and had charge of extensive sale of books and supplies. His first pastorate was in Wallingford, Vt., where he spent four years, going from there to Winthrop, Mass., and in 1911 to Walpole, where he has continued to the present time. His ministry in Walpole has been conspicuously successful, not only in the building up of a strong, well equipped, and well established church and church school, but also in the larger service, personally and through his church, which he has been able to give the whole community. He was active as a member of the committee which secured a new charter for the town, under which excellent results have been attained. He has always assumed large responsibilities in connection with municipal affairs and for many years served on the Town Planning Committee. His most distinctive service, however, has been rendered in connection with the Bradford Lewis House, which was presented to the Walpole Congregational Church in memory of Bradford Lewis, a former deacon of the church, by his son E. Frank Lewis of Lawrence, Mass. This institute in the house formerly owned by Bradford Lewis, while owned and controlled by the Congregational Church, has under Mr. McKenzie's guidance and outstanding leadership been placed at the service of the whole community. It has represented a most distinctive and successful piece of work, and has proven a powerful factor as an integrating force in the life of the community at a time when similar communities are seriously suffering from disintegration. The Bradford Lewis homestead, which was given for this institutional purpose at the suggestion of Henry P. Kendall, was dedicated in 1919. Mr. Mackenzie was married in Wareham in 1902 to Sophia M. Hammond, daughter of Capt. A. H. Hammond. Mrs. McKenzie attended Oberlin College, and has given unflagging support to her husband in the work of the church, in camp fire activities, and in the general service of the community. Having no children she has been free to devote herself to this service even more fully than the wife of the average minister. Mr. McKenzie will have her loyal support in this new field which will constitute no less than parish duties the vital work of a Christian ministry.

Both Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Finley, manager of the Chicago Book Store, will be at Washington in charge of the Pilgrim Press Book exhibit, during the National Council, where they will welcome the opportunity of personal contacts with their constituency.

Northern New England School of Religious Education

Ten Years of Progress

THE recent session of the Northern New England School of Religious Education was the most successful in its history. The zeal and earnestness of the students for attending classes and doing outside work was very pronounced. One hundred and five certificates were awarded to the first-year students, 51 to second-year students, and 29 diplomas were given to those completing the three-year course, 20 of whom were Congregationalists. In addition to this, 13 of those under 16 years in the preparatory course, which was inaugurated for the first time this year, received certificates and the faculty conceded that some of the papers they handed in were among the best; and five of the 30 members of the alumni association attending for the whole week received credit for post-graduate work. The Congregationalists led the enrollment with 195: six other denominations were represented.

The school is starting in on its second decade, under most promising circumstances. Since its organization there has been a steady increase in enrollment, and new courses and instructors have been added each year.

A marked feature of this year's session was the observance of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the school. An alumni luncheon was given at noon, and was so successful that it was voted to continue it each year. Reunions of all the classes were held in the afternoon, and in the evening there was a big meeting in the gymnasium, at which time a representative from each class spoke briefly, telling some important class event. The dean, Mrs. Nellie Towne Hendrick, gave a short history of the school, and a memorial service followed in memory of the deceased students and ulty; among the latter were two promi workers in the field of religious educa Charles Foster Kent and Nannie Lee Fra The main address was by Dr. Milton S. L field of New York, for six years a memb the faculty, who recited a great many ple incidents of the founding of the school a its first years, his subject being "Ten Yea Progress." Following this there was a r tion and social hour.

There were several other pleasant eve features: a faculty and student get-tog meeting on the first evening; an allegor Miss Meme Brockway on "The Boy and Church," showing in a humorous but true how many churches do not adequately pr for the mental and spiritual developmen their boys; the student night, for which music was furnished by the Exonians, a g of boys from the Congregational Churc Exeter, and a one-act play, "Where Sh Spend My Vacation," was given by five from the South Congregational Church in cord, all deciding with the leader that Northern New England School of Reli Education was an ideal place in every wa both profit and pleasure to spend one's tion. One evening the pageant, "Whom Ye," was presented in the beautiful an theater nature has provided at Durham.

The special features on Sunday were demonstration Sunday school; the church vice in charge of the faculty; a forum church school problems; an organ recital; service conference for students in charg the dean, when decisions were made to giv best of service to the Master, the church the community; a vesper service around flag-staff; and the commencement service Judge Robert Chapin Parker, for 13 chairman of the Board of Management of Northfield Summer School, gave an addres "The Dignity of Our Task," and the awarded certificates and diplomas.

Throughout the session books on all ph of religious education were on display for sale; there was also an exhibit of mate suggesting ways of building up and increa the efficiency of the church school, and a collection of posters and other devices for c ing a more active interest in missions.

Pictures of the whole school, various cla city and town groups, the pageant, and features were taken to be made into slide add to the large collection the school alr has.

During the session Dr. Hetzel, presiden the University of New Hampshire, gav luncheon to the board of trustees, which cluded three college presidents: Dr. Ernest Hopkins of Dartmouth; Dr. Ralph D. H of the University of New Hampshire; Paul Dwight Moody of Middlebury; * Moses R. Lovell of Durham, N. H.; *Mr. thur H. Merritt of Boston; *Mrs. Helen Thayer of Portsmouth, N. H.; *Miss Dor Odell, Greenland, N. H.; *Mr. Raymond Magrath, Durham, N. H.; *Mrs. Stella Thompson, East Andover, N. H.; Rev. Joh

(Continued on page 490)

Christian Home Life

The Surest Hope of Civic Betterment

¶ In our great cities the frankly religious approach, with its word of inspiration and its hand of helpfulness, has received a remarkable endorsement by the late Victor Lawson of the Chicago News. His generous bequest for such work in Chicago, totaling probably more than $3,000,000, emphasizes the judgment of one of the greatest newspaper editors. ¶ The City Missionary Society of Boston has recently been bequeathed about $100,000 by the late Caleb J. French, a founder of the Telephone Company, and a Vice-President of the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company. ¶ In all our cities, and particularly in Boston, the endowment and the current income of such societies are entirely inadequate to meet the flood of work thrust upon our Congregational parishes. ¶ The city is the great center of the battle between good and evil in our modern civilization.

Our forces need support.

CITY MISSIONARY SOCIETY

14 Beacon Street, Boston

William Ellison, President Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Sec'y. Samuel F. Wilkins, Treas.

For Religious Educational Wor

Teacher--Adult Classes--Private Study

SELL'S Bible Stud Text-Book

350,000 NOW IN USE!

Just Out! { No. 11. Studies of Great Bible Characters
No. 12. Studies of Famous Bible Women

1. Supplementary Bible Studies
2. Bible Studies by Books
3. Bible Studies by Periods
4. Bible Studies by Doctrines
5. B. S. in the Life of Christ
6. B. S. in the Life of St. P
7. B. S. in the Christian Li
8. B. S. in the Early Church
9. B. S. in Vital Questions
10. B. S. in the Four Gospels

Send for circular. Each, cloth, 75c.; paper, 50c.

F. H. REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Avenue, Chic

he Congregational Woman's Home Missionary Federation

IE Federation, from its very beginning, has been closely co-ordinated with the onal Homeland Societies. It represents State Home Missionary Unions organized

Two Schauffler Graduates

arily as collective agencies for the Na- l Societies.

ose women who organized the Federation ty years ago were pioneers in the type of nization now proposed by the Committee welve. With the courage of their convic- they had a far-reaching vision. Instead tting up a separate administrative unit, realized the economy and strength in uni- appeal to the churches and co-operation the National Program. Therefore, the ration, from its very beginning, has been ed with the National Homeland Societies.

motional Activities: The Federation has oted certain definite aims as its share in denominational program which may be l as follows:

listing Congregational women in a deeper nal consecration of life through Prayer, y, Service, Gifts.

iritually: The Pilgrim Prayer Guild is agency through which the Federation es the women of the churches in their ional life, preparing suitable literature co-operating with the Commission on gelism in its suggestions for the Lenten d. ancially: Advising State Unions in the aign for denominational benevolence for whole apportionment and the practice of rdship.

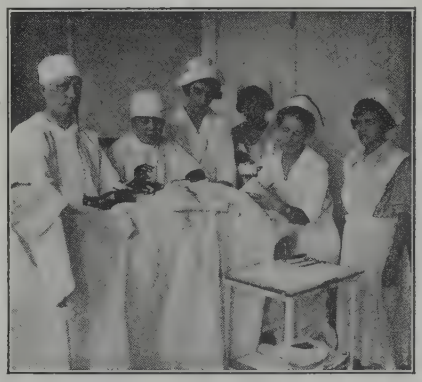
ucationally: Assisting the State Unions ne development of their respective con- ncies by providing Home Missionary pro- s and methods; promoting mission study es and summer conferences; preparing and distributing special literature designed to inform and inspire women and young people as to denominational goals, supplementing the work of the Education Society; suggesting and encouraging model organization to include every phase of missionary and community service; discovering personnel and training for leadership; supplying speakers at State Conferences, women's meetings, and ministering especially to small groups remote from denominational centers, linking these with the larger interests and bringing them in touch with the denominational task and opportunity; securing the intelligent co-operation of every Congregational woman in endeavoring to undertake denominational responsibilities.

The Federation co-operates with the Foundation for Education in its care for all of our Missionary Colleges and academies. Two particular training schools for women are its especial interest, Schauffler and the Congregational Training School for Women at Chicago.

The Schauffler Missionary Training School is one of the training schools of our denomination for definite Christian service. It is for the equipment of young women of consecrated



Ryder Memorial Hospital
Humacao, P. R.

purpose, who desire to devote themselves to Christian work in fields to which they may be called, and among those whom, because of the affinities of race and language, they are best fitted to serve. The School is thus as national and international in its aims as are the Mission Boards of the Protestant denominations.

The Congregational Training School for Women trains for leadership. It offers to young women the opportunity to fit themselves for the great task of helping to develop a type of

A Parsonage
Made possible by gifts from the Federation

Christian personality which shall build a new social order. Its graduates fill positions in every department of church and parish organization and activity—in the homeland and abroad—and because of its high ideals and leadership the School commends itself to Women's Unions as a missionary opportunity.

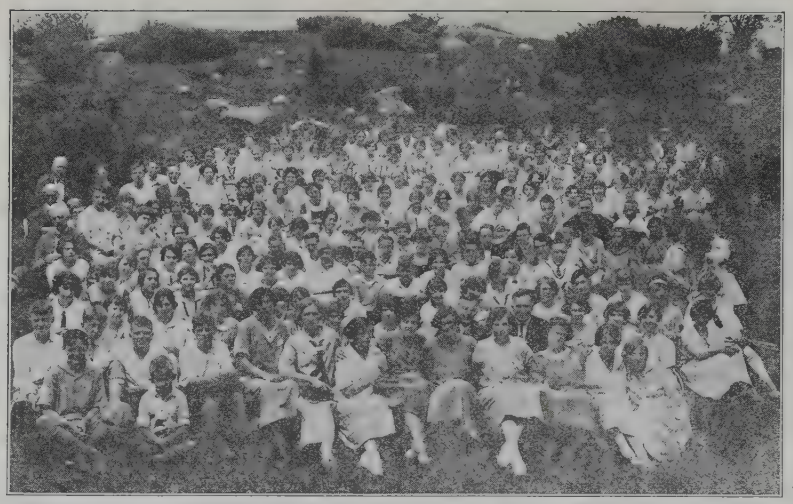
The Federation is interested in the Board of Ministerial Relief, particularly in the Christmas Fund.

A most necessary and efficient activity of the State Unions is represented by the Home Service—the provision for the needs of our missionaries and their homes by the family boxes prepared by local auxiliaries, and sent as a token of good will to these missionaries—the school boxes containing the salable clothing which may be converted into income—the Hospital supplies to enable our hospitals in the Homeland to pursue their ministry of mercy, and the equipment in other ways of our schools and hospitals which enables them to render helpful service.

In co-operation with the Congregational Home Missionary Society and the Council of Women, the Federation, through the Unions, undertakes our denominational share of the work among Farm and Cannery Migrants. This is a very important form of Home Mission work—and our denomination supports one station.

Reaching the Children Through Story Telling

Chicago Training School for Women



NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION, DURHAM, N. H., AUGUST, 1925

(Continued from page 488)

Johnson, D.D., Philadelphia, Pa.; *Mr. Edward C. Dane, Concord, N. H.; *Rev. Charles S. Jones, Biddeford, Me.; Mr. Josiah P. Jenness, Dover, N. H.; *Rev. Roy B. Chamberlain, Hanover, N. H.; Rev. W. A. Cate, Nashua, N. H.; Mrs. Avis F. Smith, Methuen, Mass.; *Mrs. Mary C. Manning, Manchester, N. H.; *Mrs. Nellie T. Hendrick, Nashua, N. H.

There are two outstanding features of this school, its fine Christian atmosphere and the loyalty of the students. Every class is organized and is planning a mid-year reunion at which time the best things accomplished since attending the school will be presented. The tenth annual session is now history, but its results will be felt in every church and community fortunate enough to be represented in its enrollment.

On Oct. 15, in connection with the State Sunday School Convention to be held in Nashua, there will be a summer school banquet at which toasts will be given by Miss Brockway, other members of the faculty and students.

(* refers to Congregationalists.)

The Pastor Says: Men do not think: they merely imitate.

Briggs-Evans Engagemen

Many Congregationalists throughout country will be pleased to learn of the riage engagement, just announced, of Mis A. Evans, Field Secretary of the Wo Home Missionary Union of Massachu Boston, and Rev. Howard A. M. Brig Northfield, Mass. Miss Evans is a cu and able young woman and an eff leader in the cause of Congregational missions. Mr. Briggs is one of our mos satile and devoted ministers. He has pastorates in New Jersey and Massachu has been president of Straight College during the summer conducts Camp Qu Tuk, for boys, at Northfield. No date has set for the wedding.

The worst kind of religion is no religi all, and these men, living in ease and lu indulging themselves in the amusement of without a religion, may be thankful that live in lands where the Gospel they neglec tamed the beastliness and ferocity of When the microscopic search of skepticis turned its attention to human society, an found a place on this planet ten miles s where a man may live in decency, comfor security, supporting and educating his ch unspoiled and unpolluted—a place where reverenced, infancy respected, womanhood ored, and human life held in due regard— skeptics can find such a place ten miles s on this globe, where the Gospel has not and cleared the way and laid the found and made decency and security possible, i then be in order for the skeptical to thither.—James Russell Lowell.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Founded by General O. O. Howard

The Capstone of Negro Education

A University located at the Capital of the Nation, with a campus of twenty-five acres. Modern scientific and general equipment. A plant worth approximately $2,000,000. A faculty of 176 members. A student body (1924-25) of 2,064 from 38 different states and 10 foreign countries. Freshmen applications for 1925-26 of over 1400. Generally acknowledged to be the outstanding National University of the Colored People of America.

President
J. STANLEY DURKEE, PH.D
Secretary-Treasurer
EMMETT J. SCOTT, LL.D.

Howard's Needs

$100 per year to cover incidental fees, etc. (tuition) of a student for a year. $2,000 for Permanent Scholarships. An Endowment Fund of at least $5,000,000. An Administration Building, $80,000. A Dormitory for Young Women, $100,000. A Dormitory for Young Men, $100,000. A Law School Building, $70,000. A building for the College of Education, $150,000. Contributions for current expenses in any amounts however small. Special contributions for the purpose of modernizing and equipping University class rooms, amounting to $7,500 ($300, approximately, will equip a class room).

Contributions may be sent to J. Stanley Durkee, President, or to Emmett J. Scott, Secretary-Treasurer, Howard University, Washington, D. C.

Purpose

To provide the Twelve Million Colored people of the United States with College-trained and Professional leaders through its Colleges in Arts, Sciences, and Education; its Schools of Music, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Religion, and Law.

FORM OF BEQUEST

I give, devise, and bequeath to The Howard University, an institution incorporated by Special Act of Congress, and located at Washington, D. C., the sum of .....

WITH THE CHILDREN

Neighborhood Grandmother

By Rose Brooks

ot one of us has one,—living with us, an," said Betty Martin to the boys and who grouped around her on the piazza eager to hear of her visit to her Western s. "Wish we did have. Some of us, any-ny?" demanded Tom, the unimaginative. 't fun for boys—much—are they?"

! All you know about it!" Betty was ority itself. "Guess my cousin Ben could ou. How'd you like to go to her room ne you wanted to, 'specially if you couldn't what to do?"

ell, what would I do when I went?" interest was but lukewarm.

?" Betty eyed him witheringly, but soft- with, "Oh, I forgot, you haven't been Well, you can always whittle, for one if you really make something—" nittle! In a room!"

avings right on the floor. Mess all you to. All you have to do is just brush 'em th Grandmother's—" e's not your grandmother," protested an call her that. She said so when I first ere. No rugs on the floor in Grand- r's room. She says they're a bother oom where there's so much going on."

od knife?" asked Tom, searching his s in vain.

gular scout knife, with all the blades. gets lost." Observant of Tom's vain was Betty. "'Cause she won't let you take it out of her room. Sort of carpenter table Grandmother has in one corner of her room. Great big room, with a big porch off it, too. Room for anything anybody wants. And a book—funny old book—with pictures of things to whittle. Little saws and a hammer and chissels and things and boards and blocks of wood—"

"My goodness! In an old lady's room!" began Jimsy in vast surprise, to be cut short by Betty's indignant, "Old! She's not old!"

"All grandmothers are old." Jimsy was final. "What color's her hair?"

"White," admitted Betty. "But you don't remember 'bout her being old, anyway—"

"What do you do if you're a girl? In her room, I mean?" piped Alice from the bottom step.

"Whatever you want to, and she helps you. Cunningest sewing table. Little drawers full of spools and scissors and pieces of cloth and ribbons,—oh, everything. Make anything you want to for any of your dolls, and Grandmother shows you how. Anything. Shows you how to sew on your own buttons, too,—so they'll stay. Any kind of button in Grandmother's button box."

"I don't like to sew," demurred Alice. "Guess you can't cook there."

"Can't you? Grandmother has afternoon tea every single day. Makes it in her room. Didn't I tell you she's always in her room? For meals, too? Well, she is, 'cause she's too lame to go up and down stairs. Course Nora takes her real meals to her on a tray, but she says it's fun to make her own tea. She has an 'lectric toaster and little stove and kettle and everything. And if you go to her room at four, she let's you make it for her if you want to. You don't have to. What do you s'pose is in her little china cupboard? A little one of everything, plate and cup and saucer, and you can have cookies and toast and cambric tea, if you want to."

"Never goes downstairs?" Jimsy's heart was of the softest.

"She doesn't care. She says she has everything she wants in one room, and why should she want to go out of it? Everybody's always in it. Not just the family. Everybody in that whole town is forever going to see Grandmother because—"

A grind of wheels caused every head to turn in time to see a moving van round the corner and crawl slowly up the hill.

"Come on!" shouted Jimsy; and all thought of grandmothers vanished as the children raced after that excitement,—staple of childhood,—a moving van.

"My goodness me!" panted Tom, at the top of the hill. "It's stopping at the cottage!"

"Nobody's lived there for three years!" panted Betty in answer.

Squatted on the vacant lot next "the cottage" which, despite its long vacancy, had always been kept trim and painted, the children eyed every article that the movers carried to the house.

"Who's in the house?" whispered Alice to Betty. "Somebody. Showing the men where to put things."

"Any girls? See any?"

"Any boys?" from Jimsy.

Out of curiosity, the children stole to get a glimpse of the back door of "the cottage," and

Carleton College

NORTHFIELD, MINNESOTA

Donald John Cowling, Ph.D., D.D., LL.D., President

Carleton College is a school which constantly progresses in the direction of those things that are great and good; it is in the vanguard of educational institutions in America.

The spiritual welfare of the young people who come to Carleton is carefully looked after by a faculty whose concern is the development of Christian character as well as intellectual capacity.

The physical equipment of Carleton College is of a high standard, and designed to supply all that is needed in the way of liberal education. Information may be secured from

WILLARD W. BARTLETT, Assistant to the President, 106 Leighton Hall

THE NORTHFIELD MAGAZINE

RECORD OF CHRISTIAN WORK

East Northfield, Massachusetts

A MONTHLY review of worldwide religious thought and activity with contributed articles, sermons and studies; departments of Bible study, devotional reading, and methods; and reports of addresses delivered at the famous Northfield conferences. Illustrated. $2.00 per year; Canada, $2.25; foreign, $2.50.

Reports of addresses delivered at this year's Northfield conferences began in the September number with reports of the Young Women's Conferences. Addresses by Dr. Henry K. Sherrill, Dr. Harris E. Kirk, Miss Adelaide Landon, Rev. George A. Buttrick, Rev. F. S. Downs, Dr. John McDowell, and others. All in addition to the regular departments. 20 cents a copy.

OCTOBER DOUBLE NUMBER, 40 cents.

About 80 pages of addresses, in addition to the regular departments.

The Abiding Presence, and
The Beatitudes—I, James Reid
Take Thou Thy Share of Hardness, and There Shall Be a Space, John A. Hutton.
Psychology and Religion, and Lifting Up Jesus, W. F. Halliday.
Winning Souls, Melvin E. Trotter.
The Christian Task, W. L. Poteat.
What Think Ye of Christ? F. S. Downs.
Consecration, W. H. Foulkes.
The Adequate Motive, Bishop McDowell.
For to Me to Live is Christ, G. A. Buttrick.
Iron Chariots in the Road, J. G. Gilkey.
With Christ on the Maine Coast, C. W. Turner.
Lutheran Deaconess Work, Sister Anna Ebert.
Fifty Years After: D. L. Moody's Influence in Great Britain, J. Stuart Holden.
And Others.

November Missionary Number. Addresses and articles by Mrs. H. B. Montgomery, Dr. G. L. Cady, Dr. A. H Bradford, Miss Bertha Conde, Rev. James Reid, Anne Charlotte Darlington, Harry N. Holmes, Rev. H. R. Weir, Rev. Donald Carruthers, and others. All in addition to the regular departments. 20 cents a copy.

Forecast for 1926. Northfield addresses will appear in every number throughout the year by Dr. John A. Hutton, Dr. Harris E. Kirk, Rev. James Reid, Prof. W. Fearon Halliday, Rev. Melvin E. Trotter, Rev. George A. Buttrick, Dr. J. D. Jones, Dr. J. Stuart Holden, Dr. John McDowell, Dr. Charles A. Dinsmore, Dr. A. Ray Petty or others. A series of devotional articles by Rev. Albert D. Belden will begin in January, as follows:

VOICES OF THE GREAT CREATOR

The Voice of the Mountain—Aspiration.
The Voice of the Valley—Duty.
The Voice of the Sea—Adventure.
The Voice of the Desert—Solitude.
The Voice of the Garden—Beauty.
The Voice of the City—Fellowship.

RECORD OF CHRISTIAN WORK, Box 623, East Northfield, Mass.

The official Northfield Magazine, $2 by the year; Canada, $2.25; Foreign, $2.50; Specimen, 20c.

WHITMAN COLLEGE

"Per Ardua Surgo"

Has NO

Costly Buildings
Superb Laboratories Beautiful Library or Stately Chapel

It has climbed up over innumerable difficulties by virtue of its scholarly, devoted and self-sacrificing Faculty working in perfect harmony and with wholehearted zeal until it has reached the level of "the best college in the West." It limits its attendance to 500 college students and carefully selects these from a large number of applicants. It reveres the Spirit of Marcus Whitman and Cushing Eells. It gives thorough training for Christian service, for the professions, and for life. It has always believed that teachers rather than buildings make a good college. Its spiritual achievement has outrun its material equipment.

Walla Walla, Washington

A Homelike Fall and Winter Home

with everything necessary to keep you warm, happy and pleasantly occupied can be yours at THE NORTHFIELD. Open fires, steam heat, sun parlor. Seasonable recreation. Cuisine is excellent and service unique. Family suites. Open year round. Write for Illustrated Booklet. Ambert G. Moody, Mgr.

The Northfield

EAST NORTHFIELD MASS.

at the gate came unexpectedly face to fac
a little old lady whose eyes were as b Jimsy's own, and whose whole face was "
at sight of the group before her.

"How nice! So there are plenty of chil
"Her hair's white," breathed Betty.

"Do you have rugs on your floors?"
Jimsy so earnestly that the little old laugh rang out. The charm broken, th dren would have fled, but for the inspired
"Does any one want to help an old grandm move into her own little house? How it help!"

Well, in one jiffy and a half, that little was crammed with children, happy as and busy as bees.

"I'm Grandmother Brewster," the lit lady had said, the very first minute.

"We knew you were! Now we've one!" shouted Jimsy, turning a hand and suddenly righting himself to ask anx
"But you aren't lame?"

"Not all grandmothers are lame, g said Betty. "We thought you were b your hair's white and you don't seem so up as our mothers and fathers. That's th Grandmother in the West was,—white and made everybody want to be whe was—" Shyly, but in deep earnest, Bett her unconscious tribute, and then and the moving operations halted while Grandm
Brewster listened to a pieced-out tale.

Many days have passed since that day, days brimful of happiness for mother Brewster and for the neighborh which has become the heart. Rugs floors of the cottage? In some rooms,
But in the biggest downstairs room, and biggest upstairs room, not a rug. Dust and brushes in evidence, and waste bask enormous size.

In the shed, a carpenter bench, co
In the kitchen, little cooking tins, little cutters, to say nothing of little dishe chairs and tables. Hooks screwed low back hall for small raincoats and caps.
shine floods the cottage, but something sunshine makes everybody in town tur steps to Grandmother's gate.

"Grandmother always has time for thing," sighed Betty blissfully, unconsc trying to solve the secret.

"Grandmother never asks you to do thing, but you always want to do it," dered Jimsy, surveying with vast pride G mother's lawn which he had just cut, trim to the edges.

And in the cottage, Grandmother was ing to Betty's mother, dropped in for "The way you dear neighbors have tak lonely old woman in! When I came, I dered how I would fill the days, and how fly, all crammed with happiness. Sharing children—"

"Lonely? Sharing our children? Hav
no idea what you are doing for our chil
A real grandmother to every one of ther neighborhood grandmother—that should be title."

"A brand-new profession!" laughed G mother. "And one with no age limit. I der why every old lady, alone as I was, d follow it—"

"Something besides age, to qualify," Betty's mother. "The children know th cret—" and to prove her words, the door banged and, "Grandmother!" sh Jimsy.

Followed by racing steps, and, "G mother! Grandmother!" Betty and were close at his flying heels.

(All rights reserved)

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Christian Monasticism

RISTIAN MONASTICISM: A GREAT FORCE ISTORY, by IAN C. HANNAH (Macmillan.). The author of this important book is essor of Church History at Oberlin Col- The fact, which he cites, that Christian sticism, as one of "the twin pillars of eval civilization, the other being the tradi- of Rome," has been inadequately recog- as a force in history, gives to Professor ah's study its essential value. He has l that students, even when comparatively read in Mediæval History, "are all at sea egard to the really colossal place that tian monasticism has filled in the history, tional, industrial, social, etc., of the world de of monastery walls." Probably the neglect, or underestimation, of the signifi- of monasticism might be charged against read men generally. It has become a sort otestant tradition to assume, even though recognizes the wider facts upon reflection, modern civilization dates from the Ref- tion. This book, without in any way de- ing from the meaning and significance of Reformation, reveals the nature, extent, strength of the forces that kept religion earning alive in Europe through the cen- s, and that formed to a greater extent is often realized the foundations and back- ds of democratic and national institutions. an introduction Professor Hannah dis- s the nature and origin of monasticism; en traces its progress and development, as hristian institution, through the desert s of Egypt, the early foundations in the . and the influence of early leaders, to establishment and growing power of the great Orders and houses. He devotes a chapter to St. Benedict, another to the great House of Cluny, and another to St. Bernard and the Cistercians. He writes of nuns, hermits, and pilgrims, and of the rise of the friars, and discusses the monk as missionary, as statesman, and as soldier. He treats of monastic literature and art, and after tracing the decline of the great mediæval orders, deals in a final chapter with the Jesuits and later orders. Without having attempted an exhaustive treatise Professor Hannah, in his 270 pages, has presented an adequate outline and one that will inspire the student toward wider reading in an exhaustless field.

Much, of course, that is presented in such a study is matter of controversy. Professor Hannah, for instance, says that the suppression of the monasteries by Henry VIII "must be stamped for all time one of the most iniquitous episodes in the national history," yet we have heard an eminent British economist, a spiritually minded man, praise Henry for the firm and drastic way in which he had dealt with institutions that had not only outlived their usefulness but had become an actual menace to the nation.

Fiction

THE BEST STORIES OF SARAH ORNE JEWETT. Mayflower Edition in Two Volumes (Houghton Mifflin. $4.50). Miss Jewett's stories have been selected and arranged by Willa Cather, who contributes a valuable preface. Miss Cather classes Miss Jewett's The Country of the Pointed Firs, which takes up the whole of the first volume, with The Scarlet Letter and Huckleberry Finn, in a trio of American books which have the possibility of a long life. "I can think of no others," she writes, "that confront time and change so serenely." Assuredly the Pointed Firs sketches seem unique in literature, depicting the phases of life in eastern Maine which they describe with an apparent leisureliness and casualness, yet in reality with the skill that makes a perfect etching. We strongly commend to readers weary of the novel a la mode, with its jazzy style and its overwrought situations, these stories of Miss Jewett's with their simple charm and compelling power. It is a rare gift that can take the quiet life of the herb-gathering Mrs. Todd and clothe it with a distinction that places her ever afterwards among the unforgettable personalities of fiction. But Miss Jewett had a touch that turned everything to gold.

THE MYSTERY OF REDMARSH FARM, by ARCHIBALD MARSHALL (Dodd, Mead. $2.00). The mystery surrounding the disappearance of a child who is heir to an old English manor house and farm is the problem of this story. In solving it Mr. Marshall employs a leisurely style, quite in keeping with the setting of the story but which is foreign to American conceptions of a mystery novel. There is a certain quality about it, too, which marks it off from the ordinary thriller.

KNIGHT AT ARMS, by H. C. BAILEY (Dutton. $2.00). In those brave days of old when knights still rode about the land righting wrongs and defending fair ladies, there surely never rode forth a more perfect knight than Sir Sylvain de St. Lo of France. Accompanied by his faithful and amusing squire he wandered in quest of adventures and honor. His

VHY YALE?

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL is non-sectarian, having in its Faculty and student body men from all the leading denominations. Last year there were fifty-five Methodists, thirty-two Congregationalists, thirty Disciples, twenty-one Baptists, ten Presbyterians, with Episcopalians, Lutherans, and members of other communions.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL combines thorough, fearless, modern scholarship with spiritual enthusiasm and missionary devotion. Its graduates go out to all the frontier States of the Union and to all the foreign fields on earth.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL is an organic part of a great university with abundant opportunities for collateral courses in philosophy, ethics, sociology, psychology, education, and other subjects of value to modern ministers.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL has increased its attendance nearly threefold in the last fifteen years, indicating the growing esteem in which it is held as a place of training for religious leadership.

YALE DIVINITY GRADUATES receive a Yale University degree which has high value in any part of the world.

For catalogues and information address
Dean CHARLES R. BROWN, New Haven, Conn.

good sword seemed scarcely ever in its scabbard, and he hewed his way to victory most blithely. The book is a series of such gay encounters.

THE RECTOR OF MALISEET, by LESLIE REID (E. P. Dutton. $2.00). In this, which is described as a first novel, a Canadian author has shown himself a master of suggestion. From page to page, he fills the mind of the reader with a brooding sense of mystery and a dread of the supernatural. He writes with seeming simplicity and great charm of a remote English village, in a parish in which not one acre is under cultivation, and of a rector, strangely reserved, living apparently a life of austere routine. The conclusion of the story is hardly equal, however, to the sustained sense of mystery which precedes it.

THE RECTOR OF WYCK, by MAY SINCLAIR (Macmillan. $2.50). It is doubtful whether there is any type of life or career that lends itself to more powerful portrayal in the novel than the supposedly quiet and humdrum life of the minister. Humor and tragedy lie deep in the life of every parish and a great deal lies in between. And all awaits only the pen of the artist to reveal the depths. In this novel Miss Sinclair has taken an ordinary-enough English rector and around his personal life in home and parish has written a story of distinction. Nor has she imported strange facts and plot into a commonplace situation to make her tale. The power of her book is in its quiet realism, the sureness with which she depicts the contrasts of ministerial life, as they affect both the rector and his wife—the hopes, ideals and aims, the plodding earnestness, ever struggling with the actuality of limitation and disappointment. It is a theme that might have invited lightness and irony, but Miss Sinclair has seen more deeply. She lets the facts tell their own story in such a way that love and loyalty illumine what a less penetrative eye might have regarded as an environment of tragic narrowness and blasted hopes.

General

FAMOUS COMPOSERS, by NATHAN HASKELL DOLE (Crowell. $3.50). A revised and enlarged edition—800 pages—of a book first published in 1891, and later reissued in two volumes. It is now issued in this revised form, and with 32 new composers added to the list, in one volume, as handier and more convenient for the student.

FRIENDS OF MANKIND: A STUDY OF OUR DOMESTIC ANIMALS, by DOUGLAS ENGLISH (Dutton. $3.00). This volume by a distinguished British authority upon animals and animal life, late Editor of Wild Life, will appeal to all who are particularly fond of animals, but it is also calculated to create such interest where it does not exist. It is a book not easily characterized—a blending of scientific and practical information with literary quality, humor, and imagination.

ANNAPOLIS: ITS COLONIAL AND NAVAL STORY, by WALTER B. NORRIS, of the U. S. Naval Academy (Crowell. $3.00). This volume has more than the interest of a well-written narrative with its sixteen page illustrations from etchings, drawings, and photographs. It is in such books that the atmosphere of the Colonial days is reproduced more faithfully than in formal records of events. The author traces the history of Annapolis through nearly three centuries—the place was settled in 1642—and tells of its social and political life, its activities during the Revolution, its great men, its experiences with "Ben" Butler during the Civil War, and (in one chapter only) of its history since that period. As the capital of Maryland Annapolis played an important part in Colonial times and it has preserved much of its ancient charm.

TYNDALE, by PARKER HORD (Century Co. $.50). Dr. Eaton's recent article on Tyndale in The Congregationalist will lend interest among our readers to this drama in which the great translator is the central figure. The claims to be historically correct, "in spirit fact, and in language." The play may found useful in connection with the anni sary services to be held on Universal Bible day, Dec. 6.

Any book mentioned in these columns ma obtained through the Pilgrim Press Book St

WASHBURN COLLEGE

TOPEKA KANSAS

is striving earnestly to uphold the Congregational ideas of education in the Great Southwest.

PRESIDENT P. P. WOMER

SIXTY YEARS OF HISTORY

Its Accomplishment

An endowment of	$1,000,000
Total Assets	$2,500,000
A Faculty of	79
Total enrollment, 1924-5 of	1,371

Washburn offers instruction to men and women in three schools: the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, the Law School, and the School of Music.

A splendid dormitory affords a safe home for 100 young women.

M. C.

IS HE PREPARING FOR SERVICE?

Your son's useful life will depend largely upon how well he is prepared. When he decides to go to College, he is taking the most important step to assure his future

MARIETTA COLLEGE has been training men and women for successful life work since 1835. Many of her graduates are known leaders in business and the professions in all sections of our land. Marietta —historical in name and achievements—believes in high standards and policies which mean the most to students.

MARIETTA COLLEGE is located in beautiful old Marietta where one enjoys life while in college. Well equipped buildings, laboratories, dormitories, library, etc. The faculty is made up of experienced professors who work closely with the students. While Marietta is Christian in character and rejoices in its Congregational affiliations it is non-sectarian in policy.

The cost of attending Marietta is very reasonable. The requirements high. Only select students desired. Write for catalog and illustrated literature.

MARIETTA COLLEGE

Founded 1835

MARIETTA, OHIO

Edward Smith Parsons
President

M. C.

Beloit College

Beloit, Wisconsin

A College of Liberal Arts

BELOIT COLLEGE sends greetings to the National Council of Congregational Churches in the name of its many sons and daughters who, as Ministers, Missionaries, Laymen, and Laywomen of the Congregational Churches, vindicate her motto,

"Scientia vera cum fide pura."

Send for illustrated booklet, "The Doorway to College," or catalogue.

EDWARD DWIGHT EATON,
President-Emeritus

IRVING MAURER,
President

OBERLIN COLLEGE

OBERLIN, OHIO

The Ideal of the College

That Oberlin may be as good a college as can be made; needing to apologize for no element in its life or work; emphasizing quality rather than quantity; putting first things first; maintaining a high standard in all parts of its work, so that its degree may be one in which all its graduates may take pride. That Oberlin College may continue to be a college of marked individuality; and that as a part of this individuality, the College may continue to stand for courage, for convictions, for ideals, for a training that gives world-vision and prepares for world-living, for citizenship in the new civilization which we may trust is dawning.—PRESIDENT KING.

FACTS

Founded in 1833.
Co-educational. Non-sectarian.
Students, 1,801.
Teaching force, 173.
Library, 261,500 bound volumes.
Tuition, Arts and Sciences, $200 a year.
Buildings used for College purposes, 33;
Value, with equipment, $2,533,000.
Endowment for Current Expense, $2,594,317.
Scholarship Funds, $280,035.

URGENT NEEDS

Additional Endowment and Scholarships, $2,500,000.
New Buildings, $2,000,000.

DEPARTMENTS

The College of Arts and Sciences, enrolling 1,200.
The Graduate School of Theology, enrolling 50.
The Conservatory of Music, enrolling 400.
The Summer Session, enrolling 200.

Address Secretary George M. Jones, Oberlin, Ohio, for catalogs and information concerning admission.

Yankton

Beginning its 45th year Yankton offers full courses in the Natural Sciences, Languages, English, Mathematics, Economics, Education, Philosophy, History, Sociology, and Biblical Literature. Pre-professional courses in Law, Dentistry, Medicine, and Engineering. Conservatory of Music and Normal School.

DR. GEORGE W. NASH

is the new president, formerly of State Normal College, Bellingham, Washington, and The Congregational Foundation for Education, Chicago.

Yankton College

Yankton, S. D.

Milwaukee-Downer College

Milwaukee, Wisconsin

A standard College for Women.

Full four-year courses leading to B.A. and B.S. degrees. Academic programs, Home Economics, Music, Art, Occupational Therapy.

MISS LUCIA R. BRIGGS, President

For catalogue address the Registrar

GRINNELL

A College of Liberal Arts for Men and Women.

Applications for admission in September, 1926, are now being received.

An illustrated booklet will be sent on request.

Address:

Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, (Dept. C.)

MINISTERS—Have you books you no longer need? If so, why not try an ad in our classified columns in an effort to dispose of them? Some other pastor may want to purchase them.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul's Letters to the Corinthians

Comment on the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for October 18

1 Corinthians 13: 1-13

Our lesson covers a wide area, for it takes in its range the two longest epistles of Paul. Its other dimensions also are vast, for in the particular passage chosen as the lesson text Paul's great eulogy of love plumbs the depth of human thought and emotion and reaches to the very heights of heaven. Here we are in the immeasurable realm of the universe of man and God.

In a sense this 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians is not altogether typical of these two epistles which as a lesson text it represents. Much will be found in these epistles that has to do with far lower levels. The evidences of pettiness and narrowness and weakness in the early church are here. Much of the discussion of the epistles is given over to questions of casuistry such as seldom arise in the world of the largest and deepest Christian experience. There are problems of discipline and of procedure. Paul finds it even necessary to defend his ministry, and there are personal passages that in a sense are humiliating. It ought not to have been necessary for a great man like Paul to have defended himself against the small-mindedness of some in the church at Corinth.

But it is exactly this background of unideal conditions that gives this 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians its real significance. It is typical of the highest and noblest aspect of these epistles in the sense that it expresses in the highest and most beautiful form the glory of Christian idealism that Paul sets over against base and ignoble things, as the privilege of every Christian and as a true and living expression of the religion of Jesus Christ.

This chapter is so persistently taken out of its setting that it is exceedingly important to see its relationship to its immediate context and to these Epistles to the Corinthians as a whole. It is not simply a eulogy of love that stands as an isolated literary and spiritual gem. It is that, but it stands at the very climax of Paul's argument. He has been discussing the disputes in the church at Corinth concerning the matter of gifts and responsibilities. Some of those in the church at Corinth evidently had been assuming superiority because of their particular function in the church. Paul reminds them very definitely in the 12th chapter that the church is the body of Christ in which every member has its appointed and honorable function. There are diversities of gifts. He asks very pointedly, "Are all apostles, are all prophets, are all teachers, are all workers of miracles?" He inquires regarding these various gifts, and he assures the Corinthians that the best gifts are earnestly to be coveted.

But he proceeds to point out that there is even a more excellent way than this coveting of various gifts. There is the highest gift of all within the reach of every Christian, no matter however untalented or lowly, and it is this more excellent way, the way of love, that Paul proceeds to expound in this marvelous sermon. The classical interpretation of it is, of course, Henry Drummond's, The Greatest Thing in the World. One marvels that this great sermon of Paul has so little touched the consciousness and life of the church throughout the ages. Paul clearly and unmistakably exalts love above both faith and hope, and yet is it not amazing to realize the way in which Christian people have turned from the plain teaching in this highest expression of Paul's faith and experience to quarrel about the meaning of obscure and difficult passages in the E to the Romans? One almost forgets at that Paul actually wrote this great serm love. Let us not forget it, for in forgett we do Paul profound injustice. We hav tirely over-emphasized Paul, the theol and have inadequately sensed the greatn Paul, the man, wholly given over to th of God and to the love of his fellow men.

Finding God

By John Stapleton

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Thompson in his "Sc and Religion" says man approaches through one of three doorways, Pra Need, Intellect, or Emotion.

When days were young, and time was
And God was all alone;
And all the glories heaven could boast
Were scepter, sword, and throne,

Then spake the Lord of life and laws
Unto his servants three,
"Open the doors," he said, "and let My children come to me."

Then one unlocked the gate of Fear
And man, a craven thing
Haunted by dæmons, came and crouch
A slave before his king.

And one unloosed the bars of mind,
When, taught of star and sod,
Came white-robed searchers after tru
Who found a regnant God.

Last opened wide the gates of love,
And lo—a little child
Ran fearlessly the portals through,
His Father saw,—and smiled.

The true leader in Christian work, w he be a reformer, a preacher, a Sunday worker, or engaged in any department of tian work whatever, must be willing to in pain and loneliness, but the pathwa lead to a joy that will grow greater throu all eternity, because we are in fellowshi Him.—Marion Lawrance.

Our First Mortgage

REAL ESTATE GOLD BON

net the investor 7% semi-annual in est, guaranteed as to principal and terest, secured by first mortgages on proved real estate in Central Flor and the West Coast, by one of the est and most substantial corporati with 14 years' successful experience the Florida mortgage field. Write particulars and booklet.

GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPANY

Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Fisk Teachers' Agenc

120 Boylston St., Boston 225 Fifth Ave., N

Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Birmingham, Chicago, Kansa Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles. Everett O. Fisk

Record Books For the Pastor, the T urer, the Clerk, the Ch School Superintendent, Secretary.

ASK FOR CATALOGUES

THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Bost 156 5th Ave. New 19 S. La Salle St. C

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

ligious Education in Bridgeport, Ct.

The Protestant churches of Bridgeport, Ct., igurated a systematic plan for the religious cation of its public school children last r. Half of the 2,300 Protestant children e registered in the Bible school sessions. ourse of graded study was followed and the hers were carefully selected from those ing had experience in public school teach-t was discovered that ten per cent of the ils enrolled had never received religious inction. The total expense of last year's ses- is was approximately $5,000. The superinlent of the work had a salary of $100 a ith and the teachers a dollar and a half each session. The rest of the expense was equipment similar to that needed by pupils public schools and for the rental of churches t suitably located for the children to reach n the public school buildings. Those who nded were excused from the public schools e quarters of an hour each week. The suintendent of the city public schools says t the work last year was excellent and that heartily approves of the plans to do still ger things this year.

The religious education classes in the schools an on Oct. 5. It will not be compulsory but ional with the parents, but the superintend- of the public schools believes that the sses will be well filled.

On the card which each child is required to e home to the parent for signature is the owing notice:

This child is excused to attend religious ool with the definite understanding outlined ow:

. At his parents' written request.

. To the religious school designated in writ- by his parent.

. If he is present in public school but absent m religious school, (1) the teacher of the gious school will notify the teacher of the lic school and his parent; (2) the teacher the public school will not again grant him privilege of being excused for religious inuction until the parent has made a settlent with the principal of the school.

E. O. M

Sends Out Medical Missionary

On the first Sunday in the fall, Sept. 6, the st Central Church of Omaha, Neb., held a st impressive service when one of her own ng men, Dr. Walter H. Judd, was commisned and sent out as a medical missionary to aowu, China. Dr. Judd is a graduate of Medical Department of the Nebraska Unisity; he finished his course two years ago d after a year's work in the hospital serv-, he spent another year in the service of Student Volunteer Movement visiting the iversities and colleges of the country and lding conferences with young men concern- their life work. He is a well equipped d consecrated young man; enthusiastically mmitted to the great work toward which he s set his face. All who know him believe at he will prove to be a successful worker in e great field to which he has gone.

The commissioning service was arranged by r. F. G. Smith, pastor of the church, and as participated in by both the church and urch school. Dr. W. F. English of the merican Board was present and preached the rmon and presented the commission in beilf of the board. Rev. Clinton E. Ostrander, inister of religious education in the church, ought a helpful message in behalf of the urch school, and Dr. Smith in behalf of e church gave a brief talk that was a real enediction in its tenderness and in its revelation of the confidence of the church in the young man they are sending out. A beautiful responsive service of commissioning was prepared in which the church, the church school, the minister, the secretary of the board, and Dr. Judd all had part. At the conclusion of this part of the service, while the great congregation remained standing, Dr. Judd kneeled at the pulpit and while the hands of Dr. English, Mr. Ostrander, and Dr. Smith rested upon his head, the pastor consecrated him in prayer to his great work. The service made a deep impression upon the entire audience, and the great auditorium of the church was filled even though it was the first Sunday after the vacation. Dr. Judd sailed immediately and is now on the ocean bound for his new work.

This is not the first experience of this kind for this church. Two years ago they commissioned and sent out Miss Emily Rorer as a medical missionary to China. She is supported by the ladies' society of the church and now Dr. Judd is to be supported by the church school. Beside this, during the past year this church had the joy of ordaining three young men at the same time to the Gospel ministry and all of them are giving good account of themselves in charge of churches.

Dr. Smith is just closing his seventh year with the church; it now numbers a little over 1,500 members and all of its departments of work are well organized and fruitful.

Two years ago the church extended an invitation to the National Council to meet with it in 1925 but it seemed best to go to Washington for this meeting. Many have expressed

Sea Pines
School of Personality for Girls

Brewster, Mass.
(on Cape Cod)

Rev. Thomas Bickford
Founder

SINGULARLY successful in arousing in growing girls an appreciation of the worth of their own nature and the relation of its proper development that inheres in the daily thought and conduct, Thomas Bickford, a Congregational pastor and a well-known educator, founded this famous school in 1906. Since his passing his family and a well organized staff have carried on along the same lines.

Outdoor life. Training in self-discovery and self-direction. Stimulating ideas of health, responsibility. Christian influence. One hundred acres, pine groves, seashore. College Preparatory, Cultural, Seretarial and Athletic courses. Arts. Crafts. Dramatics. Music. Corrective Gymnastics. Recreation Camp July and August. Summer Courses and Counselorship Training for older girls and young women.

Directors

Miss Faith Bickford Miss Addie Frances Bickford

the hope that the First Central Church would renew this invitation this year and bring the Council out to this great Middle West and to this splendid church, which has an entirely adequate building erected at a cost of over a half million dollars, for its 1927 meeting. There are but few churches in the denomination better arranged and equipped for entertaining the Council than the First Central Church of Omaha.

A Club of Grandmothers

The church at Austin, Minn., is proud of her Colonial Club organized in January, 1922, as a result of an old-fashioned party. The women dressed in colonial costume and eight of the oldest grandmothers sat in the attitude of quilting around one of Austin's historical quilts. The membership is composed exclusively of grandmothers. Those having a birthday in a given month act as hostesses and serve a picnic supper. They also pay a penny for each year. But those that prefer not to tell their age pay $1.00. Other members pay ten cents at each meeting. The younger women of the church take charge of the aid work. The Colonial Club has a vital interest in the church. They send flowers to the sick and help in other ways. They recently added some handsome quarter sawed oak book-cases to the parsonage equipment. Grandma Nancy Clark, 101 years old, is an honorary mem of the club.

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

In the sermon the shuttle of the angels moves from heaven to earth, and in the worship it returns from earth to heaven. Thus it weaves a garment for the soul.

Pastors' Conference at Hartfor

The coming of Prof. Raymond C. Bro head of the Department of Religion of Pom College, Claremont, Cal., to be the leader of meetings for spiritual fellowship to which Hartford Seminary Foundation invited the tors of all denominations in Connecticut western Massachusetts, was anticipated wit certain eagerness and expectation. This ing was enhanced by the reports which came the enthusiasm with which his leadership welcomed in similar meetings by the N Hampshire ministers at Lake Winnepesau and the Vermont men at Middlebury. W the 150 or 200 pastors gathered in the cha of Hartford Seminary, Sept. 14-15, they fo their expectations more than realized. Brooks was personally known to few but alm at once he won his way into all hearts and mi by the gracious charm of his manner, by his dent sincerity and genuineness, by the maste clearness and comprehensiveness of his thi ing and the warm spiritual fervor which illu nated and vitalized his thought.

All these Hartford conferences have been o high order and the men who have atten them have been generous in their expressi of gratitude for what they have received and appreciation for the service the seminary rendering the churches through this minist But this year the meetings seemed to be bet than ever, to go deeper and to rise higher.

The fellowship of the meetings was of cou a part of it, making an atmosphere, and t has a cumulative significance from year to y as the pastors of these denominations sit s by side and face together, in prayer and in tellectual battle, some of the problems of th common task and the message of their one Lo At one of the sessions you could see sitting gether on the front seat the Bishop of the Pr estant Episcopal Church of Connecticut, alert and diligent leader of the rural missi work of the Episcopal Church, the veteran S retary of the Baptist Missionary Society, pastor of a great Methodist Church and t Congregational ministers.

Dr. Brooks chose for the central theme of conference the question, "Is Christianity Su cient for Our Modern World?" This the was developed at the five sessions under successive heads, I. Breaking Old Molds—J braism, Paulinism, Hellenism, Romanism, Pr estantism; II. America's Contribution to R ligious History; III. The New Knowledge a the New Religious Experience; IV. How O Conception of Christianity Has Been Modifi by the "Modern World"; V. Can We Make O Modern World Christian?

Such a bald statement of topics of cour gives no fair idea of the character of the pr entation though it does give a hint of its sco Neither would it be quite fair to quote sing pungent phrases which apart from their conne tion might be misunderstood. It is good to lea that Professor Brooks is preparing to put the addresses into print. Perhaps the paraphra of the Prologue to the Fourth Gospel which read gives a hint of his spirit and method. "the beginning was the Idea and the Idea w as divine as the Idea that conceived it. It w in the pursuance of the Idea that everythi that was brought into existence came in being. For the Idea was the inner reality, t supporting substance of everything that w made. The Idea was made worlds, but t worlds could not clearly reveal its nature; f things cannot become aware of thoughts. A length the Idea became Life and in the Li

(Continued on page 500)

1816 Bangor Theological Seminary 1925

BANGOR, MAINE

The 110th year opened on September 23d, 1925

Situated in one of the most enterprising smaller cities of New England, with many advantages as an educational center. At the heart of a great rural state with unrivalled opportunities for practical experience in rural fields.

COURSES Thorough courses for pastors and missionaries leading to diploma or to the degree of Bachelor of Divinity.

NON-COLLEGE MEN Long experience in helping partially trained men to full efficiency. For mature men who have been hindered in their educational preparation, a chance to gain full Seminary training and advanced college standing.

CONVOCATION WEEK A plan, originating in Bangor, for affording ministers and students a week of inspiration and of fellowship with leaders in thought and action in the church and in other spheres of life.

EXPENSES Necessary expenditures reduced to lowest terms, with opportunities for self-help.

For catalogue and information, address

WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine

Pacific School of Religion

Berkeley, California

Prepares men and women for

THE PASTORATE SOCIAL SERVICE
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION FOREIGN SERVICE
RESEARCH

Practical Instruction Graduate Degrees
Facilities of University of California
Faculty of Ten
Opportunities for Self-Support
Modern and Commodious Buildings under Construction

HERMAN F. SWARTZ, President

THESE TUBULAR TOWER CHIMES DEDICATED TO THE GLORY OF GOD AND THE DISSEMINATION OF HIS WORD WERE PRESENTED TO THIS CHURCH
A.D. 1920
BY
MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM ALEXANDER

A fitting tribute to your church

The Memorial Sublime

THE eternal struggle for good which your church has maintained throughout the years since its foundation, has been written deeply into your minds and hearts.

Reaching out beyond the narrow confines of the district in which it is located – a decisive factor in the moral and spiritual life of the community—your church—has become a power in civic and ecclesiastical affairs.

To keep alive the spirit of the church and the memory of its achievements, there is none more fitting monument than a set of Deagan Tower Chimes, whose beautiful, fulsome tones peal forth to all men the spirit of truth, and the power of good, as exemplified by the church—your church.

To members who desire to be instrumental in giving to their church a sublime memorial of its high position, this fitting tribute is now within easy reach. To interested, responsible inquirers, a postal will bring full information.

J. C. Deagan Inc.

Deagan Bldg., 4271 Ravenswood Ave., Chicago, U. S. A.
ESTABLISHED 1880

STANDARD SETS $6,000 AND UP

(Continued from page 498)

of man it became Light: The Light of all human reason; rational, moral, spiritual. But even so the Idea was not clearly revealed; for the mind of man works with too much confusion. And so at length the Idea became flesh and dwelt among us in a Life full of grace and truth. Now no man hath seen God at any time, nor can see him. But no man having once seen that Life full of grace and truth can fail to catch the Idea."

Each address was followed by discussion. The whole thing was a frank facing of the conditions of life and thought and an honest effort to set forth the completeness and sufficiency of the religion of Jesus Christ when you get at the heart of it and the essential truth which lies back of and is independent of all institutions or creeds or forms. Not your Christianity or mine, not Romanism nor Protestantism, not Fundamentalism nor Modernism but the very truth as it is in Jesus is sufficient for our modern world. And this truth as it is in Jesus will make the world Christian when we begin to know it as the great purpose of God to transform life; and when we succeed in bringing it to bear on the great problems of the world's life, international, interracial, industrial, and interdenominational. The task of Christianity is not to compel men to goodness through external authority or restraint but to make goodness normal to men as the song is to the lark or fragrance and beauty to the flower.

EDUCATIONAL OUTPOST

OF CONGREGATIONALISM

in the Southwest

A Liberal College of Liberal Arts and Fine Arts

FAIRMOUNT COLLEGE

Wichita, Kansas

John D. Finlayson, President

Congregational Training School for Women

(Founded in 1909)

5756 Dorchester Avenue, Chicago

Professional training of collegiate grade for women with college or normal school preparation, for service as

CHURCH ASSISTANTS DIRECTORS of GIRLS' WORK
DIRECTORS and TEACHERS of RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

One, two and four-year courses lead to B.R.E. degree or certificate. Located adjacent to the University and Chicago Theological Seminary, with advantages of their library, lecture and social opportunities.

Write for catalogue and information to

MISS MARGARET TAYLOR, Dean.

RIPON COLLEGE, Ripon, Wisconsin

(A Standard American College)

Celebrates this year its Seventy-Fifth Anniversary

"By their fruits ye shall know them"—Math. VII: 20

Vermont Ministers Meet at Middlebury

The Ninth Annual Middlebury Convoca which occurred Sept. 8-11, was larger any of its predecessors, 135 persons bein practically constant attendance, with a l number of visitors at the more popular sessi Comparison of its higher values with thos previous years would be invidious. I sufficient to say that those who gathered t felt that in those hours of intellectual comm they made real progress in unraveling practical and spiritual problems and in s tion that they had learned anew the m power of comradeship to buckle up the ar of the soul and to take away the dimness dulling eyes.

Prof. Rufus M. Jones of Haverford Col to whom the modern world seems lik flustered and hysterical attempt to put toge a jig saw puzzle when some of the pieces missing, raised the new watch cry "In Ho!" "Faith and Experience," "Experi and Practice," and "The New Civilizat were his themes, and whether men seek build a home, to educate the youth, o reconstruct the world, he pled with them discover first in the hush and silence of soul

"The bubblings of the spring
That feed the world."

But this message did not end in an ineffe quietism with the mystics at their prayers the burly sinners running the world. N were his hearers secure from that penetra Yankee wit which brought them again sha back to the world's realities and reminded that when the vision was upon the Mas soul he shut the book and announced to astonished townsmen, "Today hath this s ture been fulfilled in your ears!"

Dr. Raymond C. Brooks of Pomona Col California, developed his three lectures answer to the question, "Is Jesus and teachings adequate for the 20th century?" the course of a brilliant historical analysi the great religious, political, and social which have stirred Christianity, his an began early to emerge. Christianity has come almost unrecognizable at times bec of the mind molds by which it had been mi Paul found it necessary in the interest truth and freedom to break the Hebrew and today we must break the Latin again reminting Christianity more in harm with the Greek mind, sensitive as it wa beauty, truth, and freedom. The internati interracial, inter-industrial, and inter-relig problems which overshadow the world threateningly, he prophesied, would yiel the spirit and teachings of Jesus if only imprisoned splendor of these, in turn, be freed from the deforming mind sets in w they have so persistently been cramped.

Dr. Henry S. Coffin, well known as pa teacher, and author, and more recently as leader of the liberal New York Presbyter its struggle for freedom, gave three lectu "Doctrinal Preaching," "Ethical Preachi and "Evangelistic Preaching." With a sense of the preacher's ordinary limitations the best methods for transcending them shared with the convocation his own rich periences and ideals to the great delight profit of every one.

It has been the custom to provide one s of lectures by an authority upon that por of the foreign mission field which later in year will occupy the attention of the wom study clubs and the schools of missions. Samuel Guy Inman dwelt upon three asp of Latin American life. He first told of

of that vast continent with its stupendous ance, its untold resources in minerals, fields, men, its culture and its ideals, its sun- s and its shadows. In his second address ictured the co-operative statesmanship with h some forty Protestant mission boards are g their work among those nations. In the l he brought his own well informed ac- t of the reasons which lie back of Latin rica's distrust of the United States. He e his hearers feel that a nation which un- tands so sympathetically the wrath of the ans against Japan ought to be able to m the same sentiment, growing from tical causes, with which Latin America s its great Northern neighbor.

r. Charles Emerson Burton, in two ad- ses, gave an impersonal and dispassionate unt of the great problems which confront next session of the National Council. He t particularly upon the proposed mergers the relation of the state conferences to the nal boards and unfolded impartially the s and arguments of all sides.

e United Church of Canada has created a ound impression upon Vermont Protestant- nd the convocation heard with great satis- on the confession of faith of Dr. William raham, one of the younger Canadian edu- nal leaders who spoke upon "The Philoso- nd Hope of the United Church of Canada."

Michigan Convocation

e Michigan State Conference, following example of Iowa and other Western s, has just held a ministers' convocation. t furnished an ideal place for such a gath- and the dates, Sept. 8-11, were early gh for ministers to attend the conference e the intensive work of the fall began. Oli- s easily accessible to the majority of the ters of the state, and the holding of the cation there made it possible for most of inisters to come by auto.

e convocation leaders introduced a novel re by securing most of the speakers from ile the denomination—Prof. G. A. John- Ross of Union Seminary, Prof. Gerald Bir- Smith of the University of Chicago, Rev. h A. Vance of Detroit, and Rev. Edgar itt Jones, also of Detroit, representing yterians, Baptists, and Disciples, and Arthur ("Golden Rule") Nash, affiliated the Universalists.

f. Ross was detained on account of the se- illness of Mrs. Ross, and Dean Thomas am of Oberlin took his place and gave ctures on "The Art of Preaching." Un- he general topic, "The Minister and the tual Life," Prof. Smith treated the spe- topics, "Diagnosing Our Sin," "Realizing resence of God," and "The Minister and piritual Life." Dr. Vance gave two ad- s on "The Minister's Every-Day Life." e chapel hour each day Dr. Jones deliv- a sermon, and the Communion sermon was by President Irving Maurer of Beloit. en Rule" Nash gave three addresses and . W. Gammon spoke on the topic, "Why low We Are Congregationalists."

attendance was about 75. The commit- at had charge of the convocation repre- g the conference, in addition to Supt. rland, consisted of Paul H. Yourd, Ben- Harbor; W. E. Collins, Muskegon, and J. Simpson of Olivet. The service ren- by the lecturers was high-grade in every ular and those present at the convoca- oted unanimously in favor of making the g of such a meeting an annual affair. ilgrim Press furnished excellent service cing a large supply of the new books at nvocation for examination.

From West to East

HAWAII

Accepts Call to Paia Church

The first Sunday in September marked the beginning of the pastorate of Rev. W. E. Rowan at Makawao Union, Paia. Mr. Rowan was formerly of Winnipeg, Canada. He succeeds Rev. Augustine Jones, who is on a trip around the world.

Mr. Rowan is a native of England, and a student of Victoria College, Manchester. He received his theological training in Wesley College, Winnipeg. He is a well-known athlete, is one of the best cricket players in the city, and was a varsity football player. Scholar, student of men and affairs, and an excellent preacher, he bids fair to make good in this new venture. His wife is a graduate of

ILLINOIS COLLEGE

JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS

"Old Illinois," founded in 1829 by the Yale band, is one of the oldest and strongest colleges in the Middle West.

Beautiful campus of twenty acres, including a good athletic field. Plant of ten buildings including girls' dormitory. High standards. Christian atmosphere. Co-educational. Cost moderate.

DEPARTMENTS

Collegiate, Expression, Conservatory of Music.

For Catalogue, write to

Pres. C. H. RAMMELKAMP, Box B.

NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL of RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

UNIVERSITY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE
DURHAM, N. H.

August 9-16, 1926

30 Courses 20 Instructors
(10 of whom are Congregationalists)

$13.00 includes all expenses making it possible for anyone to attend these helpful sessions.

The size of this School affords a splendid opportunity for personal daily conference with the Faculty.

Plan now to go yourself and have your Church and School send Delegates.

For further information, write the Dean,

NELLIE TOWNE HENDRICK 18 Wellington Street, Nashua, N. H.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY

Atlanta, Georgia

Fifty-six years of worthy accomplishment

Begun in 1869, under the presidency of Edmund Asa Ware, as a part of the splendid educational crusade in the sixties for the freedmen and their children.

While its graduates, both men and women, have been useful in many walks of life, the especial service of both its college and normal graduates has been in the field of Education. The value of this form of work can hardly be over-estimated.

Gifts for endowment, or for current expenses, especially for the promotion of our teacher-training work, will meet a real need and be thankfully welcomed.

MYRON W. ADAMS, President

Toronto University, a teacher of experience, and will be a splendid addition to the social and musical life of the community.

WASHINGTON

Becomes Teacher at Whitman

The many friends of Rev. R. S. Osgood will rejoice to know of his appointment as teacher of modern languages in Whitman College, Walla Walla. Mr. Osgood formerly held pastorates in Iowa, and later was pastor for seven years of Prospect Church, Seattle. Since leaving Prospect he has been teacher of modern languages in the Moran School for Boys, at Rolling Bay. Last summer he specialized in modern languages at the Middlebury College summer school. Mrs. Osgood formerly was prominent in woman's missionary work in Iowa and Washington. Both Mr. and Mr good are graduates of Grinnell College.

Minister Has Narrow Escape

In the recent fire that destroyed the p age of the Bellevue Church, across Lake ington from Seattle, the minister, Rev. White, had a narrow escape from dea suffocation. The family were out of the at the time, the minister stopping at a bor's and the wife and two children be the East. On returning to the house wh fire had gotten much headway the minist tempted to rescue some valuables, an overcome by smoke. In a few secon would have been beyond rescue, had neighbor noticing his plight rushed int burning building and carried him out to s The parsonage and contents were only pa insured, and the loss falls heavily esp upon the young minister and his family. church is federated happily with the B Church of the place, Mr. White, a B serving both churches. A row of large n and the favorable direction of the wind, save the church building from destructio is likely the parsonage will be rebuilt s

WYOMING

Canceling the Church Debt

A troublesome church debt, of consid standing, of more than $400 was raise summer at Lander, under the leadersh Mr. Daniel Bliss, student supply. A c was given, people from all denominatio the city appearing on the program. A number of tickets were sold by the young and children of the congregation. The was packed, and the debt was paid, with than $40 received above the amount n A farewell reception was given Mr. Bliss he left for the East, on which occasion h presented with a substantial sum of mo an Arapaho beaded bag.

UTAH

Student Pastor at Vernal

On Wednesday evening of the last we service of Mr. Frank S. Tucker, student mer supply, the church people of Vernal him a surprise party, with about 120 p At the close of the evening Mr. Tucke presented with a purse of $20 as a token preciation of his summer's work. Up un time a pastor is secured, Mr. Tucker pl send written messages to the church as in their meetings. The work of the people is promising. New officers have elected, and the work will still be carried the absence of a pastor.

ARIZONA

Vacation Bible Schools

Summer vacation Bible schools were this year at Tombstone, under the direct the pastor, Rev. O. J. Scheibe; at T (inter-church) with Miss Harriet Yarr charge; and at Gallup (inter-church) Rev. W. H. Elfring, pastor of the Con tional Church, was assisted by Miss Y working under the commission of the S School Extension Society.

NORTH DAKOTA

Student Pastor at McHenry During Sum

Mr. Donald S. Costello of Carleton C served the church at McHenry last su He secured the loyal co-operation of abo of the town boys who helped clean up the c building and grounds. There were many outings, ball, horseshoe, and other Shortly before Mr. Costello left McHen was given a surprise party at the c Games were played and refreshments s

Four Books on World Problems

The Political Awakening of the East

Studies of Political Progress in Egypt, India, China, Japan, and the Philippines

By GEORGE MATTHEW DUTCHER

"Professor Dutcher has added materially to a department of knowledge which is becoming more and more necessary with the rapid unification of the known world, to say nothing of the hypothesized universe. This book is one of the most comprehensive treatments of complicated material we have ever read."
—Hartford Times.

Net, $2.00, postpaid.

Europe Turns the Corner

By STANLEY HIGH. Introduction by COLONEL EDWARD M. HOUSE

"Mr. High has the gift of impartial observation, the flair for the essential fact and a horror of the superfluous word. Seeing the whole field, he picks only the blue diamonds and cuts them irreproachably. The book is a revelation of how palatable battalions of pure fact can be made to be. And in spite of their numbers one finishes the book with no feeling of confusion."—The New York Times Book Review.

Net, $2.00, postpaid.

The Recent Foreign Policy of the United States

Problems in American Cooperation with Other Powers

By GEORGE H. BLAKESLEE

This volume covers the entire period of Mr. Hughes' service as Secretary of State, and ably sets forth the principles and incidents of our foreign policy. The purpose of Professor Blakeslee is to present, compare and discuss the recent distinctive foreign policies of the United States.

Net, $2.00, postpaid.

Economic Liberalism

By JACOB H. HOLLANDER

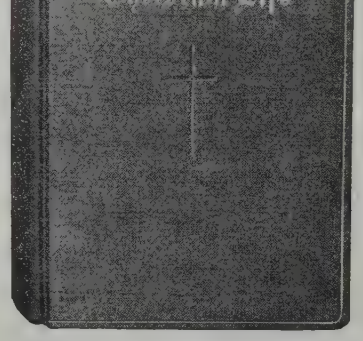
An able presentation of certain essential factors in national and international economic principles and practices by one of the foremost political economists of America. Professor Hollander discusses these topics: The Meaning of Economic Liberalism, Price Level, Taxation, Trade Unionism, Social Reform, and Economic Liberalism and the American Spirit.

Net, $1.50, postpaid.

AT THE BETTER BOOKSHOPS

THE ABINGDON PRESS

NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO BOSTON DETROIT
PITTSBURGH KANSAS CITY SAN FRANCISCO PORTLAND, ORE.



The most usable, satisfactory and beautiful hymnal before the churches.

Hymns of the Christian Life

Edited by

MILTON S. LITTLEFIELD, D.D.

12,000 copies sold in six months!

THE REASONS:

A rich selection of the ageless hymns.
Hymns set to the right tunes.
The new hymns voice the social consciousness.
Words within the music staff.
Hymns logically grouped and in orderly progression.
Responsive Readings: each selection occupies a single page.

Examination copy on request.

Price, single copy $2.00 $135.00 per 100

A. S. BARNES and COMPANY

Publishers of Hymn Books Since 1855

7 West 45th Street New York City

oys presented him with a razor set, and ily vacation Bible school pupils gave him se. Although Mr. Costello returns to col- his fall, he hopes to keep in touch with ople of McHenry throughout the winter.

rated House of Worship at Adams

gress at Adams is to be noted in the ration of the interior of the church ng and the purchasing of a communion new rug, window shades, and electric shades. Mr. Elmer E. Hoats of Union ogical College, Chicago, has been ren- summer service on this field. At Ne- which Mr. Hoats also served, 18 mem- were received on confession of faith and y letter.

Center's Successful Vacation School

n Center is happy over the results of weeks' daily vacation Bible school held The average attendance was 23. There a splendid interest on the part of the en and parents. More teachers volun- than were needed.

SOUTH DAKOTA

teel Dedicates Church

church at Firesteel dedicated a house rship on Aug. 28. All bills have been met e erection of the building, and $600 has subscribed for a furnace, seats, and other nent.

COLORADO

Seminary Student at Telluride-Pandora

Telluride Boy Scouts have held enthusi- meetings during the summer. The Lion's provided transportation to the hot springs ray, 50 miles distant. This enabled several e boys to pass their Scout swimming Mr. Edward Dickinson, of Union Semi- who has been serving the Telluride-Pan- field this summer, has accepted a call to ne the work for the coming year.

to Molina and Georgia Mesa
y Schools

Aug. 16 "Dad" Skinner, in honor of his birthday, was host at a joint picnic of the and Georgia Mesa Sunday schools, held grove on his old home place at Molina. people brought their dinner, and "Dad" hed the dessert, which consisted of water- ice cream, and wafers. When every- ad eaten all they could, they adjourned church for a preaching service.

ns to Connecticut

the evening of Aug. 16, Collbran held a service as an expression of appreciation service of Rev. William D. Barnes, who ing the Valley to return to Connecticut. hurch was well filled in honor of the on.

NEBRASKA

ates Twenty-Five Years in Ministry

F. H. Anderson, pastor of Plymouth n, Omaha, has just celebrated a quarter y in the ministry. Mr. Anderson gradu- rom Chicago Seminary in the spring of nd was married to Ada Stone in June t year and in September was ordained Congregational ministry at Plainfield, He has held pastorates in Iowa and , and is now entering upon his fifth year ice at Plymouth Church. Mr. and Mrs. son and their son, Howard, constitute a unique in Omaha pastoral circles, both d Mrs. Anderson being ordained minis- nd Howard planning to enter Chicago ary this fall. Mrs. Anderson was or- in 1912 and had preached for three prior to her ordination. In addition to care of the usual duties of the wife of a pastor, she has found time to work in various organizations in the city and state. She is president of the Women's Missionary Federation of Omaha, president of the Nebraska branch of the W. B. M. I., assistant moderator of the Nebraska State Conference, and delegate from Omaha to the National Council in Washington.

Lincoln Vacatien Schools

The Lincoln vacation church schools are promoted by the Lincoln Federation of Churches, although most of the schools are managed and financed independently, either by an individual church or a group of churches. This season finished the fourth year of this work. Fifty-one churches co-operated in 17 schools, with a total enrollment of over 2,000. The most marked advance over previous years was in better co-operation of the churches, and in a growing willingness to share in the financial responsibility.

The three Congregational churches of the city took an important part in the work, each sharing in a community school. The First Plymouth and the Trinity Methodist joined in

(Continued on page 505)

Revell's "Big" Books of the Year

Nature Sermons
CHARLES E. JEFFERSON

"What a preacher! Here is the poet, the artist, the nature-lover, and in a sense the scientist, reinforcing in his character of preacher all the preacher's art and skill. One marvels at Dr. Jefferson's mastery."—The Congregationalist.
$1.50

Craftsmen of the Soul
AND OTHER ADDRESSES
GAIUS GLENN ATKINS

"It is a highly disciplined and nobly restrained mind which Dr. Atkins brings to all his tasks. . . . expressing itself with scientific precision and yet often in phrases of exquisite chiseling and haunting beauty."—The Christian Century. $1.50

JAMES BLACK
The Dilemmas of Jesus
"One of the most stimulating religious books published this year. Dr. James Black has mental vigor, directness of speech, vividness of imagination, simplicity, Scriptural accuracy and rare human interest."—Christian Work. $1.50

W. J. FARLEY
The Progress of Old Testament Prophecy
In the Light of Modern Scholarship. With two appendices, chronological table, and index.
"Ministers and teachers who want a short review of the prophets will find it here, set forth in a straightforward and vigorous fashion."—The British Weekly. $2.00

Sir JAMES MARCHANT (Ed)
British Preachers, 1925
A volume of sermons preached by eminent divines on the other side of the Atlantic, including: James Black, Charles Brown, R. J. Campbell, Dean Inge of St. Paul's, Principal Jacks, John Kelman, F. B. Meyer, F. W. Norwood, etc.
$1.75

CHARLES F. CARTER, D.D.
Decision Day Talks
Foreword by Frederick L. Fagley
"Dr. Carter has supplied a definite need—plain, simple talks used in his Sabbath school. A good book for young people and for pastors."—Christian Union Herald. 60c

JAMES L. GORDON
The Weight of a Word
A Series of Addresses on Life's Great Possessions
"Addresses on some of the great issues of life. Dr. Gordon is an able preacher and his utterances are latent with lofty-spiritual lessons."—Western Recorder. $1.50

ALFRED E. GARVIE, M.A.
The Way and the Witness
Sermons and Addresses on the Wider Outlook and Functions of the Church of Today
The work of a ripe Biblical scholar and a theological mentor. $1.25

FREDERICK A. ATKINS
Standing Up to Life
Have We Lost the Secret of How to Live?
Mr. Atkins writes with knowledge and sympathy concerning what almost everybody will concede most deeply concerns us all—the serious art of living. $1.25

AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D.
Bible Snap-shots
"Dr. Wells is a trenchant writer. He can say a great deal in a small space. He is always interesting. You will want the inspiration of this book."—Methodist Protestant. $1.50

A. H. McKINNEY, D.D.
Average Boys and Girls
"The author goes on the principle that boys and girls all need about the same moral and religious care, as their bodies need about the same attention."—Herald and Presbyter. $1.00

The Eternal Hunger
EDWARD A. STEINER
Author of "The Immigrant Tide," etc.
Vivid Moments in Personal Experience

Professor Steiner's narrative has throbbing through it a note of genuine passion and not a little of the age-long tragedy and pathos which has marked the history of his race.
$1.25

Studies of Famous Bible Women
HENRY T. SELL, D.D.

The twelfth volume of Dr. Sell's Bible Study Text-books of which three hundred and fifty thousand have been sold.

"Designed for use in Adult Bible and Teacher Training Classes, or for private study."—Presbyterian. Paper 50c; Cloth 75c

ASK FOR THEM REVELL BOOKS AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

At All Booksellers, or of
FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY, Publishers
NEW YORK, 158 Fifth Avenue - CHICAGO, 17 N. Wabash Avenue

Outstanding New Religious Books

We are listing below descriptions of six of the most estimable and popular contributions to the Fall's religious literature, a season remarkable for its rich output.

Autobiography

My Education and Religion

GEORGE A. GORDON, D.D., Author of "The Christ of Today," "Humanism in New England Theology," etc.

Few ministers now living have had pastorates of such length and prominence as Dr. Gordon's present one. Born in Scotland in 1853, he came to this country at the age of eighteen, graduated from Harvard, entered the Congregational ministry, and in 1884 was settled at the Old South Church, Boston.

This somewhat informal autobiography concerns itself largely with the two great elements of vital growth named in the title, but also presents a very complete and moving picture of Dr. Gordon's life, and is full of the rich personality of the writer, of humor as well as of wisdom.

It is as stirring to read as a novel, and the rich infusion of Scotch pleasantry and anecdote will give it a wide appeal, not only to the circle of the author's friends and admirers, but to every one who is interested in informal memoirs and the status of religion today. $4.00

A Life of Paul

Paul of Tarsus

T. R. GLOVER, M.A., D.D., LL.D., Author of "Poets and Puritans," "The Pilgrim," etc.

The remarkable scholarship, keen historical perception and vigorous style which make Dr. Glover so welcome in America are at their best in this study of Paul. The author gathers up all that is known of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, tracing the story from his boyhood days in Tarsus with clearness and simplicity, and adding much of his own thinking. The reader is given a new conception of the man Paul as "one of the greatest figures in Greek literature" and a mighty factor in establishing Christian truth in the heart of the world. An essential volume for all who wish to have the best possible understanding of Paul and his fascinating career. $2.00

Philosophy and Theology

Religious Values

EDGAR SHEFFIELD BRIGHTMAN, Borden Parker Bowne Professor of Philosophy in Boston University, Author of "An Introduction to Philosophy," and Deliverer of the Ingersoll Lecture at Harvard University, 1925.

Here is a volume for the thoughtful reader who wishes to face frankly the searching questions that are being asked today about man's faith in God, such as the following:

Is religious belief reasonable?
What are the relations of moral and religious values?
How does religion increase the value of life?
Is its value dependent on belief in a personal God?
Is true religion positivistic or metaphysical?
How do pragmatism, realism and pluralism value religious experience?
Is social service the whole of religion?
Do we need mystical communion with God?
Why is worship worthful to man?
Can worship survive contemporary doubt?
What should be the aim of religious education for the New Age?

Three of the chapters are based on Professor Brightman's Lowell Institute Lectures, delivered at King's Chapel, Boston, in 1925. $2.50

Sermons

British Preachers

The Men and Their Message, 1925. Edited by SIR JAMES MARCHANT, K.B.E., LL.D.

To foster the hopeful awakening of the spirit of man, now evidenced on all sides, through the instrumentality of preaching, it has been decided to issue an annual volume of sermons by British preachers. A glance at the names of the men whose work is included in this volume is sufficient guarantee of the excellent taste and judgment shown by the editor in this, the initial volume of the series.

Rev. L. P. Jacks, D.D., D.Litt.	Rev. James Reid, M.A.
Rev. R. J. Campbell, D.D.	The Very Rev. Dean Burroughs
Rev. John A. Hutton, D.D.	Rev. F. W. Norwood, D.D.
Rev. James Black, D.D.	Rev. F. B. Meyer, D.D.
Rev. J. C. Carlile, D.D.	Rev. R. C. Gillie, D.C.L.
The Very Rev. Dean Inge, D.D.	Rev. John Kelman, D.D.
Rev. Leyton Richards, M.A.	Rev. Herbert H. Farmer, M.A.
Rev. H. Tydeman Chilvers	Miss Maude Royden
The Bishop of Birmingham	Rev. Charles Brown, D.D.
Rev. George H. Morrison, D.D.	The Bishop of Durham
Rev. Norman Maclean

$1.75

A New Life of Christ

The Hidden Years

A Novel Depicting the Hidden Years in the Life of Christ. JOHN OXENHAM, Author of "High Altars," "Bees in Amber," etc.

The story of the boyhood, youth, and early manhood of Jesus told by the boy Jesus' next-door neighbor and best chum, but who later became his partner in the carpenter's shop, and his companion in the village games, and in the rambles over the hill—the quiet observer of all that passed in the simple home at Nazareth.

The telling is at once robust and tender. It is wrought with most delicate touch and understanding and will never be forgotten by those who read it. It brings home to one the vitally human side of the greatest life ever lived on earth in a way that has never been done before. $1.75

Worship

Reality in Worship

WILLARD L. SPERRY, Dean of the Theological School in Harvard University and Andover Professor of Practical Theology.

"Reality in Worship" lays out and uses a new avenue of approach to its subject. It does not spend its strength upon the historical development of the several orders of worship nor in offering specific suggestions seriatim upon prayers, lectionaries, hymns, anthems, sermons and the like. Convinced that neither of these types of books really uncovers the deeper sources of public worship, Dean Sperry digs in the sub-soil of his subject and sets himself the task of answering the question "What is supposed to go on in us and to happen to us when we are at church?"

"Reality in Worship" is an exposition of the thesis that the aim of a service of public worship is to render articulate, with the aid of science and art, the simple, wordless, Christian experience of the individuals present.

His book divides, accordingly, into two parts: First, a rather informal account of what "getting religion" means and second, an effort to discover and to state clearly certain governing principles to be observed in drafting orders of worship which can be used by all sorts and conditions of men, in their common worship of God.

"Reality in Worship," therefore, holds in survey all orders of public worship and ties itself exclusively to none of them. $2.50

Congregational Publishing Society
(The Pilgrim Press)
14 Beacon St., Boston
19 S. La Salle St., Chicago

(Continued from page 503)

pting one school which was under the di- n of Rev. O. M. Adams, director of re- education for First Plymouth. The had a total enrollment of 196, with an e of 90 per cent. attendance. All the rs were paid. The teachers were nearly llege young people, several of whom had ship training in the young people's as- at Crete. A special feature of the work training class which met for an hour norning before the school. This was con- by Mr. Adams and the attendance of rs was required. Thus each teacher com- a half year, 20 hours, of the regular rd Teacher Training Course and have ed credit for it.

school not only made a valuable con- on to the lives of nearly 200 children, was a living laboratory for the training exceptionally promising group of young

C. G. M.

e of Rev. A. E. Bashford Recognized

ter is a small church in a small town but d the faithful service of Rev. A. E. Bash- or over five years. He has led them h a federation experience and in the re- ng and enlargement of the church build- In the latter enterprise he has not only able leadership, but has continuously la- with his own hands; even taking his va- in this way. As a recognition of this the church presented him with a new Fordor Ford Sedan fully equipped." rst," he said, "I thought I was having a and tried not to wake and spoil it, but till in the garage, and the old worn-out nds outside." This is how one small showed its appreciation and heartened stor at the opening of the year's work.

LEE INOUYE

Lee Inouye, a Congregational Japanese boy who graduated in June from the Detroit High School, is the son of Mr. Y. Inouye, formerly interpreter for the Union Pacific Railway system, with residence in Cheyenne, Wyo. While there, Lee as a boy was baptized by Sec. Frank L. Moore, then pastor of the First Congregational Church of that city. Mr. Y. Inouye is the son of Christian parents in Japan and came to this country while a young man. He secured his master's degree from the University of Nebraska and is greatly interested in religious and social work among the Japanese of America.

MINNESOTA

Paying Off the State Conference Debt

The effort being made to clear off the debt of the State Conference, which has been going on for about a year under the direction of a special committee of the board of directors, is about to succeed, $13,094 of the $15,265 needed having been pledged, and over $8,000 paid in. Supt. Everett Lesher and Assistant Supt. A. K. Voss have helped the financial secretary in the presentation of the debt situation to over 130 churches and taken pledges.

Engagements have already been made for the presentation in 11 other churches this fall. With some personal solicitation the end is in sight. This debt was contracted largely by the necessity of increased appropriation to missionary churches in order to conserve the work already begun. The churches are gradually assuming this increased cost and the stronger churches are increasing their gifts for the apportionment.

OHIO

Geneva Pastor Giving Course in High School

The church building of Geneva has been beautified by new decorations and other minor repairs. Recently the "Cleveland Players" gave "The Rock" at a community service in the High School auditorium. The church school begins the year with a fine corps of teachers. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Candy, is teaching this year in the High School, giving a course in the Life of Christ, for which credit is given to the pupils.

Brecksville Property to Be Improved

The old church at Brecksville, under the inspiring leadership of Rev. F. J. Conant, has quickly raised $7,000 to improve its equipment. Brecksville is a small village on the road between Cleveland and Akron, which is taking on new life as the city approaches it.

Sending Missionaries to China

On Sept. 13, Plymouth Church, Cleveland, installed its new missionaries to China, Dr. and Mrs. Horace Campbell.

FLORIDA

Summer Pastor Served Key West

Every department of the church at Key West is active. An International Christian Endeavor Society has been organized with an enrollment of 20 members. Mr. Otis E. Kirby, a Yale Divinity School student, was commissioned by the Home Missionary Society to

The CAIRO HOTEL

Que at Sixteenth Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C.

JAMES T. HOWARD, Manager

The CAIRO HOTEL is conveniently situated for Conventions. The Sixteenth Street bus line, operating a three minute schedule, passes directly by the Convention Bureau, with a 10 cent fare.

Single Room without bath	$2.50 per day
Single Room with bath	$3.00 " "
Double Room without bath	$4.00 " "
Double Room with bath	$5.00 " "

2 Room Suites, bath between —

2 people	$6.00 per day
4 "	$8.00 " "

$1.00 per day for each additional person occupying room

Reservations made upon request. Write for free booklet.

serve the church this past summer. It is hoped that a permanent pastor will soon be secured.

CONNECTICUT

Bequest to First Church, Norwalk

The old First Church of Norwalk, organized in 1652, has just fallen heir to $25,000 by the will of George I. Buxton, which will be a timely help after its strenuous campaign of building a $150,000 house of worship. As a residuary legatee in the same will the American Missionary Association will receive $50,000 or more.

Notice

Meetings of the National Council

Conventioners are urged to make reservations on our personally conducted 12 day tour to Washington.

De Luxe Motor Coaches will leave Boston October 19th returning on October 30th.

Sightseeing trips in Philadelphia and New York included

6 full days in Washington

All places of national interest will be visited, including special trip to Mt. Vernon and the Arlington Cemetery.

Return trip over newly completed Storm King Highway, Bear Mountain Bridge, Hudson River, Berkshires and Mohawk Trail.

$94.50 covers everything;
Hotels, meals, transportation, and all side trips.

The ideal and most economical way to attend the Convention.

GREEN'S TOURS
LYNN, MASS.
Tel. Lynn 4249 2280

WHEN YOU COME TO WASHINGTON

Be sure and visit beautiful Arlington Cemetery, the last resting place of many illustrious heroes and famous men.

Arlington Sight-Seeing Busses—the only ones authorized to take visitors through the cemetery—make connections at the main gate with all electric cars from Washington leaving station at 12th St. and Pennsylvania Ave. from 8.15 A.M. to 4.15 P.M., or leaving Virginia side of Key Bridge from 8.30 A.M. to 4.30 P.M., as well as all cars leaving Mt. Vernon until 3.45 P.M.

We give you a delightful ride of over four miles, covering all the principal points of interest with stop-overs at such places as the historic Lee Mansion and the Memorial Amphitheatre.

You can take in Arlington either on your way to or coming from Mt. Vernon via electric line at much less expense than by the motor bus lines out of Washington, and see a great deal more besides.

Don't miss this trip—worth twice its unusually low cost—only 35 cents for the round trip through the cemetery including stop-overs.

ARLINGTON TRANSFER COMPANY
Arlington, Virginia

Ten Years at Sherman

The tenth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Robert Hueston at Sherman was celebrated with a series of five meetings and services on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 19 and 20. This is Mr. Hueston's first pastorate, to which he came direct from Yale. He grew up in the Disciple denomination.

Mr. Hueston has helped to preserve this town and its ways through years of change, and has imparted to it a quick and vital joy of life. The people have entered heartily into the revival of the town which for years preceding his coming was nearly dead.

This anniversary was a concrete evidence of the efficient and beneficent way in which Mr. Hueston has grown into the life of the community. The attendance ranged from 75 to 175 at the sessions. Rev. J. M. Deyo of Danbury spoke on "The Value of the Church to the Community," its power for the spiritual uplift and molding of the character of its citizens. Rev. Sherrod Soule of Hartford spoke on "The Relation of the Church to the Nation" and illustrated his theme with the lives of a few great men of the church who had with high purpose and unflinching courage changed the very course of the nation's history.

Mrs. Franklin Warner spoke on "The Church and the World Community," showing that it behooves us for our own safety and comfort to raise our neighbors, "who are now the whole world," to our own moral standards of living, in this way setting forth the necessity of missions. Rev. Robert E. Carter, 31 years pastor at Washington, Ct., depicted the many blessings and advantages of a life invested in a rural town. At the banquet in the town hall Saturday night experts in departments of community life talked on public health, banking, social problems, and community religion. Mr. and Mrs. Hueston were presented with a chest of silver, the gift of the townspeople as a token of their deep regard. E. O. M.

Westport Minister in Europe

Rev. Clifford Hutchings, pastor of the church at Westport, has just sailed for Europe to be gone three months. Rev. Wilber S. Denning, American Board Missionary to India, on furlough, will supply the pulpit in his absence.

RHODE ISLAND

Pastor of Union Church, Providence, Resigns

Rev. Theodore Bacheler, pastor of Union Church, Providence, has resigned after a pastorate of four years, in which fine service has been rendered and shepherding of the youth faithfully procured. The years have been especially noteworthy for valuable Lenten services. The impression is abroad that Union Church is a difficult field for expansion and growth. A faithful scattered constituency is holding the field in this down-town section.

MASSACHUSETTS

Church Paper Issued at Medford Hillside

Rev. A. P. Brantley, pastor of Medford Hillside, has issued an attractive magazine called the Hillside Messenger. On the cover is an illustration of "His Vision," a beautiful new church looming up beyond the present inadequate structure. The magazine includes the church directory, the plans and programs for three months, sermon topics, church news, and several religious articles of worth. The plans and specifications for the new building are drawn and the contract for its erection will soon be let.

Religious Education Director at Framingham

Grace Church, Framingham, Rev. T. B. Lathrop, pastor, has secured as director of religious education Miss Miriam Chalmers, recently in the same position in the Cle Heights Presbyterian Church of Cle Heights, O. Under her direction Grace C held a successful daily vacation Bible scho five weeks, with an enrollment of 105. M work, dramatization, hand work, instr in prayer and the devotional life, hikes, stories, and other features made an attr program which caught and held the inter all. A strong program of religious edu is being shaped. Miss Chalmers is a ni Dr. James Chalmers of the Framingham mal School and also of Dr. William Knight of Plymouth Church, Frami Centre.

Limited Ordination at Hanover

Pilgrim Association met, Sept. 23, as c at Hanover to consider the request of ond Church and William Barclay for o tion and installation. The candidate, e in business in Boston, has been doing effective work in this parish and has g endeared himself to the people. With a to increasing his usefulness the call w sued. The council organized with Rev. Justice of Weymouth and Braintree as erator, and Rev. M. O. Baltzer of Ran scribe.

Mr. Barclay presented a paper based an academy education and personal st After a full and free discussion of all involved, it was voted to issue a certific "limited ordination," according to Dr. Barton. This grants privileges of a m of the denomination for a term of years council designated 1928 as the limit. I this period Mr. Barclay will puruse a cou study under a committee of the assoc Full ordination will follow automatica satisfactory completion of this course. evening installation the sermon was pr by Rev. E. H. Gibson of First, Brockton.

GRACE DODGE HOTEL
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A hotel of distinction and charm, located near the Capitol and the Union Station within five minutes' ride from the First Congregational Church. Excellent food and service.

Rates

Single . . . . . $2.50 and up.
Double . . . . 4.00 and up.

"No Tipping"

Write for reservations
Miss Mary A. Lindsley, Manager

Hotel Logan
Iowa Circle
Washington, D.C.

We can give you good single roo with bath for $2.50 and double $4.00 per day. European plan.

We are very conveniently located the White House, also the Washi ton Auditorium.

were the prayer of ordination by Rev. Holton of Porter, Brockton; the charge candidate by Mr. Justice; address to eople by Rev. F. B. Harrison of East water; the right hand of fellowship by S. B. Siegle of Hanson; the invocation v. W. B. Jerge of Rockland; and scripture g by Rev. H. E. Titus, Hanover.

ation at Edgartown

tist and Congregational Churches at town, Martha's Vineyard, have federated lled as pastor, Allen E. Burtt of Whitins- Mass., a recent graduate of Bangor ary. Services will be held alternately in louse of worship for a term of six months. vorking merger has been under considera- om the beginning (1920) of the pastorate . A. Judson Leach, now of Ashburnham, riginated the plan. The Congregational h dates from 1642, shortly after the land- the first colonists upon the island. Mr. will begin his ministry Oct. 1.

rch and Ministerial Record

Calls

G. R., Stanton, Neb., to Weeping Water.
, JAMES (Presb.), Hastings, Neb., to Fed- d, Aurora. Accepts.
A. E., recent graduate of Bangor Seminary, dgartown, Mass. Accepts.
T, HORTON, University of Nebraska, to or, Neb. At work.
RTH, R. E., formerly professor, University orto Rico, to Chesterfield, Mass. At work.
W. W., Inglewood, Cal., to Buena Park.
C. C., to Chinese, San Diego, Cal.
Y., to Japanese, Santa Barbara, Cal.
DY, L. E., Federated, Freeborn, Minn., to nville. At work.
ADE, E. A., Swedish, Brooklyn, N. Y., to lish, Malden, Mass. To begin Dec. 1.
. Y., to Chinese Mission, Bakersfield, Cal.
A. E., Upland, Pa., to Shelton, Ct.
URA, S., to Japanese, San Diego, Cal.
O. W., Garland, Neb., to Trenton. At
RS, GEORGE, Onawa, Ia., to Sheridan, Wyo. pts.

Resignations

LER, THEODORE, Union, Providence, R. I.
LLER, GEORGE, Santa Susana, Cal.
W. L., First, Daytona, Fla. Effective 4 after eight years' service.
SON, T. M., Ventura, Cal.

Recognition

T. T., South, Windsor, Vt., Sept. 17.

Correction

P, F. J., did not receive a call to Big ber, Mont., as was stated in issue of . 24.

Installation

, H. F., 4., First, Kent., O., Sept. 25. Ser- by Dr. R. W. Gammon; other parts by Messrs. P. L. Curtiss, L. L. Wood, E. S. rock, L. C. Douglas, D. F. Bradley, J. H. , and H. F. Loomis.

Personals

RLAND, REV. C. S., General Secretary of the ral Council, was given the degree of or of Divinity this year by the University Geneva, Switzerland, on which occasion he an address on "L'Influence de Calvin et ve sur l'Etat et l'Eglise en Amerique."

VASHINGTON, D. C.

Make reservations now for Auto Tour (Oct. 20-26th) to Arlington and Mt. Vernon. A $4.50 trip for $3.00. Cadillac cars. Main 1472.

DELTA TOURS

lth & G. Washington, D. C.

Deaths

MARQUIS EATON

Mr. Marquis Eaton, a prominent attorney of Chicago, died of pneumonia at his residence in that city, Sept. 19. Mr. Eaton was born at Mattawan, Mich., and had his training at the state university and was admitted to the bar in 1898. He married Miss Jacquette Hunter of Flint, Mich. He came to Chicago in 1907 and soon became one of the leading men of the Chicago Bar Association. In 1908 he organized the movement for "safe and sane" celebration of the Fourth of July and was active until his death in efforts to secure safety on Independence Day. He gave a large amount of his time and a great deal of money to public welfare. He became chairman of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross in 1917 and was a director of the United Charities, of the Infant Welfare Society, and of many other benevolent organizations. He was decorated by the Italian Crown for service during the World War. He has served as consul general in Chicago for Bulgaria since 1923.

He was active in the work of the Hyde Park Congregational Church, was superintendent of the church school for several years, was president of the Congregational Brotherhood in 1910 and of the Chicago Congregational Club in 1914. He is survived by his widow, two sons and a daughter. He was 49 years of age.

Events to Come

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES, biennial meeting, Washington, D. C., Oct. 20-28.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, monthly meeting, Pilgrim Hall, Nov. 6, 10.30 A.M.

SUFFOLK WEST ASSOCIATION (Mass.), Central Church, Boston, Oct. 13. Sessions at 3 P.M. and 7 P.M. Addresses by the team of National Council speakers.

SUFFOLK NORTH ASSOCIATION (Mass.), First Church, Cambridge, Oct. 14, afternoon and evening. Theme: "Christian Missions."

SUFFOLK SOUTH ASSOCIATION (Mass.), Hyde Park, Wednesday, Oct. 14, 2.30 P.M. Evening service 7.30 P.M.

A Hotel of Comfort and Hospitality

Within a 10-minute walk of National Council of Congregational Churches Convention Headquarters.

The Lee House

RUSSELL A. CONN, Manager

15th and L STREETS, WASHINGTON, D. C.

GUESTS of this homelike hotel always appreciate the personal and friendly attention shown their every request.

You do not merely "stop" at the Lee House — you are made to feel entirely at home here amidst luxurious surroundings.

Situated just three squares north of the White House and convenient to 2 car and bus lines, the Lee House offers you a fine central location to all activities and places you will want to see.

The Lee House is quiet, restful, and only a few minutes' walk from the main Business, Shopping and Theatre Districts.

The 250 beautiful and cheery rooms, with outside exposures, are equipped with both tub and shower baths.

RATES		MEALS
Single Room & Bath	$3.50, $4.00, $5.00	Breakfast . . .	50c. & 75c.
Double Room & Bath	$5.00 to $10.00	Lunch	85c.
		Dinner	$1.50
		A La Carte Service if desired

Vital Questions for Congregationalists

To Come Before the National Council

For Consolidation

I note by a recent circular letter that I am one of the few delegates to the National Council that does not take The Congregationalist. I hope, however, the fact that I am a paid subscriber to the Missionary Herald will not be overlooked "when the roll is called up yonder." I am one of many who find the H. C. L. a condition and not a theory, and yet my family is not illiterate as we have three daily papers, 12 weeklies, and 10 monthlies, our literary portion of our budget—whatever that is—costing us $50 a year. I received from your office a month ago a questionnaire regarding the consolidation of the various societies and the three religious publications. Mr. Roger W. Babson's answers in The Congregationalist of Sept. 17, and your caption, "A Progressive Stand," are so sensible, satisfactory, and sententious that it is worth to me the price of a year's subscription to your paper and you may send me the paper for a year with bill. Incidentally I expect to see the Babson program carry the day at the National Council.

Yours for Consolidation,

NEW SUBSCRIBER.

P.S. I second Dr. Creegan's nomination for President Woolley for the next Moderator.

Favors Mergers

Should the Presbyterians and Congregationalists unite?

Why?

Should there be but one Foreign Board?

Yes.

Should there be but one Home Board?

At least one general Home Missionary office.

Should the Foundation for Education be merged with the Education Society?

Yes.

Is there any reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not be administered by the same organization?

No.

Shall we lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects in the Apportionment by merging some of the Societies?

No.

The missionary magazines should be a monthly edition of The Congregationalist.

Should all missionary societies commit the major portion of the cultivation of missionary income to a common agency working in co-operation with the state conference?

Yes.

MRS. TIMOTHY HARRISON.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Two Boards

What about the representation of wo the Council and in our missionary assoc

They should be given seats. Are begi be elected as church trustees.

Should the Presbyterians and Congr alists unite?

Yes — And Congregationalism will largely in public estimation if its acts publicity frequently and continually sho it is ready at all times to move toward t any other Protestant merger.

What should Congregationalists public questions? For example, social interracial, international questions?

"Congregationalists" — individual m I've nothing to say. The denomination take positive stands on moral question

How can the energies of our laymen largely utilized?

Beyond me. They are willing enough ers on fiscal matters, feeling themselve fied in that direction only.

What should be the relation of the organizations to the general organizat the church, locally, state-wide and nati

Desirable to keep them from so ce their loyalty upon "Women's Associati whatever it may be called, as to decrea loyalty to church and denomination.

Should there be but one Board of Missions?

Yes.

Should there be but one Home Board

Yes.

Should the Foundation for Educat merged with the Education Society?

Yes.

Is there any reason why the Annuit and the Ministerial Relief Fund should administered by the same organization?

No. It should be, to advantage of both

Shall we lose interest in missions if sen the number of specific objects in the tionment by merging some of the Societi

No.

Merge the Missionary Herald and the ican Missionary. Cut The Congregat to a bi-weekly. Chief objection of laym is there are too many numbers loading library table.

We are properly emphasizing the Sta ference in our present organization.

Present policies of securing missionar seem good, so far as my knowledge goe

Cleveland, Ohio. HORATIO

Push The Congregationalist

Referring to the merger matter. Ju momentous a problem this is, I am not class position to judge.

But there is one kind of merger wh pears to me to outweigh the magazine i

I believe the stir which is being m directed to the subscription lists of Th

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

AGENTS WANTED

Cut this advertisement out, and send it with your name and address to Frank M. Sayford Co., Inc., 710 Little Bldg., Boston, Mass., and we will mail you, no charge, samples of our paper products with instruction sheet covering our plan to earn money for your church organization.

HELP WANTED

Church Assistant. Capable woman for directing religious education, young people and parish work. Fine central Iowa church. Salary Commensurate with ability. Field now open. Write promptly to Rev. W. K. Williams, Marshalltown, Ia.

TEACHERS WANTED

College and normal trained teachers needed for summer and fall vacancies, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency, Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS

Boarders wanted: Very cosey home, having all modern conveniences, for aged couples. Valid recommendations in the beautiful country of East Woodstock, Ct. Mrs. John Aldrich.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

MISCELLANEOUS

Stereopticon Slides: Story of Pilgrim Fathers. "Some Mother's Boy," "Cost of Freedom," "Life of Christ," "Boy Scouts," "Ben Hur," "Other Wise Man," "Quo Vadis," "Passion Play," "Life of Washington," "Bell and Flag," "Pilgrim's Progress," "Billy Sunday," "In His Steps," "Yellowstone National Park." Numerous Evangelistic Sermons (Illustrated). Card brings complete list. Willis P. Hume, Oberlin, Ohio.

For rent—Pleasant fall and winter home on salt water. Completely furnished. Four bedrooms, two bathrooms. Electric lights. Oyster bed. State Roads. Good high school, churches. S. C. Wolcott, Nuttall, Gloucester Co., Va.

To lease: Florida apartment. Accommodates two congenial people. Private home. References exchanged. Mrs. Drisko, Margaret Place, Pomona, Fla.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wasteless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Pews for sale. New style, seating 240. Material finished pine with hardwood trimmings and cushions. Choir railing boxed in same wood and finish. Reason for sale, building used for Community Centre. Address Miss Bertha Estey, Putney, Vt.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

IF you have any second-hand church furnishings you wish to dispose of, why not insert a classified advertisement in our paper? Some small church may be in need of them, and be glad to pay a small sum for them.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

The New Freely-Lathering
Cuticura Shaving Stick
For Tender Faces
EMOLLIENT MEDICINAL ANTISEPTIC

The Massachusetts General Hos
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number
Educational requirement for three-year course, high diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, an forms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

tionalist, would far outweigh all results n the time and effort spent on the maga- subject could bring about. Just casual ry into this subscription matter reveals to me an astonishing condition amongst Congregational families, in reference to the place of their own denominational paper in the homes of our church people. Boys and girls have no opportunity to acquaint themselves with the denomination's movements, nothing to awaken in their minds interest in them, nor to nourish intelligent affection for the traditions and undertakings of their own church. To my ways of thinking the National Council could consider at its coming meeting no more vital topic than this, of increasing the circulation of its own newspaper amongst its constituents. We are as strong a. our subscription list. Our strength is in homes where The Congregationalist is read; where it never enters, there Congregationalism is weak, is little known.

Therefore it is that I suggest,—Merge on subscriptions to The Congregationalist.

Yours for OUR PAPER,

J. B. LAWRENCE.

South Norwalk, Ct.

A Southern Woman's View

Who shall be the next Moderator of the National Council?

Dr. Lewis H. Keller.

What about the representation of women in the Council and in our missionary associations?

They should be there; am not sure of the proportion.

Should the Presbyterians and Congregationalists unite?

Yes, if freedom of thought can be maintained.

What should Congregationalists say on public questions? For example, social reform, interracial, international questions?

Magazines full. See Federation Executive Board Minutes.

How can the energies of our laymen be more largely utilized?

By co-ordinating religion and life.

What should be the relation of the woman's organizations to the general organizations of the church, locally, state-wide and nationally?

As separate, only as women have more time for organization work and a different genius of work.

Should there be but one Board of Foreign Missions?

Yes—with departments.

Should there be but one Home Board?

Ditto.

Should the Foundation for Education be merged with the Education Society?

Yes.

Is there any reason why the Annuity Fund and the Ministerial Relief Fund should not be administered by the same organization?

No.

Shall we lose interest in missions if we lessen the number of specific objects in the Apportionment by merging some of the societies?

Not necessarily. Interest might possibly be increased and confusion eliminated.

Are we properly emphasizing or over-emphasizing the State Conference in our present organization?

Our Southern State Conferences are the life of Congregationalism.

Should all missionary societies commit the major portion of their cultivation of income to a common agency working in co-operation with the State Conference?

This is reasonable, with a larger latitude of appeal than at present allowed under the apportionment. I hold a brief for union of all sorts, when spirituality and freedom can be preserved.

MRS. F. P. ENSMINGER.

Star, N. C.

Church Furniture
Pews-Pulpits-Chancel Furniture
Sunday School Seating
American Seating Company
Dept. D.
CHICAGO 14 E. Jackson Blvd.
BOSTON 69 Canal St.

21 DIVISIONS OF CONTENTS in each of which are beautiful new Sunday School Songs, successful copyrights of other publishers, the outstanding hymns of the church bearing on each subject. These are in MAGNIFICAT.
Mr. Superintendent!
y "Magnificat" for your Sunday School and your usical" troubles are at an end. The "New ia," found only in "Magnificat," the "Orders of rship," complete with music, the 21 departments, orchestration (11 instruments), and the unequalled ection of Songs, Hymns, and Special Selections, vide a storehouse of treasures. Send for a return- e copy and examine it. $30.00, $35.00, $40.00, .00, according to binding.
LL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Philadelphia

Stained Glass
Memorial Windows
olonial Stained Glass Works
64 Stanhope Street
STON MASS

V. JOHN A. HUTTON, D.D.
Successor to Dr. Jowett as astor of Westminster Chapel, London, England rite articles for The Expositor this year. He is the r of "That The Ministry Be Not Blamed," "There Crucified Him," and other books.
l your subscription to The Expositor now so you may is first article in the October issue.
e Expositor, 710 Caxton Building, Cleveland, Ohio
Subscription 1 year $3.00 4 Mos. $1.00

SUS' WAY OF LIVING
odern Bible Study Course. Considered with spe- relation to our modern life. Nine studies. Pub- d monthly in The Institute. Annual subscription Five or more copies to one address 60c. 16 pleted courses at same price.
he American Institute of Sacred Literature
University of Chicago Dept. 469, Chicago, Ill.

Outsells all Other Books
The Bible—we carry it in every language and binding
Send for Catalog or call at the
Massachusetts Bible Society
41 Bromfield St., Boston

TORS—SUPERINTENDENTS—TEACHERS
VE-MINUTE "TALKS"
HENRY T. SELL
NOW READY
SERMONS in STORIES
SERMONS in OBJECTS
Dr. Sell shows how to talk to young folks—to get and hold their attention. Stories alive, original, pointed.
2 Vols. Each, Cloth, $1.25
REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Ave., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

Church
EMBROIDERIES, ALTAR LINENS PULPIT GOWNS, CLERGY AND CHOIR VESTMENTS, CLERICAL CLOTHING Estimates on Request
J. M. HALL, Inc.
9 East 35th St., New York
Tel. Caledonia 8648

CHURCH WINDOWS
AND
MEMORIALS IN STAINED GLASS AND BRONZE
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
Jacoby Art Glass Company
Dept. 28 2700 St. Vincent Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

ESTEY
PIPE AND REED ORGANS
Estey Organ Co.
Brattleboro Vermont

BALOPTICONS

Write for Catalog
are used in thousands of schools churches and hospitals. This line of lanterns, for slides and opaque objects—for projection in daylight as well as in the dark—is the most complete in the world.
Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 706 St. Paul St., Rochester, N.Y.

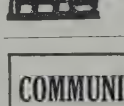
Pulpit Gowns
and Choir Vestments
CUSTOM TAILORING
FOR CLERGYMEN
Pulpit Hangings & Bookmarkers
Cox Sons & Vining
131-133 E. 23rd Street, New York

MEMORIAL WINDOWS
ALFRED M. BELL COMPANY
79 Sudbury Street, :: Boston, Mass.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

CHURCH FURNITURE
Everything for Church and Sunday School use. From Factory to You. Fine catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co.
1114 South 4th St., Greenville, Illinois

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS



ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B.

COMMUNION SUPPLIES
We supply every essential for the Communion service. Trays, Glasses, Covers, Plates.
THE PILGRIM PRESS
14 Beacon St. Boston
158 5th Ave. New York
19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches. For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East
Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations
Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service
Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service
Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement
Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work
Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. Henry Smith Leiper,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
George N. White, M.A., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulp
plies and Congregational ministers seekin torates. Maintained by the Congregationa
ferences of New England. Rev. Arthur J.
Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., Ch

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATIO SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General Se and Missionary Education Se
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service and Education Se
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's Se
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious Ed Program including Social Service, Mis Education, Student and Young People's aids Ministerial Students, University P directs campaign to secure Recruits for C Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHIN SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest denomination for the publication and distr of The Congregationalist, church school ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, te magazines, children's and young people's papers, and books for home and church us book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business M
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregati
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachuset
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Illin

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 Co tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook, Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE IN 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. H Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secreta

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE P 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, Exec

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MISSI FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; Mrs. Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MISSI UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, Trea Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 Co tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCI constituent of the Congregational Home M ary Society, represents the churches of Mas setts in their home missionary work. The S solicits bequests, pays annuities on condi gifts, administers trust funds for churches. erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeritus; John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver D. S Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, Bost

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTERIAL Solicits gifts from churches and individuals bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 1257 C bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid to Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION OF TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its object establishment and support of Evangelical C gational Churches and Sunday Schools in B and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres.; Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec.; Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides entire Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and invites tributions for this purpose. Bequests and An Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, Su tendent; Rev. William F. English, Treas Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNECTICU constituent of the National Society, solicits tributions, administers Special Trust for Chu and pays Annuities on Conditional Gifts. Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. Willia English, Treasurer, Congregational House, ford.

Modern Religious Cults and Movements Third Edition
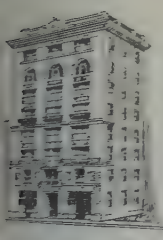
By GAIUS GLENN ATKINS, D.D.
Dr. Joseph Fort Newton says: "What we have been looking for. . . Dr. Atkins has gone deeper than most, discovering the roots and reasons for all this . . . after a new religious technique." $2.50
FLEMING H. REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Ave., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago

American Congregational Association



owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches.
Bequests and Annuities are solicited in order that the House may be freed from mortgage indebtedness and the Association thus enabled to furnish the Missionary Organizations with business offices at minimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet.
Rev. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hobbard, Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society
Beacon St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816
Home visitation and personal missionary service in connection with our churches. Emergency relief. Recreation and Fresh Air Work. Contributions and legacies gratefully received and scrupulously administered.
William Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

Incorporated 1829 Boston Seamen's Friend Society, Inc. Reorganized 1922

This Society, reorganized in 1922, now fully represents the Congregational churches of New England in practical, social and religious work among seamen. Has finely equipped rooms at 287 Hanover Street, Boston, and at Vineyard Haven, and Reading Stations at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. Society provides dormitory accommodations, reading and recreation rooms, religious services, tables, and games of many kinds, a restaurant or canteen, shower baths, postal and banking facilities. Donations and bequests solicited. Donations received on an annuity basis. President, Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore Gerald, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Treas., Charles E. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Com., Franklin P. Shumway; Office, 618 Congregational House.

American Seamen's Friend Society
Incorporated 1833
The only American undenominational international and national Society aiding seamen.
Maintains a Sailors' Home and Institute at 190 West Street, New York City.
Sailors' Libraries ($25) placed on vessels sailing from New York.
PUBLISHES the Sailors' Magazine ($1.00).
Shipwrecked and destitute seamen aided.
SUPPORTED by contributions and legacies.
JOHN B. CALVERT, D.D., President; GEORGE E. WEBSTER, D.D., Secretary.
BENJAMIN C. PINNEO, Treasurer, 76 Wall St., New York, to whom contributions may be sent.

American Sunday School Union
Philadelphia, Pa. Founded 1817
National, Interdenominational. Establishes and organizes Union Sunday Schools in the outlying districts of the country. Publishes and circulates moral and religious literature. Helps the churches of Christ by its pioneer and foundational work, not duplicated by any other agency. Supported by voluntary gifts. Contributions solicited. Annuities arranged for. Legacies received. Donations and communications relative to work in any part of the country may be sent to the New England office.
W. L. CARVER, Supt.,
8 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Laymen's Week-End

About one-half of all the laymen in the Congregational churches of America live within approximately one night's ride from Washington, D. C.; some of them a little farther than this; many of them nearer.

It is not to be expected that every Congregational layman can get away from his work to attend a meeting in the capital city. It is reasonable, however, to expect that a considerable number of these laymen can get away from their business or work for over the week-end. The Program Committee, therefore, endeavored to cast the nature of the meetings for Saturday and Sunday particularly so that they would be of special interest to laymen. Saturday forenoon will be given to business, in which laymen are always interested; the reports of the Commission on Law Enforcement and of the Commission on Men's Work, with discussion; in the afternoon the meeting of the Foundation for Education, followed by addresses by Dr. Cadman, Secretary Wilbur, John J. Esch of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Bishop Francis J. McConnell on questions of applied Christianity. In the evening of Saturday Dr. Charles R. Brown has been asked to speak, and Rev. R. W. Barstow of Madison, Wis., will take the theme, "Crabbed Age and Youth," having in mind the men and the young people.

Sunday will be a rich day in the churches in the morning, the Council sermon in the afternoon, and two great addresses in the evening by Drs. James Gordon Gilkey and Thomas C. Edwards.

In addition to the attractions of the Council program there is the opportunity to visit our capital city under most favorable conditions.

Where groups can get together special cars can be arranged for. In particular there are to be special trains of young people from various points in the East, starting on Thursday evening. The young people will occupy their Pullmans while in Washington and groups of men could do the same thing with a car attached to any one of these trains. Detailed information about this could be had through George Reed Andrews, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, if there is no local representative announced.

Laymen who are planning this trip should send their names, with one dollar for registration, to the office of the National Council, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City, whereupon there will be sent to them a railway certificate entitling them to a round trip ticket for a fare and a half, the literature of the Council, and registration entitling them to a badge of admission on arrival in Washington, together with full information.

The Congregationalist
Continuing
The Recorder and The Advance
October 8, 1925
Vol. CX No. 41

Copyright, 1925
All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

The Congregationalist (1849) succeeds The Recorder, founded 1816; The Advance, 1867. Published every Thursday by The Pilgrim Press, at 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Composition by Thomas Todd Co.

RATES: Single subscription, $3.00 a year; in Church Clubs and to ministers, $2.75. Foreign postage, $1.00. Canadian postage, $.50 a year. Subscriptions must be paid in advance. REMITTANCES: Make payable to The Congregationalist. Acknowledgment will be made by change of date on the label. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new address must be in our hands two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Current copies at the Pilgrim Press Book Store, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, and 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, and at our depository, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Single copies, 10 cents. Address: The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Contents

The Editorial Outlook 453
Editorial—A "Cathedral" of Christian Service 454
Where Is the Lord's Table?
Washington, the City Beautiful, by C. E. LaVigne 457
Washington's National Council Committees 459
Our Churches at the Capital 460
On Reading Dr. Gordon's "My Education and Religion" by Allen E. Cross 463
Prominent Figures in the National Council 464
Welcome to Washington, by Jason Noble Pierce 465
Messages from Former Moderators 465
Impressions from Our Watch-Towers 467
The National Council Secretary's Report 469
Our Invalid Parish—Plunge in All Over 472
Closet and Altar 472
Comment on the Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting Topic 472
Among the New Books 486
The Congregationalist's Bible Class 490
With the Children—A Neighborhood Grandmother, by Rose Brooks 491
News of the Churches 497
Vital Questions for Congregationalists 508

RISIBLES

"Does my question embarrass you?" inquired the professor of the dazed-looking student.

"Not at all, sir," answered the student. "The question is perfectly clear; it's the answer that's puzzling me."—Denison Flamingo.

"Brederin', we must do something to remedy de status quo," said a negro preacher to his congregation.

"Brudder Jones, what am de status quo?" asked a member.

"Dat, my brudder," said the preacher, "am de Latin for de mess we'se in."

It was lunch hour at the lime-works, and Pat's two buddies, deciding to play a little joke on him during his absence, drew the features of a donkey on the back of his coat, which he had left behind. In due time Pat returned, and presently hove in sight bearing the lime decorated coat.

"What's the trouble, Pat?" asked one, trying to appear indifferent.

"Nothing much," replied Pat, equally indifferent, "only Oi'd like to know which one of yez wiped your face on me coat."—Methodist Protestant.

Mistress—"So you say you worked for the Hoosits; can you prove it?"

Maid—"Well, I have some spoons and things with their initials on."—New Mexico Salvo.

Wife—"Henry, a fortune-teller said that I was going to Palm Beach."

Hub—"Call her up and make a date for me. Perhaps she can tell me where I can get the money."—Boston Transcript.

GORDON COLLEGE

OF

Theology and Missions

BOSTON, MASS.

A Graduate and Undergraduate Religious College Course, majoring in Theology, Missions, or Religious Education, with a wide range of cultural studies, and granting college and advanced theological degrees, open to qualified men and women, in a remarkable interdenominational fellowship of Christocentric life and thought, located in Boston's finest educational center.

NATHAN R. WOOD, President

HARTFORD

W. DOUGLAS MACKENZIE
President

Seminary Foundation

Theological Seminary
Dean, M. W. Jacobus

School of Religious Education
Dean, E. H. Knight

Kennedy School of Missions
Dean, E. W. Capen

Through these associated schools Hartford offers full training for

1. The Christian Ministry
2. Religious Education and Social Service
3. The Foreign Field

Each school has its independent faculty and its own institutional life and together they form one interdenominational institution with the unity of a common aim and spirit.

The plan for a group of eight buildings for the Foundation is being carried out. Mackenzie Hall, the women's dormitory, is already completed and occupied under direction of the Dean of Women, Mrs. Lester McLean, Jr. Construction has begun on Knight Hall, a classroom building, and Avery Hall, the library.

The Congregationalist

Vol. CX No. 42 October 15, 1925

Copyright by Harris & Ewing

The Lincoln Memorial in Washington

UNIVERSALISTS OF TODAY

By John van Schaick, Jr.

CONGREGATIONAL LEADERS IN WASHINGTON

By Walter A. Morgan

THE PROPOSED MERGER

By a Layman of the Committee of Twelve

The Church Extension Boards

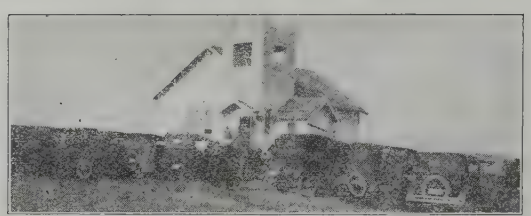
Your Home Missionary Representatives in America

¶ Homeward bound from a Mission Sunday School.

(The Sunday School Society organized 115 schools for you in twelve months.)

¶ A Union Theological Seminary student in his summer field in Colorado.

(The Home Missionary and Sunday School Societies employed 129 college men and women in the summer of 1925.)



¶ The new Templeton Church, South Dakota. The old building was destroyed in the tornado of June 14, 1924, when nearly all the barns and windmills in the community were blown down. (The Church Building Society helped erect 135 churches, large and small, city and country, last year.)

Home Office: 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City

The Congregationalist

Continuing The Recorder and The Advance

Vol. CX | October 15, 1925 | No. 42

14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.
$3.00 per year

Copyright, 1925. All rights reserved
By the Congregational Publishing Society.

Entered at the Post Office in Boston as second-class matter.

19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.
10 cents per copy

Editor-in-Chief, Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D.
Managing Editor, Rolfe Cobleigh
News Editor, Miss Elizabeth G. White
Western Editor, Rev. R. W. Gammon, D.D.
Advertising and Circulation Manager, Kenneth S. Ballou

Contributing Editors for 1925

Rev. G. Glenn Atkins, D.D., First Church, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. William E. Barton, Litt.D., Oak Park, Ill.
Pres. James A. Blaisdell, D.D., Pomona College
Pres. Kenyon L. Butterfield, LL.D., Michigan Agricultural College
Pres. Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Chicago Theological Seminary
Rev. Harry P. Dewey, D.D., Plymouth Church, Minneapolis
Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, D.D., Central Church, Atlanta, Ga.
Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D., Broadway Tabernacle, New York
Pres. Irving Maurer, D.D., Beloit College
Hon. William E. Sweet, Denver, Col.
Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, D.D., First Church, Tacoma, Wash.
Pres. Mary E. Woolley, Litt.D., Mount Holyoke College

(The Table of Contents will be found on the inside back cover page.)

The Editorial Outlook

For How Much Do We Count?

FOR how much do we Congregationalists really count in the life of America and in the present phase of world ideals and activities? We ask the question with no implication of pessimism, but none the less in the spirit of definite challenge to scrutiny and testing. Over in England Nonconformity has been taking stock with itself with surprising results in candid confession. An article by J. Crowlesmith, J. P., in the British Weekly on "The Lost Confidence of Nonconformity" has occasioned in that paper much interesting correspondence. Mr. Crowlesmith has deplored "the absence of a virile Nonconformity" at a time when the world is in a state of flux. "It is not too much to say," he writes, "that robust Protestantism, the bulwark of the British nation, is today being threatened by the changes that confront us." He thinks that the public force represented in what became recognized as "the Nonconformist conscience" must make itself more evident in the presence of social evils, particularly the evils of the drink traffic, gambling, social impurity, and slum life. "The Free Churches," he says, "have lost their faith in politicians and their interest in politics—and this is all to the good." Supreme interest in the Kingdom of God must replace this trust in politicians. But it is to be observed that when he speaks of the type of leadership that is needed he refers to men like Hugh Price Hughes and John Clifford, the latter of whom, at least, was very much in politics. One is not deeply impressed with Mr. Crowlesmith's article; it is the sort of thing that is easily put together out of rather superficial observation, and it lacks sharpness of definition and discriminating judgment. Its chief value has been in its title and in the comment, either solicited or unsolicited, which it has evoked.

Dr. J. D. Jones' Frank Comment

DR. J. D. Jones, of Bournemouth, at the request of the British Weekly, discusses the matter with frankness and with an incisiveness that make his words worth pondering in relation to our own situation in America. Dr. Jones says that if by "the lost confidence of Nonconformity" were meant that Nonconformity had lost faith in its own distinctive witness, he should be disposed partially to agree with the indictment, and he should lay the blame for this poverty and tepidity of the faith of Free Churchmen to the lack of knowledge of their own principles. He thinks that they are likely to be "but poor defenders of our Protestant heritage because they do not know what Protestantism really means." But Dr. Jones likewise expresses the opinion that Nonconformity has suffered a decay in its public influence.

It is not [says Dr. Jones] that the Free Churches have changed their views about drink and gambling and impurity. They are as inflexibly opposed to these things and as steadfast in their witness against them as ever they were. But somehow they are not the force to be reckoned with that they used to be, and the leaders of public action and policy pay little heed to them. The neglect with which the daily newspapers treat our great Free Church Assemblies is a symptom. They neglect them because they think they have ceased to count.

Dr. Jones thinks the causes of this loss of public influence are complex. The new alignments in political life, the post-war malaise, and the fact that the great controversies of the hour are economic rather than religious, all have much to do with an eclipse of influence which he evidently regards as temporary. He places little faith in the demand for "leaders," who, he remarks, are born, not made. He thinks that there are signs of renewal of life in the Free Churches just now, and the way to recover public power is by way of a renewal of faith. "Once our own spiritual life is quickened," he writes, "and our belief in our own special witness is regained, power will come back."

Our own judgment would be that the weaknesses that have helped to occasion this loss of public power were evident a generation ago. Nonconformity failed to prepare adequately for the new day, and this is a part of the lesson for the Congregational Churches of America. There were some respects in which English Nonconformity of a generation ago could not see the woods for the trees, and that is apt to be a real danger at the present hour of the churches of like faith and fellowship in America.

In Brief

To merge or not to merge—that's the question!

* *

What Dr. van Schaick writes about the Universalists reads very much as if he were writing about some more Congregationalists.

* *

Why indeed should the National Council meet just as the churches are getting into the midst of their busy season? The suggestions that the dates be changed to spring or summer are worthy of consideration.

* *

For Moderator of the National Council, a layman, we are told. The choice may not be easy, when so much good material is available, but we cannot go wrong if the Council closes its eyes and draws forth any one of such laymen as a Butterfield, a Sweet, a Mills, a Cooper, a Babson, a Harwood, a Hyde, or—not forgetting our laywomen—a Woolley. And there are plenty of others.

Congregational Ideals in Modern American Life

By Ozora S. Davis, D.D., Contributing Editor

EVERY living institution or system of thought must be willing to submit to criticism and reconstruction if it is worthy of confidence. For more than three centuries the Congregational churches have been a potent force, quite beyond what their number and wealth would seem to warrant, in the life of the United States and of the entire world. Now, on the eve of the meeting of the National Council it is timely and pertinent to raise the question, What is the place and purpose of the so-called "Congregational way" in the thought and life of the United States? Mere reference to a long and noble service in the past yields no sufficient answer to the question. A study of the permanent characteristics of the Congregational faith and order is the only way in which to justify the continued appeal of these churches to the American people. If, as a result of such a survey, we discover that the Congregational ideal still has something to contribute to the developing life of America, we may present our cause with greater confidence to our generation.

The most obvious, although perhaps the least significant factor in the Congregational ideal, is its emphasis upon the democratic construction of all life. The early Separatists organized their congregations to express the principle that the brotherhood of believers possesses within itself all the powers and rights that are necessary for the creation of their own institutions and the administration of all their common affairs that lie outside the fullest recognition of individual freedom and responsibility. When the first permanent Congregational Church found itself called upon in the person of its stronger section, that emigrated to America in the Mayflower, to draw up the basis of the civil state, they built their political structure confidently on the basis of a church, gathered and governed according to their religious ideals. They gave the Town Meeting to the communities of America in a similar way. More deeply than any other group in proportion to their numbers the Congregationalists have set the stamp of their religious democracy upon the economic, political, and social ideals of America. They still hold their unbroken faith in the permanent validity of democracy.

It is easy to affirm that the people of the United States believe in democracy, grounded in human nature and to be applied in all departments of human life. They fought in the greatest war of history "to make the world safe for democracy." But do they trust this principle as thoroughly as their words would seem to indicate? Even a careless study of the ruling principles in American industry, social relations, community, state or national administration, and especially in international vision, reveals a fundamental distrust of this principle which must be a fertile source of dismay. The great democracy of the Western world is not only sadly un-democratic, but many of its most forceful leaders are not committed in their inmost conviction to the democratic ideal. On this first count, therefore, it is clear that the Congregational Churches still have an essential contribution to make to the development of the democratic idealism of the United States. It is equally clear that the first step in making this contribution is for the Congregationalists themselves to become more deeply convinced of the validity of democracy and more thoroughly committed to its application to the entire life of mankind.

A second essential factor in the Congregational ideal is its unfettered faith in freedom of mind and conscience in all the activities of the individual. Our fathers followed St. Paul in his impassioned and, as they believed, inspired championship of freedom. This meant a reaffirmation of the Protestant idea of the right of private judgment. It flowered in their loyalty to John Robinson's command that they should follow the light of truth which was still to break forth from God's holy word. This brought our fathers to their efforts to provide an ducated leadership for church and state and to take heir primacy in America as founders and supporters of chools and colleges. They believed that ignorance is ot the mother of devotion but is its most relentless foe. hey did not fear where truth would lead them but feared nly that their ruling principles should not be altoether true. Reason was, in their conception of it, a ift of God, to be used in religion as much as in scienific or historical study.

Surely it must be perfectly obvious that just now in he United States there is exigent need of a renewal f the Congregational faith in freedom and in the place f knowledge in religion. At a time when one may hear n every side the claim that full and final authority, apal, doctrinal, and Biblical, is what the religious life eeds, we ought to hear some brave, inspiring voices mid the shouting which issues from those who are panic tricken over what was once called "the faintest rustle f heresy among the dry leaves of theology." Someone ust dare to say that accurate scholarship never did eligious truth an injury and that the greatest possible enace to true religion is the endeavor to obscure it or o fetter the free mind with the shackles of authority hich denies the rights of reason. It hardly needs to e said that such a service cannot be rendered to the eligious world today by Congregationalists until they emselves are fully convinced of the validity of this facor in the faith of their fathers.

A third and probably the supreme factor in the Conregational ideal is the spiritual interpretation of life as xpressed in the Christian religion, which found definite xpression in a passionate purpose and sacrificial proram to bring this to the whole world and thus answer he prayer, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on arth as it is in heaven." Our Pilgrim faith rests in this onception of life, this noble interpretation of the unierse. In response to it our fathers undertook to infuse ll life with this ideal. They insisted that man was a ilgrim and a sojourner here; that he had "a never-dying oul to save and fit it for the skies." Against the charge f "otherworldliness" supposed to lurk in such an ideal ne needs cite only for disproof the rugged practicalities of the Pilgrim character. The dream produced the New England housewife and the Congregational pioneer, who kept a house in order or conquered prairie and forest in the sense that spiritual values were uppermost and all was within the scope of the will of God. Never was a finer example of what is called the "practical mystic."

And here we stand at the throbbing heart of this generation whose practical achievements mark it outstanding in the history of mankind. Its discoveries and inventions have placed comforts and conveniences within the grasp of the humblest citizen which make his daily life agreeable and satisfying beyond that of kings in the ancient world. No one is audacious or resourceful enough to prophesy what the end of this business will be. This, however, is certain: it brings with it a tendency to interpret life in the terms of the physical and material and to obscure and neglect the spiritual conception of the universe which alone can give it final worth. The only true evaluation of the life of man is that which construes it in terms of spiritual reality. The inventor and engineer, the statesman and captain of industry, the scholar and the scientist, all make their contribution; then come the poet and the prophet, the teacher and the seer, to reveal a deeper and validating reality which is as necessary as foundation or keystone to the stability of the arch of civilization.

At this point, by history and present possession, our Congregational people stand empowered to render their particular service. They possess a message, an outlook, a way of life, of which our restive age stands poignantly in need. The coming meeting of our National Council will not render its crowning service to our churches and to the nation unless, high and clear above all its transaction of business, its exhortations and its programs, is heard this deeper summons to a spiritual mission to our country and our age, renewing with Apostolic fervor the old message and program, in terms suited to living men today. If this can be done, then the sons of the Pilgrims, reinterpreting the message of their fathers, will do for their generation what the brave, heroic and altogether human men and women of the past so nobly achieved.

A Simple Faith the Only Foundation

THE implications and practical recognitions of a simple Christian faith are seldom adequately realized. Wherever in men real greatness and goodness are conpicuous, it will be found that no matter how elaborate ay be the social, political, or religious creed that they rofess the real foundations of life and conduct are omparatively simple. This is manifest in the way in hich the world comes to esteem men for their greatess and goodness regardless of the wide variety of their utward allegiances and professions. If we could estabsh in the fundamentals of theory and practice the simle elements that are found upon analysis to occupy the upreme place, we should do much to save the church nd the world from the things that keep men apart and hat constitute the great impediments of progress.

We have expressed recently the hope that in the coming National Council Meeting the supreme note, and the note that is most clearly heard throughout the nation, will be that of the witness of a simple faith. Let us see how this witness of simple faith underlies and overspreads all the deep and wide activities of the Christian Church.

Underlies All Sound Evangelism

A simple faith lies at the very heart of all adequate and sound evangelism. No matter what their theologies or theories, the thing that has commended the work of great evangelists has been their emphasis upon the supreme fact of the grace of God. D. L. Moody is a conspicuous example of this fact. Mr. Moody as a theologian was relatively unimportant. The theological backgrounds of his work were in the realm of Calvinism, but the practical factor that gave reality and a large degree of permanency to the work of this great evangelist was that he understood human need and the fullness and power of divine love in meeting that need. The Gospel of Jesus Christ after all, whatever forms or expressions it may assume, finds its power and validity in one central fact—the fact that at the heart of this universe of sin, sorrow, and trouble there is a loving Father, of whose goodness human fatherhood is but the imperfect symbol.

The church's own faith and vision, her power in meeting the world's need and in winning men to Christ, depend ultimately upon the simple faith and conviction with which the church can make real the optimism of the love and grace of God. It is this that Paul seems to have had in mind when he said, We are saved by hope. If we are living in a world that is ultimately dark, with no soul of love and goodness at its center, there is no gospel for a race of needy men. To believe and proclaim that God is light, and life, and love transcends all else. The more we feel the central need of such a gospel the more will such simple faith create that strong, effective evangelism that springs from the irresistible impulse, Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel.

Underlies All Christian Service

The witness of a simple faith similarly underlies all Christian activities and world service. The love of Christ constraineth us becomes its supreme motto, and the man who goes forth to serve his fellowmen in the spirit of the Master takes very little account of the differences and prejudices out of which the world creates cleavages and barriers. The simpler and clearer the Christian faith, the more purely and completely the soul is moved by this constraining love of Christ, the more fully and quickly all such barriers disappear. The ignorant, the selfish, the criminal, the weak, and helpless become as much the objects of Christian love, as those to whom that love binds one in community of spirit. Was it not something of this simple faith in practice that Browning had in mind when he said, All service ranks the same with God.

Underlies All Social Regeneration

In all plans of social reconstruction and regeneration the foundations ultimately rest upon a simple faith. The doctrinaire Socialist may have his elaborate theories that correspond to elaborate theologies, and the Socialist Movement has shown a corresponding tendency towards making these systems the basis of the test of orthodoxy. The bigotry and sectarianism that have developed in nineteen centuries of church history are not deeper than the bigotry and sectarianism that have developed in a very short space of time in connection with modern social movements. But ultimately, from whatever standpoint one approaches the social problem, there will be found in the man who dreams of a better age, and who persistently works for it, the dominance of a comparatively simple faith. The Socialist, to whatever particular type of Socialism he may adhere, in general sees the hope of bringing the world to its social haven through the substitution, by some means, of co-operation for competition. The philosophical anarchist, at the opposite extreme, finds the hope of establishing a new society in freedom, and in the improvement of individual men.

These types in the revolutionary movement represent in their sphere a simple social faith. The Christian, if he has a true social outlook and a clear constructive social gospel, must find it in a faith equally fundamental and simple. What is this simple social faith of Christianity? Is it other than that that Jesus has expressed in the Lord's Prayer, in the petition that we may be forgiven as we forgive, and that God's will may be done in earth as it is in heaven. The whole social activity of the Christian Church as a power in world regeneration and reconstruction depends ultimately upon the simplicity of a faith centered in the belief that the law of God's grace toward men is the law that men must exercise in their relationship with one another.

We shall never reconstruct politics or economics in a Christian way until we come to see that Christian relationships lie at the very heart of the problem. This does not mean that Christian relationships will in themselves create new politics or new economic situations. There are political laws and economic laws that must be regarded, but godly relationships of men must constitute alike the aim and the motive power through which men seek to manifest inventive social genius. The highest social gospel is nothing other than the Gospel in its simplicity.

Underlies All Progress Toward Unity

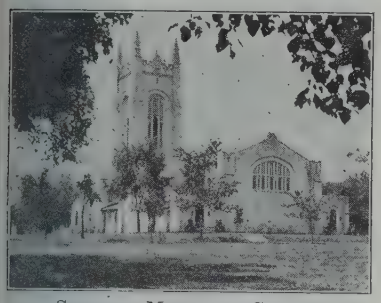
It is particularly true that all vital progress toward Christian unity centers in this matter of a simple faith. Take, for instance, such a movement as that that has created the United Church of Canada. Ostensibly and technically, that union is upon the basis of a very elaborate creed—a creed of twenty articles. What has been the real actual motive of that union? In all the propaganda concerning union one heard very little about the creed. The union would still have been in the air if men had first of all established this elaborate creed and had given it to the country, saying, "Here is a creed upon which we are all agreed; let us get together upon its basis." On the contrary, it was assumed that the churches were getting together because of their fidelity to Christ, and because of the prompting of the Christian spirit towards unity in common tasks and purposes. Shall we have the courage some day to assert in the very standards and constitutions of the church the great motive power of the simple elemental fact of Christ without reference to all this elaboration in systems and doctrines, in which few men really believe, and which fewer men understand?

It is the progress of simple faith in every part of the church today that constitutes the hope of union. It is the only thing that could make union worth while and effective, and its establishment upon any other basis would leave the Christian world in quite as serious a condition as that which exists through unholy division.

Thus, throughout the whole area of Christian life and activity, the one supreme dominant need is the clear, unequivocal, unhampered witness of a simple faith. Let us repeat that the world's situation, no less than the call of Christ, gives to the Congregational fellowship profound opportunity from every point of view; we shall attain our highest mission in emphasizing the witness of a simple faith.

From Our Western Editor

The Saturday Evening Post, that Ford of journalism, had an article some months ago entitled, "Scholarly Beggars." I happened to be spending that week-end at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., and President Cowling confided to me that four of his friends had called his attention to the article soon after the paper appeared. It gave in concrete terms the troubles of college presidents of our day. It showed how completely the president of the privately endowed schools must be a money-getter. It estimated that it was not necessary for him, first of all, to be an educator, but that with all his getting he must get money. The article was evidently written by some one who had come to have a real appreciation of the hard service which the college presidents of our day must render.



Skinner Memorial Chapel
Carleton College

Dr. Cowling's friends must have thought that he measures up to the title of the article, "Scholarly Beggar." He does, with special emphasis upon each word. This visit to Carleton gave me a new appreciation of the great contribution that these "scholarly beggars" are making to the progress and welfare of the world. When Dr. Cowling came to Carleton it measured up well with other colleges in its class. Many changes have taken place since then, but Dr. Cowling has kept the college in the forefront, so that the work it does is undoubtedly equal to that done by the best New England colleges. A tremendous amount of sacrifice and high-grade service had gone into Carleton College before he came and he, as a wise master builder, has built upon the foundation that others laid.

He has not hesitated to secure the best possible men for his faculty. He determined from the beginning to pay salaries and to create a college that would secure real educators and he has gotten them. The doing of these things only, is not enough to insure good teachers—some one must have the ability to select them. A visit to Carleton impresses one with the fact that the college is a real educational institution. The student who is able to sneak through Carleton without doing good work will have a much harder time in the sneaking than he would have if he did the task assigned. The faculty is large in number and outstanding in ability in leadership.

The material equipment of the college, much of it secured under Dr. Cowling's administration, is cause for congratulation. The new Skinner Chapel is attractive without and within; it easily lends itself to aid in worship and is architecturally a great success. The new dormitories are remarkable for their adequacy, their convenience and for the home life they give the young people, and the prices charged are remarkably reasonable. The extensive campus is being beautified by a landscape artist and promises to be one of the finest in America.

* *

Baptists and Congregationalists are affiliated in the support of Carleton College and the supporters take seriously the task of keeping the religious life of the college strong and helpful. A considerable number of ministers are members of the faculty and apparently the college administration believes that they are an asset in both scholarship and in religious leadership. The chapel services are religious in the best sense of the term and the vespers on Sunday are meant to bring to the college the best religious leadership that the country affords. These services are broadcasted. In addition the students are encouraged to attend the church of their choice in Northfield. The administration intends to keep the college on a middle ground between sectarian institutions, that must carry on religious instruction with a certain bias, and the state university, which can offer no instruction in religion. It holds that the major problems before America and the world today undoubtedly depend upon religion for their ultimate solution and it does not expect that the interests and understanding of students will develop in the field of religion without instruction any more than in any other field of human interest. The college frankly accepts the results of modern scholarship in science and religion. It aims to make its teaching distinctly and aggressively Christian in atmosphere and influence and offers its students training in religion, including Biblical literature, philosophy and psychology of religion, history of religion, methods and principles of religious education, Christian missions, etc. A number of the leading teachers are those giving instruction in the field of religion.

* *

The student body at Carleton is high grade. This visit led me to do again what I have often done in visiting colleges, during the last ten years, contrast student bodies of this day with those of my own college years and I found myself confirmed in the conclusion that taking everything into account the students of this day are in general higher grade than those of my day. It seems that the students at Northfield are made up of three quite distinct groups, which, however, completely merge in the life of the college. Apparently about a third of them come from the homes of people who work, another third from the homes of professional folks, especially ministers, and the remainder from the families of the well-to-do and the wealthy. The college leaders say that they are not able to distinguish among the groups, after the young people have been in college a little while. It happens often at Carleton, that the students who came from the homes of working people are found in the leadership. A large number earn their own way in whole or in part, but so far as I could see this makes no difference in the democracy of the school.

The financial burden that Dr. Cowling and other college presidents carry is heavy. In May, 1920, the General Education Board offered Carleton $400,000 on condition that it raise an additional $800,000 for endowment and provide for all expenditures made for buildings and equipment and for current expenses during the campaign period. This offer involved the college in raising the following amounts, in addition to the $400,000 promised by the Board:

For Endowment	$800,000.00
For Buildings and Equipment .	473,431.31
For Current Expenses	615,582.22
	$1,889,013.53

Of this amount about $1,540,000 has been secured, leaving a balance of $350,000 yet to be gotten. This means that in addition to raising the large sums of money needed for buildings and for endowment, Dr. Cowling must secure $75,000 a year for current expenses. He must at the same time give educational leadership to the college and hold his place in the field of education. I was reminded of the demands made upon him, by the fact that he gave an outstanding paper as president of the R. E. A. at the meeting held in Milwaukee last spring.

The business manager of Carleton has made an interesting study of the cost per student, the receipts per student, the per cent of current cost paid by each student, and the salary budget for fifteen years. Space prevents giving the whole table, but the figures of the first and last years will indicate the trend.

Scoville Memorial Library
Carleton College

Year	Cost per Student	Receipts per Student
1909-10	$170.59	$ 60.92
1923-24	413.31	258.31

Number of Students	Per Cent of Current Cost paid by students	Salaries
298	36%	$ 28,918.17
776	63%	211,955.87

If one were to take into account the mere material contribution that these "scholarly beggars" are making to the cause of education, they would deserve great praise. When

(Continued on page 535)

Congregational Leaders in Washington

Who's Who Among Laymen in the Capital

By Rev. Walter A. Morgan

Minister of Mount Pleasant Church, Washington

WASHINGTON Congregationalism is not significant because of its numerical strength. In a city of half a million souls, and the capital of America, one might expect the church of the Pilgrims and Puritans to rank high among those churches that have grown strong in numbers. The reasons why we are outvoted in the church ballot are evident. Washington is largely a Southern city in sentiment and religion. The church of the Puritan and the Emancipator and of liberal theology has had definite prejudices to overcome. Great social prestige in the old days belonged to the culture of the Cavalier, and social traditions live long. Then the democratic form of government and church customs of the Congregationalists have not tended to develop a tense denominational loyalty. Strong families of the inheritance who have come to Washington to live easily have drifted into the churches of other denominations where social prejudices have not mitigated against a strong church development. No one true to the traditions of the fathers would have principle set aside for the sake of numbers. But only four white and three colored churches of our order are evidences of the fact that the way has not been an easy one.

WILLIAM KNOWLES COOPER
General Secretary, Washington Y. M. C. A.

But numbers never have been the test of worth. The things our churches have stood for in Washington are of supreme value to the nation's life. Principles outlive generations and truth is stronger than time. The old First Church, standing at Tenth and G Streets, long has been a center of religious democracy and spiritual leadership. The other churches, in just as great a degree in their own ways, have been as a leaven in the conservative lump of conflicting traditions, ideals that go to make up the city's religious life. At the center of the nation's life and in momentous days our churches have played a part that the entire fellowship can point to with pride.

Churches, of course, find expression in ideals incarnate in men and women. The old days had their leaders. The present generation honors their memory. The Editors of The Congregationalist have sent me a hurry call to send them the pictures and a bit of the biography of several of our laymen who are prominent in our church life today, and especially of those who are helping to get ready for the entertainment of the National Council. Time does not permit a thorough survey or an ample treatment of such a personal matter.

Of course, President and Mrs. Coolidge have honored our fellowship. Other officials in high places are among our members. But these come and go, and, like lightning, seldom strike twice in the same place. We glory because they bring our churches into the dazzling light and we must so labor that we shall not be left in shadows when they have departed.

Council Committee Chairmen

John D. Northrop, as chairman of the Entertainment Committee, will see to it that you have lodging and breakfasts while you are in Washington, providing you are a voting delegate and you have made application before October first. His task is a big one and he is tackling it with vigor. A Congregationalist by adoption and a loyal member and deacon of the First Church, he is one of the men we look to when we want results. For a number of years Mr. Northrop was employed professionally in Equador and Peru. At present he is Assistant Chief of the Conservation Branch of the United States Geological Survey.

JOHN DEWOLF NORTHROP

Roy Smith is chairman of the National Council committee to make arrangements for special trips for the Council memb and friends, as well as to make plans their pleasure and profit while in Washi ton. He is arranging excursions to vari places of interest. His committee will able to furnish detailed information c cerning "where" and "how" to go to

REV. J. STANLEY DURKEE, Ph.D.
President of Howard University who may inquire. Mr. Smith is assist to the Chief of the Washington office of Panama Canal. As chairman of the Bo of Trustees of Ingram Church, he now engineering a campaign to provide a parsonage for that church. No man bri to the service of our entire fellowshi finer spirit of consecration or a keener sire to make Congregationalism a power the city.

Norton M. Little, chairman of the M Committee of the National Council, co from a long line of Presbyterian forbe Numerous uncles, a grandfather and m relatives of the same name, and other na as well, were Presbyterian clergymen. Little's father, now rich in over fifty ye of service as a Presbyterian clergyman, g him a background of love for church w As one who has been led further into light, and as a deacon in the Mount Pl ant Church, director of its large chorus, who brings to the councils of the denomi tion the judgment of one of Washingt leading realtors, he enriches our denomi tional life and makes more sure its fut prosperity.

Laymen of Influence

Arthur P. Black has for years served teacher of the large Bible class at Ing Church. A modest man of long experie and fine ability, the denomination as a wh is beginning to discover his worth. year, as president of the Congregational , he helped plan and carry through a s of meetings that gave the club the year of its history. Mr. Black is sec- y to Senator Edwards of New Jersey. loyal support has been a large factor lving Ingram the strong place it holds ie city.

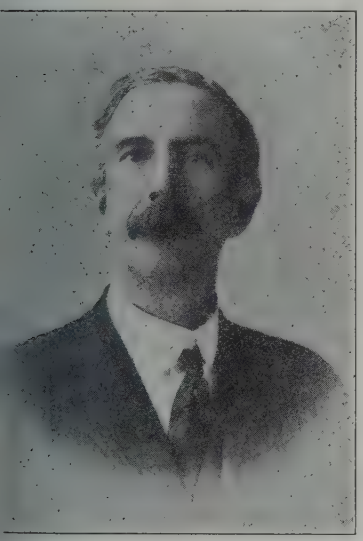
on. Wayne B. Wheeler is recognized to he outstanding world authority upon ers pertaining to the Prohibition Amend- and law enforcement. As legal attor- of the Anti-Saloon League he has had atch brains with the greatest legal tal- that money can secure. Not only has eld his own, but the steady progress ie sentiment that made the Eighteenth ndment an ideal and then a law shows a master mind was at work. He is ember of the Mount Pleasant Church and gular attendant when the demands of own work do not require him to be king in some church elsewhere in rica.

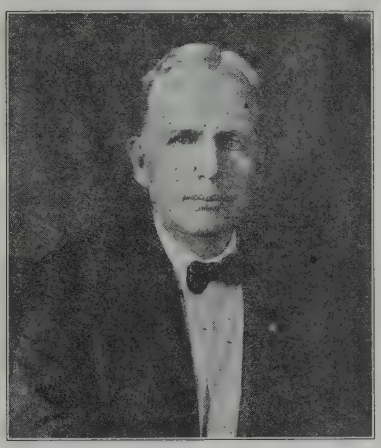
illiam Knowles Cooper, General Secre- of the Washington Y. M. C. A., is a



Dr. C. G. Abbot
Assistant Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution

l man to catalogue. No man in the city es upon more boards or gives himself e unreservedly to good works. While ember of our rapidly growing church Cleveland Park, his activities extend to y denomination in the city. His expe- ce in country-wide Y. M. C. A. work es him an invaluable counselor in our denominational life. Many of the dele- s to the National Council will visit the M. C. A. just a few blocks from the Con- ion Hall. They will find an institu- serving thousands of young men. The development of the past and the ex- ive plans for the future, involving the ending of several millions of dollars, are ely possible because of the brain and rt of Mr. Cooper.

rthur D. Call, a Washington lay dele- to the Council, is a descendant of the blood and traditions of our Pilgrim h. As secretary of the American Peace Society and as editor of the Advocate of Peace, he takes a high place as a thinker and writer upon international affairs. As secretary of the American Section of the International Interparliamentary Union, he

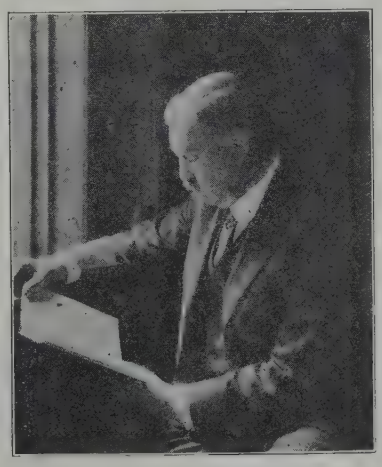


Copyright, Underwood & Underwood
Arthur Deerin Call
Editor of the "Advocate of Peace"

has had the duty of planning and carrying through the convention of the parliamentarians of the world which meets in Washington just before the coming of the National Council. Two hundred and seventy-five representatives of forty-one world parliaments, not including the United States, are being entertained as the guests of our government, for which $50,000 was appropriated by Congress. Mr. Call is a member and warm supporter of Mount Pleasant Church. In my judgment, the Council could honor Washington and secure the services of a layman of the highest order by electing this man to be its Moderator.

The Two Chief Chaplains

Our city denominational life is enriched through the coming to live among us of the two chief chaplains of the Army and Navy. Chief Chaplain Evan W. Scott, of the Navy, is a graduate of Marietta College and Yale



Edwin E. Slosson
Secretary of Science Service

School of Religion. He served for seventeen years as chaplain in various navy posts and on the high seas. Rising steadily in the ranks, he was honored four years ago by being brought to Washington as ranking chaplain of the navy. As a member of Cleveland Park Church, he has entered with enthusiasm into the work of all our churches. As chairman of the local committee making arrangements for the entertainment of the Congregational young people who are coming to Washington for the week end, he is a busy man. No finer choice could be made for this important service.

Col. John T. Axton is Chief of Chaplains in the United States Army. With a practical experience in Y. M. C. A. work, as a young man he early entered the army as a chaplain. His rise was rapid and his distinguished service during the World War brought him the promotion of Colonel and Chief of Chaplains, residing at Washington. As a member of Cleveland Park Church he has had a large share in shaping its policy and life. A reappointment for four more years assures us that he will continue to be an active force in Washington Congregationalism.

Esch, Tufts, Abbot, and Slosson

Hon. John J. Esch, ex-congressman from Wisconsin, and member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, comes from fine old

Major William O. Tufts
Chairman Housing and Equipment Committee for National Council

German stock. His father was a clergyman of Wisconsin in the earlier days. Early in life Mr. Esch joined the Congregational Church of his home town in Wisconsin and has been for years allied with the work of our churches. As one of the newer members of Mt. Pleasant and as a deacon, he is looked to as one of the spiritual assets of our common church life. A modest man who goes his ways in gentleness, he is the kind of a layman who makes for the spiritual power that builds the kingdom. As a speaker upon the National Council program, he will be heard by many of our delegates.

Major William O. Tufts, a World War veteran, is chairman of the Committee on Housing and Equipment. Major Tufts served twenty years with the Geological Survey, National Park Service, United States Army, and in the 29th Engineers overseas. At present he is at the head of the Washington branch of Rand McNally Company. As superintendent of the Mount Pleasant church school and as deacon in the Mount Pleasant Church, he is one of the fine laymen who give tone and worth to our denominational life.

Charles G. Abbot is assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and director of the government astrophysical observatory. As a world authority upon astronomy and

NORTON M. LITTLE
Chairman National Council Music Committee

an original investigator in the new field of making practical use of heat derived from the sun, Dr. Abbot takes a high place among men of science. As an officer in the First Church, he has been one of our most stalwart laymen.

Edwin E. Slosson is secretary of Science Service, an independent organization endowed for the promotion of science. As author of Creative Chemistry and numerous other books upon scientific and literary subjects, he has earned a unique place in the world of letters and science. Endowed with the mind of the investigator and the genius of the story teller, he possesses the exceedingly rare art of putting profound truths in simple language. For over two hundred years there has been a Congregational Deacon Slosson, and in Mount Pleasant Church the inheritance is being administered most nobly. The mind of the scientist and the heart of the Christian will reveal themselves in Sermons by a Chemist, a book by Dr. Slosson that will be published this autumn.

And what shall we say of Dr. J. Stanley Durkee, president of Howard University, and a deacon in the First Church; or Dean D. Butler Pratt and Prof. William C. Gordon, of Howard University, and Mount Pleasant Church, and the long line of business and scientific men who make up the rank and file of all our churches? Would that a separate article might be sought that would attempt to portray our Congregational women who through years have carried on in our common interests. Space does not permit the mentioning of their names. But the writer takes off his hat to their loyalty and devotion. On the edge of the South they keep alive the spirit of the Pilgrim. In almost numberless laboratories they carry on the patient investigation that makes modern civilization possible and human life secure. If life's crowns are for the faithful, then Washington is rich in the royalty of great souls.

Notable Washington Congregationalists

Supplementing Mr. Morgan's Article

Harry R. Adams, Electrical Engineer, Plymouth.
Carleton R. Ball, Sc.D., Agronomist, Dept. of Agriculture, First.
Elmer D. Ball, Ph.D., Research Scientist, First.
Will C. Barnes, Assistant U. S. Forester, Writer Saturday Evening Post, etc., First.
Charles H. Beall, realtor, Ingram.
Claude N. Bennett, President Congressional Information Bureau, First.
Col. Claude H. Birdseye, U. S. A., Topographical Engineer, Mt. Pleasant.
Lyman J. Briggs, Ph.D., Physicist, U. S. Bureau of Standards, First.
Mrs. Anna C. Brooks, concert soloist (wife of pastor), Lincoln.
Rev. Sterling N. Brown, D.D., Professor, School of Religion, Howard University, Lincoln.
David F. Carll, Vice-President Capitol Traction Co., Mt. Pleasant.
Wm. E. Chamberlain, Ph.D., Chemist, Bureau of Engraving, First.
Mrs. Wm. E. Chamberlain, ex-Pres. Woman's City Club, Pres. Housekeepers' Alliance, First.
Lucien Chaney, Sc.D., statistician, explorer, author, First.
Edward T. Clark, personal secretary to the President, First.
Prof. Wm. L. Corbin, Librarian, Smithsonian Institution.
John F. De Forest, Associated Press, Mt. Pleasant.
Leonard DeGast, Associate Gen. Secy. Y. M. C. A., First.
T. C. Dulin, merchant, Mt. Pleasant.
Miss Mary L. Europe, musician, teacher of music in High School, Lincoln.
David L. Fairchild, Sc.D., Botanist, Dept. of Agriculture, First.
Mrs. A. M. Farrington, writer, Mt. Pleasant.
Fred L. Fishback, lawyer, lecturer, First.
Mrs. M. Ross Fishburn, Pastor's Assistant, Mt. Pleasant.
Mrs. J. W. Frizzell, ex-Pres. Federation of Women's Clubs, Mt. Pleasant.
Mrs. Lorin S. Gates, former missionary to India, First.
James W. Gidley, Ph.D., Ass't. Curator U. S. National Museum, Mt. Pleasant.
Clyde Glaff, concert pianist, Plymouth.
Harris P. Gould, M.S., Pomologist, Dept. of Agriculture, First.
James Francis Gregory, Professor, Miner Normal School, People's.
Frank N. Grigg, business executive and contractor for railroad equipment, Cleveland Park.
George W. Grice, undertaker, Lincoln.
Ruth G. D. Havens, editor, writer, First.
Hon. William S. Hill, Commissioner U. S. Shipping Board, First.
General Frank T. Hines, U. S. A., Director Veterans Bureau, First.
George W. Hines, Head of Commercial Dept. Howard University, Lincoln.
Frank H. Hitchcock, formerly Postmaster General, First.
Leonard F. Houghton, banker, Ingram.
Hon. Harry E. Hull, Commissioner General of Immigration, First.
Hon. Wm. M. Jardine, Secretary of Ag ture, First.
Lyman F. Kebler, Ph.D., Bureau of C istry, Mt. Pleasant.
C. E. La Vigne, Executive Director Was ton Convention Bureau, First.
Willis T. Lee, Ph.D., Geologist, Mt. Plea
Frank Littell, Sc.D., Astronomer and M matician Naval Observatory, Wash., land Park.
George R. Mansfield, Ph.D., Geologist, Pleasant.
Robert B. McClean, journalist, general ager Consolidated Press of Washin Cleveland Park.
J. M. P. Metcalf, D.D., ex-Pres. Talla College, First.
Jesse H. Mitchel, lawyer and realtor, Lin
Prof. Edward L. Montgomery, Principal, mount School, First.
James L. Neill, lawyer and realtor. Of National Equal Rights League, Plymouth
Prof. Charles Noble, D.D., Prof. Emer Grinnell College, Mt. Pleasant.
L. D. Norsworthy, Ph.D., educator, Mt. Pl ant.
Henry T. Offterdinger, merchant, First.
Mrs. Sylvia W. Olden, concert soloist tor's wife), Plymouth.
Colonel Osborn H. Oldroyd, Curator Oldr Collection on Lincoln, First.
T. T. Parker, M.D., Lincoln.
Prof. Henry M. Paul, C.E., Astronor U. S. N., First.
William W. Peet, LL.D., long mission treasurer in Turkey, First.
Mrs. Susie Root Rhodes, Supervisor Dist Playgrounds, First.
William C. Ruediger, Ph.D., Dean, Geo Washington University, Mt. Pleasant.
Percy Russell, real estate, Mt. Pleasant.
Homer L. Shantz, Ph.D., Botanist, Dept. Agriculture, Mt. Pleasant.
Charles Shreve, realtor and lawyer, Clevel Park.
Rush D. Simmons, Chief U. S. Postal Insp tor, First.
Mrs. E. E. Slosson, Ph.D., author (wife scientist), Mt. Pleasant.
Arthur C. Smith, President Smith Storage Cleveland Park.
Emory B. Smith, Field Agent for Howard U versity, Lincoln.
William R. Smith, chorus director, New Y City and Washington, People's.
Miss Ellen M. Stone, former missionary in bania, First.
Mr. Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, Associate J tice, U. S. Supreme Court, First.
Charles H. Stephenson, statistician, P. Dept., Ingram.
Hon. Robert H. Terrell, Judge, Municip Court, Lincoln.
Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, educator, lecture Lincoln.
Hugh A. Thrift, President Washington Y. C. A.; Thrift Construction Co., First.
Thomas Walker, lawyer and realtor, Lincol
Ben F. Webster, realtor, Mt. Pleasant.
Edward L. Webster, Major, National Guar clerk, Pension Bureau, People's.
Hon. Frank White, Treasurer, U. S.
Edson L. Whitney, Ph.D., D.C.L., teacher, Pleasant.
Hon. Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy First.
John D. Wolcott, Ph.D., Librarian, U. Bureau of Education, First.

The Pastor Says: Money may be made such reckless waste of the highest values tha it cannot be disposed of later at a profit.

Universalists of Today

Who They Are and What They Believe

By John van Schaick, Jr.
Editor of the "Universalist Leader"

EDITORS' NOTE.—In view of the fact that overture from Congregationalists of thern California, looking to union be- en Congregationalists and Universalists, o be presented at the coming meeting of Congregational National Council, it has med to us appropriate to seek for our- ves, and for all who are interested, some horitative account of the Universalists. this we have turned most naturally to brother-editor and highly esteemed nd, Dr. John van Schaick, Jr. It should stated that Dr. van Schaick has prepared s article only at our urgent request, and is in the nature of an editorial exchange h no "official" significance on either side. ere could not be finer fellowship than t which now exists between the editorial ups of the "Universalist Leader" and "The ngregationalist." If such happy relations ld be established all along the line, we uld welcome the drawing together of the lowships that these organs represent. r observations have led us to the conclu- n that there are probably no two groups ywhere in the religious world today more ilar in temper and spirit than the Uni- salists and the Congregationalists. We ve always had a common polity, but prog- s in the Christian spirit has done much to ate a deeper bond of Christian likeness.] this contribution to The Congregational- ist were intended as an official expression the faith and practice of the Universalist urch some one else would have to write I have no official position authorizing to speak for the denomination. As editor our journal I have an opportunity to keep touch with all parts of the church. In at I say I shall try to be accurate, but realize that it is just as dangerous to say l Universalists are this or that" as it is make sweeping statements about Jews or rmans or Chinese or Congregationalists.

The one thing which characterizes practi- ly all Universalists is their faith that hat ought to be will be."

One of our writers for the encyclopedias scribes this as "the belief that in a sane l beneficent universe the primacy belongs Truth, Right, Love,—the supreme wers." Universalists are optimists. They only hope, but they confidently assert t this universe is so organized that good ll be the final result, that man has the wer to work out his own salvation and rn by doing it, and that he can no more l in doing it, things being as they are, n he can separate himself from the iverse.

This optimism might be attacked as "un- asoning" and "foolish" if it were not that is based upon faith in a God who is not nited either in Power or in Goodness. In study of Universalism past and present s is the nub of the whole matter. From beginning Universalists took their stand the character of God. That character y asserted to be Beneficent. Everything their theology started here. If God is a Father, man is His child and the race is one family. If He is infinitely wise and good, He will not fail with his universe or with any individual in it. If, like the Old Scotchman, we "postulate God," "immortality follows" and we do not need to indulge in endless speculations on that subject.

It may be true, as Dr. George A. Gordon says in Humanism in New England Theology, that "from the first Universalism was a great interest but it was an interest poorly served," that "the scorn which fell upon it because of its deficiencies in scholarship and intellectual power was justified," that there were those who attached themselves to it who had "easy ideas about sin," "shallowness about every question of conscience," "a disposition to convert the most worthy Judge Eternal into an infinite, indiscriminating sentimentalist." The fact remains, as Dr. Gordon fairly points out, that "the real question raised by Universalism was the moral character of God," their main contention "the love of God for every soul that He has made and His everlasting purpose to pursue with His redeeming grace all souls, in all worlds," and that "no interest of morality is endangered by the faith that the infinite works and works eternally for the perfect righteousness of every human soul."

BELIEF IN CHRIST

This same largeness of view characterized Universalist ideas of Christ. The purpose of his great mission included all souls within its scope. He must reign until he has put all enemies under his feet. If he is "lifted up" he "will draw all men" unto him.

Sometimes Universalists have stated their belief in Christ according to Trinitarian, and sometimes according to Unitarian formulas. There never was a time when a vast majority of Universalists did not give him some kind of primacy among the sons of men. Always he has been a special revelation of God. The Parable of the Prodigal Son and the Parable of the Lost Sheep have been held up in Universalist pulpits for a hundred and fifty years to teach the great Christian truth that God is not passive in the matter of the salvation of man, but is "a seeking, searching, striving God" "standing at the door of our lives and knocking," waiting to come in. But both the words Trinitarian and Unitarian are generally regarded by Universalists of today as inadequate to express the larger thought of God or the true gospel of Christ. Dimly they begin to see that He must be vastly more than the most devout man ever has been able to put into either word. And they accept "the spiritual authority and leadership of Jesus" because they are convinced he saw clearly both the Infinite Resources of God and the Infinite Possibilities in Man.

THEIR DOCTRINE OF HELL AND SALVATION

Universalists of today emphatically teach and preach a doctrine of hell. They claim that it is a more stern and severe doctrine than the old fire and brimstone teaching because of its inevitableness. There is "certainty" in it. No scapegoat can carry away the sin and punishment. No Savior can bear the penalty in our place. Each soul is under the operation of invariable law. The instant violation occurs penalty begins. It all is rooted in love. It has a divine purpose. But it is inescapable. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" is a favorite Universalist text. Another is, "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not go unpunished," and still another is, "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."

There never was a time when Universalists taught, as was charged, "that it makes no difference how a man lives here; at death all will go shouting off to glory."

It is true that some of the early Universalist preachers, as Dr. Gordon says, "spent too much force in denunciation of the orthodox God and not enough upon the character of the Universalist man." In the controversial preaching of those early times "they were more concerned getting all men to heaven than in getting them into a fit condition to enjoy heaven when they arrived there." Like the consigning of babies to everlasting hell, this sort of thing is ended.

With the old faith in "a God who can save all men" and "a God who will save all men," Universalists of today are emphasizing the human element in the process. "If all men are to be saved, we are to save them," they declare. "We must be about our Father's business." "God works through us." There is no tendency that I can see for Universalists to follow the so-called humanists and declare that the only God working in the Universe is the God in us,—a God who rises as man rises and who falls as man falls. Rather do they seem to be of the school which says, "With God man can do anything." Limitless reservoirs of truth, love, goodness, strength, surround man, seek to impinge upon him, and need only to have channels opened to rush in and fill him. Where man does not seek this Divine help in one way or another he stumbles and falls. In other words, they believe that man has the job to do but cannot possibly do it alone. Universalists are sure that this kind of dependence upon God does not weaken but strengthens the efforts man makes.

Universalists today probably will have to be classified among the more practical Christians. The application of Christ's principles here and now, the Christianizing of institutions and men, the abolition of war, the establishment of social justice, the relief of misery, the uniting of races and nations in constructive work, take the time and strength of modern Universalists much more than speculations about the hereafter.

Now I will tell briefly our history. I will give our creeds or professions of faith, even though they only hint at what we are. And I will also speak of some of our weaknesses.

We have not time to name all of those in the Christian Church who have held the doctrine that "it is the purpose of God through the Grace revealed by our Lord Jesus Christ to save every member of the human race from sin." Their name is legion and they go back to the beginnings of Christianity. Clement of Alexandria, Gregory of Nyssa, Origen, and probably Chrysostom and Jerome were Universalists in this sense of the word.

The modern Universalist Church grew largely out of the coming to this country from England of a man named John Murray. Down near Barnegat Bay, New Jersey, this man, broken-hearted, persecuted, and like Elijah under his juniper tree wanting only to lose himself in a vast wilderness, heard the voice of God uttered by a plain farmer and fisherman named Thomas Potter. It is one of the most beautiful stories in religious history and worth study in detail. Potter had built himself a little church in the pine woods. He made it free to preachers of every faith, but was sure "God would send him a preacher." He recognized Murray as the heaven-sent one, and kept after him until he made him preach. That brought Murray back into service, and from Gloucester and Boston, where he was settled, he went out on the missionary journeys which resulted in a new denomination. Hosea Ballou, who followed him in Boston, was perhaps our ablest thinker and logician and our most influential preacher. Our first Convention was held at Oxford, Mass., in 1785, our second in Philadelphia in 1790, and our third at Oxford in 1793.

Our early preachers and those who followed them came from the plain people. The Unitarian revolt against the harsher doctrines of Calvinism, which came a little later, was a revolt of the intellectual classes. Our people were led by farmers and tradesmen. That explains something of the contempt in which we were held, intellectually at least, by both the Calvinists and the Unitarians. It explains also in part the democratic, all-inclusive spirit which we believe we have a right to claim.

"You are the Methodists of liberals," said Dr. John W. Chadwick, the distinguished Unitarian, at one time. And amplifying, he spoke of our origin, our democracy, and the kind of emotional fervor we possess. "Universalists are intuitionalists," said Dr. C. Ellwood Nash in his Washington sermon of 1903. "Unitarians are rationalists. We know God because we experience Him. They know Him because they reason Him out." "Universalists," said Starr King, "think God is too good to damn man; Unitarians think man is too good to be damned." None of these generalizations or witticisms fully expresses the truth. All of them, however, hint at it.

There are some 100,000 of us, we have in round numbers 400 active churches, and we own some ten million dollars' worth of church buildings. Nobody has added up the invested funds of the churches and conventions, but the General Convention has over 800,000 dollars and the Massachusetts Convention 300,000 dollars in invested funds.

Declaration of Faith

We have a Declaration of Faith adopted in Boston in 1899 expressing belief in:

The Universal Fatherhood of God.
The Spiritual Authority and leadership of His Son, Jesus Christ.
The trustworthiness of the Bible as containing a revelation from God.
The certainty of just retribution for sin.
The final harmony of all souls with God.

Neither this nor any other precise form of words is required as a condition of fellowship, provided the above principles be professed.

This supplements the old Winchester Profession of a hundred and twenty-two years ago, an amazing document when we consider the theological narrowness and sternness of the age:

Article I. We believe that the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments contain a revelation of the character of God and of the duty, interest, and final destination of mankind.

Article II. We believe that there is one God, whose nature is Love, revealed in one Lord Jesus Christ, by one Holy Spirit of Grace, who will finally restore the whole family of mankind to holiness and happiness.

Article III. We believe that holiness and true happiness are inseparably connected, and that believers ought to be careful to maintain order and practise good works; for these things are good and profitable unto men.

Organization and Service

We are congregational in church government and bound together by a General Convention and by State Conventions, all of which are delegate bodies.

We have a President and a Board of Trustees of the General Convention, a General Superintendent, General Secretary, and a Treasurer of the general body and also corresponding officers for the states.

We are better organized and moving ahead better than at any time in our history.

The Five-Year Program of Universalist Laymen is the largest and most far-reaching general program we have attempted.

We have a small mission in Japan which has taken on a new lease of life recently. Through the extensive use of literature and through the assistance given to right-minded, progressive Japanese working in the spirit of Christ, whether Universalists or not, the Universalist Church is doing something to make the Christian ideal a force in that country.

In the matter of recognition of the service of liberals outside of so-called liberal churches, Universalists take a broad and intelligent position. In sermons, tracts, books, journals, and by their lives they find people of other names and creeds setting forth, often better than they can, their largest conceptions of the nature of God, the office of Christ, the responsibility of man, and the certainty that with God we shall not fail.

The true Universalist view is that which looks below the surface phrases or forms in which thought is put to its content.

The true Universalist spirit is that which recognizes as comrades all who want essentially the things we want.

Measurably at least we live up to these ideals.

Parables of Safed the Sag

The Parable of Milk and Cake

There was an handmaiden of the L who wrote an epistle unto me saying, W thou comest to the city wherein I re then do I desire that thou shalt lodg mine House; and if it be that Ket cometh also, that will be more than t as well.

And it came to pass that I visited city, and spake unto divers of the pe assembled in a Congregation, and I al in her Home. And she had prepared for a Prophet's Chamber wherein was a with Four Great Posts, Matthew, Mark, L and John, bless the Bed that I lie on, a Chair, and a Basin, and a Candlest And I lacked for nothing.

And at night she spake unto me, say Is there anything that thou wouldest lik eat before thou goest to Bed?

And I thanked her, and said, There nothing that I desire.

And she said, Wouldest thou not ea Slice of Cake and drink a Glass of Milk

And I said, Now thou speakest of M and of Cake, I pray thee, lead me to But be this known unto thee, that so gre hath Keturah indulged me that whenev eat One Slice of Cake, I am likely to for Two.

And she said, Thou shalt have Three.

And it was good Cake; likewise was Milk good. And I consumed them, and sl well, and rose in the morning with a Li and Thankful Heart.

Now I considered how I had refused manner of meat when she asked me i desired food, for indeed I desired it not, how I immediately fell for it when she s Cake and Milk. For here is something Psychology.

A man will walk into a Bookstore wher are a Thousand Books that it might pr him to read, and will walk out without b ing any of them, and then will subscribe a book he doth not want when an Ag shall call, and say, This is the One Gr Book that should be in thy home. Likew doth a man say, I am a bachelor, and am well suited, and there will be a Lo Chase and an Hard Fight before I mar but when there cometh down the Pike, a Regiment of Women, but Just One Gi then doth he hasten to the Jeweller a buyeth a Ring. Likewise doth the Orat fail when he quoteth Statisticks of Tho sands or Millions, but maketh his poi when he giveth Individual Instances.

So when mine hostess shall say, Wilt th eat before bedtime? I shall answer, I desi no food: but if she shall say, Cake and Mil or Crackers and Milk and a Baked App then will I sign for it on the Dotted Li

For this is the Law of the Concretene of the Particular over the Vagueness of t General. And it is well for all who ha to do with Education and Instruction a Reformation and Evangelization to know these things.

Most of the social problems of life can solved by the Golden Rule.—Anna L. Mow

Social Service Plans

Important Events at the National Council

By Hubert C. Herring
Social Service Secretary

HE social emphasis is to have a large place on the regular program of the National ncil in Washington. The Social Service ımission and the Social Service Department he Education Society have also planned a ıber of special conferences in connection ı the Council.

he invitation has gone out to all delegates visitors to the National Council for a e-Council Conference on the Social Ideals Purposes of the Church," to be held Oct. and 20. This conference will be convened the First Church, Washington, at 2 P.M., ıday, Oct. 19. The invitation is general, a good attendance is anticipated. The ussion, which will continue through Mon- afternoon and evening, and Tuesday ning, will center in the Social Creed pro- d by the Commission, and which will be ıd printed in the Grey Book of the Coun- This conference will afford larger dis- ion of this creed, and an opportunity for nding it for final presentation to the ncil. The discussion will be divided into sections, and each will be led by an ex- in his particular field. Following are the ers of the discussion:

Education—Robert Seneca Smith of Industry—Alva W. Taylor of the Dis- es' Social Service Board.

Agriculture—C. J. Galpin of the Depart- t of Agriculture.

Race Relations—George E. Haynes of the eral Council.

International Relations—Jerome Davis of ll who attend this conference, and any rs who are in the city in connection with mittee meetings, etc., are invited to the So- Service dinner to be served at Ingram Me- ial Church at 6:30 Monday evening, Oct. The charge will be $1.25 per plate, and ks should be mailed immediately to the al Service Department, 14 Beacon Street, on. Prof. Harry F. Ward of Union Semi- , just returned from his year's trip nd the world, will speak at this dinner.

he Social Service Department will conduct ctional meeting on the Council Program, sday morning, Oct. 27. There will be ad- ses by Mary Anderson, chief of the nan's Bureau, Department of Labor, on cle Sam and the Working Woman"; by ner John A. John of the Catholic Welfare ncil on "Coal"; Charles Clayton Morrison he Christian Century, on "Denomination- m and the Social Conscience"; Albert W. ner of Oak Park on "The Socialized Pul- "; Robert W. Bruére on "The Trend in ıstry."

he Commission's sub-committee on Rural , of which Malcolm Dana is chairman, will uct a sectional meeting at the same time "Country Life Work," with a series of sig- ant addresses by men and women who have conspicuously successful in rural leader- . The speakers and leaders of discussion ude the following: Guy Von Buskirk of da, Ill.; A. L. Larson of Hyannis, Neb.; I. Johnson of Billings, Mont.; C. H. Bald- of Easton, Mass.; B. F. Andrews of Con- , N. H.; S. G. Gutersohn, Collbran, Col- o; Mrs. Hilda Ives of Albany, N. H.; I. Dana of Charles City, Ia.; A. H. Sar- gent of Gilsum, N. H.; W. H. Bull of Ashland, Me.; N. C. Wallin of Powder River, Mont.

All who attend the Council, delegates and guests, are invited to a luncheon to be given Saturday, Oct. 24, at the Washington City Club in honor of Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist Church. Bishop McConnell will give an address after this luncheon. Tickets cost $1.25 each, and may be secured at the Social Service Headquarters in the Auditorium, or may be ordered immediately from the Boston office. It will be necessary to limit the attendance at this luncheon on account of the size of the room available.

The Women's Committee of the Commission, of which Mrs. Lucius H. Thayer is chairman, invites the women in attendance at the Council

REV. HUBERT C. HERRING
Secretary of the Social Service Department to a luncheon to be served at the Washington City Club, Tuesday, Oct. 27. Addresses will center around the theme of "Women's Organizations and the Social Emphasis." Tickets cost $1.00 each, and should be ordered from the Boston office or secured at Social Service Headquarters after reaching Washington.

The Social Service Headquarters will be under the charge of the Women's Committee, of which Miss Anna Estelle May is executive secretary. Here you will find literature bearing upon the social ministry of the church, and of representative social agencies. One of the most valuable features of this headquarters will be the opportunity for personal conference with men and women who are leaders in their fields. Bring your problems, and talk them over with those who are particularly successful in the field concerned. Following are some who have volunteered to be available for such informal conference:

In the field of the rural church—Kenyon L. Butterfield, Malcolm Dana, and Mrs. Hilda Ives. The city church and its social ministry, including the work of men in a city church—Orville A. Petty, Albert W. Palmer, James Gordon Gilkey, Chauncey F. Hawkins. Women's organizations and social service—Mrs. Lucius H. Thayer, and Mrs. Judson L. Cross. The church and social agencies—Anna Estelle May. International relations—Jerome Davis. Industrial relations—John Calder. Race relations—George E. Haynes, and Russell Brown. Congregational social service plans—Hubert C. Herring.

John Calder, the chairman of the Commission, and an industrial engineer of many years' experience, and Hubert C. Herring, the secretary of the Commission, plan to spend the month of November and the first part of December in the West, meeting with local groups for conference on the social program of the church, and speaking before Congregational clubs, colleges, churches, etc. Their itinerary is not yet finally completed. All who are interested in this should see the secretary during the Council period.

Why Not Five Societies?

By Howard A. Bridgman, D.D.
New England Secretary of the A. M. A.

The one goal at which to aim at Washington is a unity similar to that attained at Kansas City in 1913 after many months of investigation, deliberation, and debate. Only one brave irreconcilable stood up in dissent from the admirable report of the Committee of Nineteen, and we all went home feeling that the denomination in its coming work had taken a long step forward. That action put the societies where they belong, under the control of the National Council. It created a Commission on Missions, destined, we thought, to play a large part in the oversight of our missionary operations. It has done good work, and might do better were it charged with functions and provided with instrumentalities essential to the co-ordination of our numerous activities. It might become the superintending body which the Committee of Twelve would create.

Contrasted with Kansas City, there is far less unity today, less than a week before the clans gather at Washington. No such demand appears for wholesale abolition of societies as was evident at Kansas City, or the assumption by the churches of responsibility and authority relating to the agencies which they had been supporting so long without definite control. If a large merger is pushed through at Washington, it is likely to leave misgivings in many minds, and even alienate some staunch friends and supporters of our missionary undertakings. Why not be content to reduce the number of agencies from fifteen to five? That would be practically reducing our missionary societies to three, for the home church is practically caring for itself when it contributes to the Education Society and to Ministerial Relief in any form. No Christian home would consider itself benevolent in the broad sense of the word because it is educating Johnny and Jessie and seeing to it that Grandpa has a comfortable armchair by the fireside. The modern church, for its own preservation, must educate its children intelligently and broadly, and provide for its under-shepherds from their youth to their old age, but that is a part of its routine. It might almost be compared to paying the sexton and the coal man. Historically and today a real difference exists between that type of work and the passion to go out and make Jesus Christ known and obeyed.

It would seem, therefore, that two societies, whose main result is to keep the home church flourishing, and three more of the propagating type in areas already sharply defined and seldom overlapping, are not too many for a large, capable, forward-looking body of 5,680 churches and 878,995 members.

What I desire is such ultimate unity of action at Washington as will send us homeward with fresh tides of enthusiasm coursing through our veins.

Shall the Woman's Boards Be Merged?

Thoughts Called Out by "Enquiring Layman's" Articles on Report of Committee of Twelve

THE Woman's Boards are not opposing amalgamation with the American Board. True to their tradition and practice from the beginning, they recognize that new times demand new methods, and they are ready to believe that the day may have come when their slogan of "Woman's Work for Woman," which has rallied the women of the churches to their banner for more than fifty years may well be changed for a new one embodying a call to men and women to work together for better understanding and support of a common task.

It is only right, however, that the churches should recognize what the unique contributions of the Woman's Boards have been and should see clearly certain dangerous losses that will inevitably be experienced unless they are foreseen and guarded against.

What have the chief contributions of the Woman's Boards been? Antedating Woman's Clubs, Y. W. C. A., W. C. T. U., and other similar organizations as they do, the Woman's Boards of Missions blazed in a new and unknown land a trail which women now follow in myriad lines of service. It is worthy of passing notice, too, that Congregational women were the first of all church women to organize themselves in Woman's Mission Boards. Who shall measure the reach of this first contribution in the development of women for service within and without the church?

Secondly, the form of organization of the Woman's Boards has enabled them through their branches and auxiliaries if not actually to reach "the last woman in the last church" at least to approach that goal.

They have been the first, too, to recognize the importance of enlisting and training the young people and children of the churches.

What are the chief losses which threaten if the Woman's Boards cease to exist as separate organizations?

First, is the danger of a lessened sense of personal responsibility on the part of the women. For more than fifty years the women have been solely responsible for the work for women and children in mission lands. The assignment of work to them has been not a matter of arbitrary agreement by the boards, but has been from the beginning defined by social conditions prevailing in oriental countries. The sense of responsibility has grown with the growth of the work. Certain missionaries and institutions on the mission field are to the women like their own children. To ask them to pass over the management of this specific work to a large and necessarily somewhat unwieldy board is, as one woman phrased it, like asking a mother to give up the control of her own child retaining merely responsibility for her food and clothing and the cost of her schooling.

A second danger arises from the greater difficulty of finding in a large organization specific tasks for volunteer workers. The enlistment of a vast amount of unpaid service and the suiting of tasks to individual abilities has been one of the outstanding achievements of the Woman's Boards. Already the idea is abroad that the new organization will leave no place for such service. One woman said, "I see now where I am going to have a vacation. That great new American Board will not need me."

A third danger is that the relationship between missionaries and the home board will tend to become a mere business relationship. Let the missionaries themselves speak on this subject. One of the older workers writes: "I am greatly interested in the merger proposals but I am not convinced that all that change is necessary. . . . The larger the organization the more machine-like it tends to become and the less the personal touch. This last is altogether too little now. The real problems of the work are hardly ever touched upon, asked about or realized as existent. If this is true now, I fear all this new organization will but increase the machinery and the distance!"

The women see these and other dangers and tremble but they see also certain possible great gains.

They are all members of local churches as well as of a Woman's Board and they recognize the advantages of a single appeal for foreign missions as well as real advantages in a single administration on the mission fields. They covet for the whole church the closer touch they themselves have had with this great and inspiring task of missions and they see, dimly as yet to be sure, a vision of what it may mean for men and women to work together through district, state, and local committees in a way to bring the vital interests of a common task close to the hearts of a greater number.

They assume that no one has any thought of relegating the organizations which are now the Woman's Boards to becoming a mere woman's department of the American Board whose sole function shall be to collect money. They assume that if the vote in Washington is for merger it will be on the basis of men and women working together in both promotional and administrative lines.

The plan of amalgamation submitted to the Committee on Organization last May in response to the request of that committee is not one that either the American Board or the Woman's Boards are promoting. It is evidence that if the mind of the churches as represented at the National Council in Washington is clearly in favor of amalgamation, the American Board and the Woman's Boards believe it can be accomplished in some such way as is indicated in this plan, and that those most immediately concerned will use their utmost endeavor to make the new plan not merely as good as the old, but a means for doing a larger and better work.

A MEMBER OF A WOMAN'S BOARD.

Additional National Council Delegates

CALIFORNIA
Judge Frank S. Forbes, Los Angeles
Rev. George F. Kenngott, Los Angeles

COLORADO
Rev. S. G. Gutensohn, Plateau City

CONNECTICUT
Rev. Joseph H. Gaylord, Branford
Rev. E. F. McGregor, Norwalk

FLORIDA
Rev. Charles DeW. Brower, Key West

IOWA
Rev. F. W. Long, Keokuk

MAINE
Rev. George S. Brookes, Ellsworth
Rev. George K. Carter, Bangor
Rev. John Graham, Kittery Point
Mrs. A. S. Hawkes, York

MASSACHUSETTS
Rev. Robert W. Coe, Campello
Rev. Stephen C. Lang, Somerville
Rev. Hugh G. Ross, Pittsfield
Rev. Thomas H. Vincent, Turners Falls

MICHIGAN
Rev. Ira D. Fales, Benzonia
Rev. Herbert A. Jump, Ann Arbor
Rev. I. W. Stuart, Detroit
Mr. E. R. Warner, Jackson

NEW HAMPSHIRE
Rev. E. O. Barnard, Derry Village
Rev. Stoddard Lane, Manchester

OREGON
Rev. Clement G. Clarke, Portland
Rev. C. H. Harrison, Portland
Rev. Caradoc J. Morgan, Oregon City
Rev. J. W. Price, Portland

PENNSYLVANIA
Rev. H. W. Myers, Jr., Philadelphia

TEXAS
Rev. Charles F. L. Graham, Beaumont
Rev. L. R. Maye, Dallas
Rev. J. I. Donaldson, Houston

WISCONSIN
Rev. Roscoe Graham, Milwaukee

Stockholm Conference Slide

The Greater Boston Federation of Chur and the Massachusetts Federation, represe at the Stockholm Conference on Life Work by Rev. E. Tallmadge Root and John Pratt Whitman, have secured seventy lantern slides of this historic gathering of Christian delegates from all parts of the wo and have placed them for a nominal sum at disposal of any church or organization de ing to know more about a remarkable assem The slides may be had by applying at 4 P St., Boston, Mass.

Autumn Dream

By Charlotte H. Perry

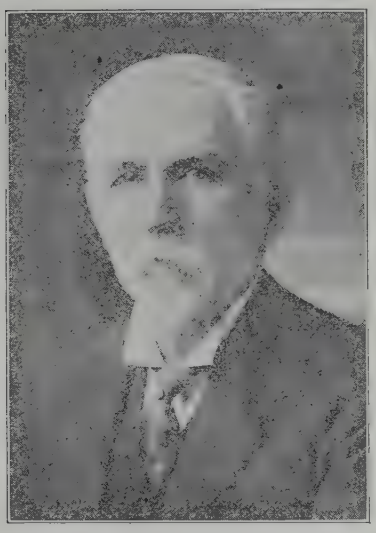
That silent anguish in the wood
Was palpitant on every bough—all yesterday.
The wounded leaves hung tremblingly
Yet made no move to break away.

And this I dreamed: that I had seen
The stricken Christ upon His cross—at Calvary
Whose flaccid palms were crimson-streaked
Like leaves upon an autumn tree.

Congregational Leaders to be at Washington

PRESIDENT KENYON L. BUTTERFIELD
A Leader in Rural Welfare and Social Service

FRED B. SMITH
Chairman of Citizens' Committee of One Thousand on Law Enforcement



SECRETARY JAMES L. BARTON, D.D.
Missionary Statesman of the American Board

COL. JOHN T. AXTON
Chief of Chaplains, U. S. A. A devoted Congregational leader in Washington

MRS. C. R. WILSON
President of Woman's Home Missionary Federation

CAPT. EVAN N. SCOTT
Chief Chaplain of the Navy. Chairman of Committee on Young People's Week-end at the National Council

MRS. FRANKLIN WARNER
President Woman's Board of Missions

DEAN CHARLES R. BROWN, D.D. of Yale Divinity School. President of Education and Publishing Societies. A speaker at the Council. Former Moderator.

LUCIUS E. EASTMAN
President of the Ministerial Boards. A prominent New York business man and Congregational layman

The Proposed Merger

A statement made in view of the pamphlet, "A Goodly Heritage" issued by the American Missionary Association and also of the recent letter of an "Enquiring Layman."

By a Layman of the Committee of Twelve

WHEN this appears in print the meeting of the National Council will be all but upon us and the Committee of Twelve will again be in session. Though a member of that committee, I am, of course, not now authorized to speak for it, but as an individual take this opportunity to comment on certain phases of the proposed merger.

A Movement Away from Emphasis on Mechanism

To my mind the proposed merger into two missionary societies is not a movement toward mechanism but distinctly away from it. For many years we have been troubled with the mechanics of our missions. We have come to use the word "apportionment" as though it were a missionary objective, when the very use of the word is no more than a symbol of our ensnarlment in mechanical difficulties following from clumsy organization. We have many missionary societies. They are responsible for the support of missionaries all over the world. This is a sacred trust in lives involving men, women, and children. To do the work and protect these lives requires more than $5,000,000 annually. More than $3,000,000 of this must be gotten from our churches in free will offering by individuals, and it must be distributed in accordance with the needs. In justice to our missionaries we have been forced to "apportion" gifts, and because this has been difficult we have been forced to stress "apportionment." With seven or eleven or fifteen societies to deal with, according as you count them or group them, the mechanics of fair distribution has taken much attention and we are rebelling against this.

But the way out is not to disregard necessities, but so to simplify the organization as to enable us to forget it. When we have as a subconscious background the knowledge that missionary funds are being divided wisely, we can concentrate our attention on this work. Right action by the National Council in simplifying our machinery will result in humanizing and spiritualizing this whole matter of missions. The work, the men and women, the stations, the hospitals, the churches, the schools, and the colleges remain as they are. Our missionary work is the finest fruit of our Christianity. Interest in missions comes from contact with the work and workers. Let us get this matter of organization right, so that we can forget it, and put our minds wholly on the work.

The Proposal to Merge Is Not New

The proposal to merge the missionary societies is not new. In 1871, at the first meeting of the National Council, the following action was taken:

In view of the number of existing organizations for benevolence that claim contributions from our churches, some of which organizations are so closely affiliated in purpose and method that they contemplate essentially the same work; therefore,

Resolved: That a committee of seven be appointed to consider and report, etc.

At practically every meeting of the Council during its 54 years of existence merger has been one of the major subjects of discussion. Many committees and commissions have considered the very questions now before us. In 1889 the Minnesota Association said in a memorial:

We find it practically impossible to induce each family to subscribe for all the separate periodicals,—we also find that the number of these publications acts as a hindrance to getting many of our people to subscribe for any of them.

In 1898 Dr. Cornelius H. Patton, then a pastor, said:

The pastors are wearied with the incessant appeals from our seven societies, each urging its claim as of supreme importance. Most of these beseeching letters go straight to the waste-basket.

The matter of merger finally gained headway, and during the years 1904 to 1913 was considered by successive committees of 5, 15, 20, and 19. The Committee of 19 in 1913 recommended a two-society organization, but finding too much opposition by the officers and trustees of the existing societies, withdrew this recommendation and substituted a proposal that the members of the National Council be made the majority voting constituency of the missionary societies so as to vest legal control with the Council. The committee also proposed the creation of the Commission on Missions as a body to co-ordinate the societies and bring about a uniform program. This proposal was adopted in 1913. The Commission has not been able fully to meet the anticipations of the Committee of 19 or the National Council of 1913, because it has not had sufficient contact with the work to bring about observance of its rulings which it has had no means of enforcing. To obviate this difficulty the Committee of Twelve now proposes to place all work within two societies and possibly also to establish an identity between the two Boards and the Commission on Missions which will make co-ordination simple and natural. The very thorough discussion of the organization of the Home Board which has been going on during the summer will doubtless result in the final report treating this phase of the subject with precision and clarity.

The American Missionary Association

The American Missionary Association has recently issued a pamphlet, Our Goodly Heritage, and under date of September 30 has broadcasted a circular letter in which several questions are asked, one of which is "Do we not need an organization distinct and definite to continue its specialization in Brotherhood?" Can this question be asked in a "holier than thou" spirit? For is not Christianity itself a crusade in brotherhood? Is pure Christianity and genuine brotherhood safer anywhere than in the keeping of the free Congregational churches? The Negro problem is not likely to get fairer consideration or more Christian treatment than if taken right into the heart of our churches, as it would be if placed with a board representing the whole denomination. Furthermore, is there not some question that all is not well with our denominational policy in the South? We have the Negro at our doors in the North, and we cannot retain our Christianity unless we find a way to deal with him as a brother. But is our only way to rely on a self-perpetuating institution; especially one so heavily endowed as to be free from the necessity of obtaining current support and not dependent upon public opinion. The American Missionary Association has placed legal control of its destinies in the voting constituency of the National Council, as have the other societies. Can we as a denomination shirk our historical obligation of dealing with the Negro problem? To relegate this to a single socie almost if not wholly self-sufficient, would be hide our heads in the sand in a time of pe and before a great task which God has co mitted to us.

The Five, the Four, and the Two-Socie Plan

The demand for a Five-Society plan is bas upon an endeavor to perpetuate the Americ Missionary Association as a separate a largely independent organization practica free of denominational control. The Four-S ciety plan would place the control of our wh denominational educational policy and t running of a large number of Negro schools one society and would be acceptable to no o The Two-Society plan is logical. For there is the widest call from the churches, a it deals honestly and clearly with the Neg question, leaving it as a separate work, b under the control of a society representing t whole denomination.

Trust Funds Will Not be Endangered

The matter of endowments and trust fun is giving concern to some. The Committee Twelve has not been blind to possible dange It has proceeded from the beginning on the pri ciple that no attempt would be made to dive the uses of trust funds from the purposes f which they were given, nor would any set-up adopted which would threaten the safety these funds. During the summer legal couns have been engaged in examining charters, b laws, wills, trust deeds, etc., so that the fin report should not propose anything not whol in the interest of the denomination. There really no need for concern in this matter.

Organization of the Home Board

There has been much discussion as to t wisdom of proposing for the Home Board, Board of Directors, an Executive Committe and four Divisional Departmental Committee and it has been pointed out that each of the departmental committees must necessarily hav authority in its division of affairs. The Com mittee has never thought otherwise. It is pr posed that the Board of Directors shall hav authority in matters of general policy an budget, where it is felt that the wisdom of t whole denomination and a neutral point of vie are desirable, but these things will requir comparatively few meetings. The executiv work will all be done by the Divisional Com mittees and with authority. Quite possibl the recommendation for an Executive Commit tee standing between the Directors and th Divisional Committees will be withdrawn.

No Centralization of Authority is Threatened

Many have been troubled by the though that merger means centralization of authorit and is, therefore, un-Congregational. That de pends on what is to be merged. Our churche remain individual, each with the glorious free dom of going its own way. Therein lies th way of Christian progress. No more firm in dividualists are to be found than on the Com mittee of Twelve. But there is no suggestio of any unified authority. The dependent mis sionary societies, which every week must go t the churches with hat in hand to ask for sup port, and which have no ecclesiastical authorit of any kind, can hardly threaten the inde pendence of our churches. On the other hand hurches can understand and control a fied and unified organization as they can o at present. The power of individual les will be increased not decreased.

UCTION IN OVERHEAD AND INCREASE IN SUPPORT PROBABLE

se who fear that a simplified organization not obtain an increased support should the figures of the past few years. Each larger denominations which has adopted promotional plans has gained from 100 ent to 400 per cent over five or six ago. Any reported shrinkages have from 1921 or other years in which at denominational drive has been made. Our own missionary giving under the apportionment appeal is two and one half times what it was ten years ago. There is every reason to expect both business and spiritual benefit from simplification of our overhead machinery. There will be saving in cost, there will be increase in efficiency, and there will be a release from the tyranny of a difficult mechanism to a more direct contact with the spiritual values of the work. There should be a simplification in management and at the same time an increase in the number of lay workers in direct management of and contact with the work. Those who carefully study the proposal for regional committees as finally worked out will fully appreciate this.

The Congregationalist's Bible Class

Paul in Ephesus

mment on the International Uniform unday School Lesson for October 25
Acts 19: 23-34

re are lessons now and again that seem ve very little relationship to practical life and that have little other than a spece interest. Here is a lesson, however, emes right home to every man and that s application for every age and country. onflict between self-interest or selfish in and the higher interests of life has been dence throughout history. Sometimes it uestion of sheer morality, whether a man vail himself of wealth at the sacrifice of y and honor. Others who would scorn dishonest in the ordinary affairs of life o fight out a battle, no less acute, in the of higher idealism.

worship of success for a man of deep on often conflicts with the worship of and a man's personal interests, even these interests are in themselves of a nature, often stand opposed to the in- of society as a whole or of a group ich he belongs. No man can say that he irely free from this conflict, or is outside mptation to pursue his own advantage the way of love and service may mean ay of the Cross.

is this temptation the only one that is t. There is a deeper danger that when ave made worldly and selfish choice they seek to justify that choice in the very of religion itself. Religion in that way nly becomes a cloak for selfishness and ior, but it becomes inherently perverted its true path. Is it not true that even e religion, when men have deceived them into accepting it, comes to exercise a cer- yranny over reason and spirit? Men be- so intense in defending the very errors hey have accepted, that life becomes pol- at its deepest sources. In this way super- sin and wrong choice tend constantly d the deeper ruin of the soul. All this roughly illustrated in our lesson in the st between the two men, Paul and rius.

l is regardless of his own interest, even comfort and safety. Demetrius, as the of the craftsmen making shrines for the s Diana, sees life wholly from the stand- of gain. Probably, he would have been if any one had accused him of that. No he thought he was a sincere believer in ddess. Probably his very prejudices were and sincere. None the less these prejudices colored his life and action. He may have been honest in opposing Paul, because he thought that Paul was undermining the worship of Diana, but like most men of small vision he could see even the great issues of life only as they affected his own interest. So he said to his fellow-craftsmen, "This our craft is in danger." Of course, it would not have stirrrd up much enthusiasm among the people if Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen had simply talked about their own profits. The man of selfish spirit and of narrow vision has always defended his interests by surrounding them with a sanctity of higher things. So Demetrius stirred up a great human cry in Ephesus by accusing Paul and his companions of blasphemy. A great mob gathered together stampeding with that mob psychology which is the same in almost every age and land. Thus for the space of two hours they cried, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." It looked as if the most serious results might arise.

Ephesus had, however, a town clerk who seemed to have had much sanity and good judgment. He took a common sense view of religion. If religion is sound and true, he thought, it could not suffer so easily. Moreover, as a good public official he saw in this uproar danger to his city. It was a colony and he perceived that the Roman power might have very little interest in these religious quarrels and might call them all strictly to account for proceedings that day. Thus it was that he appeased the people.

The incident itself, however, is of far more interest in its relation to our day than to its own, for the same old conflict between truth and error, love and selfishness, continues in a world in which religion and high principles are still made, by unworthy men, the cover for their own interest.

Nobody, for instance, says today, "Great is the drink traffic," but many are saying, "Great is personal liberty." Nobody says, "Great is war," but many whose personal gains are directly concerned are saying, "Great is patriotism," meaning by that little more than the type of patriotism that expresses itself in exploitation rather than in service. Nobody is saying, "Great is poverty," "Great are the slums," but many are saying, "Great and sacred is the present social system," though it makes these things inevitable. A deep spiritual discipline requires, even for professing Christians, that men should come to the point of view where the Kingdom of God and progress mean more to them than their personal and selfish interests. In life today, as in ancient Ephesus, men make the inevitable choice of standing with Christ and Paul, or with Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen.

Sectional Meeting on Country Life

A Sectional Meeting on Country Life will be held during the sessions of the National Council in Room 5 of the Auditorium Building, Tuesday morning, Oct. 26, at 9 A.M. The program is not planned for a speech-making occasion but for a real discussion. Those who open the discussions are picked from those who are really doing things and can tell about it.

Program

Fifteen Minute Talks

Building a Program — Guy Von Buskirk, Oneida, Ill.
Going After the Boys—Ernest L. Larson, Hyannis, Neb.
Getting the Marginal Man—Charles H. Baldwin, Easton, Mass.
Twentieth Century Methods—E. H. Johnson, Billings, Mont.
Departmentized Leadership—Benjamin F. Andrews, Concord, N. H.
Spiritual Economics—Mrs. Hilda Ives, Portland, Me.

Five Minute Nuggets

The Long Term View—A. H. Sargent, Gilsum, N. H.
The Small Town Y—Ellis H. Dana, Charles City, Ia.
Enlarging "Community"—Wilbur I. Bull, Ashland, Me.
Covering Ground—N. C. Wallin, Landor, Wyo.

Your church is like your home. If you invite people to come, they may come, but your lack of personal interest will rob your home of social contact, and with the same principle, fill your church with empty pews.—Christian Observer.

Copyright by Harris & Ewing

FRONT VIEW OF WASHINGTON UNION STATION
Showing the City Post Office at the left. Government Printing Office in the distance

OUR INVALID PARISH

Winfred Rhoades
Pastor

Different Kinds of Optimism

A recent correspondent, after kindly remarking that "those psychological articles in The Congregationalist were thrilling," goes on to explain: "I had been to a series of lectures on Psychology and Religion . . . and the impression I got was that unfortunate events in childhood doomed us as hopelessly as predestination. There was not a ray of hope in them. That made me especially appreciative of the constructive optimism of your articles."

Reading the letter called back to my mind the memory of a few lines by Lydia Avery Coonley that appeared in one of our magazines a number of years ago. They were called Heredity, and offered a needed comment upon the doctrine popular at the moment.

Why bowest thou, O soul of mine,
Crushed by ancestral sin?
Thou hast a needed heritage
That bids thee victory win.

The tainted past may bring forth flowers,
As blossomed Aaron's rod,
No legacy of sin annuls
Heredity from God.

Now that we have advanced one-fourth of the way through the Twentieth Century, we do not hear so much about inherited guilt and inborn sin. It is science that now pronounces the doom of man. Childhood impressions, ideas lodged in the subconscious mind, "raw instincts" inherited from a painfully evolving ancestry, "erotic needs" clamorous for gratification,—this is the kind of language in which the new doom is pronounced.

Frights, defeats, disappointments, crushed desires, galling environmental conditions, and other such things may live in the subconscious mind for years after they seem to have been utterly forgotten by the consciousness. But there is another thing also to be remembered. Victories, aspirations, noble trusts, the high resolutions of the soul—these also make their indelible impression upon that subconscious mind; these also continue to function in the life-long years after they have been first given entrance and place. Each individual must choose to which kind of latent creative memory he will give the encouragement and aid of his conscious mind.

There is something suggestive in the old story of the two frogs. They fell into a pail of cream that was hanging in a well to keep cool. After a long struggle to get out, one of them gave up trying and let himself sink to the bottom of the pail and drown. The other frog would not yield, and after a long, long time he noticed that the cream seemed thicker. Then he redoubled his ceaseless legmotion, and when at last the farmer's wife went to pull up her pail she found a victorious frog sitting on top of a neat pat of yellow butter.

Ideas that differ as light does from darkness are expressed by that word optimism, of which we hear so much both for and against. Easy-going complacency and happy-go-lucky thoughtlessness pose as optimism. But that is very different from the optimism that is optimism only because it believes that great effort, in partnership with God, is bound to share at last in the eternal victory of God, the eternal joy of God. Great mastery is the happy fruit of great effort. Result is a consequence of obedience to law. There is no great result without first the sweat of one's brow.

Closet and Altar

THE STAR OF HOPE

By whom we . . . rejoice in hope of the glory of God.—Rom. 5: 2.

Thus the Bible, wherein the story of human life is written large and plain, teaches the lesson of hope. You remember what St. Paul says about it. "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that through patience and comfort of the Scriptures we might have hope." Back he looks over its books of history and poetry and prophecy, and trying to put its essential meaning into the briefest space, takes that word hope and writes it at the end of it all. That is the sum and substance of it. Times are as hard, people are as bad as they can be, and the saints are terribly discouraged again and again, but there is always somebody to preach hope. It was a proverb that "when the tale of bricks is doubled, Moses comes." When the night was darkest, the prophets' voices were loudest in confident predictions of the dawn.—George Hodges.

O Shepherd of the nameless fold,
The blessed Church to be,
Our hearts with love and longing turn
To find their rest in thee.
Thy kingdom come! Its heavenly walls
Unseen around us rise,
And deep in loving human hearts
Its broad foundation lies.

From out our low, unloving state,
Our centuries of strife,
Thy hand, O Shepherd of the flock,
Is lifting us to life;
From all our old divided ways
And fruitless fields we turn
To thy dear feet, the simple law
Of Christian love to learn.

O holy kingdom! happy fold!
O blessed Church to be!
Our hearts in love and worship turn
To find ourselves in thee;
Thy bounds are known to God alone,
For they are set above:
The length, the breadth, the height are one,
And measured in his love.

Mary A. Lathbury.

If, then, this beautiful world of nature is the garment of God by which we see him, if his kingdom be in the mustard seed, and not a sparrow can fall without his knowledge, how evident it is that he in whom we trust, who has never left himself without a witness, is the God of hope.—George H. Morrison.

It is hope that saves us; it is prophecy that gives us all our music and higher cheer, and nobler enthusiasm; it is the beyond that holds our home and it will be the beyond eternities hence. To see the invisible is to live; take hold of the eternal is to be safe forevermore.—Joseph Parker.

O most glorious God! relieve my spirit with thy graciousness; take from me all teddiousness of spirit, and give me a hope that shall not fail, a desire of holiness not to be satisfied till it possesses a charity that will always increase; that I may turn all things into religion, doing all to thy glory; that, when thou shalt call me from this deliciousness of employment, I may pass into the employments of saints and angels; whose work it is, with eternal joy and thanksgiving, to sing praises unto thy mercies. Amen.

Jeremy Taylor.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAV

Befriending the New Come

Comment on the Prayer Meeting T for October 25-31

BY ONA A. EVANS

Topic: Our New Americans: How Help Us and How We Can Help Them. 10: 12-22; Luke 7: 1-5.

Here are stories of things that actuall pened. Let the leader read them an member write his answers to the questio

1. In a settlement where the majority club members are of Italian parentage was a club of American girls. The mem decreased and the girls were told they have to get more members or disband girls' work director suggested that they c with a group of Italian-American girls. answer was, "We should say not. We want those 'ginnies' in our club."

(1) Were the girls right?

(2) Does it make any difference wh girls did?

(3) Were the girls wrong?

2. In an Eastern college a good lo well dressed freshman, evidently from home, was "rushed" by a prominent frat until it became known that he was a then he was immediately dropped.

(1) Were the fraternity members rig dropping the Jew?

(2) Does it make any difference whic they decided?

(3) Were the fraternity members wro dropping the Jew?

3. In a Pacific Coast town the school dren marched out two by two at recess. day a little eight-year-old white girl r to march out with her partner because h a Japanese.

(1) Was the little girl right?

(2) Does it make any difference whethe marched with the Japanese or not?

(3) Was the little girl wrong?

Let the leader read the following ques asking each one present to answer the qu by "Yes," "No," or if he has no opinion question mark, "?".

(1) Are Italians disloyal to the U States because they swear allegiance t Pope at Rome?

(2) Are there any great Italian musi surgeons, or actors in the United States? Jewish?

(3) Should Greeks be kept at manual such as ditch digging, house-servants, walking, street sweeping? Should Itali Japanese? Mexicans? Poles?

(4) Do most Italians carry knives and dangerous to associate with them? Are G dangerous? Armenians? Mexicans?

Try to decide how really Christian our tude is to these New Americans. Are we ing them to our utmost ability?

"It is fitting that the church of the Pil and the Puritan should have a home mis ary society. The things which keep the un-American are things which the Pil loathed—class consciousness, partial jus violation of personality. It is a time for grims to reach out hands of friendship to migrants of every race, and teach them America really means."—Irving Maurer.

References for further study: The Farthest Re ing Kindergarten in the World—Congregati Home Missionary Society; The Story of Sl Susan—Woman's Missionary Society (Luther 1228 Spruce St., Philadelphia, Pa. (3 cen Survey of Fact and Opinion in Race Relation Federal Council, 105 East 22nd St., New Y City.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS

Latin American Missions

ODERN MISSIONS ON THE SPANISH MAIN, V. R. WHEELER and W. E. BROWNING stminster Press).

ODERN MISSIONS IN MEXICO, by W. R. ELER, DWIGHT H. DAY, and JAMES B. ERS (Westminster Press. $2.50).

is the policy of the Presbyterian mission ds to send a deputation or commission to their missions on the field and report on work to the churches at home. These nes record the visits of such commissions olombia and Venezuela, and to Mexico. narrative they present is a stirring record eroic achievement but with abundant evi- of needs not met. Glimpses of persecu- in which the blood of the martyrs is shed, spiritual victories over superstition and ance, and many clear indications of op- unities for service, are found in both vol- . These books furnish interesting side- s upon the foreign mission study theme of year, and the exceptionally fine illustrations them the more helpful for this purpose.

ICOLIC BEATITUDES, by RUSTICUS (Atlan- Monthly Press). These "beatitudes" are owed in successive chapters on the Dog, Pig, the Hen, the Cow, the Horse, and Garden. Humor and philosophy of rural the whimsical quality of which every lover ature and of animals will appreciate.

dventures on the Mission Field

HE MAN FROM THE AFRICAN JUNGLE, by C. WILCOX (Macmillan. $2.50). Here is book for which we have been looking—a of missionary experiences that has all realism and graphic power that we associ- with tales of adventure and unusual ex- nces in foreign lands. How often has there occasion to contrast the dullness of a mis- ary biography or autobiography with the quality of some adventurous traveler's ative when in reality the missionary has far more striking experiences and vaster wledge of the country concerned! But Mr. ox knows how to write, and the comment Dr. Carl S. Patton, of Los Angeles, who ributes an introduction, is well justified. Patton says that this missionary auto- raphy will appeal alike to those primarily rested in missions and "to those who like od story for its own sake."

ossibly the fact that it will appeal to the r class may make it more effective in service to the cause of missions. Mr. Wil- went to Inhambane in East Africa in 1883 stablish work under the American Board, going, for reasons which he states, into desia. His book is too varied and extensive incident to permit much summary, but ng the most interesting portions are those h tell of the missionary's contacts with l Rhodes. The quality of the missionary, the quality of the converts that he won, well brought out in the interesting story is approach to Inhambane on a steamer, t years after his first visit there. Cecil des, known even then as "the great Cecil des," was on the boat. But let the author the story:

s our ship came to anchor in front of the Portuguese town which lay under the dow of an ancient fort surmounted by an- ated muzzle-loading guns, a great crowd of ives flocked down and massed themselves on the shore, as usual, to witness the landing and perhaps to pick up a chapeau (penny) or two by carrying freight or passengers ashore. They were so near that faces could be distinguished easily. I stood beside Mr. Rhodes and his native interpreter and superintendent, Mr. Colenbrander, a Boer, who was to engage carriers for the overland trip to Salisbury. I knew one face and its owner responded to my smile of recognition. The keen eyes of the empire builder also caught the smile. He may, indeed, have thought the smile was intended for him, but without returning it, he said to Mr. Colenbrander:

"That's a good nigger! Get him for me." It was not my place to speak, but I could not help volunteering, "You're right in regard to his merit, but I don't think you'll get him."

"You know him, then?" turning his shaggy brows on me.

"Yes, quite well."

"He's a good nigger, isn't he?" he insisted imperiously.

"He is good, all right, but I call him a man."

"Well, call him what you like. He's a good nigger. I can tell a good nigger as soon as I see his face. You will spare no expense to get him for me," he concluded, turning to Mr. Colenbrander.

As a matter of fact Cecil Rhodes did not get his "man," though he tried in every way to do so. The reason is narrated by Mr. Wilcox, and nothing more creditable to the Christian life and character of a native convert could well be conceived. It is one of many unusual incidents in an intensely interesting book.

Fiction

O'MALLEY OF SHANGANAGH, by DONN BYRNE (Century. $1.25). This is the love story of an Irish gentleman, De Bourke O'Malley, who, returning to Ireland after some years spent abroad as a soldier, loses his heart to a girl who leaves a convent to elope with him. The superstitious Irish spoke of him as "the nun's husband." "What luck could he be having, anyhow?" they asked. The tragic story is told in prose that is almost poetry. O'Malley made love beneath an Irish midsummer moon. On such a night he tells us—"Out of their raths come the little lost people of the world, the fancy folk, playing their music that is at the same time merry and sad." Surely some of their music comes from the pen of this author!

JONAH, by ROBERT NATHAN (McBride. $2.00). Mr. Nathan is co-editor, with H. L. Mencken, of the American Mercury. This novel, woven with much freedom and considerable beauty of imagery around the prophet Jonah, has given rise to much controversy. While some critics have seen in the book little more than gratuitious blasphemy, others have hailed it as a work of rare art, with much subtle and true criticism of life beneath its satire. In the novel God converses in a very human way with Moses and Noah. It is a rather startling device, this effort to make certain statements striking by attributing them dramatically to God. Ibanez also adopts it in a story, The Four Sons of Eve, in his new book, The Old Woman of the Movies. In this story God converses with Adam and Eve. It opens the question whether the writer of certain portions of Genesis, revealing high moral conceptions, in his anthropomorphic representation of God may not have used a literary form to express truth that did not necessarily imply an anthropomorphic conception of deity. Certainly neither Nathan nor Ibanez would be thought of as holding an anthropomorphic conception of God, because they have so represented him in their stories. One wishes that Mr. Nathan had confined his literary ability to some other theme. He writes with power and charm, but the beauty of the Book of Jonah, in its pinnacle of Old Testament spiritual conception, is so far superior to the representation of Jonah in this book that one can hardly agree with the statement that the author "has transformed the forlorn rebel of the Bible into a man of flesh and blood, a symbol of his age and our own." Modern Biblical criticism has done that more simply and successfully.

THE DOOM WINDOW, by MAURICE DRAKE (Dutton. $2.00). The technical knowledge of the author who before his death was, as well as a novelist, an expert adviser on stained glass to the South Kensington Museum, London, has enabled him to write this unusual story. A famous old church window is entrusted to a young man to restore. This man has discovered a process for forging mediaeval glass which he has confided to his fiancée who is quite unscrupulous. About the plot is built a strong story which moves a little slowly at first but increases in interest as it develops.

Religious Books

PRAYERS FOR WOMEN WORKERS, by MRS. GEORGE H. MORRISON (Doran. $1.25). Dr. Harry E. Fosdick, in a foreword to these prayers by the wife of a well-known Scottish minister, says: "This collection of simple, sincere, spiritually minded prayers will help all of us to make our public worship more worthy of the One to whom we pray."

SOUL-WINNING SERMONS, by R. A. TORREY (Revell. $4.00). Dr. Torrey's name and fame indicate the nature of these sermons. The volume contains twenty-six sermons by the well-known Fundamentalist leader, published in the order in which they were delivered.

THREE HUNDRED EVANGELISTIC SERMON OUTLINES, by AQUILLA WEBB (Doran. $3.00). As pastor and preacher, the present reviewer never found much practical value in sermon outlines by other men. Those who can use such material may find much available in the present volume, which is arranged following the order of the books of the Bible.

THE MILLENNIUM BIBLE, by WILLIAM EDWARD BIEDERWOLF (W. P. Blessing, Chicago). A help to the study of the Bible from the standpoint of the theory of the second coming of Christ. As among those most deeply concerned about making his first coming known and effective, we confess our incompetence to appreciate the volume from the standpoint from which it has been written.

THE OLD GOSPEL AT THE HEART OF THE METROPOLIS, by JOHN ROACH STRATON (Doran. $2.00). These sermons by the widely-exploited and sensational Fundamentalist preacher of New York reveal Dr. Straton in his strength and weakness. He is intense, and in many ways he strikes home effectively, but one misses the note of a large sympathy and a great tolerance such as seem to us inevitably associated with the most intense gospel of all.

Any book mentioned in these columns may be obtained through the Pilgrim Press Book Stores, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, or 19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago.

WITH THE CHILDREN

The Lost Spring

By Daisy D. Stevenson

"Ishgy, oshgy, alligy, mumpty, bumpty, la—whoo—oo!"

It was the war cry of the Hill Tribe, and the Wallace children tumbled out of the cabin and down the steps, answering at the top of their lungs. Jim and Jane Booth were coming up the hill, going through semaphore motions.

The Booths lived the year round in the little yellow cottage over two hills and a half. They had been so excited when they saw the smoke coming from the chimney of the Wallace's summer cabin that blue October morning!

"Oh, oh!" Jane had announced from her bedroom, "Margie and Mac and Jinny are here."

Jim hopped over to see for himself. Like "my son John" in the "diddle, diddle, dumpling" rhyme, he had one shoe off and one shoe on.

"They must have got here last night," she said with a record broad grin. "Let's go right over."

But their mother had something to say. "Not before breakfast, and not till your chores are done."

It was hard to wait, for the children had all played together the summer long without once getting mad and not speaking. But it was Saturday and the Wallaces were sure to stay till Monday morning. Mrs. Wallace loved the cañon and the woods, and never failed to come up when the aspens dropped their leaves in a rain of gold.

"Oh, I hope there'll be a picnic!" Jane was sloshing around in the dish-pan after breakfast. "Up Crystal Spring Gulch, maybe."

"With weenies and marshmallows," agreed Jim as he banged wood into the box much faster than usual.

Margie and Jinny and Mac had just eaten all the pancakes they could possibly hold without exploding, and felt ready for anything—strong enough to climb mountains and fight bears. It was just then they heard the signal they had made up together months before. Even little Jinny knew it and always came in strong on the "mumpty" part.

Well, after the greetings there was no question, "What'll we do?" but Margie cried, "What'll we do first?" There was so much to do in a short time that it took good planning.

"A 'pickanick," piped up Jinny. "And I want to play in the creek and see the 'wollipogs.'"

"Let's explore Indian Cave again," suggested Mac. "I've got a new flashlight."

Everybody voted for a picnic, Margie adding that she wanted to go up the Gulch and see "Aunt Effie."

"She isn't there now," Jane told her. "She had a spell with her heart, toting water way up from the creek, and they took her over to Mr. Warner's at the Circle Five Ranch. You see, in the winter, there's no near neighbor to help Aunt Effie and she's getting too old to live there alone anyway. If she had any money she'd like to go out to California to some kin folks."

"What a pity she hadn't a spring on her place, like our nice cold one," said Mac.

"Our granddad used to say there was a spring above where Aunt Effie's cabin stands now. Said it was there when he first came to these hills, about our age. The Utes used to camp around here, you know, before the first white men began to cut timber and start saw mills."

"Well, my goodness, if there was a spring, where is it now?" laughed Margie. "We always wondered why they called that dry, sandy gulch 'Crystal Spring.'"

"Somebody ran off with it, I guess," giggled Jane. "Anyhow there never has been any spring up there since I was born. Maybe Granddad got it mixed with some other place. He was pretty old and his head was so full of tales."

Mrs. Wallace was ready to do anything the children suggested, and would take her kodak along. Mr. Wallace was up on the roof tinkering away at the shingles. He wanted to get the cabin all tidy and tight to close up for the winter.

So about noon Mrs. Wallace and the children started up the trail through the pines with canteens and lunch. Jane and Jim met them at Indian Cave with tin pails of goodies their mother had sent,—boiled eggs and quirly crullers, and home-made bread and jam.

"Let's eat now," begged Jinny. And just because she was the smallest was no sign it was a silly idea. All thought it a very wise notion. So the boys gathered wood and got a fire going, because a camp-fire is so jolly. There had been a recent light snowfall that left the spruces blooming with magic flowers, and made the wind up the gulch a bit chilly.

"Don't you wish we could have an adventure today? Even a teeny little one," sighed Margie over her third sandwich. She spoke as if adventures came in sizes, like stockings.

"What if that bear should show up? The one Dad saw over by Banner Peak." Jim growled and Jinny buried her curls in her mother's sweater.

"Yes, or that bobcat that's been worrying the stock at the Circle Five," put in Jane.

"Oh, please let's not have too wild an adventure right after lunch!" begged Mrs. Wallace. "At least, I'd like a polite, trained animal that would pose while I took its picture."

She took several snapshots of the children around the picnic rock. After that the four older ones took flashlights and had a delightful, spooky time poking around in the dark cave where once on a time an early rancher had found Indian relics,—beads, a wooden pipe, some flint arrowheads.

Jinny liked the sunshine better, so she went up above Aunt Effie's cabin and climbed the big red rocks as easily as the chipmunks that whisked off with the picnic crumbs. Her mother was taking pictures around the aspen grove and after a time the cave explorers came trooping up.

"Where's Jinny?" asked Margie. And she began to chant, "Ishgy—oshgy—alligy—" "Mumpty—bumpty!" finished a shrill little voice as Jinny tumbled breathlessly around a big rock in the trail. "I been playing the water."

Jim laughed. "Don't tease us, Jinny. water up here for a mile or two."

Jinny's blue eyes were round and indign

"I have, too, been playing in the w And you can come and see if you don't be it. Isn't my hands all wet?"

They were, as was the front of her cover Puzzled, everybody followed in a sort of "s us" parade, Jinny leading the way in s dignity.

"And here 'tis," she announced triumpha and straightway fell on her "tummy" i tangle of wild clematis and chokecherry. you listen you can hear it gurgle."

The boys pawed away at the undergr and all knelt close under the hugh, red that hung over them like a giant's sunsh Sure enough, there was the clearest-cry ice-cold spring that had been hidden by runaway rocks, goodness knows how The girls found the remains of woven ba work around the edge, which proved, Mrs. lace said, that Indians had used the spring perhaps covered it to keep the palefaces finding it.

"Oh, do you s'pose it could be the spring Granddad talked about?" cried excitedly. "The lost spring? Oh, I wait to tell Aunt Effie that we—I mean, J found good water on her land, and not far from the cabin either."

Jinny was generous though proud. can say all of us found it," she said, Margie hugged her, grimy hands, wet ove to boot.

Of course, the Wallaces couldn't bear t home without seeing Aunt Effie. So D Wallace piled them all into the car next m ing and drove to the Circle Five.

Aunt Effie was even gladder than they imagined she would be and this is what told them. That summer some city people camped in her woods, down close to the creek that tumbled down the cañon fro mountain lake high above.

"They liked my woods and my view the cabin." Aunt Effie said, "and Mr. told me if there was only good water on place he'd buy me out and build a nice sum home. I've got their address, and I'll a letter right off and see whether the changed their minds. If they still want to it will mean so much to me," she ended beaming face. "I can go to sea level and m get well again. And I'm sort of homesic see Cousin Martha out in La Jolla."

"Goody, goody!" clapped Jinny from footstool near Aunt Effie. The old smoothed the little girl's hair.

"And to think this fairy found the spring!" she said, still wondering. "A rock slide had come down after a June most likely, and buried part of the spring the vines did the rest. Your granddad to true story after all," she nodded to Jim Jane.

"So we did have an adventure, or anyw turned out as good as one," rejoiced Marg they rode away. "And that will do us we come back to the hills next summer."

(All rights reserved)

OUR READERS' FORUM

Governor Sweet for Moderator

e Editor of The Congregationalist:

hould like to second the nomination of vernor William E. Sweet for the Moderip. Governor Sweet is a man who has a prominent part in religious work ghout the nation. The well-known Estes Conferences had their origin partially in sion. The Y. M. C. A. and the Congreal Church of Denver both depended on d. Let us elect a man who had the reand confidence of his home state to such que degree that in spite of the opposition political machine of both parties he was d to the highest office in the Commonn and who throughout his term of office o make politics serve the "abundant life." overnor he has effectively attempted to ate the spirit of Christianity, as he sees o the life of the state. It is particufitting that we should have someone from ido to preside over us as the strength of egationalism continues to increase steadroughout the West. Let us nominate oderator a man whose deep religious faith een proved by years of service in the egational Church, whose practical social ianity has been demonstrated by his havven up business to devote all of his time, fluence, and his life for the common good.

e Divinity School. JEROME DAVIS.

ger Signals for Council Delegates

e Editor of The Congregationalist:

By vote of the National Council on the of the Commission on Missions, a sum is mounting upwards of $40,000 was for the Advance to unite this paper with Congregationalist over the protest of the ions by its Board of Directors. The subscribers for the combined weekly is ly more than it was for The Congregaist alone when the merger was made. In on to this original expense there has a long continued financial embarrassto the Publishing Society and a wiping e aggregate of the annual deficits amount- $154,000. Would not this suggest that uestion of consolidation of missionary icals which are of the nature of propabe left largely to those who have the rebility for carrying on their trusts or busihe men who must feel the pulse of bene-ns? In commercial life the tendency is vide a separate sheet for each specialized st.

By vote of the National Council and on lvice of the Commission on Missions the tion Foundation was floated, which has ed $63.749 in three full years of operato disburse $159,725, nearly 40 per cent. stablished Education Society was spendr example, the year before it was manip- by the Council $13,189 in caring for 9, about 14 per cent.

The costly venture of the Educational ation illustrates the dangerous tendency counting the established societies and oning roving commissions and jitney lines. Committee of Twelve would make one Society out of eight existing organizabut it recommends exactly the same num- committees, eight of various sorts to ver the work of the societies. The sense of responsibility of these groups is far less than that which rests upon the Boards of Directors of the several societies. The supervision is less effective and the drafts for expense account for ill-defined service will have to be paid from the public till. There is likely to be far more careful accounting by the small permanent groups of directors, well acquainted and working together, meeting often outside the regular appointed times for greater usefulness, than in the case of these scattered rangers of committeemen.

4. The effort to centralize collections for benevolences through agencies conducted by the Commission on Missions cost for a single one of our benevolent boards the past year, $35,780. Meanwhile the collecting expenses of the Board itself were not lessened and the services of its officers and missionaries were increased, while the gifts of the churches for the current year, $582,000, were diminished by the overhead tax for the central office, leaving $546,220. As far back as 1920 this society secured $447,000 through its own efforts. A similar situation is true in regard to our other societies. These organizations, through their appointed agents, together with their missionary representatives, are the shock troops in the campaign for benevolences. It must be borne in mind that the object of our missionary activities at home should be to train givers as well as to secure an immediate and large financial response. New generations are coming forward, children and youth are interested in the presentations of missionary causes. There is still a romance about them, picturesque features, frequently fine personal heroisms that touch the hearts and minds of youth and of those who have not been trained in church life and have not the traditions of missionary giving. No central bureau with its collectors can furnish the necessary material of sympathy and enthusiasm, when presenting bare budgets wholesale. The business side is often the minor one in ultimate results of generous giving. The missionary boards and the missionaries themselves are entitled to get near their constituents and supporters, and their personal presence and vitamen messages from the field are needed for the renewal and maintenance of the spiritual life of the Kingdom.

5. The substitution for friendly family groups of directors in our separate societies of sterile efficiency agents and distant departmental committees is suicidal. Most of our societies need the direction and oversight of men of special sympathies and cherished interests. As long as equal hospitality is refused at national gatherings to delegates because of the color of their skins, and while the teachers of the representatives of such races are ostracized, there is needed the protecting and prophetic care of those who will carry the burdens and defend the rights of these rear guards. The small bodies of directors of the individual societies likewise furnish recruits who are trained in benevolent work for the welfare of the denomination and the Kingdom of Christ. A central board of a few highly paid administrators will deprive the churches of the advantages of the services of these advocates of special causes settled in our parishes. More than this, sets of directors of separate societies furnish the nucleus of our best collecting agencies.

6. How many of the largest donations to the several boards in the past have come from those who were themselves directors or from their friends or their business mates from whom they have personally solicited funds and whom they have interested in benefactions! What corresponding services will these eight departmental committees furnish for these eight bonded working groups who often grow into relations of personal friendship with each other and unite their sympathetic labors with their weaker brethren, and who tap the springs of benevolence for the causes which they cherish? May we not by this extinction of these tributary springs dry up our fountains? Can we really be said to gain efficiency where we sacrifice the peculiar and distinctive contributions of men of understanding hearts, where are found the cultures for generosity in others. Does not the increase of home expenses for our churches over the amount of benevolences in our own and other denominations which have begun the centralizing process indicate that we are already feeling the effects of our sounding brass efficiency crusades? Are we not gathering for a suicidal plunge when we are ready to substitute supermanagement for friendly fellowship service?

Boston, Mass. WILLIAM R. CAMPBELL.

Against Periodicals Merger

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Every time I read a protest against merging the Missionary Herald with The Congregationalist I want to add mine, but I am not in the habit of writing to the newspapers.

The Missionary Herald is a splendid magazine and grows better all the time. I feel it would be an immense loss to cut it down. It stimulates interest in missions and I am sure the gifts to the American Board will fall off without it. The increased cost of the three publications merged will prevent some people from taking any of them. Those who do not want to read about missions will skip it, even if tacked on to The Congregationalist.

I hope we can keep our publications just as they are. I take all three, and read them all. I feel a deep interest in this matter.

MARY J. WARREN (Mrs. Wm. H.).

Washington, D. C.

A Suggestion from the Andover Case

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Those who have been urging the merger of the missionary societies can hardly have failed to notice the decision handed down by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in the Andover Case. It is, however, of such overwhelming significance for such a program as that outlined by the Committee of Twelve that one is certainly pardoned for calling attention to it again and again, lest any who may have to vote on their proposition fail to keep it in mind. The essence of that declaration by the Court may be found in these words: "It may be that in the light of these findings the founders were unwise," but "the trustees cannot rightly depart from the trusts established."

In the Andover question there has been but a small minority who questioned the advantage to be derived from a union with Harvard. The scheme of the Committee of Twelve has aroused no such general approval. But all this can be put to one side. It is an indisputable fact that the two greatest gifts to the A. M. A., the "Hand Fund" and the "Hall Fund," came to it because the Association was not aligned with other denominational missionary societies, but stood on a broader platform. To those who know fully the reason these great trust funds were created and the attitude of their donors, the merger proposals have seemed morally reprehensible. But it is now abundantly evident that if for the great end of saving a few capital letters in an Apportionment budget the denomination should be induced to attempt to outwit and defeat the intentions of these two givers, to say nothing of others who have given with as clear purpose though in smaller sums, the Courts would not permit it.

Cleveland, O. FERDINAND Q. BLANCHARD.

Edward M. Noyes Endorsed

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

I heartily endorse the position of Edward M. Noyes on what he has to say in the Oct. 1, 1925, issue of The Congregationalist on the proposal to consolidate the missionary magazines with The Congregationalist.

The files of these magazines in private and public libraries for reference, ever valuable, and now of increasing value, would be broken while the work they represent goes on and furnishes constantly valuable material to be conserved for future historians in a form more convenient for handling than in a weekly newspaper. Look over the files of the Herald for the past seventy-five and more years, as an illustration, and see what a mine of rich veins of information they contain of races, and peoples, and lands, and all convenien ranged for easy handling. In these f vastly more than mere missionary ne will not elaborate; but surely it is wor sidering in the discussion. I am for cor the files as they are.

I have read The Congregationalist a sionary publications for more than sixty and believe they were never so valuable What splendid editing! What improver form and matter! Let well enough Devise some other method for the circ and support of our splendid family pape Impress upon the students going into t torates from our seminaries the imp and great value of all these publications their people. Circulate them. Rouse t tors, already in the work, to a more cultivation of these spots in the mis field.

Not to extend this; again, I say, c well what Brother Noyes puts forth in ticle I heartily indorse.

Fargo, N. D. (Rev.) O. P. CHAM

The One Great Merger

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

Is it not time to begin to think abo plan for the One Great Merger? The loyal member of the Congregational C I am one of those who hope and pray day when denominational lines shall be erated, and there shall be real union am Protestant churches. Why Congregatio Baptists, Methodists, or Presbyterians? not all belong to the Protestant Chu Christ?

The Master knew no such divisions Church; and it is most confusing to o eign brethren, who in China refer to the odists as the "Me-Church" and the Bapt the "Church of the Great Wash," and s think we all have different religions.

In union there is strength, and I the day is coming when we will realiz we must have that strength.

But we cannot be one until we are wil give up our denominational names.

I pray for that good day when there be one Protestant Church of Chri America. JUST A HUMBLE LAY

Can We Unite with Baptists

To the Editor of The Congregationalist:

At an informal gathering of ministe day an able and representative Baptist said that if Congregationalists would tute for infant baptism a ceremony of cration without the use of water the B would adopt a similar ceremony and union could be effected on that basis. Council at Washington could do nothin ter than to make an overture for such a At least it is worth considering.

The Baptists stand nearest to us in Three hundred years ago they, together our forefathers, struggled for liberty an mocracy. They separated from us on a of infant baptism. The younger minist our denomination are not strongly ins upon infant baptism. Most Congregatio regard it chiefly as a symbol of consecr Fosdick is leading the Baptists to a b platform. It would, of course, require to consummate a union. But there is a better prospect of success in this dir than in any negotiation with Episcop since the Baptists are our kind of folks.

Bakersfield, Vt. WILLIAM COLTON CLA

The war-time slacker was a traitor peace-time slacker is a parasite.—Ann Mower.

HYMNS for the LIVING AGE

Edited by H. AUGUSTINE SMITH

Director of Fine Arts in Religion, Boston University
Director of Music, Chautauqua, N. Y.

Important features of this book:

All words are between the staffs, making it possible to read and sing with ease.

The reinforced binding protects the book against the hard, if devout usage of over-zealous members of the choir.

The responsive readings, which mark a new epoch in Biblical literature for public worship are in the front pages where they can be used without throwing the book out of balance.

The index, which is so rarely used, is in the back of the book.

The musical settings constitute a rich and varied feast throughout and are fitted to the text with great care.

The music is within the range of the average voice and creates no unwilling sopranos and bassos.

No section of the book is over-populated; there are a number of social service hymns, but not at the expense of hymns of devotion.

The price of HYMNS FOR THE LIVING AGE is $1.75. The introductory rate is $1.35 with transportation additional, from New York or Chicago.

A post-card request will bring a returnable copy for your study

THE CENTURY CO.

353 Fourth Avenue New York City

The most usable, satisfactory and beautiful hymnal before the churches.

Hymns of the Christian Life

Edited by

MILTON S. LITTLEFIELD, D.D.

12,000 copies sold in six months!

THE REASONS:

A rich selection of the ageless hymns.
Hymns set to the right tunes.
The new hymns voice the social consciousness.
Words within the music staff.
Hymns logically grouped and in orderly progression.
Responsive Readings: each selection occupies a single page.

Examination copy on request.

Price, single copy $2.00 $135.00 per 100

A. S. BARNES and COMPANY

Publishers of Hymn Books Since 1855

7 West 45th Street New York City

eaching the "Gospel of the Open Mind"

e 19th season of the Ford Hall Forum ngs, held in the Ford Building, Boston, Sunday evening from October to April the auspices of the Boston Baptist So- Union, opens Oct. 18 with an address by be Pound, Dean of Harvard Law School. Oct. 25, the speaker will be Dr. Charles cher, former Rabbi of Temple Israel, Bos- a stimulating, thought-provoking speaker writer. Although a former rabbi, he is ly married to a Gentile and will talk on ed Marriages." Nov. 1, Dr. James J. h, of New York, eminent Catholic physi- and writer, will speak on the subject "Is Worth Living?" On Nov. 8, Hugh ns, Professor of Education at Teachers ge, Columbia University, whose newest Creative Youth, may influence our teach- ethods considerably, will speak on "Set- Free the Creative Spirit." Nov. 15, Rabbi en S. Wise, of New York, just returned Europe, will discuss "The Tragedy of ican Self-Isolation." On Nov. 22, the will give the youths a chance to ex- themselves. Rabbi Wise's young son, s Waterman Wise, will speak on "The ious Spirit and Modern Youth," and as Que Harrison, leader of the Youth ment, will talk on "The Challenge of to Modern Youth." Nov. 29 comes Rev. el J. Ahern, S.J., recently Professor and of the Department of Chemistry and Ge- at the College of the Holy Cross, Worces- nd now at St. Joseph's College, Philadel- His subject is "What a Scientist-Theo- Believes of Evolution."

en comes the ever popular Margaret Slat- on Dec. 6. Dec. 13 brings Mrs. Frank B. eth, expert on Scientific Management and nother of eleven children, and her subject be "The Man's Place in the Home." Dec. Dr. Sherwood Eddy and Dr. D. Brewer brothers and distinguished Congregation- will discuss the Christian attitude d war and pacifism from different angles. uncement of other speakers will be made

George W. Coleman continues as direc- nd the inspiring chairman of the meetings, he Baptist Social Union gives the free use e halls besides helping on the financial t. There will be a half hour's musical am, commencing promptly at 7.30. Fol- g the address comes the usual hour's ques- period. The ever popular Henry Gideon be in charge of the music as usual, assisted ussell Cook. The staff of workers and s will continue under the direction of s P. Smith. The Round Table confer- will be resumed the third Sunday in No- er under the leadership of Walter L. ell.

e registered membership of the Ford Hall s last year ran to 1385 and by a vote of Folks is limited to 1,500 for this season. ations are that the limit may be reached in the season. This inner circle of the n's loyal supporters held an enthusiastic ing Oct. 4. It will meet at 4 the first ay afternoon of each month for discussion good fellowship, as heretofore. Member- assures early admission to a seat at the n meeting and costs $1.

e broadcasting of Ford Hall meetings h occurred occasionally last season, with rkable success, reaching most of the states of the Rocky Mountains, Canada, and, at once, even England, will be continued this n every other Sunday night beginning with 18.

From Our Western Editor

(Continued from page 519)

we put into the account the fact that religious leadership is emphasized and that this educational work is done in the formative period of life, we see at once that the contribution is beyond estimate. These men who are at the head of colleges large and colleges small, who go up and down the country with the vision of youth in their hearts, must be closely akin to the Master himself, who looked upon a youth and loved him.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 28, 1925. R. W. G.

"A very human saint"

The Life of Henry B. Wright

GEORGE STEWART, JR.

THE LIFE OF HENRY B. WRIGHT, by George Stewart, Jr., tells the fascinating life story of the man who "for twenty-four years was the strongest influence for Christian living of any man of his day among the undergraduates of Yale." His ideals of living, his remarkable ability to help others with personal problems, his genius for friendship, crowded his life with dramatic incident. "No religious worker, whether layman or clergyman, who desires to do a truly creative work, can afford to miss the spell of this transparent and communicative life," writes Dr. John R. Mott. Cloth, $3.00

Other NEW Books with Purpose

And Who Is My Neighbor?

An outline for the study of race relations in America, sponsored by the National Conference on the Christian Way of Life. Cloth, $1.00; 12 for $10.00 Paper, .75; 12 for $7.50

Missions and World Problems

A new discussion outline sponsored by the National Conference on the Christian Way of Life, which is aimed to provoke thought and discussion on the important issues involved. Paper, .75

Facing Student Problems

A. BRUCE CURRY, JR.

"Probably no other living man has interested so many students in the study of the life and teachings of Jesus, within this or any other single college generation, as has Prof. Curry," writes another worker with students. This book is for the group discussion leader, and takes up typical problems student groups are called upon to face. Paper, $1.00

The Story of Jesus

THOMAS W. GRAHAM, Editor

A complete record of Matthew, Mark and Luke in a single narrative—an interweaving of all the material in the three gospels into a single story. Dr. Moffatt's translation has been used. Cloth, $1.50

Why the Church?

An outline similar to "And Who Is My Neighbor?" and "Missions and World Problems," which takes up the principal functions of the church, from the point of view of the average church member. Cloth, .90; 12 for $9.00 Paper, .60; 12 for $6.00

Teaching of the Prophets

CHARLES A. HAWLEY

Takes up a portion of the Bible often neglected and least understood. The poetic flavor and literary charm of the original Hebrew are beautifully brought out in Dr. Hawley's translations of the passages selected for study. Cloth, $1.25

ASSOCIATION PRESS

347 Madison Avenue New York City

BOOKS WITH PURPOSE AP

EVIL COMMUNICATIONS or COMPANIONSHIPS?

How true it is that the value of an important and oft-quoted text lies in the accuracy of its translation and on its finer shades of meaning! Thus it is that, according to the American Standard Bible First Corinthians, 15: 33, "evil companionships" rather than "evil communications," corrupt good morals—not good manners. So it is throughout this marvelously accurate version—the

A POPULAR NUMBER (with topical helps) 152-T—Genuine leather seal grain, divinity circuit, round corners, title stamped on back in pure gold, at leading bookstores or direct of the publishers. $3.50

Nelson American Standard Bible

(Edited by American Revision Committee)

there are revisions which clarify meanings and throw new light on both text and application. Use the American Standard Bible in your reading; in your devotion; in your study; for it, more clearly than any version that has gone before, reveals the mind and will of God.

The American Standard Bible text has been adopted by all the leading Colleges, Theological Seminaries, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and Bible Schools in the United States.

The American Standard Bible text is used by over 13,000,000 Sabbath School scholars from which to study the International, Graded or other Bible lessons.

The American Standard Bible is for sale by all booksellers

THOMAS NELSON & SONS
383-K Fourth Ave., New York City

DEAR SIRS: Kindly send me a FREE copy of your book entitled "The Wonderful Story," telling how the Bible came down through the ages. This does not obligate me in any way.

Name_____

Street No._____

City_____

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

Summer Activity in Southern Florida

Rev. J. W. Frost, who has been acting as summer associate pastor at Coconut Grove, Fla., has been called to become assistant pastor to Rev. J. D. Kuykendall. Mr. Frost has occupied the pulpit all summer and will have charge of the young people's work and new missionary developments.

The new William Jennings Bryan Memorial Methodist Church is nearing completion on a piece of property almost opposite Plymouth Church. This is a most unusual structure and will attract a large number of winter visitors.

Rev. T. B. Powell, of Coral Gables, has "stayed by the stuff" this summer until the latter part of September, when he went to New York. The church is now busily engaged completing its physical equipment and will soon have a most imposing group of buildings. A community kindergarten was started the latter part of September to meet in the Sunday school room.

Rev. R. N. Ward, of First Church, Miami, has remained with his church with the exception of a military vacation which he took with the Florida National Guard of which he is Major. Extensive improvements are planned for this church in the fall.

The church at West Palm Beach entertained the South East Coast Association the first week in October. A splendid program has been prepared by Rev. H. R. Core, of Homestead, who is registrar of the association. Mr. Core has been supplying pulpits in the rural regions about Homestead and Goulds and Silver Bluff.

The State Conference Board of Trustees held a meeting at Dayton, Oct. 6, to consider the matter of the resignation of Dr. L. H. Keller, superintendent, and the appointment of his successor. Dr. Keller has resigned his position in order to accept the presidency of Atlanta Theological Seminary.

Miss Olive Pearson, of the Extension Boards, New York, was a visitor in the Miami district recently in the interest of organizing a conference for young people. She is engaged with others in arranging for young people's week-end conferences throughout the entire state. The churches in the Miami District will arrange for one of these meetings.

At Miami Beach the summer program has been kept up with unusual interest in all departments of the church. Rev. W. V. Meredith, a Methodist, and a recent student at Union Seminary, spent three months with this church as associate pastor. He took full charge while Dr. E. A. King, pastor of the church, took his vacation. The Miami Beach Church has just secured a valuable piece of property in the center of the city. As soon as building conditions warrant it the erection of a beautiful new church will be begun. The church will consist of an auditorium, tower, and chimes, community house of two stories for the Sunday school and social purposes, together with a ladies' parlor and kitchen and a parsonage and garage.

J. H. L.

San Francisco's Farewell

On the threshold of welcoming the great Diamond Jubilee Celebration, on Aug. 21, Congregationalists of San Francisco Bay assembled once again in First Church, San Francisco, to say "God Speed You" to a group of missionaries sailing the next day. Some were going for the first time into their great life adventure; others glowed with the anticipation of getting back to beloved work. This send-off, arranged under the joint auspices of the A. B. C. F. M. and the Woman's Board of the Pacific, is becoming accepted as an annual affair and is looked forward to by Northern California Congregationalists with keen interest.

The group this year included from China: Rev. and Mrs. Watts O. Pye, Shansi; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Christian, Foochow; Dr. Edward L. Bliss, Shaowu; Miss Leona L. Burr, Shaowu; Dr. Josephine Kennedy, Shaowu; Miss Alice E. Murphy, North China; from Japan: Miss Isabelle McCausland, Miss Eleanor Wilson, Miss Evelyn Boyd, and Miss Mabel Durland; from Africa, Mr. and Mrs. Emory D. Alvord, Rhodesia; from Czechoslovakia, Rev. John S. Porter, Prague.

In the absence of Dr. Henry H. Kelsey, Rev. Jerome C. Holmes, formerly missionary in Japan, who is to take up Dr. Kelsey's presided. The absence of Dr. Kelsey, a the center of these occasions, was felt and greetings were sent to him from the pany assembled.

Among the missionaries who spoke John S. Porter of Prague, Czechoslov Miss McCausland of Kobe College, J Emory D. Alvord of Rhodesia, Africa; Watts O. Pye of Shansi, China.

On the next day aboard the President this large group of missionary leaders westward through the Golden Gate.

Ye Olde English Village Fair

Ye Olde English Village Faire, a novel of entertainment in the social life of Church, Bradford, Mass., Rev. G. E. minister, was held on the afternoon and ev of Sept. 23. Church Street, a short hig with the meeting-house facing on one sid the town common bordering the other, closed to traffic, furnishing an ideal locatio the event. It was a real fair, typical English street fairs of a century or more

The street was lined with stalls or b made of thatched straw spread over wooden frames. There were Ye Bunne Sh Ye Olde English Dairy, Ye Olde Mother bard's Cupboard, Ye Olde English Sweet and new line of

Messenger's Scripture TEXT CALENDAR

SACRED WALL MOTTOS

Make Money for Your Church

Any live organization in your Church can quickly and easily raise from $50 to $500 selling Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars and Sacred Wall Mottos. Churches the country over have for years been writing pledges and raising funds for various uses by selling the beautiful Text Calendars. Now we have added an entirely new line of 29 handsome Art Velvet Sacred Wall Mottos which readily sell in virtually every Christian Home.

Plans Endorsed By Ministers

Ministers, church societies and classes everywhere endorse and praise our successful plans as dignified methods of raising money for the Church.

Write your own publishing house today for plans and prices on Messenger's 1926 Scripture Text Calendars and Sacred Wall Mottos.

MESSENGER PUBLISHING CO.
5932-44 Wentworth Ave. Chicago, Illinois

WINSTON-INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLES
SELF-PRONOUNCING

Contain specially prepared Helps to Bible Study and many Attractive Illustrations suitable for children.

Send for Illustrated Catalog
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., Publishers
American Bible Headquarters
391 Winston Building Philadelphia

FOR SECOND HAND Theological Books

Write to Schulte's Book Store. Over 100,000 Volumes Classified by Subject in Stock.

New catalogue of 3,000 items of Commentaries, Homiletics, Church History, Philosophy, Psychology, etc. Free upon request.

Schulte's Book Store 80 and 82 Fourth Ave. NEW YORK CITY

21 DIVISIONS OF CONTENT in each of which are beautiful new Sund School Songs, successful copyrights other publishers, the outstanding hyn of the church bearing on each subje These are in MAGNIFICAT.

Mr. Superintendent!

Buy "Magnificat" for your Sunday School and y "musical" troubles are at an end. The "N Idea," found only in "Magnificat," the "Orders Worship," complete with music, the 21 departmen the orchestration (11 instruments), and the unequal collection of Songs, Hymns, and Special Selectio provide a storehouse of treasures. Send for a retu able copy and examine it. $30.00, $35.00, $40. $45 00, according to binding.

HALL-MACK CO., 21st and Arch Sts., Philadelp

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL SERIES
Self-Knowledge Book
FOR Edited by EDWARD BOK

PARENTS—How Shall I Tell My Child?—Chapi
BOYS—When a Boy Becomes a Man—Bisseker
YOUNG MEN—Instead of Wild Oats—Hall
CHILDREN—The Spark of Life—Morley
GIRLS—The Changing Girl—Latimer
YOUNG WOMEN—In Her Teens—Chapman

Only 35 Cents Each (3 for $1.00)
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Avenue, C

Bibles for C. E., Churches, Schools

Send for Catalog or call at the
Massachusetts Bible Society
41 Bromfield St., Boston

THE PILGRIM HYMNA
"The best hymn book in America"
Sample copy on request
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New Yo 19 S. La Salle St Chic

ad and Needle Shoppe. Attendants of booths were dressed in period costume. ront of the church, and using its broad was Ye Olde Market Garden, containing e display of fruits, vegetables, and flowers. gardener in charge wore the garb of rural and of long ago. In the parsonage, next to the church, was Ye Olde Curiosity pe, where were assembled rare collections exhibits, also books, bric-a-brac, curios, nany novel articles. The Shoppe was pre- over by Colonial dames. In the chapel e church was Ye Spire and Bell Inn, where eteria supper was served. Tea and waffles also served on the lawn in front of the The attendants wore Colonial costumes, of them being heirlooms.

colorful feature of the fair was a gypsy npment, with its covered wagon, tent, t-making, and fortune telling. Members is encampment, also many other people in t-colored costumes, mingled with the pa- of the fair. The Town Crier, going up lown the village street with a large bell, nnouncing the events of the day, attracted attention. An interesting and pleasing am was provided. There was old Eng- village dancing both afternoon and even- in which over forty dancers in Colonial me took part. The children found partic- delight in a Punch and Judy show, two rmances being given in the afternoon and ame in the evening. At both times there was also a parade. The arrival of the king and queen and the royal party was heralded by trumpeters, and they were received by all the fair people. A procession was then formed with over 100 in costume participating and marching through the fair grounds. This company of marchers, from the king and queen at the head of the line in gorgeous apparel to the hurdy-gurdy man and his monkey at the end, presented a spectacle that was instructive as well as highly entertaining. An added evening attraction was the playing of old English hunting songs and ballads by a band which the men of the church generously furnished. At the close of the regular evening program there was general street dancing, at which time Mr. Harold Fellows, popular entertainer, sang selections accompanied by the band.

The fair was under the personal direction of Mrs. Norman Hodgdon, president of the Parish Circle, with Mrs. C. A. Ellis, general chairman, and all the church organizations cooperating. The village street dancing was in charge of Mrs. Florence Dangerfield of Bradford Academy.

The event was unusual and picturesque. Much time and effort were spent in preparation. The weather was perfect, the attendance large, the receipts gratifying. The people of the church and parish were aroused and united to a marked degree, and this is regarded as a good omen at the beginning of the church year.

With the States in Conference

The Pilgrims in Tennessee

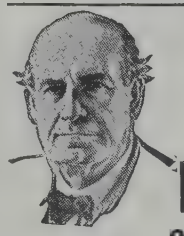
e Tennessee Conference is not yet in its It is young, but healthy and growing. enth annual meeting was held Sept. 21-23. neeting place was Daisy, a thriving little trial town, nestled among the beautiful tains on the Dixie Highway near Chatta-. It is a community church, admitted to egational fellowship a year ago. The h, under the leadership of its first pastor, J. M. Peyton, has been an apt pupil. It tly speaks the language of our Congre- al Canaan, in spite of the unfortunate nce of Bryan at Dayton, a few miles The program shaped by Supt. F. P. inger and the pastor had interesting res. On the last evening The Cabin, the but plain parish house, was dedicated. Vim, Vigor, Victory Class of 35 young from East Lake Church, Chattanooga, at- d the young people's session in their class rms on Tuesday evening and assisted in usic. It is one of the notable young classes of the city and state. The ad- s were by Miss Helen Dizney of China Supt. L. H. Keller. The devotional ser- was led by Mr. Howard, a Yale student, f Rev. Thomas Howard of Pleasant Hill, tly from glorious service in the Rainy n of Mississippi. The messages of r and son were inspiring. Rev. Mark N. ier, the veteran missionary of the Tennes- mountains, detained at home for several by a serious illness, attended the meeting was shown every mark of affection and es- Mrs. J. W. Riley presided at the n's meeting. Dr. Marston S. Freeman hattanooga was elected moderator and J. T. Henry of Soddy served as clerk. at events at Dayton, Tenn., give Congre- al churches and pastors an honored place e religious life of the state because of open stand for religious freedom and prog- This was the emphatic note of addresses e several pastors of the conference and lon. Charles W. Lusk, a member of Pil- grim Church, Chattanooga. One attending the conference meeting in the Southeast is impressed with the tremendous influence of our new but aggressive Congregationalism in the South.

The Kentucky Meeting

The Kentucky Conference, representing the small group of Kentucky churches, met in Evarts, Sept. 26-27, for the annual meeting. Virginia was represented by Rev. A. J. Wolfe, a ministerial member of the conference; Dr. F. L. Moore, of New York, and Supt. L. H. Keller, of Jacksonville, and Assistant Supt. F. P. Ensminger, represented the wider fellowship. Dr. Moore was present for a careful study of the important Evarts parish and a conference with the church concerning its future and the erection of a new house of worship. Miss Helen Dizney, representing the Woman's Board, spoke of her work in China. Rev. A. O. Stevens, of Williamsburg, was elected moderator and Rev. A. J. Wolfe, scribe. The conference sermon by Dr. Stevens was one of notable strength. Mr. Gilles, a lawyer and member of the Williamsburg Church, read a strong paper on the justification of Congregationalism in Kentucky. It was remarked that such a paper by a layman abundantly justifies the development of Congregational churches in the state.

A rally of the young people was a feature of the meeting, as it is of all our association and conference meetings in the Southeast. The women of the Kentucky churches make good progress in their work and Mrs. A. O.

The Undelivered Address



The Last Message

OF

William Jennings Bryan

Foreword by MRS. BRYAN

¶ The famous Bible champion called this work "the mountain-peak of my life's work."

¶ A summation of all that Mr. Bryan had gathered in defense of the Scriptures, together with some of Mr. Bryan's personal experiences, leading up to its publication, foreword by Mrs. Bryan, the funeral address. $1.00

MR. BRYAN'S OTHER BOOKS

In His Image.....$1.75
Seven Questions in Dispute.....$1.25
Heart-to-Heart Appeals.....$1.25
Famous Figures of the Old Testament $1.50
Christ and His Companions.....$1.50

At All Booksellers Send for Complete Circular

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY

New York, 158 Fifth Avenue Chicago, 17 N. Wabash Avenue

New Popular $1.75 Edition

The Children's Bible

A TRANSLATION IN SIMPLE ENGLISH OF SELECTIONS FROM THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

Arranged by

Henry A. Sherman and Charles Foster Kent

Here is the wonderful old story presented in its most beautiful form. This book, the result of years of study, is the perfect Bible for children. Its exquisite illustrations, smooth-flowing text of simple English, its clear type and attractive binding make it an irresistible book.

Here is the ideal gift for any child. There is more fascination in this stirring story of marching hosts, of life and love and death, than in any other story in any language.

With full-color frontispiece and wrap and eight duotone illustrations.

Here is the Gift Ideal

The regular $3.50 edition of "The Children's Bible", with 30 full-page illustrations in full-color and duotone, will be continued unchanged.

Charles Scribner's Sons, 597-99 Fifth Avenue, New York

Stevens was elected president of women's work for the coming year.

A half-block from the church where the conference meetings were being held, the Holiness people were holding a tent meeting that had been in progress for a month. All day Sunday and in the evenings until midnight could be heard the weird jazz songs and the wild dervish shouts from the tent. It all contrasted strangely with the beautiful worship periods of the conference meeting and the earnest and quiet study of the world's needs. This Holiness movement is sweeping through all the Southern States and meetings of this demoralizing character are held in all cities and most villages.

First Aid for Whooping Cough

Rub Roche's Embrocation thoroughly into the little sufferer's chest. Penetrating deeply it helps loosen the phlegm and brings relief.

Roche's has earned the endorsement of thousands of mothers—used successfully since 1802. All Druggists.

E. FOUGERA & CO., Inc., New York
W. Edward & Son, London, Eng.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION
Fights Whooping Cough and Croup

Teach Children To Use Cuticura

Soothes and Heals Rashes and Irritations

Cuticura Soap Keeps the Skin Clear

From West to East

HAWAII

Rev. T. C. Williams Returns

Rev. T. C. Williams, pastor of the Union Church, Kohala, returned recently from a six months' furlough. During his absence the church was ministered to by neighboring pastors and board secretaries.

Laymen Conduct Meetings on Neighboring Island

Four Japanese laymen of the Nuuanu Japanese Church, Honolulu, went, at their own expense, to the Island of Maui, and conducted a successful series of meetings among the Japanese of that Island. Their visit of a we used in wonderful ways, and as a resul people expressed a vital interest in the tian way of living. Those who went t were C. Okubo, J. Watanabe, K. Masu Y. Suzuki.

CALIFORNIA

Illness of Dr. Henry K. Booth

The summer months have brought the of Dr. Henry K. Booth of First Church Beach, to a painful climax. A major op was necessary. The good word comes provement. During his absence the pul been supplied by a series of preachers, well organized departments have been on by a corps of devoted workers. His friends are watching eagerly for his turn to health.

Los Alamitos Church Lives Again

Once a live ministry to its communi Los Alamitos Church lapsed for several as its neighbors had moved away and n vives with an ample work to do. A big factory is the business life of this beach and now employs many workers. Und leadership of Rev. F. P. Rosselot, ab the Protestant families have been either in the membership, or in the school.

A recognition service was held Sept. 1 rooms of the Sugar Factory Club Hous turned over to the women who served ner. At one of the tables sat the post who is a Roman Catholic. The counci most hearty welcome to the new churc starts with a charter membership of already there are others to add to that n

Many Accessions at Wilshire, Los Ang

So heavy have been the pressing nee his own attention at the new church plan Dr. Frank Dyer has remained at his p summer, preaching morning and evening. however, he takes a much needed vacati ing for several weeks to Washington a East.

Since the services of the Wilshire began in the theater of the Ambassador considerable sentiment attaches to that ing place, and, moreover, the hotel priz effect of these Sunday gatherings. quently they will be continued, both fo contribution to the strength of the and for their own spiritual values.

One of the great crises coming to any ter is found in the dedication of a With so great a building enterprise a shire, and the added complexity of a dua istry, this could not be escaped. There been some dismissions and losses in m ship. What an encouragement then to in September 105 new friends into membe It was a great and inspiring ingatherin fruit of a summer's campaigning, foll as it did, so large an increase in the fo the time of the dedication of the new bu Wilshire has a huge program before

Classified Wants

Advertisements under these headings cost four cents per word each insertion, including initials and address; minimum cost 60 cents per insertion. Keyed ads. (care Congregationalist, Boston) cost 15 cents additional. Cash in advance only.

TEACHERS WANTED

College and normal graduates for emergency calls, public and private schools. American Teachers' Agency (New England and National), Springfield, Mass.

Teachers wanted for public and private schools and colleges. Calls coming daily. Good positions for good teachers. Send for circulars. Albany Teachers' Agency, Albany, N. Y.

LITERARY

Speakers, Writers—Material prepared on special subjects. Expert service. Authors Research Bureau, 500 Fifth Ave., New York.

AGENTS WANTED

Agents—Make big money every week selling Hurlburt's Story of the Bible, Safe Counsel, Bible, Testaments, etc. All big sellers. Write National Book and Bible House, 21 W. Elm St., Chicago, Ill.

Make Big Money selling Christmas Greeting Cards. Men and women agents easily make $10 to $20 a day. We have a magnificent box assortment of 21 hand-colored and engraved cards with envelopes, that sells for $1.00. Cost you 50 cents. Every home buys. Samples free. Exclusive territory. Waltham Art Publishers, Dept. 107, Waltham, Mass.

HELP WANTED

Church Assistant. Capable woman for directing religious education, young people and parish work. Fine central Iowa church. Salary Commensurate with ability. Field now open. Write promptly to Rev. W. K. Williams, Marshalltown, Ia.

MISCELLANEOUS

To Rent—Small furnished bungalow in Pomona, Fla., for winter. Hilltop Farms, Danbury, Conn.

Boarders wanted: Very cozy home, having all modern conveniences, for aged couples. Valid recommendations in the beautiful country of East Woodstock, Ct. Mrs. John Aldrich.

Cut this advertisement out, send with your address and five cents (stamps accepted), to Elizabeth Merriam, Beech St., Framingham, Mass. You will receive John's Gospel, with map and method of interesting others in Bible reading. Tested fifteen years. It works.

MISCELLANEOUS

Sunday Evenings with the Great Hymns of the Church; featuring such Hymns as "Love that wilt not let me go," "Dear Lord and Father," "Faith of our fathers." Six complete screen services. Highest class lantern slides. Complete service with Scriptures, Prayers, an illustrated solo, and the feature hymn. Manuscript hymn study, and music for organist, etc. Rented to ministers east of Chicago. For descriptive circular send card to Miss Adelaide Roth, 397 Marlborough Rd., Brooklyn, N. Y.

For Rent—For six months, from Nov. 1, my cottage bungalow home, furnished. Lexington, Mass. Tel. 1194. Address "A. B. C.," Congregationalist.

Earn $25 weekly, spare time, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary. Copyright book free. Press Syndicate, 1228, St. Louis, Mo.

In country, for aged couples, comfortable home having all modern conveniences. Fresh eggs, milk, vegetables. Screened piazza, $15 a week. Mrs. Janet Goss, Fays Ave., Lynn, Mass.

Pews for sale. New style, seating 240. Material finished pine with hardwood trimmings and cushions. Choir railing boxed in same wood and finish. Reason for sale, building used for Community Centre. Address Miss Bertha Estey, Putney, Vt.

Collection Envelopes—8 cents per carton. "Wasteless System" and all kinds. Write Dufold-Trifold Co., Trenton, N. J.

Washington, D. C. Travelers by automobile or train will find excellent accommodations, homelike rooms, downtown, close to the White House. Two blocks from the new Washington Auditorium. Suites with private baths for large or small parties. Running water in all rooms. Restaurants near. Large brick garage on premises. Free city map. Telephone, Franklin 1142. Address Mrs. Kern, 1912 "G" St., Northwest.

The Whole Bible—Thirty-one volumes packed in case with adjustable leather cover. Cloth bound, good print, 18 maps. Price, postpaid, $2.00. Sample volume, five cents. Address Elizabeth Merriam, Framingham, Mass. Send self-addressed envelope and stamp for sample tracts containing parables.

For rent—Pleasant fall and winter home on salt water. Completely furnished. Four bedrooms, two bathrooms. Electric lights. Oyster bed. State roads. Good high school, churches. S. C. Wolcott, Nuttall, Gloucester Co., Va.

Mail Order Printing. Ask for quotations. 500 envelopes and 500 letterheads or statements or billheads, $5.00. The Print Shop, E. Northfield, Mass.

MINISTERS—Have you books you no longer need? If so, why not try an ad in our classified columns in an effort to dispose of them? Some other pastor may want to purchase them.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
The Congregationalist, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

British Preachers, 192 BEST SERMONS FROM BRITAIN

SIR JAMES MARCHANT (Editor)

A glance at this list of eminent preachers will prov worth-while character of this great sermon collect

Bishop of Birmingham	Dean Inge of St. Paul's
Bishop of Durham	Principal L. P. Jacks,
James Black, D.D.	John Kelman, D.D.
Charles Brown, D.D.	Norman Maclean, D.D.
Dean Burroughs of Bristol	F. B. Meyer, D.D.
R. J. Campbell, D.D.	George H. Morrison, D.
J. G. Carlile, D.D.	F. W. Norwood, D.D.
H. Tydeman Chilvers	James Reid, M.A.
H. H. Farmer, M.A.	Leyton Richards, M.A.
R. C. Gillie, M.A.	A. Maude Royden
John A. Hutton, D.D.

$1.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

F. H. REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Ave., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Ave., Ch

; its great neighborhood into the pur-f the building, and the organization of ple in service. Moreover, in another ars, there is the hope to complete the litional units of the splendid structure.
st Dr. Dyer, Rev. Bryant Preston has cured as a general manager of business ier affairs, and to share in preaching.
eston has had much experience in min-and business affairs and is a strong e.

ng the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. L.
so well known for his book, What and Is God? and for the new one, What hy Is Man?, will occupy the pulpit.
mer subject will be used for a course ning sermons, and the second topic for es of evening sermons.

OKLAHOMA

g Project of Waynoka Church

noka is an important railroad center in Oklahoma. Three years of drought ced a heavy burden on the congrega-
The Sunday school has been growing un-church house was crowded to the doors.
the congregation, under the able leader-their pastor, Rev. G. K. Goodwin, del to build. They found that for $4,500 uld erect a house of worship large for their growing congregation, for the school and for the social work of the
The membership of the church has ed liberally and the pastor has sent out o 1,200 acquaintances, asking each one onation of $2.00. A ready response is to this modest request to aid this fron-amunity to make provision for carrying work of the church. The young people Christian Endeavor Society have already ed the basement, the girls vieing with s in driving the teams and holding the d scraper as they made the excavation.
sement with its retaining walls is alompleted.

MINNESOTA

at Appleton

th at Appleton has been signally blessed eased interest and attendance. Recently ng men expressed their desire to begin ristian life. The church membership bled during the six years of the pastor-Rev. O. A. Barnes.

Years at Minnewashta

eventh anniversary of the pastorate of
M. Tesh at Minnewashta was celebrated Sept. 13. During the seven years the has developed from a one room church,
-and-miss supply on Sunday and a Sunol, to a fully equipped community plant extensive community service program.
h has also taken charge of the new Com-Church at Watertown. A good start n made toward securing a parsonage for ashta. Watertown is in the process of a new church building.

ILLINOIS

Assistant at First, Oak Park

John A. Gardner, a middler at Chicago ry, has just begun work at First Oak Park, as student-assistant on a ie basis. He will have special charge of s' and young people's work. Mr. Gard-the son of Dr. John Gardner, pastor of hurch, Riverside, Cal., and is a gradu-Carleton College.

names of Dr. and Mrs. Watts O. Pye pear on the weekly calendar as credited ary representatives of First Church.
vilege of adding their names in this way bout by their support for the most part

When Sunday Comes

By John Andrew Holmes

The person who feels that after he has attended church "he has got so much religion out of the way" is in about as enviable a frame of mind as the young man who said to himself, "There, I have kissed my fiancee, and have got that over with!"

having been taken over by one of the families of the church.

New Pastor of South Church, Chicago

Rev. W. F. Slade, who has lately begun the pastorate of South Church, Chicago, came from a five-year pastorate at Manhattan, Kan., where the State Agricultural College is located. Dr. Slade had his training at Bates College, at Bangor Seminary, and received his Master's degree at Harvard and his Ph.D. at Clark University. During his administration at Manhattan 275 were added to the church membership and the work carried on for the college students was termed unique and progressive by those familiar with this work. Before coming to Manhattan Dr. Slade had held pastorates in New England and western Pennsylvania. He was chaplain for a while of Atlanta University and during the War was educational director at Camp Devens. He was associated with Dr. Walter Athearn in the Interchurch World Movement, in the Religious Education Survey.

Rev. W. F. Slade

Dr. Slade has served the denomination in most of the offices of his association and state conference and has been a member of the National Council Commission on Men's Work. He was chairman of the state conference committee on religious education in Kansas and gave a great deal of time to this service.

South Church is situated at Drexel and 40th on the South Side and is in a great community of apartment houses and flats. The transient population makes the work difficult. It has started auspiciously, however, under Dr. Slade's leadership and it looks as if he would be able to build up a strong church school. The Sunday audiences have already given great encouragement.

Oak Park's Interest in Labor Discussions

Dr. Albert W. Palmer's Labor Sunday sermon on "Christ and Labor" at First Church, Oak Park, stirred up so much interest among the members of his congregation that some of them called a conference for that evening to discuss the issues involved. After a frank and interesting discussion this group voted to request the civic committee of the Men's League to arrange a series of discussions of the application of the teachings of Jesus to modern industrial relations. These are now being planned.

One paragraph from Dr. Palmer's sermon gives the angle of his approach.

Newton never saw an air-ship. Probably he would have been skeptical as to the possibility of a successful one. He might have turned

Notice

Meetings of the National Council

Conventioners are urged to make reservations on our personally conducted 12 day tour to Washington.

De Luxe Motor Coaches will leave Boston October 19th returning on October 30th.

Sightseeing trips in Philadelphia and New York included
6 full days in Washington

All places of national interest will be visited, including special trip to Mt. Vernon and the Arlington Cemetery.

Return trip over newly completed Storm King Highway, Bear Mountain Bridge, Hudson River, Berkshires and Mohawk Trail.

$94.50 covers everything;
Hotels, meals, transportation, and all side trips.

The ideal and most economical way to attend the Convention.

GREEN'S TOURS
LYNN, MASS.
Tel. Lynn 4249 2280

The Faith, the Falsity, and, the Failure of Christian Science

¶The most searching, poignant expose of the pretentions of Christian Science that has yet been made.

By Woodbridge Riley, Ph.D., Member of the American Psychological Association. Author of "American Thought from Puritanism to Pragmatism."
Frederick W. Peabody, LL.D., Member of Massachusetts Bar. Author of "The Religio-Medical Masquerade."
Charles E. Humiston, M.D., Sc.D., Professor of Surgery, College of Medicine, University of Illinois. $3.50

F. H. REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago

HOOT MON!

Raise funds for your Christian Endeavor, Sunday School, or other Church Societies selling delicious Scotmints. Six flavors—Peppermint, Yeast, Wintergreen, Clove, Cinnamon, and Licorice. Sell for 5c. Everybody has a nickel and everybody likes Scotmints.

NO CAPITAL REQUIRED

We extend you 30 days' credit, ship in any quantities and any assortment of flavors.

	320 Pkgs.	500 Pkgs.	1000 Pkgs.
Sells for	$16.00	$25.00	$50.00
Costs you	9.00	13.50	26.00
YOUR PROFIT	$7.00	$11.50	$24.00

SCOTMINTS CO., Inc., Desk C C-5, Jersey City, N. J.

Clip or Copy and Mail NOW

SCOTMINTS CO., INC.,
Desk CC 5, Jersey City, N. J.

Send .... packages of Scotmints—Following assortment.
....Peppermint ....Licorice
....Yeast ....Cinnamon
....Wintergreen ....Clove

Name .....
Street .....
City .....
Church .....
Society .....
Reference .....

aside an advocate of air-ships with a tolerant smile and a wise quip about "Darius Green and his flying machine." Yet the law of gravitation which he observed and announced operates in the case of air-ships just as effectively as if Newton had known all about them. When something goes wrong with the Shenandoah, the force of gravitation brings her down. So Jesus did not experience in his day many of the things which figure so largely in modern life—strikes, labor unions, corporations, machinery, sabotage, sweat shops, industrial accidents, etc.—but the principles of honest dealing, brotherhood, and human values which he gave the world operate just as surely through these things as the law of gravitation operated on the Shenandoah. H. C. H.

OHIO

Mansfield's Labor Sunday Service

Labor Sunday at First Church, Mansfield, Rev. O. L. Kiplinger, pastor, revealed the willingness and eagerness of labor leaders to co-operate with the church. Before leaving on his vacation, the pastor had written the local Trades Council, inviting them to attend the Labor Sunday service, at which he was to speak on "Co-operation in Industry." Upon his return, Mr. Kiplinger found that the council had appointed a committee to co-operate with him. This committee from the council prepared display advertisements which were paid for by the labor treasury, and also printed posters announcing the service and placed it in all the factories and shops of the city. As a result the service was attended by practically all the leaders of labor groups in the city as well as by considerable numbers of the rank and file. H. C. H.

BALOPTICONS

are used in thousands of schools churches and hospitals. This line of lanterns, for slides and opaque objects—for projection in daylight as well as in the dark—is the most complete in the world.
Write for Catalog
Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 706 St. Paul St., Rochester, N.Y.

THE HALL ORGAN COMPANY
WEST HAVEN, CONN.
High Grade Pipe Organs
Churches Masonic Halls Residences

Individual Cups
Over 50,000 churches use Thomas Service. Self-collecting Tray saves one-fourth cost of others. Catalog and Trial Free.

Thomas Communion Service Co. Box 5 Lima, Ohio,

ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER
for pipe and reed organs. Thousands of churches find economy in using them. Write for particulars.
THE ZEPHYR ELECTRIC ORGAN BLOWER CO., Orrville, Ohio. Dept. B

MENEELY BELL CO.
TROY, N.Y. AND 220 BROADWAY, N.Y. CITY.
BELLS

McShane Bell Foundry Co.
BALTIMORE, MD.
Church BELLS—PEALS
BELL AND TUBULAR CHIMES
ELECTRICALLY PLAYED

Offering Envelopes
For all purposes. Prompt Service
Ask For Prices
THE PILGRIM PRESS 14 Beacon St. Boston 156 5th Ave. New York 19 S. La Salle St. Chicago

FLORIDA

Progress at St. Petersburg

The St. Petersburg Church building is undergoing repairs and improvements. Among the improvements is the enlargement of the main auditorium and the installation of a $3,500 Skinner Pipe Organ.

Dr. Kerrison Juniper and his family spent their vacation at Indian Cave Park, Hendersonville, N. C. During the vacation period Dr. Juniper paid a visit to the Battle Creek Sanitarium where he was strengthened and invigorated for his winter's work.

MASSACHUSETTS

Fourteen Years in Beverly

Rev. Edward A. Chase has given up the guidance of the Washington Street Church, Beverly, after 14 years of service. A lover of preaching and trained in music, Mr. Chase has brought to the services of the church a dignified force. On the practical side, he has specialized in work for boys, gathering large numbers from the whole city and introducing a "Cub Scout" movement for those under Scout age. He has also served on the Boys' Committee of the Y. M. C. A. As a trustee of the Public Library, he has gathered some 300 children in illustrated story hours, followed by a summer outing with the help of the local Rotary Club. He has also done the publicity work of the library, with the special object of guiding the reading of the public. In connection with the Essex South Association of Churches he is the secretary and treasurer, and chairman of the fellowship committee.

REV. E. A. CHASE

Nearly a fifth of all who have constituted the church during its 88 years have come into its membership during Mr. Chase's pastorate. The parish has been freed from all indebtedness. Mrs. Chase has done a notable work among the women, and as one of the vice-presidents of the Essex South Branch and Alliance.

Church and Ministerial Record

Calls

ADAMZ, A. C., Barnesville, Ga., to East Lake, Tenn. Accepts.
BAUMANN, B. R., University Park, Neb., to Farragut, Ia. Accepts.
CARLSON, H. E., Raymond, N. H., to Marion, Ia. Accepts.
CLOSE, K. R., Newark, O., to assistant pastorate, Miami Beach, Fla. Accepts.
FROST, S. E., JR., to assistant pastorate, Coconut Grove, Fla. Accepts.
GARDNER, J. A., Chicago Seminary, to be student assistant, First, Oak Park, Ill. At work.
JOHNSON, E. H., to Tabernacle, Atlanta, Ga. Accepts.
GATES, P. J., Joint Field Secretary of Washington Conference and C. S. S. E. S., to Plymouth, Tacoma, Wash. Accepts.
JONES, H. H., Jupiter, Fla., to Barnesville, Ga. Accepts.
JONES, VINCENT, Olivet, Oakland, Cal., to a former pastorate, Paso Robles.
LEE, W. A., Winona, Minn., to Cedar Rapids, Ia.
LEECH, H. P., Paraguay, S. A., to Whiting, Ind.
LEWIS, J. M., Monroe, Wash., to Lopez Island. Accepts.
MURRAY, MACKENZIE, Berea, Chicago, Ill., to associate pastorate, Bethlehem, Chicago. Accepts.
NOON, P. G., Dallas City, Ill., to Reinbeck, Ia. Accepts.
NORTHROP, B. W., Parkersburg, Ia., to Hartwick. Accepts.
PARKER, CARL, Marietta St., Atlanta, Center, Atlanta. Accepts.
SNYDER, J. S., to Seibert, Col. At work.
TROSPER, J. M., Stearns, Ky., to Evarts.

Resignations

CHAPMAN, F. H., East Lake, Tenn., to call to Presbyterian Church in Georgia.
CHASE, B. L., Island Pond, Vt.
ELLIOTT, E. A., Bondurant and Johnston,
FERNER, J. W., Anita, Ia.
LONG, N. A., Center, Atlanta, Ga.
REEES, M. E., Castana, Ia.
UPDEGRAFFE, W. L., Spring Creek, Pa.
VAN SCHAICK, C. E., North Pownal, Vt.

Ordinations and Installations

BARCLAY, WILLIAM, o., Second, Hanover, Sept. 23.
BRIDGES, J. N., o., New Castle, Col., Sermon by Dr. A. J. Sullens; other Rev. Messrs. S. G. Gutensohn, and Walker.
INGLIS, ERVINE, i., Vine, Lincoln, Neb., 1925. Sermon by Dr. E. B. Allen; oth by Rev. Messrs. V. F. Clark, G. J. Warren Morse, Harold Cooper, A. G. E. B. Dean, F. W. Leavitt, and A. F. N

Accessions

	Conf
MINNESOTA
Crookston	2
MISSOURI
Rockbridge

Personals

KINGSLEY, REV. H. M., director of Neg under the Home Missionary Society, turned to full-time field work after p Mt. Zion, Cleveland, O., for four year dition to his field work. During his p the church has gone through two fi trebled the membership; has secured p of one of the best located and most plants among the Negroes of the Nor relinquishes the pastorate to Rev. R. S who succeeded Dr. H. H. Proctor at F lanta. Director Kingsley will make immediate objectives the purchasing o buildings for the Liberty Church, St. Lo and the Liberty Church, Chicago, Ill.
FINDLAY, REV. J. F., for two years p Cherokee, Ia., and formerly assistant p Oak Park, Ill., has accepted a call to Dean of Men of Grinnell College. He g in 1922 from Grinnell, where he was p of the Oratorio Society and the Y. M. his undergraduate days. He was also pr in dramatics, college journalism, and The college paper is greatly pleased by

Our First Mortgage
REAL ESTATE GOLD BON
net the investor 7% semi-annual i est, guaranteed as to principal an terest, secured by first mortgages o proved real estate in Central Fl and the West Coast, by one of the est and most substantial corpora with 14 years' successful experien the Florida mortgage field. Writ particulars and booklet.
GUARANTY MORTGAGE COMPAN
Tampa St., Tampa, Florida

The Massachusetts General Hos
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES
Boston, Massachusetts
Founded 1873 Graduates Number
Educational requirement for three-year course, high diploma. Time allowance to college graduates if have included sciences. Maintenance, text-books, forms supplied to members of the school.
Sally Johnson, R.N., Principal

The Original Modern Language Vers
The Twentieth Century New Testa has no equal. Ask for it at any Bookseller's. $
F. H. REVELL CO., 158 Fifth Ave., N. Y.; 17 N. Wabash Ave.

and regards it as "auspicious." "As an graduate during the post-war period Jim nizant of the characteristics of the present tion of men students."

MRS. EMMONS, of the South India Mission, iven a farewell reception Saturday, Sept. y the women of her home church, the elical Congregational Church of Grafton, A substantial purse was presented to White. The Whites sail shortly to return eir boarding school at Aruppukottai, notices and obituaries are inserted at a fifteen cents per count line. Minimum sixty cents. Lines average seven words Address Obituary Department, The tionalist, 14 Beacon St., Boston.

Deaths

NS — Rev. Henry A. Stevens died at ton, Mass., Sept. 28, in his 90th year. as ordained in 1861. A more complete will appear in a later issue.

TRUMAN ORVILLE DOUGLASS

e passing of this good and great man our lp loses a missionary statesman of high d a Christian of true nobility. He was Bethel, Bond County, Ill., May 3, 1842. er was John Douglass, of Scotch ancestry, mother, Jane McCord, of Scotch-Irish The ancestral home was in Tennessee, hich state the parents moved to Illinois early part of the last century. He was d child and the oldest son and there was id upon his shoulders the responsibility g in the support of the family. The home eply and devoutly religious with Scotch erian background, where the Bible was ily and the Sabbath rigidly observed. mere child, the parents again moved, from to Wisconsin, where a home was estab- n "The Timber" near Platteville. In an graphical sketch, Dr. Douglass bears tes- to the positive religious influence of the lle Church, for in five years, five young cluding the subject of this sketch, started are for the Christian ministry.

e spring of 1861 Mr. Douglass entered College at Jacksonville—a few days after t shot on Fort Sumpter. When the call r Hundred Day men, young Douglass en- May 17, 1864, in the midst of his junior nd he served, most of the time as Color t, until stricken by malarial fever, and stered out Sept. 23 of the same year. This xperience, though brief, was long enough ently to undermine his health.

eturned to college in 1885 and graduated as orian.

same year he entered Chicago Theological ry, completing the three-year course, and the church at Amboy, Ill., during his year. Upon graduation in May, 1868, he l the call to the church at Osage, Ia., e spent 14 fruitful years. On June 25 year, he married Miss Maria Greene, of lle, Wis. On Oct. 28, 1868, he was or- to the Christian ministry. In his own he Osage ministry was, "a hard, happy, asurably successful pastorate." A new was built, and foundations were laid for ity.

he great work of Dr. Douglass' life began 2. when he became Superintendent of Missions for Iowa. For 25 years he held t of honor, "loving and being loved, serv- being served, blessing and being blessed." arter of a century was a period of growth sionary expansion. The achievements these s he himself has summarized in the follow- ds:

hundred and thirty-seven churches organ- 18 fostered into self-support; 222 houses hip completed and dedicated; 78,958 added membership of the churches, 48,830 of these ession of faith; the membership increased 5,787 to 36,483; and $1,176,225 raised for s.

lowing Dr. Douglass' retirement from the superintendency in 1907, he took a sort of a post-graduate course in home missions. Under the direction of the National Home Missionary Society he set out on a tour of inspection of the Western and New England States. Later he visited the theological seminary; assisted in home mission campaigns, and Grinnell College endowment campaign. He was Iowa delegate to the International Council at Edinburgh in 1908. He was frequently a delegate to the National Council; a valued trustee and counselor of Grinnell College. Tabor College conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Two significant and highly valued contributions come from Dr. Douglass' pen. His book, The Pilgrims of Iowa, is a work of genuine merit, portraying in a vivid manner the story of our home missionary achievements in Iowa. In addition to this, he busied himself for many months, and with exhausting labors and great patience, in preparing biographical sketches of men who had served in the Congregational ministry of Iowa up to the year 1900. There are 13 typewritten volumes of these sketches in the Grinnell College Library and they will be of increasing value as reference volumes in years to come.

For a number of years Dr. and Mrs. Douglass have been living in Claremont, Cal. A stroke of apoplexy in the fall of 1923 was the beginning of the end, which came peacefully on Sept. 11, 1925, at the age of 83 years. Having served his generation by the will of God he fell to sleep, to awaken in the realm prepared for those who have fought the good fight of faith and laid hold upon eternal life.

M. ABBOTT FRAZAR

M. Abbott Frazar died in Brookline, Mass., Oct. 1. He was born in Watertown, Mass., July 1, 1859, son of George A. and Caroline Marston Sampson Frazar. For many years and up to the time of his illness he was a constant attendant of the Old South Church in Boston. Yearly he gave financial help to many charitable organizations, often not revealing his name in this connection. At Rangeley, Me., where his summer home was located, he attended the Baptist Church.

Mr. Frazar was a naturalist of deep study and extensive travel. He conducted his business (taxidermist-furrier), nearly 40 years, always with zealous endeavor.

The funeral was held at his late residence, 84 Abbottsford Rd., Brookline, Oct. 3, Rev. Boynton Merrill officiating. Music was furnished by the Weber Quartet. The interment was at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester, in the family lot.

ADDISON H. HAZELTINE

Late in September Addison H. Hazeltine, of Coral Gables, Fla., passed away at Biltmore Hospital, Biltmore, N. C., near Asheville. Mr. Hazeltine had taken his family to Hendersonville, where he built a beautiful new home on the top of a mountain one thousand feet above the city. After this strenuous task he arranged his business affairs and went to the hospital for a surgical operation, which was apparently successful. The day before he had planned to return home he died suddenly of apoplexy. His body was buried at Morristown, N. J., his old home.

Mr. Hazeltine was a lawyer of ability and had devoted his entire life to his profession. Early in his career, while connected with the Presbyterian Church, he decided to give as much of his time and ability as possible to church work as a layman. In his early days in Miami he served as treasurer of Plymouth Church, Coconut Grove, of which he was a member. He had a share in the Sunday school superintendency of that church and in almost every other part of church enterprise. He was secretary of the Congregational Club of Miama, and registrar and treasurer of the Florida State Conference.

Mr. Hazeltine had made a specialty of ecclesiastical law, and with this knowledge he has helped many a church in the state to straighten

(Continued on page 543)

Pratt Teachers' Agency
70 Fifth Avenue, New York
ends teachers to colleges, public and schools in all parts of the country. Advises parents about schools.

Bangor Theological Seminary
The 110th year opened Sept. 23. Thorough training for ministers and missionaries. Courses leading to degree or diploma. Special opportunity for non-college men to gain Seminary equipment and prepare for advanced college standing.
For catalogue and information, apply to
WARREN J. MOULTON, President
Bangor, Maine.

YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL
Research and Training in Five Departments:
(1) Pastoral Service.
(2) Service in the Foreign Field.
(3) Religious Education.
(4) Practical Philanthropy.
(5) History and Philosophy of Religion.
Open on equal terms to students of all Christian bodies.
Degrees of M.A., B.D. and Ph.D., may be obtained by students.
For catalogue, address Dean Chas. R. Brown, New Haven, Conn.

YOUR WILL!
Many people do not make their wills in advance, and, as a result, their desires are unfulfilled when they are gone!
The best way to multiply one's life for Christ's Kingdom is to train men for the Christian Ministry.

The Chicago Theological Seminary
offers you the way. In its seventy years of service, more than 2,000 men have been trained for the Ministry. More than half this achievement has been made possible by the Wills of interested friends. "Where there's a Will, There's a Way!"
Write for special free booklet on Wills.
OZORA S. DAVIS, President 5757 University Avenue, Chicago

AVAILABLE FOR PART-TIME SERVICES
Ambitious, competent, experienced students who are "working their way" through college

Commercial Positions	or	Church Positions
Office clerks and bookkeepers		Pastors and assistants
Typists and stenographers		Directors of religious education
Salesmen and saleswomen		Superintendents and teachers
Tutors and teachers		Community school specialists
Waiters and waitresses		Directors of music, pipe organists, soloists
Companions and domestics		Settlement workers, etc.
Furnace tenders, etc.

Call Haymarket 4585, or address Bureau of Appointments, Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service, 20 Beacon Street, Boston

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Honorary Moderator, President Calvin Coolidge
Moderator, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Treasurer, Franklin H. Warner, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Chairman Executive Committee, Rev. Charles F. Carter, 40 Kenyon St., Hartford, Ct.
Chairman Nominating Committee, Rev. Robert W. Gammon, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Corporation for the National Council

Chairman, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, Hartford, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Chartered to administer trust funds for Congregational churches, organizations and causes.

The Corporation holds the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and other trusts aggregating on Jan. 1, 1925, $4,904,207.71.

For information address the Secretary.

COMMISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL

The Commission on Missions

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, Portsmouth, N. H.
Recording Secretary, Rev. John L. Shively, Southport, Ct.
Secretary, Rev. Charles E. Burton, ex officio, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Associate Secretary, Rev. James E. McConnell, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Acting Secretary of Promotion, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, 287 Fourth Ave., New York
Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, Rev. William S. Beard, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

Charged with co-ordinating the administration of the Missionary Societies in the interest of economy and efficiency and with promoting the common appeal under the Apportionment for benevolent contributions. For literature and information address the Commission on Missions.

The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Chairman, Rev. William Horace Day, Bridgeport, Ct.
Executive Secretary, Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.
Assistant Secretary, Miss Ella G. Sparrow, 287 Fourth Ave., New York.

This Commission serves as a co-ordinating agency in the work of evangelism and the culture of the devotional life among the churches.

For literature and additional information address the Commission on Evangelism.

(NOTE—Correspondence relating to the work of the following Commissions should be addressed to the Chairmen.)

Commission on International and Inter-Racial Relations and the Near East

Chairman, Rev. J. Percival Huget, 244 Decatur St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Commission on Interchurch Relations

Chairman, Rev. Frank K. Sanders, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

Commission on Recruiting for Christian Service

Chairman, Rev. E. Bourner Allen, 400 Lake St., Oak Park, Ill.

Commission on Social Service

Chairman, Mr. John Calder, Lexington, Mass.

Commission on Law Enforcement

Convener, Rev. Walter A. Morgan, 1841 Irving St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Commission on Men's Work

Chairman, Rev. Orville A. Petty, Chapel St. and Sherman Ave., New Haven, Ct.

THE CONGREGATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR EDUCATION

19 So. La Salle Street, Room 1312, Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Nash, President

Officers of the Board of Trustees

Henry Churchill King, Chairman
John R. Montgomery, Vice-Chairman
John R. Bennett, Secretary
Central Trust Company of Illinois, Treasurer, 123 W. Monroe St., Chicago.

Established by the National Council to make available for the colleges the resources of the denomination in fellowship and money.

AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Treasurer, Frederick A. Gaskins
Assistant Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher

Corresponding Secretaries	Associate Secretaries
Rev. James L. Barton	Rev. D. Brewer Eddy
Rev. Cornelius H. Patton	Rev. Ernest W. Riggs
Rev. William E. Strong

Editorial Secretary, Rev. Enoch F. Bell
Acting Candidate Secretary, Mark H. Ward, M.D.
Assistant Secretary, Rev. Charles Ernest White
Secretary N. Y. District, Rev. William Scudder, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City
Sec'y Interior District, Rev. Wm. F. English, Jr., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Sec'y Pacific Coast Dist., Rev. Henry H. Kelsey, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. Frank L. Moore, Secretary of Missions
Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Sec'y Woman's Dept.
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

State officials represent all Home Mission interests. Nineteen self-supporting state societies are federated with the National Society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. James Robert Smith, Church Building Sec'y
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids by grants and loans in building churches and parsonages. Helps each year to build over a hundred churches and a score of parsonages.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION SOCIETY

289 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. Ernest M. Halliday, General Secretary
Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, Extension Secretary
Charles H. Baker, Treasurer

Aids and establishes Sunday Schools on the frontier, in the rural community, in new city communities, and among immigrants.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Central Office: 287 Fourth Ave., New York City

Rev. A. F. Beard, Honorary Secretary and Editor
Rev. George L. Cady,
Rev. Fred L. Brownlee, Corresponding Secretaries
Rev. Henry Smith Leiper,
Miss Lucy B. Crain, Associate Secretaries
George N. White, M.A., 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, Secretary of Bureau of Woman's Work
Irving C. Gaylord, Treasurer
Rev. A. Lawless, Jr., Supt. Southern Church Work, 154½ Auburn St., Atlanta, Ga.

District Secretaries

Rev. Howard A. Bridgman, 14 Beacon St., Boston
Rev. E. W. Huelster, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago
Rev. G. W. Hinman, 423 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

Educational and church work in the South among Negroes and Highlanders; in the West among Indians, Chinese, Japanese; also in New Mexico, Utah, and in Porto Rico and Hawaii.

THE ANNUITY FUND FOR CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS

THE PILGRIM MEMORIAL FUND

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

The Annuity Fund is a scientific contributory plan in accord with the development of modern pension systems. Membership, Dec. 31, 1924, 2,056.

The Pilgrim Memorial Fund is a permanent foundation, in process of collection, held in trust by the Corporation for the National Council. The income is used to supplement the ministers' annual payments toward old age annuities.

The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief conserves the welfare of the ministry by making grants, as large as the income will permit, to meet the needs of aged or disabled ministers, their widows and orphan children. Pension roll, National and State Boards in 1924, 724, representing 1,600 people.

Rev. Charles S. Mills, General Secretary
Rev. Harry R. Miles, Associate Secretary
Ralph L. Peterson, Treas.; Financial Sec'y P. M. F. 100 East 42d Street, New York

Western Secretary—Rev. F. L. Hayes, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago.

Pacific Coast Representative—Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF PASTORAL SUPPLY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass

Aids churches desiring pastors or pulpits and Congregational ministers seeking pastorates. Maintained by the Congregational Conferences of New England. Rev. Arthur ...
Sec'y, Rev. Watson L. Phillips, D.D., ...

CONGREGATIONAL EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY

Congregational House, Boston, Mass

Rev. Herbert W. Gates, Acting General ... and Missionary Education
Rev. Hubert C. Herring, Social Service ... Education
Rev. Harry T. Stock, Student and Young People's ...
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
Miss Mary E. Clarke, Assistant Treasurer

Directs Denominational Religious ... Program including Social Service, ... Education, Student and Young People's ... aids Ministerial Students, University ... directs campaign to secure Recruits for ... Leadership.

CONGREGATIONAL PUBLISHING SOCIETY

(The Pilgrim Press)

Organized and conducted in the interest of denomination for the publication and distribution of The Congregationalist, church school ... ment, quarterlies, lesson text-books, ... magazines, children's and young people's ... papers, and books for home and church ... book stores at Boston and Chicago.

Rev. Charles R. Brown, D.D., President
Sidney A. Weston, Ph.D., Editor and Business ...
Rev. William E. Gilroy, D.D., Editor of The Congregationalist
Arthur J. Crockett, Treasurer
14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts
19 So. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Women's Organizations

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS, 508 ... tional House. Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook ... Miss Helen B. Calder, Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE ... 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago. Mrs. S. E. ... Treas. Miss Mary D. Uline, Home Secr...

WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS FOR THE ... 760 Market St., San Francisco. Mrs. ... Blasdale, Treas., Mrs. H. S. Ranney, ...

CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S HOME MI... FEDERATION, 289 Fourth Ave., N. Y.; M... Hart, Treas.; Mrs. J. J. Pearsall, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN'S HOME MI... UNION, Mrs. Albert Greene Duncan, T... Mrs. Mabel S. Badger, Sec.; 609-610 ... tional House.

Massachusetts Societies

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY S... constituent of the Congregational Home ... ary Society, represents the churches of M... setts in their home missionary work. Th... solicits bequests, pays annuities on co... gifts, administers trust funds for church... erick E. Emrich, D.D., Secretary Emeri... John J. Walker, Secretary; Rev. Oliver ... Treasurer, 611 Congregational House, B...

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF MINISTER... Solicits gifts from churches and individ... bequests. C. L. Ziegler, Treasurer, 125 ... bus Ave., Roxbury, Mass. Apply for aid ... Emrich, Congregational House.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH UNION ... TON and vicinity (incorporated). Its obje... establishment and support of Evangelica... gational Churches and Sunday Schools ... and its suburbs. Samuel Usher, Pres... Kelsey, Treas.; Oren C. Boothby, Sec... Building, Boston.

Connecticut Societies

THE FUND FOR MINISTERS provides en... Ministerial Relief in Connecticut and in... tributions for this purpose. Bequests and ... Gifts are needed. Rev. Sherrod Soule, ... tendent; Rev. William F. English, T... Congregational House, Hartford.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF CONNEC... constituent of the National Society, soli... tributions, administers Special Trust for ... and pays Annuities on Conditional Gift... Sherrod Soule, Superintendent; Rev. W... English, Treasurer, Congregational Hous... ford.

(Continued from page 541)

s charter, constitution, and property title. s famous for his ability to prepare constis and see that they were strictly obeyed. was a member of the Coral Gables Church time of his death. When that church its work he was one of the charter mem- iving his valuable time to the superintend- ency of the new Sunday school. Such a man as Mr. Hazeltine is hard to find among the churches and he will be very greatly missed. E. A. K.

REV. CYRUS L. D. YOUNKIN

One of the older members of the Suffolk South association of ministers (Boston, Mass.), Rev. Cyrus L. D. Younkin, died at his Arlington home, Sept. 28. He was ordained in 1873 and for 35 years was the faithful and self-sacrificing superintendent of the North End Mission of Boston. In 1921 he became pastor of the Byfield parish. At the time of his death he was minister at Wayland, which he had served since 1923. The funeral was held on Sept. 30 at Park Street Church, Boston, where he long held membership.

nerican Congregational Association

owns and maintains the Congregational House (costing over $700,000) to house the Congregational Library, provide rooms at low cost for 14 Congregational Missionary Organizations, the Congregational Book Store, Pilgrim Hall for gatherings, and Committee Rooms, and to promote the general interest of Congregational Churches.

ests and Annuities are solicited in order that House may be freed from mortgage indebted- and the Association thus enabled to furnish Missionary Organizations with business offices inimum cost. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Edward M. Noyes, President; Phineas Hub- Treasurer; Thomas Todd, Jr., Secretary, 14 n Street, Boston, Mass.

City Missionary Society

con St., Boston, Mass. Founded 1816

e visitation and personal missionary service nection with our churches. Emergency re- ecreation and Fresh Air Work. Contribu- nd legacies gratefully received and scrupu- administered.

n Ellison, President; Rev. Fletcher D. Secretary; Samuel F. Wilkins, Treasurer.

rated 29

Boston Reorganized 1922 man's Friend Society, Inc.

Society, reorganized 2, now fully rep- the Congregational es of New England ractical, social and s work among sea- Has finely equipped at 287 Hanover ston, and at Vine- Haven, and Reading at Tarpaulin Cove and Cape Cod Canal. ciety provides dormitory accommodations, and recreation rooms, religious services, bles, and games of many kinds, a restau- canteen, shower baths, postal and bank- ilities. Donations and bequests solicited. utions received on an annuity basis. Pres- Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, D.D.; Vice-Pres., Romeyn Danforth; Clerk, Rev. Theodore field, D.D.; Sec., Rev. Merritt A. Farren; Charles E. Stratton; Chairman of Exec. Franklin P. Shumway; Office, 618 Congre- l House.

erican Seamen's Friend Society

Incorporated 1833

